We suppose it will be this year as it has been during all the years of the past—some Sunday schools, by reason of the failure of their pastors and superintendents to insist upon the observance of the occasion, will allow Sunday School Day to pass unnoticed. But it ought not to be so. We dare say there is not a Sunday school in the connection that could not observe the Day, in some fashion at least, if it would. The law of the church is so clear in providing for the observance that the wonder is that so many disregard it. We suggest that all pastors and Sunday school superintendents read again the Discipline bearing on the subject, and then govern themselves accordingly.

THE EASTER OFFERING FOR THE ORPHANAGES.

As an expression of practical Christianity, the work of the orphanages of the church is to be commended, encouraged, and supported liberally. For many years, Easter Sunday has been looked upon as an appropriate time for making a special offering for the benefit of these worthy institutions. The hearts of the people are peculiarly responsive at that season to the appeals of the Christian motive in behalf of dependent children, and, when given the opportunity, most of them find a real joy in ministering to their needs. Mississippi and Louisiana Methodism both have institutions that are among the best in the church, and their needs are constant and growing. Let us make this a happy Easter for them.

SUMMER GATHERINGS.

We are upon the verge of the summer-gatherings season. District conferences, Epworth League assemblies, standard training schools, preachers' institutes, and other meetings of a similar kind will soon be the order of the day. These gatherings have become established as a part of the regular work of the church, not because they are occasions for social diversion and mental rest, but because they fill a very real need in the lives of those who are vitally concerned for the ongoing of the Kingdom of God. It is no argument against them that most of them do have the vacation feature—but they are not altogether a vacation. Those who attend them bear testimony to their value as a preparation for more efficient work in the months that follow. They should attract multitudes of devout Christians this year.

A "MOVIE" UNIVERSITY.

We read in the secular press that a plan to establish a "moving picture university" in New York is being proposed by certain persons high in the motion picture industry. There is undoubtedly a great deal of good in the motion picture—but if the average screen production hereabouts is to be taken as a fair sample of what might be called the product of the "prep" schools of the industry, we predict that the curriculum of the proposed "university" will not have much to commend it.

UNIFICATION—THAT "MINORITY STATEMENT."

By Bishop W. F. McMurry.

Bishop Collins Denny has published in the church press what he is pleased to call a "Statement of Minority Bishops on Unification Commission." He says that he "was repeatedly denied the exercise of his right" to send forth with the address of other bishops on the Commission a statement of his reasons for opposing the plan. I do not know any one who has questioned the right of the Bishop to express his opinion on the subject. Speaking for myself, I did not deny him the exercise of any "right." I have had no part in denying him the exercise of any "right." I do not know of any one who tried, or even desired, to deny him the exercise of any "right."

It would require a long stretch of the imagination on the part of any member of the Commission to place Bishop Denny with the other bishops on the Commission in giving to the church an address on any phase of Unification. I think it may be safely stated that Bishop Denny was not expected by any member of the Commission to join in the proposed address. Nothing that he said or did in the Commission could possibly raise such an expectation. He was not present when the motion for such an address was introduced, having retired immediately upon failure on his part to defeat the adoption of the proposed plan. The motion was one of sufficient courtesy not to exclude him explicitly by name. The fact is that the bishops, five of them, who were willing to do the bidding of the Commission prepared the address, and gave it to the church; and that is all there is to it, so far as I have any knowledge. There is no more reason why Bishop Denny should have been shown special favors in connection with the address than any other member of the Commission.

Bishop Denny did not wait for the publication of the address of the bishops to which he objects, to give his position on the plan to the church. It is a matter of record that at the Annual Conferences over which he presided last fall, Conferences some of which met in advance of the publication of the address, he discussed the plan of Unification at length and entertained motions bearing upon the work of the Commission and looking to the committal of the Annual Conferences under his presidency against the plan. I have been unable to learn that he went out of his way, or made any special effort, to have the other side of the question presented to the Conferences at the same time. In my judgment, he is the last man on the Commission with any just ground for complaint on account of being denied "the exercise of his right."

The reasons Bishop Denny sets down for his opposition to the plan are more than familiar to the members of the Commission. Certainly he was denied no "right" in the matter of presenting his objections either in the meetings of the Commission from his own church or in the sessions of the Joint Commission. The published report of the work of the Joint Commission tells this story.

Bishop Denny says: "This plan is a misnomer, it is not Unification, it is not even welding," etc. This is nothing more nor less than an expression of Bishop Denny's opinion. And let it be noted, he does not bring forward a single fact upon which to base his conclusion. I know of no one who claims for the plan, that if adopted, the whole process of Unification will be completed. Therein is its strength. It does not attempt too much. It provides for a beginning and on a perfectly fair and honorable basis to both churches. What more do we need? Under divine guidance we can trust the future.

His statement that, "The two churches are to maintain rival Methodisms in the same communities, existing friction, irritating competitions are to persist," etc., is a prophesy on his part in no wise justified. There is abundance of evidence to show that "irritating competitions" and "altar against altar" and "needless waste and competition" will be cared for by local communities, where the two churches exist, when given the official authority to do so. The removal of official pressure and support, which is inevitable when "the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, shall be united in one church with two Jurisdictions under a Constitution with a General Conference and two Jurisdictional Conferences," will solve this problem. Of this, I have not the slightest doubt.

His statement that "the plan endorses what now exists and provides for its spread," cannot be maintained. There is not a line in the plan that supports such a contention. The plan was written by men who do not endorse "what now exists," and these men are the representatives of General Conferences which, judging from their official utterances, do not endorse "what now exists," and are working under instructions from these General Conferences, to provide a better way. To say that these men have so far missed the mark as to "endorse what now exists" and provide "for its spread," on the face of it seems to reflect seriously upon both their intelligence and integrity. Of course, Bishop Denny does not intend to do this. If, however, "the plan endorses what now exists" and provides for its "spread," what is the occasion of the strong opposition that Bishop Denny has shown to it?

His statement that "the plan gives no voice in the government of the church to those chiefly concerned, the people and the preachers," is without foundation, in fact. The plan proposed does not take away from the preachers or people of either church any right or voice that now exists. Each church goes into this agreement with the distinct and explicit understanding that no change can be made in its existing laws or book of Discipline, except by the processes now provided. The resurrection of the General Conference of 1808 and the Bishop's comments on that Conference and what followed, are, therefore, far-fetched and not at all in point. He raised this same question in the Joint Commission. Dr. P. H. Linn (now deceased) replied as follows: "The attitude of the Southern Commision is that the whole matter is sufficiently protected by the provisions of the Restrictive Rules."

I shall not take the time of the readers of this paper to discuss Napoleon, Bishop Joseph Butler, Madison, James Wilson, Sherman, Williamson, Gorman, and the other celebreties mentioned in the Bishop's article. The truth is, I would not give a penny for the opinion of a single one of these gentlemen on the subject of the Unification of present-day Methodism. That they were wise men, and some of them good men, and competent to deal with the issues of their day, in a more or less effective manner, I do not question. I would rather have the opinion of a Missouri farmer, an official in our church, in a village neighborhood where both churches exist, whose children are educated in the same schools as the children of his Methodist Episcopal neighbor, on the subject of two Methodisms in the same small community, than all the wisdom of all the worthies referred to by Bishop Denny.

I did not favor the plan of Unification presented to the last General Conference. One of the grounds of my objection was the arbitrary handling of church membership which it involved. I favor the present plan, not because I think it is perfect, but because it recognizes the right of every member and minister in the matter of his church relationship, and does not involve either church in the unholy task of arbitrarily setting aside or putting away people who have committed their membership to its keeping.

The present plan does provide for points of contact and agreement and union where the way is clear and when the people and preachers give their constitutional consent. It marks out a way to increase these points of coutact and union just as rapidly as the ministers and laymen of the two churches desire it, and no faster; aud this is the strength and glory of this plan. The churches become one only at such points and to such an extent as the constitutional consent of our people and preachers is obtained.

There may be those in our church, and in the Methodist Episcopal Church, who would agree to no plan of Unification that does not provide for humiliating concessions upon the part of the sister church as a vindication of some positions taken in the past, and in repudiation of some official act. I do not belong to that number. All I ask for my church is equal authority and responsibility in the working out of the present-day problems of Methodism. That we are able to care properly for our own on such a basis, I have not the slightest doubt.

When I accepted membership on the Commission, I did so with the full understanding that the action of the General Conference providing for the Commission laid upon the members of the Commission the responsibility and duty of finding a way for Unification. See General Conference Journal, 1922, page 222. I have, therefore, attended the meetings of the Commission of our own church and of the Joint Commission with an open mind. I have listened to every word of debate, and so far as my friend, Bishop Denny, is concerned, I have heard him several times on the points he raises in his article and to an extent that I have heard no other member of the Commission. With confidence in the sincerity of his purpose and with a knowledge of his diligence in searching for facts, I have looked to him for light. The light he has given me is darkness.

AUTOCRACY VERSUS DEMOCRACY.

By Rev. J. A. Poe.

"O would some power the giftie gi'e us,
To see onrsel's as ithers see us."

As I sit pondering, the notes from the piano, at which my baby is practicing, float into my soul and recall an endless chain of reminiscences—the pleasant and the unpleasant. I know not from whence they come, nor why, but they come like bright angels from celestial realms, with sparkling eyes, smiling faces and dancing feet, warming my heart and cheering my spirit; but, like phantoms, they pass, and right behind them come the goblins of all the unpleasant episodes, and all the regrettable incidents in my life; with frowning faces and horrid grimaces they mock the frailty of my weak humanity. I cannot compel the one to come or the other to keep away. In many things in life man is left without a choice.

He cannot choose the people who are to be his parents, or the race to which he is to belong, or the country that is to be his native land, or the climate in which he is born. He cannot choose his station in life. In fact, there is but very little that he can have his way about. He is largely a creature of environments and circumstances. There is perhaps no sphere of his existence that affords quite so much unrestrained freedom as his relation to his fellow-being. But, ah, what a tragedy of life has he made in the exercise of that God-given privilege! From the days of maternity, when we first see his footprints on the sands of time, even to this good day, he has almost universally shown the spirit of the autocrat. The patriarch of the family, the patriarch of the tribe, the chief of the clan, the queen, the king, the emperor—all proclaim the human autocrat. The philosophies of Socrates, Xenophon and Plato failed to find a cure for this monster malady of humanity. All the laws of the Solons of earth have been powerless to stay the imperious hand of autocracy. To this day democracy is only an ideal, a beautiful vision seen in the dim distance through the eyes of the "Man of Galilee." All past and all present governments have been and are either monarchies or oligarchies. There is not now, and there has never been, a real democracy of government. This applies not only to the civil governments, but to all organic bodies of peoples. The Ancient Order of Free and Accepted Masons approaches it nearer than any organization with which I am acquainted, but even there the autocrat and the oligarch wield the scepter.

Some churches (denominations) boast of their democratic form of government, but I have yet to find one that is not largely dominated by the "authorities," the "powers that be," and the masses have but a very small voice.

"The mills of the gods grind slowly," but as sure as the Kingdom of God comes, the demigod of autocracy will be ground to powder. It is, no doubt, in the far distance yet. Ritualistic, creedal, theoretical Christianity must give place to practical Christlikeness before we can hope for that golden age. Just as men come to know him who was the great exponent of human democracy, and catch the spirit of him who taught the doctrine of the fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man, we will witness the growth of real democracy.

I have said the foregoing that I may have the right to say just a few words of admonition, without being misunderstood. I love our great church; I love her form of worship and her form of government; I love her ministers—they are my brothers in the ministry, and they are a heroic band of soldiers of the cross. But there are no perfect men and there are no perfect systems of governments. It is for the spirit of democracy in our church that I am now pleading. It is the one thing that we need to cultivate just at this time. Our system is calculated to foster autocracy, which is perhaps its greatest weakness just now, when all eyes are turned on us to see if, as a church, we are going to fall in with the "new order of things" and modify our form of government. I do not wish a change of our constitutional government, but a change of official function.

We can very easily have three classes of autocrats in our system. First, the pastor can and very often does lord it over God's heritage. Many pastors never give the people the rights that belong to them in the church conference. They appoint and nominate every official that acts on the church board. They dictate every policy of the church and leave the people without a single voice. Some preachers even hold the lash over their congregations and try to whip them into line. Small wonder if we hear of rebellions in certain societies. Let me admonish our pastors to cultivate the will of the people in the affairs of the church. They love the church, and can easily be enlisted in all good and noble enterprises. Let them, as far as possible, choose their own leaders, and representatives in all the conferences. I am learning to do this, and I find it builds up the love of the people for the church and the ministry.

Second—The presiding elder is always in danger of exercising too much authority. The very nature of his office is highly conducive to it. His sphere of authority is larger than that of the pastor, as he can command both pastor and people under the law of the church. I have known this power abused more than once—of course, more from a short-sightedness than from any real arbitrary spirit. I have known pastors seriously hurt, and at least one driven from the ministry, because the presiding elder took things in his own hands, and did not give the man a chance to present his side of the question. I have in mind a congregation that is without a pastor, and is likely to be lost to our church, because the "elder" would not give the pastor and the people a proper hearing. It is a good congregation, with great possibilities for Methodism. Of course, the brother's motives were good, but his judgment was not, and the cause must suffer just the same.

Third—Can I say it, would it be treason even to mention it? Well, I know there is many a man in the ranks of our itinerant system that would not dare to use the name except in obedience, reverence or commendation. But after all, who is the man of highest authority in our church but the creature of her own making? Just a man among men, and I am glad to say our bishops are inclined to be brotherly and democratic. As to being over-lords, they are as far from it as any class of men. Most of them were chosen to the high office that they now occupy because they were considered men possessing those qualifications that would best fit them to exercise rightly the functions of the office of a bishop. But is it not possible that in the exercise of their office they too often take too much authority? Let us grant that they, in every case, do what they think is for the best in exercising their prerogative as the appointing power of our system; might it not be best to divide that power, and shift some of the responsibility to other shoulders?

Would it not be best in the reaches of time if they would, as far as possible, give the people a hearing? I know one in our church who is now holding practically open cabinets, and his work moves on in harmony from one achievement to another. I know of another who holds a session of the Conference cabinet about six weeks, or such time, before the meeting of the Conference, in which the appointments are freely discussed and the presiding elders are instructed to confer with the pastors as to their prospective appointments, and perhaps with the people when he deems it necessary. There is great harmony in that episcopal district, so I have been informed.

Then there is that hydra-headed monster, the oligarchy, that infests almost every body or organization of people, like a den of vipers. Of all the despicable, mean things, I know of nothing in the way of low, underhanded meanness that is comparable to the clique, the ring that bands itself together to get control. It does not seem that such villainy could be possible in the church of the living God, who struck Ananias dead for deceit and lying. Yet I have been told that such a monster has been known in some Methodist Conferences.

The old proverb, "In the multitude of counsel there is safety," is still true. The dust and mists of life are such that no one can see things as they are. The din and noise of things are such that no one can hear the truth. There are a thousand orators shouting platitudes into the air, where there is one philosopher, pondering over the problems of life, and there are a thousand philosophers thinking in endless circles, where there is one seer that is able to look to the final goal of all being. To find the real seer and follow in his train is the hope of the world. Let all who are clothed with authority humble themselves and seek divine aid, and him that is greatest among you, let him be the servant of all. "Give honor to whom honor is due."

A WORD ABOUT SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

By Rev. J. F. Dring.

The writer has been connected with the church for the past twenty years, and it has always been his desire to learn. I am a seeker after spiritual knowledge. I wish to reach that point in life where I may be able to impart some spiritual knowledge, and I am sure that is the wish of every true Christian.

In the Sunday school we have the groundwork of the church. The Roman Catholics say, "Give me the child from infancy to seven years, and it will be Catholic." If this be true, it is also true of the Methodist, Baptist or any other church, if the proper methods are used to influence the child.

I would like to see a method of teaching introduced in our churches that will grip the child, and hold it. "Oh," you say, "we have it." I say we have no such method. Why do we raise the alarm when the girl and boy reach the teen age, and go away from the church to ride around while the preacher is delivering his message? Our method is wrong; we want something that will hold the child when it gets to be a man.

I fear that we are shooting in the air. I had the good fortune to be in a Sunday school meeting some time ago; there was a feast for every one who attended; God did show forth his hand in the leadership, and we all came away with a new vision, a new purpose in life, a greater determination to do the Lord's work. But I was profoundly impressed with this fact: more than one speaker said that we get our helpers, teachers, instructors, and prayers from the rural district; if this is true, why make all our instruction for organized schools? We don't have to help the organized school—we should desire to help the schools to organize.

You cannot apply the methods of teaching as introduced in such conventions to the rural Sunday school. I said in the beginning that we were seeking after knowledge; I cannot read Latin, but I can understand it about as well as the average Sunday school teacher can understand the program as introduced in some conventions.

I call attention to another fact: Why go into a city church and make all of this fuss? The little rural church needs the help. Why force a well man to take medicine? Give it to the fellow that is sick. Put the man or woman out in the country church with a program that they can understand and watch them get into it. Some of our instructors in this work would be about as much at home in the country church as I would be in the city church. Let's get down to business, and work out a program that will meet the needs of the one-room church. Don't think because you live in town and have money to build up-to-date churches that the same can be done out in the country in every place.

One last word: I am ready for a progressive school, but I don't want some little wall-flower from the city to come out and tell me that I am an ignoramus; send them out, but instruct them to teach us fellows how to put this job over in the country church.

Come on, let's make every Sunday school a school of instruction.

ATTENTION, LAYMEN OF SEASHORE DISTRICT.

The District Conference for the Seashore District will be held in Lumberton, Miss., April 15-17.

Thursday, April 17, from 2 to 4 o'clock in the afternoon, will be devoted to the interests of Lay Activities, and Dr. J. M. Sullivan, our Conference Lay Leader, will be with us. Let the delegates to the conference make their plans to be present at this time and participate in these important discussions.

W. E. BARNES,
District Lay Leader.

Know well, my soul, God's hand controls
  What'e'er thou fearest.
Nothing before, nothing behind.
  The steps of Faith
Fall on the seeming void, and find
  The rock beneath.

—Whittier.

Dear friend, you are a prince of blood. You are the son, beloved, of the Almighty Power who rules this world and carries it on to-day. You can and will rule body and mind with absolute control if you choose. If you wish and choose you will be in absolute confidence with your Father, and in the closest relations with him. Tell him everything; ask advice in all difficulty, thank him in all success; come back to him in all failure. You will use his almighty power then for the sway of mind and body; you will be fellow-workmen together with him.—E. E. Hale.

CORINTH DISTRICT NOTES.

We are glad to be able to report progress on the Corinth District. Eighteen of the twenty-nine charges made an advance in salary over last year. Every quarterly conference, on the first round, by formal vote, accepted the quota for the Superannuate Endowment Fund, as fixed by the General Conference. Booneville Church was the first in the District to pay the quota in full for this year. Several churches are in the contest for second place. We shall announce the winner in the next report.

Blue Mountain charge advanced the salary of the pastor, Rev. B. F. Hammond, and they have about paid for their parsonage at Blue Mountain bought last year. Walnut and Faulkner churches have been repaired recently.

Brothers J. J. Garner, Baldwyn, and C. W. Baley, Belmont, are living in new parsonages, recently built, nearly paid for, and are happy in the work.

Booneville station, Rev. E. G. Mohler, pastor, has set a new high record. They have not only paid the Superannuate quota for the year, but the full pledge for Centenary. They have paid about $3,300 on Centenary since the Annual Conference and about $2,500 on Grenada College. The salaries are in full to date, and they plan to build an annex to the church soon, to take care of the growing Sunday school. Several classes hold sessions outside of the church building; among these is the great Men's Bible class, which meets in the bank building of the Booneville Banking Company. This fine class is taught by Hon. James A. Cunningham. One of the leaders in this good church is that generous layman, Mr. John B. Reynolds.

Corinth, First Church, Rev. E. R. Smoot, pastor, advanced the salary of the pastor from $3,000 to $3,600. First Church is taking care of the quota for Superannuate Endowment in the budget. The Sunday school, under the leadership of R. M. Weaver and J. H. Blakemore, as superintendents, is doing good work. Mayor J. A. Lowe is still the teacher of the big class of men.

South Side, Rev. J. D. Boggs, pastor, advanced the salary of pastor, and is planning to repair the church.

Rev. W. W. Bruner is starting well on the Corinth circuit. They advanced his salary $100.

Rev. A. M. West and his people at Chalybeate are about ready to begin the building of a nice brick veneer church, with Sunday school rooms.

Dumas circuit has made a substantial increase in salary, and they plan the building of a new parsonage right away.

Guntown, Rev. W. M. Langley, pastor, has just completed a handsome new parsonage. They also advanced the salary of the pastor.

Rev. R. C. Nanney and his people, of Hickory Flat circuit, have nearly paid out their parsonage.

Rev. W. W. Jones is doing good, solid work at Iuka station.

Rev. N. Maxey and the Iuka circuit people have repaired the parsonage.

Rev. A. L. Davenport is making a good record at Kossuth.

This is Brother G. B. Love's fourth year at Mantachie, and they advanced his salary.

A new church, Friendship, has been organized on the Marietta circuit recently. Rev. E. C. Sullivan is the faithful pastor, but Rev. J. T. Gullett, district evangelist, organized the church.

Rev. Wade Heath is in favor with his people on Mooreville circuit, as shown by the advance in his salary at two churches.

Rev. J. L. Nabors has the habit of doing good work. Myrtle circuit advanced his salary.

New Albany station is a great charge. Rev. J. D. Wroten continues to do good work.

The recent quarterly conference authorized the building of a new parsonage. They plan to build a new church soon, modern in all respects. So far as I know, New Albany is the first church in the district to pay the benevolences for this year.

New Albany circuit made a substantial raise in salary for their pastor, Rev. J. W. York.

Brother McDougal is still "running in high" when the roads permit. He is comfortably situated in the new parsonage at Potts Camp. Macedonia Church advanced his salary.

Brother W. I. White is now using the new church at Thrasher. It is a beauty.

Brother J. A. George seems to be the right man at the right place. Ripley advanced his salary $200, and they are to build their handsome new church right away. They have secured the full quota in cash and subscriptions for Superannuate Endowment for the five years.

Rev. N. G. Augustus seems to be happy at Sherman. They are planning to build an annex to the church there. Bethel church is ready to dedicate.

Brother B. P. Fullilove is in favor with Silver Springs people.

Tishomingo and Paden churches advanced the salary for Rev. W. T. Phillips $225.

Rev. W. C. McKay is doing fine work on Wheeler circuit. He has secured the Superannuate Endowment fund at Wheeler in cash and subscriptions. He has two acres promised to be planted in cotton to pay benevolences in full for the charge.

Evangelists McIntosh, Wilson, Bass, and Gullet give full proof of their ministry.

JOSEPH B. RANDOLPH, P. E.

LAKE CHARLES DISTRICT NOTES.

Beginning at New Iberia, the extreme east end of the district, Rev. Bricoe Carter began the year's work with renovating the parsonage, making it look like new. Things are going well, and a prosperous year is expected.

Rev. L. I. McCain is busy with the plans of the new church building at Lafayette. He has a fine lot in the heart of the city.

* * *

Rev. R. S. Walton has been kindly received at Rayne, and is looking to a year of great success.

The work on the Indian Bayou charge has been greatly hindered because of rain and bad roads. Rev. L. E. Crooks is winning the hearts of his people, and every one is expecting a good year's work.

Rev. Alonzo Early, at Crowley, is hard at work, as usual. He has had Dr. H. C. Morrison with him in a two weeks' meeting, much good resulting therefrom.

Rev. J. I. Hoffpauir is entering upon his fourth year at Eunice, with prospects of a good year's work.

The Maxie charge is supplied by Rev. J. H. Hoffpauir, local preacher. He is doing good work.

Rev. A. A. Bernard is beginnig his fourth year on the Gueydan and Estherwood charge. All goes well with him on his work.

The work at Lake Arthur is moving ahead under the leadership of Rev. L. C. Wilson.

Rev. A. W. Waddill, at Lake Charles, is preaching to large congregations, and is planning a tent meeting for May, with Evangelist J. M. Smith, of Mississippi, to do the preaching.

Rev. T. D. Lipscomb is busy in his second year's work at Sulphur and Vinton.

Rev. H. T. Young is in the midst of revival services at De Ridder. He is doing the preaching himself. We are expecting to hear of great good being done, and the church greatly revived.

The people of Many are delighted with Rev. W. W. Perry. The work on this charge has been retarded on account of rain and bad roads, but the pastor has gone promptly to his appointments.

Merryville is in the capable hands of Rev. S. D. Howard this year. He has been well received by his people, and the work is moving forward.

With the addition of a new appointment, Rev. C. H. Mayo, at Neame and Pickering, is kept busy and is doing good work.

Rev. L. N. Hoffpauir reports his work at Leesville in fine shape. In a few days the district conference will be in session at Leesville.

The two new charges in this district, Barham and Kurthwood, are coming to the front under the good management of Rev. A. K. McLelland and Rev. W. H. Giles.

The work at Zwolle is moving upward under Rev. F. W. Dick.

Hornbeck appointment is being served by Rev. R. T. Wright.

On Saturday, March 29, Rev. A. K. McLelland, pastor at Barham, was painfully injured in an auto accident near Leesville. He is resting as well as could be expected.

J. B. WILLIAMS, P. E.

JACKSON DISTRICT NOTES.

The Jackson District goals for the current year are:

1. A revival in every church.
2. Full collections.
3. One-fifth of the quota of the Superannuate Endowment fund collected.

These objecitves, while fixing for preachers and laymen a large task, are attainable, and every preacher of our district is, without doubt, earnestly engaged in striving toward them.

District Conference convenes at Camden on May 12. Dr. H. F. Brooks, pastor of Capitol Street Church, of Jackson, will preach the initial sermon the evening of the 12th. Evangelism will be the dominant note of the conference. The selection of this great evangelist-preacher to sound the keynote is eminently appropriate, and all the other features of the program will serve to heighten and carry on the spirit of his message. It will be, we pray, a Pentecostal season. Rev. G. E. Allen is pastor at Camden.

No sickness of a serious sort among the preachers and their families is reported. Despite severe winter weather and bad roads, appointments have been faithfully met. The new men in the district—Sullivan, Wesley, Wood, Porter, Greenway, O'Briant, and Seymour—have adjusted themselves to their new situations and are forging ahead. We hear good things from the brethren who went from us into other districts this year. Naturally (and inevitably) they could not do otherwise than succeed after "taking training" in this district. Of course, this is not said in a boastful spirit.

Martin Porter has completed a new parsonage at Satartia and Sims, likewise, at Florence. The Harrisville circuit, under Sells' leadership, will shortly remodel their parsonage.

The people of Bentonia are on the eve of building a new church. This is Charley Wesley's enterprise. With characteristic energy he has raised the money, and the work will now proceed rapidly. Charley builds a community up—and also down. He always leaves houses and artesian wells to mark his progress.

Henry Wood has received seventy-five members into the church this year. At Adell he organized a new church with thirty-seven charter members. He found time also to attend the Standard Training School at Galloway Memorial, bringing a carload of teachers with him each session. Brother Wood is progressive and zealous, and is, indeed, "a workman that needeth not to be ashamed."

Dr. Roife Hunt has been on the Camden circuit lately, and as a result leaves a newly organized church of eighteen members at Way. This accords with the constructive character of the Doctor's work.

Capitol Street will have Judge Frank Morris and his co-workers, of Greenville, Tex., to conduct a revival campaign, beginning March 30, and lasting about three weeks. Brother Morris is an exjurist and is said to be eminently successful in evangelistic work. Dr. Brooks has made good preparation for the meeting and is anticipating splendid results. He asks his brethren to remember the meeting in their prayers.

On April 13, Rev. E. B. Moll begins a meeting in Grace Church, Jackson. This is our new church, just finished. It seems a fitting thing to start off with a revival campaign, and we are anticipating a fine meeting. Brother Moll and Brother Mangum, his song leader, are said to be especially effective with young people.

The Standard Training School, held at Galloway Memorial, March 17-21, under the leadership of Dr. Means, was a great success. The faculty were: Dr. E. K. Means, Dean; Dr. H. C. Howard, of Emory; Mrs. Templeton, of Memphis; Prof. J.E. Stephens, of Grenada College; Profs. Bowen and Summers, of Millsaps College. The sessions were largely attended, not only by Jackson church workers, but also by workers from various points of this and other districts. There was a spirit of deep earnestness, and hard work was the order of the day. Ninety-eight units of credits were awarded. John Chambers and O. C. Hull were on hand, very busy and apparently well pleased about something. By common consent this school was pronounced the most successful ever held in the district. Credit for assembling such a splendid faculty and arranging the finances are due to Brother Burton, who assumed the financial risk, and Professor Bowen, who made a liberal donation. We hope to have this school every year hereafter, and anticipate for it a more liberal support and a larger attendance.

Brother Burton's health seems to be improving. He is meeting all appointments now and keeps busy, even when confined to his room. The unusually severe winter and bad roads made it hard for him and "Governor" to meet their appointments, but in most cases they were on hand, and business went on as usual. Now that spring has come and roads are good, they expect to do even greater things.

MONROE DISTRICT NOTES.

At the first quarterly conferences, the Superannuate Endowment Fund Special Effort was presented, and I am glad to state that every charge accepted the minimum quota; in several instances, an additional sum was added.

The pastors are now busily engaged in collecting one-fifth of the quota. From the interest manifested and the sympathetic expressions, I sincerely believe that the Monroe District will do a gracious part in behalf of the veterans of the cross.

The church work throughout the rural sections has been handicapped by cold weather, rainy spells, bad roads, and hindrances caused by sickness, especially those diseases prevalent among children. Yet in spite of these drawbacks, we can report in a general way success. In this first report for 1924, I can give only a few of the outstanding items, as it would make the news item too long to give all the facts.

Two revivals have been held in the district. Winnsboro church had the efficient assistance in song and sermon of Rev. C. K. Smith, of Pineville. As a result of the effort, seven united with the church. Rev. D. C. Kelly did some effective preaching at Waterproof. As a result, they have a Men's prayer meeting at St. Joseph. Quite a number came into church fellowship, and the general interests of the church were toned up.

Eros charge is doing well under the leadership of Brother D. C. Bennett. It was my gracious privilege to preach the first sermon in our new church at Choudrant. It is a very neat and commodious building.

Monroe and West Monroe were hindered in the work, caused by the continued illness of Brothers Freeman and Evans. We are all happy to know that they are improving in health and the work is now progressing nicely.

Rev. G. A. Morgan was returned to Bastrop for the third year. Salary was raised $300 over last year. Bastrop is in need of a new church building, so as to enable them to do the work more effectively. From observation, it will not be many months before that fact will be realized.

Ferriday church is now in process of a new building enterprise. Contract has been let, materials are on the ground, and in the near future a substantial church building will care for the spiritual interests.

Calhoun charge is responding very graciously to the leadership of Rev. P. O. Lowrey. The Sunday schools at every point on the charge have taken on renewed life. Two Missionary Societies have been organized. Epworth League interest is awakened. Salary raised $600 over last year.

Lake Providence is happy in the work of the Lord. Large congregations attend the ministry of the sanctuary. Prayer meeting attendance is the largest in the history of the church. The pastoral labors of the diligent pastor, Rev. John F. Foster, are bearing fruit.

Rev. H. W. Cudd, of Rayville, has had a siege of measles that somewhat hindered his efforts. However, he has the work well in hand, and the people are talking about the erection of a new church. Rayville has risen to the dignity of a station.

The Mangham charge has been grievously afflicted owing to the death of Brothers C. M. Noble and Bascom Chapman. Both were true and good men, and the church at that point will sorely miss their noble examples and untiring efforts in the work of the Lord.

In my next report I will tell interesting facts about the other charges.

W. D. KLEINSCHMIDT, P. E.

THE BOONEVILLE WAY.

By Dr. Elmer T. Clark.

Rev. L. D. Patterson, of Menlo, Ga., one of our general evangelists, spent a week recently at Booneville, Miss., preaching four times daily. As a result of the week's work, a decision service was held, in which four were converted and joined the church. A campaign of personal evangelism was initiated to continue until Easter. A church school of missions was organized, five mission study classes to meet Wednesday nights for two months.

The balance of the Centenary pledge, $2,754, was collected in full, and at the closing service Dr. Patterson made an address on the Superannuate Endowment Fund, and the entire first year's quota was provided for. Dr. Patterson says that if the presiding elder, pastor, and a few leading laymen in any church really want the Centenary pledge paid in full, it can usually be done.

At Booneville great credit is due the presiding elder, Rev. J. B. Randolph, of Corinth, who was on the ground and provided capable and inspiring leadership. The pastor, Rev. E. G. Mohler, laid himself out and displayed fine powers of leadership and constructive ability. The actual collecting of Centenary pledges was done by Brothers Reynolds, Sanders, Taylor, Bell, Spain and Rhinehart. These are great-hearted laymen, and with such a group of men any church can do anything for God's Kingdom that ought to be done.

At the closing Sunday night service the presiding elder stood at the front, the pastor, Centenary treasurer and the entire officiary of the church came forward, the congregation stood, the Centenary treasurer presented a check for the Centenary pledge in full; the presiding elder made a fitting talk, the pastor led in prayer, and the congregation sang the doxology. It was indeed a "hallelujah time," and all hearts were filled with joy and praise at the wonderful manifestations of the presence of God.

The secret of this success is due to the fact that under the leadership of the presiding elder and pastor, the leading laymen of the church made up their minds that the Centenary must be paid in full. They agreed to collect during the week all that was possible to collect of the pledges and to take a public collection for the remainder. This was done. By Sunday morning all had been collected but $465. At the close of the Sunday morning sermon, a public collection was taken, and this amount was secured in cash. If the same methods are followed in every church in Southern Methodism, the same results can be obtained. There is no reason why every church could not do as Booneville has done.

REV. WALDO W. MOORE—AND FORD.

Perhaps a month ago I called attention to the important and self-sacrificing work of Rev. Waldo W. Moore, at Back Bay, etc.

The kind people of Louisiana, Mississippi, Alabama, California, and other places had almost paid for a "Ford"—to be the property of the "charge" he serves. Only $60 was left due. Since I wrote a very few dollars have been given. Could you not make a gift before Easter? God will bless you.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

SPECIAL EFFORT TREASURERS SHOULD REMIT CASH PROMPTLY TO BOARD OF FINANCE, ST. LOUIS.

Payments on quotas in the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment must be made direct to the Board of Finance, Security Building, St. Louis, Mo. Treasurers of Special Effort committees in the charges should use the book of remittance forms in making payments; the Board has sent one of these books to every pastor in the church, and he should place it in the hands of the treasurer of his Special Effort Committee for use in making remittances. Money should be sent to the Board of Finance as rapidly as it is collected; otherwise it cannot be set to work to earn income for the support of the "Forgotten Man."

I WISH YOU COULLD SEE MY PINKS.

To date, March 29, 1924, over 5900 Pink Leaf Reports have been received out of a possible 6,500. The charges which have sent these reports have undertaken to raise an approximate amount of $9,500,000 for Superannuate Endowment, and there are yet 600 charges to send in reports. Is yours one of them?

The Kavanaugh charge, Greenville, Tex., Rev. J. W. Fort, pastor, added $500 to its minimum, and accepted a quota of $5,000.

Emory University charge, Atlanta, Ga., Rev. W. G. Henry, pastor, added $250 to its minimum, and accepted a quota of $500.

First Church, Gainesville, Fla., Rev. W. A. Cooper, added $4,556 to its minimum, and accepted a quota of $9,112.

St. Mark's Church, Atlanta, Ga., Rev. J. B. Mitchell, pastor, added $6,560 to its minimum, and accepted a quota of $12,500.

The Memphis District, Rev. John R. Nelson, presiding elder, has made a splendid record on the Pink Leaf Report. This District has a minimum quota of $71,582, but they accepted quotas aggregating a total of $101,994; Buntyn charge added $1,150 to its minimum and fixed a quota of $5,000; Chelsea Avenue added $110 to its minimum for a quota of $1,200; Collierville added $10 to the minimum for a quota of $2,000; Epworth added $3,000 to the minimum for a quota of $6,000; First Church added $11,850 to the minimum for a quota of $17,500; Galloway Memorial added $410 to the minimum for a quota of $3,000; Highland Heights added $68 to the minimum for a quota of $2,000; Rossville added $620 to the minimum for a quota of $2,500; Madison Heights added $800 to the minimum for a quota of $6,000; Southside added $100 to the minimum for a quota of $4,000; St. John's added $8,350 to the minimum for a quota of $15,000; St. Paul's added $72 to the minimum for a quota of $3,000; Trinity added $372 to the minimum for a quota of $3,000; Union Avenue added $2,600 to the minimum for a quota of $7,500. All the other churches of the District approved the minimum quota. Fine, "Uncle John!" Fine!

I have a letter from Rev. Joe F. Webb, presiding elder of the Uvalde District, West Texas Conference and I note that the dear brother traveled 80 miles inland over the worst kind of roads to hold a quarterly conference—but he got the Pink Leaf Report.

I have previously published the names of 92 presiding elders whose Districts are 100% "Pink Leaf." In addition to those already published the following have a right to a place on this Honor Roll in the order as numbered:

93. North Texas, Sulphur Springs, Rev. W. L. Tittle, P. E.
94. Alabama, Dothan, Rev. R. A. Moody, P. E.
95. Florida, Tallahassee, Rev. L. D. Lowe, P. E.

142. North Carolina, Rockingham, Rev. J. H. Shore, P. E.
143. Memphis, Paris, Rev. H. A. Butte, P. E.
144. New Mexico, Las Vegas, Rev. W. G. Gaston, P. E.

JUST SAMPLES OF WHAT THE BOYS ARE DOING.

Rev. J. C. Cornett, pastor of Hanes-Clemmons charge, Winston-Salem District, Western North Carolina Conference, wires that with a minimum quota of $1,300 his charge raised $3,100 in gilt-edged subscriptions.

Rev. W. T. McClure, pastor of Lexington, Mo., raised in cash and subscriptions about fifty per cent in excess of the amount needed to pay his charge's first year's portion.

Mount Pleasant charge, Tennessee Conference, Rev. B. F. Isom, pastor, fully subscribed quota, and in addition one member made a personal subscription of $10,000.

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., reports that the Cuba Conference agreed to raise $500 this year for Superannuate Endowment, with the expectation of raising a similar amount each year for five years.

Ozark charge, North Arkansas Conference, Fort Smith, Rev. J. B. Stevenson, pastor, subscribed more than $300 above the Pink Leaf pledge, and the pastor says every penny and more will be paid.

ONE-FIFTH OR MORE OF TOTAL QUOTA PAID.

The following charges have remitted to the Board of Finance enough to pay one-fifth or more of their total quotas:

Stamps charge, Little Rock, Texarkana, Rev. R. H. Cannon, pastor. Total quota, $2,400; amount remitted, $818.30.

Bethel charge (Chester), Upper South Carolina, Rock Hill, Rev. Henry Stokes, pastor. Total quota, $3,303; amount remitted, $667.95.

Franklin charge, Virginia, Portsmouth, Rev. J. D. McAlister, pastor. Total quota, $2,660; amount remitted, $533.20.

Hobson charge, Tennessee, Nashville, Rev. W. V. Jarratt, pastor. Total quota, $2,648; amount remitted, $600.

Earlington charge, Louisville, Henderson, Rev. D. L. Vance, pastor. Total quota, $1,620; amount remitted, $366.

Lenoir First Church charge, Western North Carolina, Statesville, Rev. P. W. Tucker, pastor. Total quota, $2,750; amount remitted, 0586.23.

Briscoe charge, North Carolina, Rockingham, Rev. F. B. Peele, pastor. Total quota, $1,618; amount remitted, $333.64.

East End charge, Tennessee, Nashville, Rev. E. P. Anderson, pastor. Total quota, $3,310; amount remitted, $660.

THE UNWISE ROBIN.

By J. G. A. Carter.

I thought I saw a sign of Spring!
A robin on a brown twig swing!

But no, his drooping wings, his feet,
Were stiffened with the cold and sleet.

Some winter-birds that live anear,
Told him, I think, that food was here.

How quick he saw the crumbs and grain;
He ate, and sought the woods again,

With a faint chirp as if to say,
"Thank you, I'll come another day!"

Now, weren't those other birdies nice
To coax him over snow and ice

That he might share their daily feast
While the cold wind and snow increased?

Sometimes a robin is not wise,
And does not seek the warmer skies.

But if he's any sense at all,
That robin will fly South next fall.

—Zion's Herald.

AN EXTRA PIG.

Alice did not have a great deal to do. That is why she stood so long outside the pen and looked at the white pigs.

"Whatdoyouthink of them?" asked Mr. Ginty, who was the owner of the pigs.

"They are little dears," replied the little girl. "But there's an extra one."

"How's that?" Mr. Ginty was a friend of Alice's and always paid attention to her opinion; so now he put on his spectacles carefully and came closer to the pen.

"Yes, sir," said Alice firmly. "There should be only five pigs in the family. Don't you know, one little pig went to market, one little pig stayed at home, one had roast beef, and one had none, and one little pig cried 'Wee, wee,' all the way home?"

"That's a fact." Mr. Ginty slapped his thigh. "Well, now, I hardly know what to do about it. Which do you think is the extra one?"

Alice considered carefully. "I believe it's that one," she said, pointing to a fat little fellow standing off by himself.

"I'm sure you're right. He doesn't look as if he belonged here. I wonder—would you be kind enough to—er—adopt that pig—take him home with you?"

"For good, you mean?"

"Yes," said Mr. Ginty gravely, "for the pig's good. He looks handsome."

"Oh, thank you." Alice had often told Mr. Ginty how much she wanted a live pet. "I should love to have the little extra pig." She was delighted. She clutched the little pig in her arms and started to go home.

She walked fast at first, but after a while the sun grew hot, her legs grew tired, and the little extra pig grew heavier and heavier. And just as she had decided that she couldn't go another step she saw an empty pigsty at the side of the road. At the same time the pig squirmed out of her arms and fell to the ground.

"Oh, you poor little piggy!" wailed Alice, and reached down to pick him up. But the pig was already running toward the pigsty.

"A good place to rest," said Alice. She followed the pig into the sty and shut the gate after her. Then her heart sank, for she heard the spring lock fasten on the outside.

She looked about her. The fence was of boards that ran up and down, too high and straight for her to climb and much too close for her, or for her piggy either, to crawl between.

Now, when the little pig found they were locked in he cried, too; but he didn't fall down to do it. He went about sniffing at every inch of the fence Finally at one corner he found a sunken place. It was only a tiny hole, but large enough for him.

With his little round pink nose he began to root vigorously. Now and then he sneezed the dirt from his nose, but not once did he stop digging. When Alice was tired of crying she looked up and saw him just squeezing his fat little body through the hole that he had dug.

"Oh, don't leave me," she begged.

But the pig gave a grunt and pulled himself under the fence. Then he shook himself and started down the road with a happy little squeal.

"Well, I guess what a pig can do I can do," Alice thought, and began to dig at the hole the pig had made. Some of the dirt got into her eyes, and a great deal clung to her hair; but she kept on digging.

The pig was fat, but Alice was thin; and before long she was able to squeeze herself through the hole, just as he had done. "And I didn't have to use my nose," she thought, with a laugh. Once outside, she shook herself and started down the road just as piggy had started, except that she didn't squeal.

The road led over a brook that had to be crossed on a bridge of slim logs laid together. The pig had started over the bridge, but instead of staying on the logs his feet had slipped into the spaces between. When Alice arrived, there he hung, with his legs dangling on both sides and his fat little body see-sawing across the top of a slippery log. He squealed with all the breath he had left.

Alice could not help laughing at him. But one good turn deserves another, and right here was where she could repay the little extra pig for starting that hole. By that time he had come to look upon her as a friend; so he did not squirm when she lifted him in her arms and carefully picked her way over the bridge.

Once across the brook she set him on the ground. "Now, sir, I'm done with you. You may do just as you please. I'm coming home." She turned at the crossroads. She was so hot and tired and dirty that pigs no longer interested her. She did not even look to see which way he turned at the four corners, nor did she care!

It wasn't far to her home. She ran through the yard into the house, but as the screen door swung shut behind her she heard a forlorn little grunt, and whirled around in time to see piggy caught in the crack.

"Oh, you precious little thing, did you follow me? Do you really want to be my own little extra pig?" She held the door open for him to come in. Together they walked straight into the room where her mother and father were.

"Why?" cried mother. "What have we here?"

"A little extra pig," said Alice.

"Umph! It looks like an ordinary pig to me," said mother. But it did not look at all like an ordinary pig to Alice.—Catha Wells, in Youth's Companion.

HIS GARDEN WILL SEND HIM TO COLLEGE.

One of the big things the United States Department of Agriculture does is to encourage boys and girls on the farms, and in towns where families have more than a formal front yard, to raise something—vegetables, corn, or calves and pigs. And hundreds of youngsters all over the country have made some marvelous records. Here is one, for a sample, and the success of this boy may set some of our readers to thinking up schemes to put into effect this spring.

A boy who had been in garden work in a limited way for several years rented a three-and-a-half acre plot of ground in order to put his garden on a commercial basis. He built a hotbed, raised plants for himself and for sale, and raised and sold vegetables and flowers enough to make his gross receipts amount to $1,265.30. Total costs other than his own labor amounted to $411, so that the labor return to the boy for his season's work outside of school duties was $854.80. On the basis of this work and a competitive examination he won a $250 scholarship to the winter course at the New York State College of Agriculture, given by the State Bankers' Association. Since his attendance at this course he has become so keenly interested in gardening and floriculture that his plans are already laid to earn enough money during the coming season on his gardening enterprise to bring him back to college next fall as a regular student in the four-year course.—Selected.

Marjorie, four, came home from her first visit to a Sunday school.

"What did you do?" asked her mother.

"Oh, we stood up and sat down and sang about tarrying the butter-knife. Mamma, what do they tarry a butter-knife for?"

Her mother discovered that the hymn was "I can tarry, I can tarry but a night."

EPWORTH LEAGUE ASSEMBLIES.

Louisiana Conference, Mansfield, June 10-17.

Mississippi Conference, Brookhaven, June 9-15.

North Mississippi Conference, Grenada, June 18-21.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

We regret being out of the office on April 1 when Rev. Claude P. Jones, our pastor at Magnolia, Miss., called.

The First Methodist Church, Columbus, Miss., had 250 people at prayer meeting on a recent Wednesday evening.

Mr. W. D. Hawkins, Centenary Secretary-Treasurer of the Mississippi Conference, honored the Advocate office with a call on Friday of last week.

The New England Annual Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church met last week at Lynn, Mass., in the first church organized by Jesse Lee, on Feb. 20, 1791.

The North Alabama Conference owns thirty-eight homes for superannuated preachers, valued at approximately $130,000. Rev. J. W. Norton is the Superannuate Home Agent.

The Phillathea Class of the First Methodist Church, Greenville, Miss., are planning to erect a building of their own on the east side of the church.

The Big Brothers' Class of Hollandale, Miss., visited the Big Brothers' Class at Greenville, Miss., on a recent Sunday. There were twenty-five in the party.

Rev. J. W. Price, our pastor at Foxworth, Miss., writes that the work is moving along well in all departments. A revival in each church of the charge is being planned for.

Says Methodist Matters: "More of our people ought to take the church papers. The New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Nashville Christian Advocate should each be in every home. Their influence would be worth many times their cost." Thank you, Brother Longgrear.

Billy Sunday, who recently closed a great meeting at Shreveport, La., will conduct a three-day camp meeting at Winona Lake, June 27-29. Winona Lake is his permanent home, and it is said that the famous evangelist is able to attract larger crowds than any other speaker who appears on the platform.

On Sunday, March 2, the residence of Mr. W. D. Hawkins, Centenary Secretary-Treasurer of the Mississippi Conference, burned at Meridian, Miss. The loss was total, with about one-third of the value of the building covered by insurance.

Five General Boards of the church meet during April, as follows: Hospital Board, Atlanta, April 16; Sunday School Board, Nashville, April 16-18; Board of Education, Nashville, April 22-23; Board of Finance, St. Louis, April 28-29; Board of Church Extension, Louisville, April 30-May 1. The Centenary Commission will meet at Nashville on April 24.

Of the nine army chaplains completing the training course at the Chaplains' School, Fort Wayne, Ind., on April 4, two were from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South—Thomas A. Harkins, who has been assigned to the army post at Marfa, Tex., and Samuel O. Wright, who has been assigned to Fort McIntosh, Tex.

Rev. and Mrs. J. S. Rutledge, of the Louisiana Conference, announce the marriage of their daughter, Pearl, to Prof. J. Kline, at Baton Rouge, La., on March 29. The groom is the principal of the high school at Walker, La. The Advocate extends all good wishes to the happy young couple.

Rev. R. P. Neblett requests us to say that the place of holding the Sardis District Epworth League Institute has been changed from Senatobia to Coldwater. The Institute will meet on Friday, April 18, with Miss Glynn Moring, district secretary, presiding. Let all concerned take due notice.

Press dispatches reported the death, and burial at Jackson, Miss., on April 1, of Mrs. Mary Pace Lin, mother of Professor J. Reese Lin, of Millsaps College. Mrs. Lin was the widow of Rev. J. T. Lin, prominent preacher and educator in the North Georgia Conference. She was 80 years old at the time of her death. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to her loved ones and friends.

The Hattiesburg Morning Herald is a new daily newspaper that has entered the field at Hattiesburg, Miss. It is owned and published by Ben Stone Dever, who has associated with him in the editorial management Dan. E. Kelly, Jr. An interesting article on W. J. Bryan, written by Rev. Dan E. Kelly, appeared in one of the first issues of the paper.

As a result of the meeting at Epworth Methodist Church, this city, in which Rev. Dan Kelly did the preaching, 78 members were added to Epworth and 7 to other churches of the city. Of those joining Epworth, 49 were received by vows, the others by certificate. The meeting was a great one, and the pastor, Rev. J. B. Grambling, and his people are rejoicing over the blessings they have enjoyed.

The board of stewards of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, this city, recently presented Brother Chas. O. Chalmers a beautiful loving cup in recognition of his faithful service as secretary of the board for twenty-five years. Brother Chalmers has been actively identified with the Carrollton Avenue Church from the time it was a small congregation until now it is one of the leading pastoral charges of the city, and he has contributed no small part to its growth.

Rev. J. Early Gray writes from Moss Point, Miss.: "We are in the midst of the greatest revival it has been my privilege to participate in in many years. Howard S. Williams, lay evangelist of Hattiesburg, is leading, with his splendid equipment—3,500 capacity gospel tent, radio broadcasting outfit, splendid choir leader, Mr. Otis Perry. Great results are being achieved—gamblers, bootleggers, other sinners of various types are being saved. Williams has a message, and God is mightily using him."

Upon the occasion of his visit to Whitworth College last week in connection with the dedication of the "Y" Hut, the editor of the Advocate was the recipient of delightful courtesies at the hands of Dr. and Mrs. I. W. Cooper and Professor R. E. Bobbitt. His many friends will be glad to learn that Dr. Cooper's health is improving. For twenty-two years he has successfully guided the destinies of the institution. Many more years to him!

Dr. Edward Leigh Pell, the distinguished preacher and Bible student, will be with Rev. J. T. Leggett, Main Street Methodist Church, Hattiesburg, Miss., in a series of meetings beginning on May 25. A Pell meeting is not an evangelistic meeting, but a development of the Bible conference idea, devoted wholly to helping people to get better acquainted with the real Jesus and his real teaching, and designed to bring about a revival of faith and spiritual life inside the church. Dr. Pell is worth going a long distance to hear.

The following is from Rev. John A. Randolph, our pastor at Sardis, Miss., under date of April 5: "Brother M. L. Lifsey and Brother James M. Smith are just beginning a meeting for me here. Brother Lifsey is one of the evangelistic singers authorized by our General Board, and comes to us recommended by a number of our ministers, including Bishop Ainsworth. He has an open date, beginning April 27, which he could give to some brother in this territory. Brother Lifsey lives in Macon, Ga. Any brother wishing to communicate with Brother Lifsey may write him here until April 20."

The fifth Sunday of March was a great day for the Methodist church at Carriere, Miss. An all-day service was held, with sermons and addresses by the presiding elder, Rev. L. L. Roberts, T. M. Cox, Rev. E. D. Phillips, Rev. J. A. Smith, Mrs. L. W. Locke. At the close of the meeting, a Ford car was presented to the faithful pastor, Rev. A. C. Johnson. The work at Carriere has made great progress during the pastorate of Brother Johnson—the parsonage has been repaired, a piano has been bought, the Sunday school has more than doubled in membership, the Epworth League has reached a high degree of efficiency, and the Woman's Missionary Society, under the leadership of Mrs. Johnson, has grown in numbers and effectiveness.

The dedication of the "Y" Hut at Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., on Thursday evening, April 3, was a very happy occasion. Beginning several years ago with the idea of building a real log cabin at a cost of a few hundred dollars, the students of Whitworth saw larger things ahead, and the log cabin became a beautiful brick building, attractive in appearance and commodious in arrangement, worth $10,000. The last dollar of indebtedness has been paid, the burning of the cancelled note being a feature of the dedication service. Miss Helen Sells, president, and her co-workers in the Y. W. C. A., had arranged a most interesting program for the occasion, including a brief sketch of the development of the "Hut" movement, and vocal and instrumental music. The editor of the Advocate was honored with an invitation to deliver the address. Whitworth College is one of our best institutions for girls, and the "Y" Hut is one of the most attractive and useful buildings on the campus.

The following items concerning the Billy Sunday meeting in Shreveport, La., are taken from the Shreveport Times: "Billy Sunday preached 74 sermons in Shreveport; the average length of a sermon was one hour; an average of 7,500 words were spoken during each sermon, or an approximate total during the campaign of 600,000 words; the estimated total attendance was 350,000; at least 50,000 persons from out of Shreveport attended the meetings; there were 10,000 conversions and reconsecrations; the gain in membership in the local churches cannot be estimated; the cost of conducting the revival was $22,000, all of which has been paid, with a small surplus in the treasury; for his services, Mr. Sunday received a draft for $23,138.15, which, with several other checks given after the close of the last service, made a total of approximately $24,000. Mr. Sunday and every member of his party received hundreds of gifts of various kinds from persons attending the services; the Billy Sunday revival had the greatest attendance for the period of time of any gathering ever held in Shreveport."

NEWTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Tuesday, April 22, beginning at 10 a.m., will be devoted to the District Sunday School Institute. Preaching at 7:30 p. m. by Rev. G. G. Yeager, Rosehill, Miss., followed by the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

The District Conference proper will begin work at 8:30 a.m., Wednesday, April 23.

I announce the following committees at this time:

For License to Preach—H. J. Moore, E. H. Cooley, S. N. Young.

For Deacons' and Elders' Orders—N. B. Harmon, M. R. Jones, P. H. Grice.

Let all pastors and delegates pray for a great conference.

L. E. ALFORD, Presiding Elder.

"THE HIGHWAY": A THEOLOGICAL NOVEL.

By Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon.

It was sure to come. And here it is, a novel discussing the questions at issue between Fundamentalists and Modernists. This, at any rate, is what the publishers say it is intended to be. In their "blurb" they advertise it as follows: "This gripping novel points the way to a better understanding of the real differences between fundamentaiist and modernist." Caroline Atwater Mason has certainly written a good story in "The Highway." I read it with increasing interest. In fact, it kept he up till after midnight. My sympathies are solidly with her splendid young hero. And when he declares:

"I believe in a divinely inspired Bible, not simply a collection of inspiring historical records. If the New Testament does not give us Divine Truth, then the Church's foundations is falsehood. I believe that God sent his Son to redeem us from sin and its power, that Jesus was God incarnate, born of a Virgin. I believe that the Cross was not an accident or a sentimental appeal, but was the climax of a plan of redemption for our race, its foundations laid when sin entered the world. I believe in the Resurrection as given in the Gospels, with no desire to explain it away as legend as 'subjective hallucination.' If God is possible, miracle is possible."

I answer immediately: "This is the very heart of the Gospel, and here all evangelical Christians can unite."

The fact of the business is, in this story Mrs. Mason does not discuss so much the issues involved between "Fundamentalism" and "Modernism," as the questions at issue between conservative orthodoxy and extreme rationalism. As between these two, a Methodist preacher's sympathies would, of course, always be with the most conservative sort of orthodoxy. And I am calling attention to this book because I believe that it will strengthen the faith of those who read it.

There are, however, certain criticisms which must justly lie against Mrs. Mason's presentation of the issues involved.

And first, she has no appreciation at all of the splendid work of social service now being done by the Christian church. Her view is exceeding narrow and one-sided. The sketch she draws of the attempt of modern Christians to apply the teachings of the New Testament to the solution of social questions is, to be perfectly frank, nothing but a miserable caricature. Modern Christians are tremendously interested in saving, not individuals only, but human society also. We have heard the cry of injustice; we have seen the ruin wrought by iniquitous institutions; we have seen great wealth controlling printing presses and subsidizing movements in the interest of a purely individualist interpretation of the gospel. And it grieves us to see good Christians like Mrs. Mason presenting the gospel in so one-sided and imperfect a fashion.

Again, it won't do to charge up all the heresy and immorality in the world in these post-war years to Germany. That is what Mrs. Mason does. Enough evil has come out of Germany, we all know. We Methodists, in particular, can have no sympathy with rationalistic criticism which leaves its spiritual blight wherever it goes. But to capitalize all the present bitter hatred of Germany in the interest even of a good cause, is hardly fair. And this is exactly what our author does—and does with great power. Some good things have come out of Germany. And many great things will yet come, let us devoutly hope.

I am suggesting more especially that "The High Way" be read by two classes—by our university professors and by such of our people as have caught the bitter spirit of so-called "Fundamentalism." It should help both.

We had better set fire to all our schools than have them roh our young preachers of their faith. I do not mean to suggest that our own Methodist schools of theology are doing anything of the kind. I know that they are not. Southern Methodist University and Emory are sending out finely prepared young men who are faithful heralds of the cross of Christ. But there are theological seminaries that are giving themselves to the destruction of the foundations of the faith. A young friend of mine attended one of these and lost his faith there. I know another young man who graduated at one of these institutions and is now a Unitarian minister. And this, in passing, is something I cannot understand—how any man can find in Unitarianism anything to develop enough enthusiasm over to be willing to devote his life to its publication! Think of a life given chiefly to criticism and negation! The tendency of schools of theology, however, has always been to make man too academic, and not practical enough—to turn out scholars rather than prophets. If they are not "schools of the prophets," then we have no use for them.

And I think the reading of this book would help the other class also—the class influenced by those who are waging a bitter and relentless war against all who do not agree with them in theological terminology. If all our "Fundamentallsts" were like Mrs. Mason's splendid young preacher, Hardy Shannon, all evangelical Christians would be fighting together—and not fighting one another. As one Methodist bishop said, I would take at once every man of his sort I could get my hands on. Hear what he says about fighting:

"I remember declaring with the confidence of my inexperience that it was my purpose to fight the new Religious Liberalism. Since then I have found out what fighting—what war in any realm of human activity—means. I am not inclined now as I was two years ago, to go in for spiritual bloodshed. We have seen enough of that—have seen it just now, even just here. I have surrendered any design of fighting in this field. Such purposes seem to me as hopeless as they are tragic. I purpose to defend the old faith with every drop of blood in me. But I shall not fight. I have no trust, no hope, save in Christ crucified and lifted up. He is Way, Truth, Life."

The utter and final condemnation of so-called "Fundamentalism" as such, is its unbrotherly, unChristian, and wicked spirit. It is out for war. It is out for blood. It fights men rather than false doctrines. It has forgotten entirely the Spirit of Christ. "Now if any man have not the Spirit of Christ, he is none of his."

What is really needed, and badly needed, is that the evangelical forces of the church should consolidate. In Methodism all who stand for the essential things of evangelical Christianity should stand solidly together. And we should draw closer and closer to all who put in the center of their preaching Christ and his Cross as the one hope of a sin-cursed and ruined world. Not the division of Christ's army, but consolidation—not schism, but union of all who love our Lord Jesus Christ—not the sowing of discord, but the cultivation of confidence—not the whisperings of suspicion, but the open speech of brotherly love—not the casting of doubt and discredit on men and women who have hazarded their lives for Christ's gospel at home and abroad, but prayers and sympathy and hearty good will—this is what the church needs more than anything else just now.

Let us dedicate ourselves anew to this high task.

HOUISON THOMPSON GRIFFITH was born near Chicot, La., Aug. 20, 1859, and died, after a two weeks' illness of pneumonia and complications, at his home in Oakdale, on Friday night, March 14, 1924, aged 63 years, 6 months, and 6 days. Brother Griffith grew up in a day when educational advantages were small; hut heing a man of fine common sense and quiet, thoughtful hahits, he became much hetter informed than the average citizen. He was past fifty when he united with the Methodist Church; but he won a large place in the affections and esteem of the hrethren. At the time of his death he was a member of the hulding committee having charge of the construction of Oakdale's splendid new church; a work which he greatly loved, and in which he had almost infinite pride. Kindness was a prominent mark of his character. He was the hest of neighhors; and his generosity toward the poor was unmeasured. He loved the young, and nothing gave him greater satisfaction than to be able to help and encourage children and young people. Because of his genial kindness, he will be sadly missed by all who knew him. He was married, June 14, 1887, to Miss Susie May White, and to this union five sons and five daughters were born. He is survived by his wife, four daughters, five hrothers, two sisters, a numher of grandchildren, and a large company of kindred and unnumhered friends. The five sons and one daughter had died hefore him. It will thus be seen that he and his heloved companion have had many sorrows. And now she and the other dear ones have this additional bereavement. May the comforting presence of the Father's gracious Spirit enable them to hear it. I knew Brother Griffith well. He was an unpretentious Christian, and a genuinely good man. I expect to meet him where no pale death angel shall he allowed to interrupt our fellowship.

The church and community at Mars Hill, Miss., suffered a great loss in the passing away of MR. B. F. REVES, SR., Feh. 4, 1924. He was 76 years old. He joined the church when a young man, and was a faithful worker till his death. He was a member of the hoard of stewards for some twenty-five years, and never missed a quarterly meeting; then he was put on the superannuate list, and served there for five years without missing a single meeting. Mr. B. F. Reves was married about sixty years ago to Miss Catherine Harris, and twelve children were born from this union, ten of whom still survive to mourn the loss of a devoted father, his wife having gone on to glory some twenty-five years ago. Young and old loved him. To know him was to love him. It is a comfort to know he still lives, and will continue to live in the lives of all who came in contact with him. The Savior has called, and he has answered. The Lord has said: "Thou hast heen faithful in a few things, I will make thee ruler over many."

ONE WHO LOVED HIM.

Mrs. ARZALEE C. COLLINS was born in Rapides parish, La., Jan. 15, 1831, and died Mar. 5, 1924, having lived a little over ninety-three years. "Grandma Collins," as she was lovingly called, never knew the exact time of her conversion, hut was ever conscious of the witness of the Spirit to her acceptance with God. She joined the church when she was fourteen years of age, and for seventy-nine years was an earnest, true and faithful memher. For fifty years consecutively she was a teacher of a class in the Sunday school, and when time came to give it up, it was with great sorrow. As an active worker in all the societies of the church, and the prime mover of the first parsonage in Lecompte—the present one is due to her unflagging zeal—she was to the last zealous of the church's welfare. She leaves one son, whose greatest joy was ministering to his mother. We shall miss her, for her life was a henediction to all who knew her. She is gone from us, but there is no doubt of the result of her well-ordered life. She loved Christ, and loved humanity. She was true to the church, and ever rejoiced in a conscious salvation. Of her it can he truly said, "Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord."

Her pastor,
H. W. BOWMAN.

A Beautiful Life of Loveliness—In Memory of Mrs. Mary McDonald Kittrell.

How sweet it is to thus remember,
When loved ones pass from us away,
Their deeds of love and loving kindness,
They gave to us from day to day!
We love to hold of them sweet memories
Of how they used to laugh and play;
And treasure as our choicest treasure,
"Their deeds and what they used to say!"
We find in this, sweet consolation,
When not a fault of them we find,
But every thought is filled with Heaven
And loving deeds they left behind!
Such are our thoughts of one departed
When she had just begun to live
So full of life and every blessing
Of hest that Heaven here can give!
We know her as a snow-white lily
Reflecting all the rays of light
In childish glee as fair sweet maiden
So lovely, pretty, glad and bright!
For one to know her was to love her,
As one so kind and sweet and true—
"A perfect life!" We thus remember,
"Beneath God's Southern skies of hlue!"
To Dr. Kittrell she was married,
And hoth seem'd always glad and gay
Until God called and her sweet spirit
So calmly passed from earth away!
But blessed be the God who made her
And blessed her with his boundless love,
He gave through her a dear, sweet baby
Before she left to live above!

Her habe is now a perfect darling,
So like her lovely mother, dear!
And we shall pray God's holy angels
Shall hless and guard her pathway here!
Each star at night that shines from Heaven
Shall speak to us of her great love
And every thought of her we cherish
Will turn us to that home ahove!
Each hlossom shall reveal her heauty,
Each spring shall thus reveal her life,
A lovely child, a fair sweet maiden;
A darling mother and true wife!

REV. AND MRS. CARL MONROE
Memphis, Tenn.

Mrs. ESTHER SUSAN BREWER (nee Moore) was horn near Cheneyville, La., Aug. 21, 1837; was married to Daniel Brewer, Mar. 6, 1856, and departed from this life Oct. 5, 1923. She joined the church at a very early age, and ever lived a faithful, Chrlstian life. Sister Brewer was keenly alive to all the interests of her church, and reared her children in the fear and nurture of the Lord. In her later years she was afflicted with the loss of her hearing, but her sweet spirit and confident faith never waned. Her Bible and the Christian Advocate were her constant companions, and she kept up with the affairs of the church to the last. Whenever her pastor returned from the Annual Conference, she was anxious to know what was done, and where the preachers were sent. She leaves a number of children, all of whom are members of the church, and while they mourn the separation and miss her from the circle, faith in their mother's God assures them that her life of falthfulness has but advanced her into the church triumphant. A saint in Israel has gone; a host of friends and relatives mourn her departure, and await till that time when once more they shall be united to part no more. "Then are they glad because they be quiet; so he hringeth them unto their desired haven."

Her pastor,
H. W. BOWMAN.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, in the All-wise Providence of God, our dear sister, Mrs. Mattie Hoell, has passed from earthly labor to her eternal reward. Therefore be it resolved:

1. That the Woman's Bible Class of the Grand Cane Methodist Church has lost a most worthy, loyal and true member, whose faithfulness was an inspiration to the other members of the class.

2. That the Sunday school has lost a faithful and diligent attendant and worker, the church a true and thoroughly consecrated member, and the community a loving and sympathetic friend, whose kindly ministrations will he sorely missed.

3. That while we sorrow because of her having left us, yet we bow in humble suhmission to the Divine Will of our Heavenly Father, who "doeth all things well," with gratitude to Him for her "upright walk and godly conversation" while among us.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the Sunday school, a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication, and one to the sorrowing husband.

Signed: Mrs. H. P. Dowling, Mrs. I. T. Reames, Mrs. G. G. Dixon.

FROM WINNSBORO, LA.

We recently closed a two weeks' revival here, and while this meeting was not a great success as many such meetings are, much and lasting good was accomplished.

Our pastor, Brother L. R. Sparks, did most of the preaching, and it was of that high order that appeals to the best in the best intellects of the audience. Rev. Claud K. Smith, of Pineville, rendered excellent service, both as preacher and singer. Seven were received on profession of faith, making sixteen additions to the church since Conference.

We are delighted with our pastor, who is proving his worth as pastor-evangelist, his sermons being of that deep spiritual type, full of zeal for the cause of Christ, which enables him to present in a most delightful way his subjects. Under his wise leadership the different departments of the church are being thoroughly organized and, as a whole, the way seems bright for the future.

Our new church building program, launched some time ago, is receiving some attention; hence, in the near future, we hope to have our new edifice under construction.

FROM FULTON, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: We have just closed a very successful revival meeting here in Fulton. We began the services Sunday, March 9, and continued for twelve days. Brother Wasson, our presiding elder, was with us to preach the first sermon and made the initial service one of power and inspiration with his masterful sermon on "Faith." At the evening service, the pastor of the Baptist church, Brother A. J. Darling, delivered the message, and Brother Alexander, pastor at Tupelo, came out Monday morning and preached a most helpful sermon to a large congregation. Then Brother J. A. George, pastor at Ripley, was present for the Monday night service, and preached throughout the meeting.

By way of preparation for the meeting, we had taken a religious census of the town, and so had some definite information to assist in personal work. We also had prayer services each afternoon for the week preceding the meeting. These services were well attended by those earnestly desiring to see the power of God at work in our town, and God answered the prayers of faith.

Brother George is a forceful and an effective preacher in a revival. He preaches the pure Gospel, not in a harsh manner, but he is not highly emotional and does not tell graveyard stories and death-bed scenes. He upholds Methodism. He preaches the truth fearlessly, backs up his statements with Scripture, and presents his appeal in a logical way. Our people were charmed with his work.

The co-operation among the various churches of the town was perfect. We are knit together here in the bonds of brotherhood, striving against the one common enemy and "for the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus." Brother Darling, pastor of the Baptist church, conducted the singing during the meeting. Before he entered the ministry, he accompanied an evangelist as his singer for several years, and he made the music a feature of the meeting. With the church packed full of worshipers and everybody singing "There Is a Fountained Filled With Blood," the occasion rivaled that of an Annual Conference.

The weather was cold and rainy most of the time, but we did not miss a service, even though it rained and snowed, and our walks and streets are of the muddy variety. Our smallest congregation consisted of twenty-nine people one cold, rainy night. At most of the services the house was full, and at several services I counted as many as fifty people standing, being unable to secure seats.

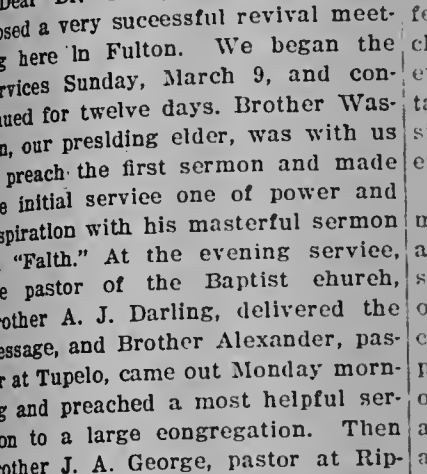
Brother George and I visited in over fifty homes and enjoyed a bountiful table hospitality in twenty homes. We had prayers in every home visited, and spoke to the unsaved and had special prayers with them as often as we could secure an opportunity to do so. We held special services three times in the Agricultural High School and once in a sawmill, the manager stopping the machinery and calling the employees in the office for the service.

Among the visible results of the meeting, we can mention that we had forty-two to accept Jesus Christ as their personal Savior. We took twenty-eight of these into the Methodist Church, and received three others by letter, making a total of forty-four received here since Conference. Three gave their names to join the Baptist Church, and of the remaining eleven, two have given their names to join the Methodist and the others have not stated which church will be their choice. At one morning service, we baptized ten infants. The last day of the meeting we sent out a committee of four men to clear an indebtedness of $800 on our parsonage that was built last year. At the evening service these men reported the debt provided for, one-third cash and the balance secured by notes payable June 1 and Oct. 1, 1924.

The meeting was as fruitful inside the church as it was on the outside. Over a hundred and fifty people came down the aisle and reconsecrated themselves to the Lord, and the whole church has experienced a revival of interest in things pertaining to the advancement of the Kingdom of God. We are looking forward to the building of a modern brick church with sufficient Sunday school rooms to care for the needs in our growing and thriving little city. The meeting was a blessing to the entire town. The power of God was felt, and we offer our thanks to him and are caused to say again with St. Paul, "I am not ashamed of the gospel of Christ: for it is the power of God unto salvation to every one that believeth; to the Jew first, and also to the Greek."

Cordially yours,

ALBERT Y. BROWN.



A Mother's Advice

Health is Vital to You, Mothers!

Birmingham, Ala.—"After becoming a mother my health gave way. I suffered severely with a pain low down in my right side. My sister-in-law, having been cured of a bad case of feminine trouble by taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, advised me to take it, which I did. I am now starting on my third bottle and the pain has all left me. My husband said to me the other day, 'That Favorite Prescription must be a wonderful medicine, I don't hear you complaining any more.'"—Mrs. Ruth Williamson, 4016 First Avenue.

REASONS FOR PROHIBITION.

By Henry Rickey.

(Prize Winner.)

1. Alcoholism generates the races and transmits disease, low morals and ideals to the future generations.

2. Alcohol is an enemy to high social ideals. It destroys filial and parental love. It dulls susceptibility to religious influences and causes a loss of the desire for mental and moral things.

3. Alcohol hinders the hygienic, economic and moral progress of the people. It is a cause of many crimes and the breaking up of happy homes.

4. Some of the far-reaching and important things and benefits that have come from prohibition are better living, better clothing, cleaner and better social life, happy and contented homes and more efficient and steadier workers.

5. The efficiency of labor has been greatly increased, and the number of accidents in factories reduced seventy-five per cent by prohibition.

6. Savings deposits have increased more than thirty-three and a third per cent since prohibition went into effect. Prohibition is ninety-five per cent efficient, and will be one hundred per cent so when enforced.

7. Some of the things we are getting rid of by prohibition are money waste, unproductive drain of idle men, bread lines, poor farms, charity claims and many jails and poorhouses, and drunkards.

8. Some of the things that we are getting are a decrease of seventy-two per cent in deaths from alcohol, a lower mortality rate, a saving of human life, a joy in the home, a saloonless nation, and the attention of the world.

9. Evidence accumulates on every hand that prohibition has promoted public health, happiness and industrial efficiency. This evidence comes from manufacturers, physicians, nurses and social workers laboring in many fields.

10. This testimony demonstrates that prohibition is sapping the terrible force of disease, crime, poverty and vice. It strengthens education, religion and law, while the liquor traffic does not.—Times-Pleayune.

Sunday School

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The fourth Sunday in March was spent in Laurel. We were in the service at West End in the morning. In the afternoon the workers from the three churches met at First Church to consider a Standard Training School. A committee was raised to look into it further and make arrangements. The night services we were with the Kingston people. All three churches are on the up-grade. They are each planning for bigger and better things this year than ever before. I am so glad the church is growing in this thriving center. The three pastors are in favor with the people, and there seems to be a very hopeful and progressive atmosphere.

The fifth Sunday we were at Lake in the circuit institute. We had a good program. The Lake school was checked. This school showed a remarkable improvement over the past year. They are working on Program of Work "C," and if the same gait is maintained, they will be 100% in a short time. The Sunday schools are taking specials right along. I wish every one who has to do with missions in the Sunday school would realize that we are trying to make it easy for those who have not paid what they promised to the Centenary to pay out. It is not for more money or new money with those who are behind in the Centenary, but for the money promised for this purpose.

A uniform program for the district institutes has been worked out. It is not complete. Anything may be taken from it or added to it, as you desire. We are trying to urge the workers to ask questions and help the work in that way. We are going to use the quarterly conference report blanks to report on at the district institutes. Will you please see that they are filled out for the time between the Annual Conference, Nov. 18, to the meeting of the district institute?

The presiding elder of each district will hold the devotional services.

Business That Must Be Looked After.

1. Receiving the reports from the local schools. These reports will not be read at the institute, but will be used in checking the district as to its Conference standing.
2. Reports from the district officers.
3. Election of officers.
4. Reports of county organizations.
5. Reports of circuit-wide institutes.

The following topics will be discussed, depending upon the time allotted for the institute:

1. The Programs of Work.
2. The What and the How of the Wesley Bible Class.
3. The Circuit-wide Institute.
4. Sunday School Day.
5. The 1,000 Study Club.
6. Leadership Training.
7. Missions.
8. The Honor Rolls.
9. The Circuit Standard.
10. Home Department.
11. Tithing.
12. The Story Papers.
13. The Age Groups.
14. The Key Woman.
15. The Necessity of Accurate Reports.

Please suggest topics if you do not see yours here, and let the institutes be helpful and practical.

The Seashore District Institute meets at Lumberton, April 15, at 10 a. m. See that your school is represented.

Pray for the work and the workers.

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Sardis is the first on the list to observe Sunday School Day and send in the offering. Please do not wait until the last minute to send for the programs. A man may not have the ability to get the people to teach their children; but when he has the ability and deliberately refuses, he needs a lesson on Christian ethics that he has missed. It is all right to be orthodox in creed; it is also of importance to be consistent in conduct. The law of our church is a guide that has stood the test of years. Observe the law or fight the church.

Some General Suggestions.

"In order that Sunday School Day may be successfully observed, the following suggestions should be followed:

"1. Begin in time. The school that does not commence preparations a month in advaince will be in sore danger of making a botch of the whole business.

"2. Take both the teachers and the pupils of your school into your counsels. Let them know what you want to do and why. Awaken their interest in order that you may secure their hearty co-operation.

"3. Select those who are to lead in the work of preparation with a view to fitness, and then do everything you can to encourage the whole school to stand by them.

"4. Advertise. Let the congregation and the community know what you are about. Let them understand that you are engaged in a big task in which you thoroughly and enthusiastically believe and that you want their intelligent co-operation.

"5. Make the entire undertaking a matter of prayer. The best way to make it a festival of gladness is to make it a vitally religious service."

The church at Booneville has been doing big things in the raising of the Centenary and Educational pledges, but this is small as compared with their program of religious education. Recently a class of eight received credits on the completion of "Organization and Administration." The school has seventy credits in all. A wise layman has offered $2.50 for every credit and $25 for every gold seal diploma, the money to be used in building a Sunday school annex. The church has four classes studying missions. These studies are to continue six weeks, one lesson a week. It takes a great leader to enterprise this type of work, and it takes a great people to follow. In the afternoon Brother Mohler gives an illustrated gospel message in the movie theatre to a large number of people who do not attend any of the church services. He is using the kind of bait the fish will bite. All good fishermen know this trick. Mohler is a fisher of men.

SOME LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

By Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Conference Superintendent.

Dean Smith, of Centenary College, has accepted the position of Superintendent of Adult Work in our Conference.

There will be a Sunday school session or feature in each of the coming district conferences. At the Alexandria District, the time of the Sunday school session will be Sunday, May 4, at 2:30-5 p. m. The New Orleans District will also give the Sunday afternoon to the Sunday school cause, April 27.

Dr. A. S. Lutz, of Shreveport, Secretary of the Educational Movement of our Conference, will preach the educational sermon at the Alexandria District Conference, on Sunday, May 4, at 11 a. m.

A tentative date, June 2 to 7, has been decided on for the Standard Training School in the Lake Charles District. This school will offer four general unit courses.

The records show that the first Sunday School Day offering for 1922 was from the Springhill Sunday school, March 24. In 1923 it was the Haughton school that was the first to send in their offering, April 21. This year the Homer Sunday school took up an offering of $52 at the annual Sunday school conference, which offering was creditcd to them as their Sunday School Day offering; but the Mansfield Sunday school had its regular observance on March 30, and sent in her offering the first of April, of $44.93.

Rev. J. C. Price, pastor of Rochelle, sends me the following report of his Fifth Sunday Institute, which will be read with interest by all pastors, especially pastors of circuit Sunday schools:

"I am sending you a report for our 'Fifth Sunday Institute,' held at Olla, the fifth Sunday in March. I am glad to say it was a success from every viewpoint. We had sixty or seventy Sunday school workers, and did intensive work in studying the best methods of Sunday school procedure for the day. In short, this is what we studied in our institute: 1. Worship in the Sunday School. 2. Organization of the Elementary Department. 3. How the Organized Bible Class Can Help the Church. 4. Organization of the Sunday School. 5. Teacher Training. 6. From Bethlehem to Calvary. 7. What the Sunday School Has Meant to Me. 8. Questions and answers by Everybody.

Of course, music had a prominent place in the program. The above subjects were faithfully and instructively discussed by those on the program. The spirit of enthusiasm went out until I believe every person present was possessed with it, for the time being, to say the least of it. Compliments seem to echo from all that we have had a great day.

"If you will bear with me, I would

Miller's Antiseptic Oil, Known as

Snake Oil

Will Positively Relieve Pain in a Few Minutes.

Try it right now for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lumbago, sore, stiff and swollen joints, pain in the head, back and limbs, corns, bunions, etc. After one application pain usually disappears as if by magic.

A new remedy used externally for Coughs, Colds, Croup, Influenza, Sore Throat, Diphtheria and Tonsilitis.

This oil is conceded to be the most penetrating remedy known. Its prompt and immediate effect in relieving pain is due to the fact that it penetrates to the affected parts at once. As an illustration, pour ten drops on the thickest piece of sole leather and it will penetrate this substance through and through in three minutes.

HEARING RESTORED OFTEN IN 24 HOURS

Amazing Results Secured in One Day by Use of K-17, Formerly Known as Rattle Snake Oil.

Deafness and Head Noises need not be dreaded any longer since the discovery of a widely known physician. Now it is possible for some of the most obstinate cases of deafness to be relieved in a day's time by the application of a prescription formerly known as Rattle Snake Oil. This treatment is meeting with wide success all over the country.

Mr. D. Dey, a Nebraska resident, 67 years old, says, "I have used the treatment for only two weeks and my hearing is restored perfectly. The relief was almost instantaneous and now the head noises have disappeared. My catarrh, a case of many years' standing, is improving wonderfully."

Fred McIntyre, a Kansas resident, says: "I have used K-17 for two weeks and can hear a watch tick. It has also nearly removed all evidences of my catarrh."

Head Noises Stopped.

Henry Vertein, a Wisconsin resident, says: "I have used K-17 for only ten days and my head noises have stopped entirely and my hearing has shown a wonderful improvement."

Hears Clock Tick.

Frank Quinn, of Mississippi, says: "Before I used K-17 I had not heard the clock tick in a long time. And after I had taken the treatment two days I could lay in bed and hear the clock tick plainly."

D. E. Bryant, of Georgia, says: "I began using K-17 on Monday and on Saturday of the same week I was hearing and have been hearing ever since. Thank you once, twice, thrice."

Head Noises Stopped in 5 Days.

Mrs. D. C. Wilkins, of Mississippi, says: "K-17 has helped me wonderfully. In five days it has stopped that awful noise in my ears. I think it is a grand medicine."

Mrs. C. Roberts, of Florida, says: "I was entirely deaf in my left ear for two years and then in both. When I got your treatment I could hear in twenty-four hours."

Such amazing reports come from all over this country and foreign countries. The prescription, which is known as K-17, is easily used at home and seems to work like magic in its rapidity on people of all ages.

So confident are we that K-17 will restore your hearing quickly, and to introduce this remarkable treatmentt to a million more sufferers, we will send a large $2 treatment for only $1 on ten days' free trial. If the results are not satisfactory the treatment costs nothing.

Send no money—just your name and address to the Greene Laboratories, 247 Greene Bldg., Kansas City, Kan., and the treatment will be mailed at once. Use it according to the simple directions. If at the end of 10 days your hearing is not relieved, your head noises gone entirely, just send it back and your money will be refunded without question. This offer is fully guaranteed, so write today and give this wonderful compound a trial.—Adv.

FROM CENTENARY, McCOMB, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: I have been so busy in getting acquainted with my new field since Conference that I have neglected sending some items from here that may be of more than passing interest.

First and foremost is that we have had Dr. Henry Felgar Brooks, now pastor of our Capitol Street Church, of Jackson, with us in a ten-day meeting, beginning Feb. 27 and closing March 9. Dr. Brooks delighted the people of Centenary Church with his strong, stirring and Scriptural sermons. Somewhat dramatic in his presentation of the truth as taught in the Word of God, he holds his hearers with a strong grip, and intensely interests them, while presenting the Word in such a way that the children could understand clearly and were edified and helped.

There were a number of accessions as a result of the meeting, among them being five men of about 40 years of age. Our prayer meetings have been growing steadily since the meeting closed, the attendance running as follows in the four weeks: 107, 90, 133, and 156. It may be that prayer meetings are defunct in some places, but not so in McComb.

The people here have been most kind to me and my family, and we feel that our lines have fallen in pleasant places. My fellow-pastors here, Brothers J. A. Wells and A. S. Oliver, are among the finest I have known, and each is doing a splendid work. Together we are praying, planning and working for some genuine advancement in the interests of Methodism in this growing and enterprising little city.

RESULTS OF LUSAMBO REVIVAL.

By W. W. Higgins.

For Lusambo station the last eight months have been months of trial. Due to the transferring of two families from Lusambo to other stations and the changing about of the program of work to a certain extent, the rumor got out that the mission village and work at Lusambo were to be closed. This rumor had a tremendous effect upon the work of the station, and there started a decline in interest, in attendance and in church offerings. The crisis was reached in February. Special sessions were held with the church officers for the purpose of prayer and instruction. Earnest prayers were made that the spiritual life of Lusambo station might be saved. The backward sweep was checked, but there we stood, seemingly unable to make any great headway in regaining the ground we had lost. Just at this point, in one of the interesting chapters of Lusambo's history, came the news of the special revival services at Mutoto, with its impetus to renewed endeavor on the part of natives and missionaries alike. This was Lusambo's lead and opportunity. A revival was the great need of our station at this particular time.

It was arranged that Rev. Plumer Smith, of Mutoto, should come to us for a series of special services. Friday, the 13th of April, was the time set for his arrival. After a most trying trip, with its temptations to turn back, Mr. Smith arrived on the day appointed. The services, which continued for seven days, began that night.

What were some of the results of the meeting? A general clean-up, let us say, of practically every Christian in the village and many who were not Christians, but who expressed the desire to be instructed in the teachings of Christianity. Two hundred and six confessions were made, first in private and then in open. The most impressive feature about the confessions was the spirit of shame in which a great many of the confessions were made. My two years in the Congo have not caused me to consider genuine shame as a characteristic of the Congo native.

Three months have passed since the meetings closed. Let us briefly consider what has taken place since then. The attendance upon all services and Bible study classes has increased from five per cent to ninety per cent; the catechumen classes, one hundred per cent; the gifts, twenty-five per cent. In addition to these results, we must not lose sight of the genuine interest that has developed in all departments of the work, and a steadiiy increasing demand for Bibles. One of the most common expressions in the village is, "We are happy."

Elisha received the double portion of Elijah's spirit, because he was a faithful and watchful friend, he saw. Allowing ourselves to be lead of the Spirit and remaining faithful to God will enable us to see our opportunities of serving him and humanity.

SUNDAY SCHOOL.

like to mention at this time some of the leading features as I see in the "Fifth Sunday School Institute."

"1. There is a permanent good derived from bringing the workers together who are engaged in one common interest. It is like Conference times with us preachers—it is a good place to shed off discouragements, find out what the other fellow is doing and having to go through with. That good fellowship is soil in which we grow and learn more about each other.

"2. Out of this splendid fellowship we get in the 'fifth Sunday institute' that much-needed enthusiasm for a larger and more effective program of work for our Sunday schools. Enthusiasm is to Sunday school workers what steam is to the locomotive—they must have it to make the work go.

"3. Delightful fellowship, with intensive instruction, seems to remove the veil and give an insight into things where the average person has never had the privilege of looking before. Most people want to advance; and when shown where and how, they are, as a rule, ready to make the step.

"Lastly, it is a place that we can bring to our people in a little way the same nature of work that we have in our great 'Federations,' and hand on to them the good things that we get at the larger gatherings. I am much encouraged in our Sunday school program. I think I mistake not when I say i can see the hand of God upon us in this very great work."

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE ANNUAL MEETING A GREAT SUCCESS.

Homeward Bound from the Conference at Bogalusa!

"All aboard," sounded the voice of the conductor Friday afternoon as multitudinous suit cases were thrust in the doors of the train, the hospitable but weary Bogalusa hosts and hostesses waving good-by, and the delegates, over 100 in number, hurrying to their seats. Such a happy time, such an inspirational conference—but, oh, such a rush, and everybody weary! Can you believe it, a body of women almost too tired to talk, for so much of business, of plans, of pleasure has been crowded into these few days! "I just must relax," said the recording secretary, as she drew a deep breath and settled comfortably in her seat, but for a moment only—along came the Superintendent of Publicity and said, "Do write an article for the Bulletin."

And now, with the sound of wheels whirring and the murmur of many delegates, who, having rested awhile, find that the tongue is the least overworked member, we wonder if we can collect our scattered thoughts, and tell in a few words of a Woman's Missionary Conference that held continuous sessions from Tuesday night until Friday noon?

Select the most important and interesting features? An almost impossible task—and yet we would tell of some of the mountain top experiences. First, having with us our vice president (Council), Mrs. Perry, with her words of counsel and advice and her "Quiet Hour Talks," and our dear Mrs. MacDonell, so long our Home Base Secretary, who even now, though retired from active work, is all aglow with enthusiasm and full of determination to fulfill the hope of the Belle Bennett Memorial at the Greater Scarritt; next were our workers from our own St. Mark's and MacDonell Wesley House, so filled with enthusiasm. Mrs. Young told of the converts at St. Mark's—not many, it is true, but, as she said, weighed rather than measured. And then we heard from one of the students at MacDonell Wesley House, who testified as to the miracle of grace in her heart and saw in this French girl won over to Protestantism, a living example of the work that is being done in the French Mission.

Superintendents of young people and children are apt to grow discouraged, for there are so many activities, so many things to interest and entangle outside the church; but after seeing a pageant such as was put on by the Young People of Bogalusa, picturing the life of Miss Bennett, and after hearing a lovely, bright-faced girl so wonderfully tell a Bible story, and after seeing the little tots march in with song and story, there are such rosy visions of the future of the Missionary Society that discouragements give place to congratulations, and those doing this work consider it a privilege to train the young minds and hearts.

The tedious figuring of the treasurer becomes fascinating when assets triumph over liabilities and when the Auxiliaries prove that the money is not just a tax but gifts of love. Some days the Publicity and Bible study superintendents hadn't time to go to lunch; but what mattered if literature was selling and folks were going to be informed about mission work? In demand every moment was our president, and always smiling, always gracious, ever helpful. What wonder that her election was unanimous and brought a storm of applause? Quietly and unobtrusively our Superintendent of Supplies goes about her work, but she "gets the goods," and when she realizes what the boxes mean to the missions she, again shoulders her burden. Not for worlds would we leave out the district secretaries; not much glory in their office, but they are the wheels that make the organization go. Our Vice President, Corresponding Secretary, and Social Service Superintendent were greatly missed.

Dr. Duren, pastor of Rayne Memorial, gave a talk on citizenship that will not be forgotten. He declared that women who neglect to use the ballot are robbing God in that they throw away the opportunity of making a better world.

We would love to speak of the nice lunches at the Y. W. C. A., the interesting journey through the great saw and paper mills of Bogalusa, and so many delightful things, but space forbids. We can only say in conclusion that the fourteenth annual session of the Louisiana Woman's Missionary Society is over, but there will be echoes from it on through the year, for delegates are going home filled to overflowing with new plans, added information, and a desire to have a part in the furtherance of missions. None would murmur at being elected to go to Alexandria next year.

The Louisiana conference feels fortunate in the election of its officers, and each one hopes, by the help of God, to prove worthy of the honor conferred on her and to bring in this coming year many sheaves for the Master.

MRS. GEORGE S. BROWN,
Recording Secretary.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Zone Meeting at Winona.

On March 24, the Moore Memorial Methodist Church was hostess of the Zone meeting in the afternoon.

Representatives from Vaiden and Columbiana Auxiliaries were present, and the meeting was both interesting and inspirational.

Mrs. U. V. Hutchinson, chairman, called the meeting to order, and after the Scripture reading, Mrs. Carroll Varner led in prayer.

Mrs. Lutie Stokes, district secretary from Grenada, was introduced, and gave a comprehensive and instructive talk on the purpose, possibilities, and achievements of the Zone meetings.

Miss Louise Dunstan, local treasurer of the Belle Bennett Memorial Fund, brought to our attention the necessity for earnest prayer for a satisfactory decision regarding the location of Scarritt Bible Training School.

One of the main features of the program was a talk on "Stewardship," by Mrs. J. W. Conger, who impressed us anew with the truth that God requires not only a tithe of our money, but we must give to him a tithe of our lives, our time, our talents, and everything that we possess.

Our next Zone meeting will be held at Columbiana, in June.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

An Occasion Worth Mentioning.

On Sunday night, March 30, the Woman's Missionary Society of Pearl River Avenue, McComb, proved a great blessing to their church and community, as they so effectively and religiously rendered a program on "Stewardship and Tithing." It was in the form of a dialogue and two scenes. There were twenty-two characters, and it was the most convincing Scriptural and practical program on the subject this writer ever witnessed. It was prepared amid serious difficulties, occasioned by rain and sickness, but prayer was so effectively mixed with the practice and performance that it was a spiritual benediction as well as a great hit in our tithing campaign. Our Missionary Society is growing in numbers, but its real growth is in its growing effectiveness in its God-given task. We could but exclaim as this program was finished, "Well done, good and faithful ladies!"

The "Home-like and Growing Church" is "clearing" more new ground, and is happy on its way!

J. A. WELLS.

Our Lord Jesus Christ gave promise to his disciples of the power of the Holy Spirit in his parting message in Acts i, 9. Were it not for its faith in the abiding Holy Spirit, the church to-day might tremble before the unseen future. The world is astir; disaster dire and unforeseen has blotted out cities in a day; strife and dissension imperil governments, and desperate need appals the people of depleted nations. The demands of the coming days—who can meet them? He who gave to the church his great commission can change trembling efforts into deeds of strength as he is "Jesus Christ, the same yesterday and to-day, yea and forever."

As the women study "The Illumined Task" this year, they may rest their souls day by day on the promise of accruing power and make themselves responsible for what they can have in times of stress and peril from the infinite resources of Jesus, the riches of glory in Christ! He helped the timid pioneer women who, with untried powers, obeyed his call to open missionary work in 1878, and he blessed their efforts so greatly that the women of to-day have entered upon their inheritance.

Building on the past and enriched by the experiences of the pioneer women, the women of to-morrow should possess a devotion to the conquering Christ that will enable them as his messengers to reshape civilization and bless community and individual life.

"Expect great things from God, Attempt great things for God."

THOSE CENTENARY PLEDGES.

By W. L. Underwood.

Have you paid your Centenary pledge, that you made in good faith more than five years ago? If you have, then you know that God's work as mapped out on the great "Centenary Scale" has not been hampered because of you, and you have a peculiar feeling of joy over a vow kept and a pledge to God paid, enabling his servants to spread the Gospel throughout the land.

But how do you feel, you who can pay, if for some reason you have not paid your pledge, and have broken faith with him who carried our cross to Golgotha's brow and there atoned for your sins and mine with his precious blood?

Suppose he had failed us there, what then, where would we stand now? I shudder to think of it, but, thank God, he did not fail us, but went through with it even unto death. Shall we fail him now, and see him with pierced hands outstretched toward the fields that are "white unto the harvest" and the reapers all too few, because we have failed to keep our solemn vow, on the strength of which mighty forces were to have entered the "harvest fields" and reap hungering and thirsting souls unto him?

How will it be on that great day when we shall stand before the one true Judge? Will we be held accountable for those that are lost because of our unfulfilled pledges and broken vows? How much less have we lied to the Holy Ghost in keeping back all or a part of our pledge than did Ananias and Sapphira of old, who, after having sold a possession, withheld a part of the price thereof, laying the rest at the Apostles' feet? and hear Peter say: "Was it not thine own to do with as ye would before you pledged it to God? Thou hast not lied unto men but unto God;" And to Sapphira, "Behold the feet of them which have buried thy husband are at the door, and they shall bury thee also." Acts 4:34-37 and 5:1-11.

To you who have not paid and can do so, lose not a moment in paying out, that the manifold works of God may be carried on according to the great plan, and feel secure in the knowledge that you have at least kept the faith, and that the work will not be longer delayed because of your failure to pay your pledge.

"Prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of Heaven, and pour you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it." Malachi, 3:10.

WOMEN OF MIDDLE AGE

Read How Mrs. Walsh Was Helped by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mannington, West Virginia.—"I took the Vegetable Compound when having the turn of life. I had been sick for seven years. I would get a little better, then I broke down again. It would be hard for me to describe how I was, for I was a perfect wreck. I suffered with a pain in my left side, then I would have numb spells and I would think I couldn't live. I would have hot flashes, then would come weak spells. I was so weak I would think I couldn't ever get a meal ready. My work was a burden to me. I was not able to do my housework half of the time. A friend advised me to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has given me strength and health. The hot flashes left me and I got better of the numb spells. That summer I could do my housework and worked in the garden a good bit. I tell all sick women what your wonderful medicine did for me, and will always recommend it. I was born in Marion County and still live in it. I am known to all my neighbors, and you can publish this statement because it is true." —Mrs. JOHN W. WALSH, R. ANNIVERSARY DAY.

Dear Fellow-Worker: A copy of the program which has been arranged by the Epworth League Department of our church for the observance of "Anniversary Day," has been sent to all pastors.

The time set is April 13; but if for any cause you or your young people will not be able to use that time, a Sunday as near thereto as possible should be used to give your church an opportunity to have a part in this work for our young people.

If there is no League, as such, every church should have "Young People's Day," and let the membership know what is planned, and organize a League if possible.

Let an offering be taken and be sent at once to the Treasurer, Rev. H. P. Lewis, Belzoni, Miss., for use in the extension plans of your Conference Epworth League Board.

The League Conference will be held at Grenada College this year, June 18-21. Send your young people.

Yours in service,

R. P. NEBLETT,
Chairman Conference League Board.

FROM FIRST CHURCH, COLUMBUS, MISS.

We have just passed through the most thrilling period of religious revival this writer ever saw. John Brown, of Siloam Springs, Ark., one of the general evangelists, did the preaching, and his assistants, Mr. and Mrs. Loren Jones, looked after the music, prayer meetings and the many other things incident to a revival campaign. For weeks before the meeting began, the city was getting ready for the great awakening. It surely came, and it was as surely expected. The eight Protestant churches co-operated, and it was a beautiful sight to witness people of all the churches working together for the salvation of a whole community. There were about 225 in the choir, and it was made a most effective agency for reaching the people. Brother Jones is a past master in the art of getting people to sing. Mrs. Jones won the hearts of everybody, old and young. John Brown belongs to a class all by himself. He is strong, unique, entertaining, orthodox, and makes an irresistible appeal to men. He did the church more good than any evangelist I have been associated with in a great while. His sermon on "The Tragedy of Neglect" was a masterpiece. Scores of our best people wilted under the searching appeal of this great sermon. His series of talks on "The Spirit-Filled Life" were greatly enjoyed, and his morning talks the last week on the three great modern religions, Russellism, Christian Science, and Mormonism, were most helpful. The churches of this community are more thoroughly entrenched in the affections of the people than ever before. Between 300 and 400 people were received in the various churches here last Sunday. Many an ancient church letter was dug up and handed in. Prayer meetings were never so large as now. About 225 have been present each night for the past two weeks at the First Methodist, and a large number at the other churches. Tithing and establishing family altars have engaged the attention of scores and scores who had never given any serious attention to these things before. Thank God for a revival that stirs the church and makes the people feel that religion is worth while.

Hundreds of the young ladies at the college reconsecrated their lives, and a number of them joined the church. Christianity is stronger here now than at any former time.

THE HUGUENOT HALF DOLLAR.

From the United States Mint comes a new half dollar, which is being eagerly bought up by Americans of Huguenot descent for use as heirlooms. It commemorates the Huguenot-Walloon founding of New Netherlands, the present New York State. On its obverse the coin shows the words: "Huguenot Half Dollar." Portraits are shown of Admiral Coligny and of William the Silent. As is well known, the Admiral was murdered at the massacre of St. Bartholomew. William the Silent liberated Holland from the overlordship of Philip II, who had introduced the Spanish inquisition into Holland.

This name of "The Silent" was given William of Orange because of his power to hold his tongue. At a court festival he showed no concern when informed by the King of France that a secret treaty had been made between France and Spain providing for the massacre of all Protestants within both kingdoms.

The coin's reverse has the wording, "Huguenot-Walloon Tercentenary of the Founding of New Netherlands," with the presentation of the ship that in 1624 first visited what is now the port of New York.

MARTYRS AND MODERNISTS: SUGGESTED BY EASTER.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

On Easter the church universal celebrates the fact of the resurrection of Jesus Christ from the dead.

By faith in the risen Lord the heart of the church is transported with joy and her lips with praise. In this faith she goes forth to give solace to the sorrowing, proclaim salvation to the sinful, and impart hope and cheer to the tired multitudes of earth.

But notwithstanding her blessed ministrations through faith in her risen Lord, some who are called Modernists would have her discard her historic belief in his resurrection as unimportant and unessential, if not untrue. Among them are some who wish to be accepted and esteemed as Christian ministers.

The following are extracts from two such persons:

"The physical resurrection of Christ is unnecessary to the faith, and making it so would be fundamental heresy, because it makes the physical more important than the spiritual."—Dr. Leighton Parks.

"The birth, death, descension, resurrection and ascension of all Saviour-Gods, not exceptiug Jesus, are versions of the sun myth. There is no rational doubt about the fictitious character of the divine Jesus. I doubt that he lived. As an objectivity there is no such divinity—meaning the triune God, Father, Son and Holy Spirit. He is a subjectivity existing in the imagination of orthodox Christians.

"If the Anglican creed is not elastic enough to permit one to read into it all that one believes to be the result of modern intellectual progress, then perhaps I ought to be put out. However, I consider that in excommunicating me under such conditions the Anglican communion is, in effect, saying that it is incapable of progress, and does not want intelligent membership."—Bishop William M. Brown.

These are samples of similar utterances of the advocates of creedlessness, and whatever may be said of them, it will not be denied that they depreciate, if they do not, repudiate, that for which apostles suffered and martyrs died.

The primitive church was a witnessing body, and the pre-eminent function of its apostleship was witnessing to the fact of the resurrection.

The great fact was the very heart and life of apostolic preaching, and on it the Christian church was organized. Without it there would be no gospel to be preached, no apostles to preach, and no church to believe in Christ, and become "the pillar and ground of the truth." (I Timothy iii:15.)

It was the essential substance of St. Peter's sermon on the day of Pentecost, and it continued to occupy the central place in all the preaching by which the Apostles "turned the world upside down" as they went everywhere, "with power, giving witness of the resurrection of the Lord Jesus" (Acts iv:33). Whether preaching at Jerusalem or Athens, in Asia or Europe, their message was always the same—"Jesus and the resurrection" (Acts xvii:18).

It was on this account that their first persecutions were inflicted by the Sadducees rather than by the Pharisees; "for the Sadducees say there is no resurrection, neither angel nor spirit, but the Pharisees confess both" (Acts xxiii:8). If the apostles and first Christians had not borne specifical and unequivocal testimony to the resurrection of Jesus, they would have escaped much, if not all the persecution which was visited upon them. For this cause Peter and John were imprisoned (Acts iv:1-2); Stephen was stoned (Acts vii:54-60), and James was beheaded (Acts xii:1-2). For the same cause Paul was executed, and many thousands of the followers of Christ were put to death during the first three centuries of the Christian Era.

AN EASTER THOUGHT.

By Ruby Langley.

All things proclaim one truth to-day,
"The Stone of Death is rolled away!"
Mute life defies harsh winter's death,
And with spring's first warm, healing breath,
In forceful silence this thought brings,
"He is the Lord of living things."
The birds, with praise of their own,
The Christ, their Risen King, enthrone.
Thus soulless things do thee confess,
Help me, oh Lord, to do no less.

Louisville, Miss.

For witnessing that their Lord had risen from the dead, they suffered all manner of tortures, "not accepting deliverance" at the cost of denying their faith. Hence our word, "martyr," which is derived from a Greek word signifying nothing more than "a witness." Such at first was its significance in the church. To be a martyr meant only witness to the truth of Christ's resurrection, but witnessing to that fact was so generally attended by persection and so frequently followed by death that martyrdom at length came to signify dying for Christ. Hence Paul in his prayer to the risen Lord, said, "When the blood of thy martyr Stephen was shed, I also was standing by and consenting unto his death, and kept the raiment of them that slew him" (Acts xxii:20).

Without the truth implied by the resurrection there would have been in the first century no fierce foes or undismayed followers of Christ. A mild system of genial ethics would not have attracted bitter adversaries nor devoted adherents. In it there would have been nothing worth dying for, and, certainly, no occasion and no motive for dying on account of devotion to Christ. Wherefore Paul, in view of the denial of the resurrection by the skeptics of Corinth, asked with warmth: "Why stand we in jeopardy every hour? I protest by the rejoicing I have in Christ Jesus our Lord, I die daily. If after the manner of men I have fought with beasts at Ephesus, what advantageth it me if the dead rise not? Let us eat and drink, for to-morrow we die" (1 Corinthians xv:30-32). Thus the Apostle teaches that without the resurrection desperate merriment and not devoted martyrdom is the appropriate end of life. And such is the case.

Faithless men are never martyrs. From their standpoint martyrdom is senseless folly, close akin to suicide. They are never martyrs and never the makers of churches and never the promoters of great spiritual movements among men.

It has been truly said, "the blood of the martyrs was the seed of the church."

The church of Christ was not founded by men of speculative minds befogged by philosophic doubts. Such men have never founded anything great and good. Their fickle intellects do not long maintain their own theories.

Nor was the church founded and built up by the languid children of luxury who believe little and are incapable of suffering for even that little. We cannot account for the existence of the Christian church unless we refer it to the resurrection of Christ. If he indeed has risen from the dead, the death-defying constancy and courage of the Apostles, the joyous sufferings of the primitive Christians, the undismayed faith of the martyrs, and the speedy spread of Christianity throughout the Roman Empire are easy of explanation. For if Jesus rose from the dead, his claim of being the Son of God was established, and his gospel was shown to be "the power of God unto salvation," since "he was declared to be the Son of God with power, according to the spirit of holiness by the resurrection from the dead" (Romans i:4). Such being the case, it is no wonder that his Apostles were utterly fearless of the power of men, and that their courageous and confident preaching wrought conviction in the hearts of multiplied thousands who fell in penitence at their feet, crying, "What shall we do to be saved?"

On the other hand, if Christ did not rise, the faith of his apostolic messengers and the results of their preaching is utterly inexplicable, or we are forced to attribute to delusion or deception the most stupendous and blessed spiritual revolution recorded in the history of mankind.

In the first century a decadent, dying, and despairing world was sinking into hopeless disorder and rayless gloom. But in the midst of its decay

USE ME.

Make use of me, my God!
Let me be forgot
A broken vessel cast aside,
One whom thou needest not.

I am thy creature, Lord,
And made by hands divine,
And I am part, however mean,
Of this great world of thine.

Thou usest all thy works,
The meanest things that be,
Each has a service of its own,
For all things wait on thee.

Thou usest the high stars,
The tiny drops of dew,
The giant oak, the little rill,
My God! oh use me, too.

Thou usest tree and flower,
The rivers vast and small,
The eagle great, the little bird,
That sings upon the wall.

Thou usest the wide seas,
The hidden little lake,
The pine upon the Alpine cliff,
The lily in the brake;

The huge rock in the vale,
The sand grains by the sea,
The thunder of the rolling cloud,
The murmur of the bee.

All things do serve thee here,
All things both great and small;
Make use of me, of me, my God!
The meanest of them all.

THE PROGRESS OF METHODISM IN CUBA.

By Rev. A. J. Weeks, D.D.

I had the great privilege of attending the session of the Cuba Annual Conference at Santa Clara, March 7-10, and of visiting a number of places in the island where our principal centers of work are situated. I went solely as an unofficial observer, that I might see how the work committed to our church is going on. Having seen all I could in a brief visit, I feel that I can do the church at home a distinct service by bringing to the attention of our people some of the facts about that work. I am under no constraint to color favorably any report I may make out; on the contrary, I am under the highest obligation to present fairly the facts as I saw them.

My own inclination is to write a gossipy account of a little journey that was full of personal interest and not entirely without amusing incidents; but this inclination must be resisted, inasmuch as valuable space ought to be used for things of greater importance. While Cuba is a distinctly foreign country, it is right next door to us, and to reach it requires an ocean journey of only five or six hours. People who are subject to seasickness tell me that not infrequently that little trip on the water hasn't a dull hour in it. At Key West I met Bishop Cannon and Dr. R. H. Bennett, and made the journey from that point with them. On account of an interrupted boat schedule, we had a full day at Key West. This gave us an opportunity to see our southernmost American city, and it gave our three American pastors there, Brothers Bryant, Wilson, and Ley, an opportunity to show us distinguished courtesies. A bootlegging gentleman tried to sell Dr. Bennett and me some liquor, but failed. In my travels here and there I am rarely ever approached by a bootlegger—but I am usually by myself.

It will be remembered that Cuba was discovered by Columbus on Oct. 28, 1492. He thought it was Asia, and died without knowing any better. Two years after the death of Columbus, a party by the name of Sebastian de Ocampo sailed entirely around it, and decided it was an island. It was. I confess I was surprised at the size of it. I had an idea that I could go all over it in a little while. Leaving Havana at 1:30 p. m., we did not reach Santa Clara until about 10 p. m. The distance is said to be about two hundred miles, and after riding all the way in a third-class car whose seats are as innocent of upholstery as a park bench I admitted it. I was greatly surprised when told that I could travel another twenty-four hours in the same direction before reaching the eastern end of the island. Cuba is a little larger and much longer than the State of Tennessee, and has a population of almost three millions.

The Conference session was not greatly unlike a Conference anywhere else in Methodism, barring, of course, the bother of having to conduct the business in two languages. I particularly enjoyed the love feast Sunday morning, although I could not understand a word that was spoken. As preachers and laymen gave their testimonies, their radiant faces expressed the joy in their hearts. The Holy Spirit speaks a universal language.

My visit gave me a new appreciation of our opportunities and responsibilities in Cuba. Furthermore, it gave me a new appreciation of the fidelity and efficiency of the men and women who represent our church there. I do not think of my own loyalty as equal to theirs. We at home do not begin to know what price our brothers and sisters have to pay for the privilege of serving in foreign lands. They would never mention it, and, in fact, do not realize it, but it is true. There is a degree of loneliness in any foreign country, be it far or near, and a homesickness that puts a tremendous strain upon the normal heart. Missionaries who read this will probably deny it simply because they are so absorbed in their work that they are not aware of any hardships involved in it. I personally know many missionaries, and almost without exception they are contented and cheerful. They are on the King's business and his peace is in their hearts.

We have a membership in Cuba of 5,799, which is an increase of 491 during the last year. There are forty-five organized churches, and all have church or chapel buildings. In every place I visited we have good property for the purpose for which it is used. In most places our churches are ideally located, and while the buildings are not expensive, they are neat and adequate.

After the Conference adjourned, I spent a day at Camaguey, where Pinson College is located, and where we have a self-supporting church. Rev. Ben O. Hill is president of Pinson College, and he is doing a great work with as poor equipment as any man in our Methodism, so far as I know. The enrollment at this school is 215, and the number would be greater if we had room for them. The institution has fine standing in the city and province. The site is valuable and well located, but the buildings are poor—just a few small and unattractive houses. When the Centenary campaign was put on, we agreed to give Pinson College $30,000 for a main building if they would raise an additional $10,000 on the field. They raised the $10,000, but in a bank failure it was tied up temporarily at least. There is hope that it will be made available in the near future. But the money promised by the church at home cannot be realized until Centenary payments are made. Here is a fine school in a fine section of Cuba that has possibilities for good that cannot be estimated, but here faithful and worthy men and women are forced to toil year after year with the poorest equipment. Is there not some one in the church at home whom God has blessed with money who will make an investment at Camagney that will bless coming generations in the great section where the need is so desperate? In addition to the main building, a dormitory is essential, but both can be built for $75,000 or thereabout. I saw many appealing needs in Cuba, but none more appealing than at Pinson College.

From Camagney I went to Cienfuegos, on the Caribbean Sea. It is a delightful city, one of the most beautiful in the island. There, too, we have a school—Colegio Eliza Bowman—and there, too, the need is very great. The site is one of the very best in the city, but the building is wholly inadequate. Miss Frances B. Moling, whom I first knew at San Luis Potosi, Mexico, is principal of this school. The attendance is one hundred and seventy-six, but they are so crowded that porches, hallways and three bedrooms are used for class rooms. At Cienfuegos I found myself alone on the morning of my arrival. I had been with one or more missionaries up to this time. Miss Moling did not know I was coming, so I went to the hotel and had breakfast, which in that country is eaten at noon. Here I had to order my breakfast in Spanish. I did it pretty well, however, as I got twice as much as I ordered. The waiter evidently knew I had exhausted my vocabulary without satisfying my needs, and brought me more than I asked for.

Wednesday night I went to the Cuban church and spoke to a good congregation. The wife of our Cuban pastor interpreted for me, she being a graduate of one of our schools. I think she did it pretty well. The morning I left Cienfuegos, Mrs. Board, the wife of the American Consul, came to my hotel, accompanied by Miss Moling, and took me to my train in her car. Such courtesies in a strange land cannot be estimated. She was emphatic in her praise of our school and its influence in that city.

My next stop was at Matanzas, where the pastor-presiding elder, Rev. R. L. Whitehead, met me and took me to Colegio Irene Toland, out for a drive to a point overlooking the beautiful Yumuri Valley and Matanzas Bay, and then to the parsonage for dinner. How I did enjoy every minute of the time! We also visited our splendid church, which is the oldest we have in the island. It is well situated and pretty well equipped.

Colegio Irene Toland has a splendid property in an excellent location. The new building, made possible by the Centenary, is a gem of a building. It is fireproof throughout and modern in every way. It contains sixteen rooms, and when other needed buildings are provided this will be one of our most complete plants. Miss Rebecca Toland is principal of this school, which bears the name of her sainted sister. It was such a joy to meet Miss Toland, Miss Churchill, and some of the other workers there.

Some facts about Cuban Methodism deserve special mention. They are developing a spirit of self-support. All assessments for general work were paid in full this last year. Our schools are religious. Their purpose is to make Christians of the students who come to them, and splendid revivals have recently been held in more than one of them. Cubans make good Methodists. They are lovable and joyful people, and respond to the gospel as preached by Methodists.

Bishop James Cannon has intimate knowledge of the work in Cuba, and he is patiently but earnestly leading them to self-reliance and self-support.

I was impressed with the need of a literature for our Spanish-speaking Christians. I looked through the supplies of colporteurs and through the libraries of our schools. My one feeling was that the supply of good books in Spanish is pitifully inadequate.

From Matanzas I went to Havana for a day and two nights. This letter is reaching a dangerous length. If the editor will print it, I will promise to write another about the important work we are doing in Havana, which, by the way, is one of the great cities of this hemisphere.

Traveling in Cuba, as in any foreign country, one meets with many surprises. I think my greatest surprise was when I went to bed the first night in the island. The Cuban mattress is not a mattress. It is a quilt. The unitiated would call it a comfort.

A LETTER FROM A LITTLE GIRL.

Ruston, La., April 4, 1924.

Dear Methodist People: I am only a little girl, but I wish you to know how much I do appreciate your generous offerings to us. You do not know what pleasure it gives us to feel that we have loved ones everywhere.

I wish you all knew how many things we are learning here at the Home. The girls from 10 to 11 are taught to sew very nicely, and do splendid laundry work and keep house. They also learn to cook, wait on the tables, and keep everything in order. We know this is a fine opportunity for us and we realize it is your money that is helping us and preparing us for our life work.

The boys have as good an opportunity as the girls. They are taught all the principles of farming and caring for poultry and domestic animals. They are capable dairymen and can do anything any other boy is required to do.

We could not do all this without your help, and we hope you will think on Easter time of the many other homeless children to-day waiting for the time to come when they, too, will have these privileges.

There are two new buildings almost finished, but we cannot take possession of them until our people send help and furnish them. These will be finished with everything any child needs to make it happy, and will indeed be a safe and happy home for the homeless.

We children love the Orphanage as our home. We love you, too, because you have given it to us. Again, I want to thank you every one.

Yours sincerely,

OMA EFFERSON.

THE CHINA MISSIONARIES AND CENTENARY PLEDGES.

By Dr. W. W. Pinson.

It is reported that some are refusing to pay their Centenary pledges on the ground that there are rumors of heresy among missionaries in China. It is not claimed that all the missionaries in China are heretics, nor that there are heretics in all our eleven foreign fields, nor among the missionaries and pastors who are supported by Centenary money in the home field, nor among the orphans, outcasts, foreigners, Negroes, slum residents, mountaineers and industrial workers who share in Centenary funds.

Bear in mind, it has been denied by bishops, presiding elders, and their fellows who are responsible, not once or twice, but annually and oftener, that the rumors and suspicions have been borne out by the facts. Even if they had been, not more than twelve among all the 150 missionaries in China are even under suspicion. To withhold payment from the twelve, also withholds support from the other 138. That is, for every one at whom this curious penalty, or remedy, or protest is aimed, eleven others are punished. In fact, if one withholds a $100 pledge from China alone, at lest ninety-two dollars of it is withheld from missionaries at whom even rumor has not pointed.

But there are 500 foreign missionaries and 1,000 home missionaries. These 1,500 picked men and women have gone forth risking their all on the solemn pledge of a million Methodists. Now they are to be told there are among these Methodists some who, on the mere charge that about one in every 125 of these missionaries is—or has by somebody been said to be—unsound in the faith, refuse to keep faith with the entire 1,500. It has not been denied that about 1,488 of the 1,500 are faithfully fighting for "the faith once for all delivered to the saints," and also for decency, justice and brotherhood around the world. Their bonds are being weakened and their task made harder by every Centenary pledge card that remains unredeemed. It is said that Stonewall Jackson was shot by his own men. That was a pitiable tragedy. But it was a mistake, and not of deliberate intention. They did not line up and shoot whole regiments of their fellow-soldiers because they had heard there were a few traitors in the Confederate army.

Putting it another way, of the entire amount of Centenary money, that which goes to China is not over 4 per cent, so that if one withholds a pledge of one hundred dollars he is only withholding four dollars from all China. Ninety-six dollars of his money would go to help those still considered worthy of confidence. But only one in twelve of the missionaries in China is in the list of suspects; and if the entire four dollars were levied upon these suspects, it would amount to thirty-three cents apiece out of an entire one hundred dollars. A light penalty for so grave a charge! But when divided among 150 missionaries it is less than three cents each, and yet it has cost the church and kingdom $100 to levy that three-cent penalty on the innocent.

If this were merely the very questionable economy of burning the house to roast the pig, one might be silent. It is far more. It is starving your known allies in an effort to punish unknown traitors, and sniping your own men that you may perchance here and there hit a spy.

I am not now thinking of those fine and devoted Methodists who have become alarmed at the loud and persistent repetition of these rumors, and are seeking some effective way to voice their alarm, and do it with an aching heart and fervent prayer for those who may have lost their way. They may disagree, but they will not destroy. They may protest, but they will not detract. They may plead with the erring, but they will not withhold their support from those who fight the good fight of faith. With them I gladly stand, and would give them good cheer and good speed.

But those who deliberately promote and practice the "profit and loss" method of theological argument, and arrogate to themselves superior virtue in so doing, are not so deserving. Even if a remedy were ever so desperately needed, this is no remedy. In what possible way can the nonpayment of a pledge safeguard sound doctrine or work a change in opinion? Let any one try it on his banker or grocer or tax collector, and see how promptly it will win them to his way of thinking.

After all, the most lamentable phase of this modern method of persuasion is the low standard of value it sets on things spiritual. Unbelief is dangerous and is to be withstood and cured, but a far deadlier thing is a conviction, an opinion or even an honest error that can be bought. Neither the millions of Carnegie, nor the threat of an empty dinner pail can buy or change the least flutter of the soul's inmost thought. That can be done by the love and light that beam from the face of Christ, or reflected in his friends, and only so. That is an achievement at which the angels rejoice. But if the faith even of a heathen could be bought, it would not be worth the buying. If we have anywhere in our ranks a missionary whose opinions can be bought, he does not matter enough to bother with. Bribery has never been a type of persuasion that has made saints of those who practice it or of those who yield to it. No form of terrorism or reward wins genuine converts.

By no means let us minimize the importance of sound doctrine, but let us beware of a zeal that forgets justice, truth-telling, charity and brotherhood. Fight the devil with fire, but be careful with your fire and make sure it does not capture your torch.

I, for one, believe in the church. I have scant hope of some other aggregation or combination, or some individualistic method of weakening or wounding the church as a means of her defense. I do not believe the Holy Spirit has forsaken the church, and prefer to trust my substance and my life to those who represent my church rather than to any other group of people on the planet. This I have done for more than half a century. The outcome has justified my confidence.

If after 1,900 years the church at its best cannot be trusted to conserve its teaching and its fair name, then at least one clause in the Apostles' Creed goes lame—"I believe in the Church of God." I still believe in the church, in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to the extent that I prefer to work in obedience to her expressed will, than to take my orders from some other source, and I prefer to be guided by her rather than by any other voice however clamorous or plausible. I carry this confidence to the point of serene assurance that neither my church nor a majority thereof is in danger of losing its head and its religion at the same time nor of neglecting a plain responsibility.

NOTICE.

Pastors of the Jackson District and all Members of Jackson District Conference: We must have your list of delegates to the Jackson District Conference at once in order to provide entertainment.

We would appreciate a note from all persons who expect to attend this Conference, stating when they will arrive; if they are coming via auto, will arrange to meet them at Pickens on arrival of Illinois Central train No. 34, Monday, May 11, and Nos. 24 and 34, Tuesday, May 12. We advise you to come in your car if possible.

G. E. ALLEN, Pastor.

Camden, Miss.

TO THE PARSTORS OF THE GRENADA DISTRICT, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: Our district conference is to be held at Abbeville, beginning May 12. Please see that all of your delegates are elected, and forward names to me at once. By so doing you will help us in arranging for your entertainment. We are anxiously looking forward to your coming, and praying that we may have a great conference, and showers of blessings.

W. O. HUNT.

Abbeville, Miss.

GUARD THE LIFE.

The whole life is to be guarded and protected, because no man is stronger than his weakest point, and we may be actually weakest where we suppose ourselves to be strongest. It is possible to be careful about the mouth, and yet to allow the eye wide and perilous liberty. Alas, we can practice wickedness in silence! The eye can be enjoying a very harvest of evil while the mouth is fast closed, and not one sign is given by speech that the soul is rioting at the table of the devil. It is of infinite consequence that we should direct our exertions to the right point, otherwise our lives may be spent in mere frivolity under the guise of great industry and faithfulness. We may be watching at the wrong gate, or we may suppose that only certain gates are to be closed and that others may be left open without danger. It is not the front door only that needs to be attended to, but the gate at the back, or the little window in some obscure part of the house. When the enemy comes as a house-breaker he does not seek the strongest part of the castle, but for its very weakest parts.—Joseph Parker.

As far as I am myself concerned, the opening of the new central country is a matter for congratulation only in so far as it opens up a prospect for the elevation of the inhabitants. I view the end of the geographical feat as the beginning of the missionary enterprise."—David Livingstone.

GRENADA DISTRICT NOTES.

Ashland Circuit. Brother Robinson, the pastor, is completing a new parsonage. A meeting, led by Rev. T. M. Brownlee, of Clarksdale, has been followed with fine results. The pastor is a young man, a graduate of A. and M. College, and is full of energy and faith.

Tie Plant. Although one of the weakest charges in the district, the Tie Plant church is busy this year. Under the able leadership of Rev. H. G. Roberts, a new parsonage has recently been completed. This is a real achievement under the circumstances, and much credit is due the pastor.

Oxford. Large congregations are greeting the new pastor, Rev. T. H. Dorsey. He is effectively "on the job," and is appreciated by both students and faculty of our State University.

Durant. This church has the distinction of being the first church in the district to send in the full quota for first year of Superannuate Endowment pledge, on the day requested, in cash. Everything is well organized in this active congregation and running smoothly.

Pickens. Rev. Julian Duncan has placed all his churches upon the budget basis. The Superannuate Endowment has been accepted by all the churches and placed in the yearly budget.

Grenada. Grenada has recently reached an eight-point Standard Young People's Department. Sunday School Day has been observed. Revival services begin Easter Sunday, led by Rev. Dan Kelly. The college is closing a great year. The trustees have authorized a four-year A-grade faculty for next year, and are planning to proceed upon an A-grade college basis.

District Conference will convene at Abbeville, Miss., at 3 p. m., on May 12, and will continue through May 13-14.

* * *

There has been an increase in salaries at Holly Springs, Main Street (Water Valley), Oxford, Grenada, Kilmichael, Sallis, and Ashland.

MELVILLE JOHNSON, Reporter.

GREENWOOD DISTRICT NOTES.

There have been four changes in appointments since Conference, caused by the death of Rev. J. H. Smith, at Tchula, and that of Rev. J. A. Goad at Carrollton. S. C. Yates was sent to Tchula. J. F. Watson, senior at Millsaps College, was transferred from the Mississippi Conference and stationed at Carrollton. W. W. Milligan went from Swiftown to Dublin. Swiftown is supplied by J. C. Nelson. The work goes well, in spite of the fact that each appointment has had two new pastors this year.

We have twenty-two parsonages that we believe will compare with those of any district in Southern Methodism. The average salary is $2,094, an increase over last year of $2,850 total. Nearly all salaries are paid to date. Every pastor owns a car, or is furnished one by the charge. Seven churches are being built, or are planned to be built, costing $150,000. One parsonage built and paid for. Nine have been substantially improved. So with several churches. (Brown has painted Ruleville red!) A number of new Sunday schools, Epworth Leagues and Missioary Societies have been organized. It is said that interest in all departments was never quite so good, perhaps, in any charge in the district.

Besides a $40,000 Sunday school annex at First Church, Greenwood is building a church in East Greenwood. This is made possible by Mrs. Chas. Wright, daughter of the late Dr. Price. Before long, a handsome "Price Memorial," we hope, will adorn the lot, with parsonage adjoining. It is altogether fitting it should. Dr. Price was a pioneer Delta preacher. He served many charges in the Greenville and the Greenwood Districts. His work abides. His memory is blessed.

The revival spirit is on, though only two meetings have been held. Three hundred and fifteen members have been received. District Evangelist Robertson is to assist pastors in several places, beginning soon. One candidate for the ministry reports from Indianola.

Every charge embraced the first opportunity to adopt its quota (some, more) on Superannuate Endowment. Some have paid quarterly installments; Indianola, for the year.

Most of the pastors are cultivating some new territory. A number of lay leaders are doing splendid work in helping to care for Sunday school and other services in such places. Special mention is made of Brother Sistrunk, of Lambert. Shaw needs the help. He has the whole county—Quitman.

The above is a brief summary. Lack of space forbids accounts in detail. Reports from some charges do not appear in the estimate. Couldn't get them. Delinquents know who they are. It isn't anybody else's business.

The District Conference will meet at Blaine, June 4-6. The change from Carrollton was made for reasons satisfactory.

Our forces are pledged to labor and pray for—"A revival in every charge; a Sunday school wherever possible; collections in full."

J. E. CUNNINGHAM, P. E.

NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT NOTES.

The New Orleans District began the year with a whole-hearted acceptance of the minimum apportionment for the Superannuate Endowment by every charge, even the mission churches which had no quota assuming one. Epworth, Carrollton and Lafourche mission each made some increase in the quota, and St. Mark's and Mary Werlein, which had none, assumed each a quota of $500. Nearly all the charges in the district have secured the first year's quota in full or more. Carrollton Avenue and First Church have raised half the total quota; Felicity, Epworth, Rayne Memorial, and Lydia have gone far beyond the first year's apportionment, while most of the others have cleared the first year.

Berwick appears this year for the first time as a separate charge. Rev. E. V. Duplantis has made a good beginning there, and the results of the new arrangement promise to be excellent.

Our churches in New Orleans planned for a simultaneous evangelistic campaign during the weeks preceding Easter. Two of the churches have held their special meetings. At McDonoghville, Dr. Crisler, of Baton Rouge, preached to good congregations for ten days, to the delight and edification of the church, and several members have been received as a result. The pastor, Rev. F. B. Hill, planned wisely and worked faithfully, and doubtless will reap lasting results.

At Epworth, the pastor, Rev. J. B. Grambling, had enlisted the men of the congregation in building an addition to the church, which not only doubled the seating capacity of the building, but aroused interest in advance, and gave wide advertising to the meeting. Rev. Dan Kelly led the services for fifteen days and preached to large congregations. At the close there were 85 applications for church membership, most of them coming to Epworth Church. A total of about a hundred members have come into the church there since Conference. This church is making rapid progress toward the building of a great church for that section of the city.

Meetings are now in progress at most of the other churches. Rev. Martin Hebert is preaching effective sermons at First Church. At the other churches the pastors are conducting their own services. At Louisiana Avenue, Algiers, and perhaps others, preparation has been made in advance by the holding of a large number of cottage prayer meetings. We are looking for large results out of these special efforts.

At Morgan City, Rev. R. M. Brown is doing effective work, and the permanence of the results of the great meeting there last fall is evident in the entire work of the church. Plans are being made for a Sunday school building to care adequately for a growing Sunday school, and progress is being made in every way. Rev. Martin Hebert recently held a ten days' meeting there at the iuvitation of the pastor, and forty were added to the church.

* * *

Rev. T. F. King, at Jeanerette and Patterson, is doing faithful work. He recently preached in Jeanerette a sermon on the "Meaning of Protestantism," which made a considerable impression, and was pronounced by one hearer as a masterly effort.

Houma is looking forward to the meeting of the District Conference, which meets there April 25 to 27. Brother McCoy and his helpers are making diligent preparation for a great occasion, and the work of the local church goes on successfully.

* * *

Rev. A. D. Martin began services at a new point less than a year ago with five persons present. A few weeks ago he preached there to between fifty and sixty, has a Sunday school organized, twelve church members, and is planning a tent meeting shortly. A committee has been appointed to direct the building of a church at Labadieville. We are also planning to purchase a property at Griffin for our church. First Church, New Orleans, has decided to help in the erection of the Labadieville church, and contributions toward the Griffin property are still coming in from friends throughout the State in answer to our appeal.

The pastor at St. Mark's and Mary Werlein, Rev. J. A. Alford, reports a fine spirit in the work there. Several promising young people have recently come into the church there, and he is expecting fine results from his special services. The services now going on at Mary Werlein will be followed by a meeting at St. Mark's, conducted by Dr. Cameron, of the Institutional Church in Kansas City.

Our people at Carrollton Avenue are working diligently on plans for a new Sunday school building, which is made necessary by the growth of their Sunday school. The pastor, Brother Doss, has made a fine impression on the entire congregation, and is moving forward in every department of the work.

Increases in pastors' salaries have been made at First Church, Carrollton, Algiers, Parker Memorial, Houma, and Morgan City, ranging from $100 to $500.

Other items of interest will have to be postponed till a later date.

ST. LUCIA AND MARTINIQUE.

By Chaplain J. H. Brooks.

After a month of strenuous operations, the vessels of the United States fleet were ordered to various ports for "liberty." A sailor's life is one of variety. He must work while his ship is at sea; when port is reached only necessary duties are done and he goes ashore to forget his troubles and get a change of atmosphere. The liberty port assigned the Wright was Castries, St. Lucia. After a 36-hour run from Culebra, the anchor was dropped near the shores of the most beautiful island in the West Indies. St. Lucia is the largest of the British Windward Islands, rugged and peaceful, of little present value but with a checkered history. For 150 years the British and French fought for its possession. More battles were waged on its treacherous mountain sides than anywhere in the Western hemisphere. It was here that Rodney's fleet lay at anchor waiting to strike the French, here that Moore and Grey led their determined soldiers. Rising 800 feet above the town and harbor of Castries is the Morne Fortune or "Lucky Mountain," which changed hands fourteen times between 1500 and 1814, when it was finally acknowledged by treaty to be British territory.

On Sunday morning, March 2, a hiking party of ninety-five men, in charge of the chaplain, landed in Castries, marched through the town and up the mountain. A good British road now winds its way upward, but it was easy to see what a tremendous task the capture of the mountain must have been. Along the way were bright-colored cottages surrounded by cocoanut, mango, orange, breadfruit and banana trees, and tropical vines and flowers. From the summit a beautiful picture greeted the eye. Far below at the foot of the mountain was situated the little town with its red-topped houses outlined against the green valley and blue harbor; on the other side in Cul-de-Sac Valley were fields of waving cane ready to be cut; seaward, the expanse of ocean was unbroken; in the interior, mountain ranges rose skyward in majestic grandeur. Surrounded by these reminders of the power and glory of God, what could be more fitting than worship? The party was halted under the shade trees and church was held. It was an inspiring service. Near us were the barracks and fortifications built by the British at a cost of $10,000,000, and now unoccupied; before us were the steep slopes once alive with cheering, rushing, fighting soldiers, now green with the undisturbed growth of twenty years—an object lesson in the folly of hatred and strife contrasted with the triumph of peace and beauty.

Another point of interest on the island is Souffrere, a volcanic mountain rising nearly 4,000 feet above the sea, and continually sending up sulphurous fumes. In its crater is a huge lake of boiling sulphur water and all around are deposits of crytallized sulphur, alum and copper. This volcano is regarded as a safety valve for the island, because when in 1902 violent eruptions devastated the islands of Martinique to the north and St. Vincent to the south, only a slightly increased activity was noted in Souffrere, and no great eruption occurred.

On Tuesday, March 4, a trip was made to Martinique, "the Queen of the French Antilles." This island was the scene of the disastrous volcanic eruption of 1902, when the crater of Mount Pelee opened and a dense cloud of fiery vapor came hissing out and shot down upon the city of St. Pierre, snuffing out all life with a breath of flame. An avalanche of boiling mud poured out of the mountain, descended at tremendous speed over the city and into the sea. Before its destruction, St. Pierre was a thriving, pleasure-loving city of 29,000 people, proud of its reputation of being "the naughtiest city in the West Indies." Many ships connected it with the world's ports; beautiful stone buildings housed its industries; tropical trees shaded its parks and drives. After the eruption only one man remained alive—a prisoner in a dungeon on the far side of the city from the mountain. His clothes were burned to ashes and his body severely scorched. Four days after the catastrophe he was rescued. Nature has covered the charred ruins with a thick growth of grass, flowers, and shrubs, and now the once proud city is almost a jungle. Only a few fishermen's huts have been built here and there in the ruins of pretentious mansions.

Another place of interest in Martinique is the birthplace of Josephine, wife of Napoleon Bonaparte. Her father came from France and settled on a plantation near the village of Trois Islets. Here Josephine spent the early years of her life. A statue of the Empress stands in the park in Fort de France; the crown of France rests on her head. Napoleon's picture is in her hand, and her eyes look wistfully toward the childhood home.

Fort de France is a picturesque French town of 25,000 people, situated at the foot of sloping mountains on the Fort de France bay. On the rising hills back of the town the chateaus of the more prosperous citizens are built. In the streets may be seen the native women in gay Martinique costumes which suggest motion picture actresses rather than staid housewives and market women. The contrast from the more sober colors and styles of the British West Indies is very marked.

The sea plane which accompanied the Wright to St. Lucia created a great sensation among the natives. Never before has an aeroplane of any kind been near the island. Crowds assembled from distant villages to see the plane in its flights. The Governor was taken in it to visit the islands of St. Vincent and Grenada (also under his administration), the trip being made in a few hours, whereas usually it occupied three days of his time.

THE APOSTLES' CREED.

By Rev. C. M. Chapman, D.D.

The origin and development of the Apostles' Creed, so-called, is interesting. It is notable for the prominent place it occupies in the order of worship in so large part of Christian churches. It should be a true formula of the church's doctrine and belief. It is not in any sense the Apostles' Creed, as far as we know, except as it is believed to reflect the teaching of the Apostles.

The tradition that each Apostle contributed a clause to form the sum total of the creed is not tenable when we can only trace its use back to the middle of the second century in any form.

The word "Creed" seems to have come to us in two forms—"Credo" to believe, and "Creddha" to trust or act on faith, etc.

The formula now known as the Apostles' Creed was first used in Alexandria as a training test for baptism in 140 A.D. The expanded form became the doctrinal standard as well as entrance requirements into the first theological university in Alexandria before the close of the second century. It served to unify the church and to protect its members from false teaching.

The present form is the result of additions and amendments. In 390 A.D. the clause, "He descended into Hell," was added. In 550 A.D. the clause, "The Communion of Saints," was added. In 656 A. D. the clause, "Maker of Heaven and Earth," was added. All of these additions were not only to express fuller interpretation of what it was thought the Apostles taught, but to counteract errors that were disturbing the church at the time. The Nicene Creed, 325 A. D., and the Athanasian Creed later, were more an exposition and defense of the trinity and incarnation than an expression of full formula of belief. (We refer to this again before we close this statement.)

From the time of the first Ecumenical Council before the middle of the fourth century, the Creed began to occupy a place less than the sum total of a true expression of the belief of all that was necessary for full development in the Christian church. As the doctrine of the Trinity advanced, the existing creed became richer in expressions of the position and work of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ. It is a most interesting study to follow the Creed's progress through the "shadows and shine" for over a thousand years, but we desist, to look upon it as it breathes life into the Ausburg confession in 1530. Here is the resume of the best of the Apostles', Nicene, and Athanasian Creeds and the fruits of the Reformation to this time. Now we leave the Catholic Church and Apostolic Christian Church, which won its title by becoming "separated from" the ecclesiastical organization that had gathered unbearable traditions and paganistic customs. For instance, the added clause to the Creed, "He descended into Hell," in 390 was the engrafting the Jewish Kaddish custom of ceremonially purifying or cleansing the dead by prayers and baptism through a proxy who, being placed under the bier, would answer for the dead in vows and rites. Read 1 Peter 3:19 and 1 Cor. 15:29. Invocation of saints, extreme unction, and prayers for the dead are among the errors found in the doctrinal standards, but only the clause, "Descended into Hell," which to many means only our Lord's stay in the world of unseen, is found in the Creed at this time.

We will not follow the Creed into the different Protestant churches, but only the English Established churches from which Methodism received its Articles of Religion and its creed in the main. However, we might say that the Prayer Book of 1552 of the English Church was a great reformation in confession and a strict Biblical interpretation of "He descended into Hell." Omitting from its formula anointing for the sick, prayers for the dead, baptism for exorcism of devils, and reducing the seven sacraments to three, it introduced into its confession homilies of Faith, the Commandments, Free Will, and Good Works. While these are not in the creed as is recited by the church, these tell what is meant by the Creed.

Methodism took the Apostles' Creed from the English church, as is stated in our books to day, except that the clause, "He descended into Hell," is left out.

Thus have we a beautiful exposition of our doctrinal belief that has been chosen by years of progress and consecrated by the blood of holy martyrs. And when we recite it in the churches of our free land, let us remember that it once was the price of life so to utter it.

WHERE TO SEND YOUR MISSIONARY MONEY.

By C. R. Porter.

Now that Centenary pledges are being paid in full the makers of these subscriptions naturally want to know how their money must be handled in future, and to whom it should be sent. Let the following simple direction be your guide:

As soon as a Centenary obligation has been met, make all future checks, drafts and money orders payable to W. M. Cassity, Jr., acting treasurer, and send to him, box 510, Nashville, Tenn. This applies to all missionary money directed to Missionary Specials, as well as to undirected gifts, tithes and offerings.

The regular foreign and home mission assessment should be sent, as usual, to the regular Conference Treasurer, while Epworth League funds continue to pass through the hands of the Conference Epworth League Treasurer, by whom they are forwarded monthly to Epworth League headquarters, Nashville.

If there is any uncertainty yet in the minds of any, please write to

THE GRAND JUBILEE CHORUS.

From the weakest Mission in the church to the greatest Cathedral, there seems to be sounding a glorious note of victory. And in every instance the "going over" was attended by a wonderful spiritual blessing. I have repeatedly stated that whoever touches the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment will touch the God of the superannuates, for God is surely in this movement. Preachers and lay members everywhere are proving the truth of those words. I believe the church will experience her greatest revival as a result of her fidelity to this sacred cause.

I rejoice in every success that has come. Especially is my heart stirred by what is being accomplished in places where the difficulties are many and great. I take off my hat and extend my hand to those of the high-steepled churches who have won in their fields, but my gratitude to those who have achieved success in circuit and mission charges cannot be expressed in words. Suffice to state, that all of the heroes have not perished from the earth: Southern Methodism has a lot of them now living and working to remove from her banner the stain of neglecting her worn-out preachers.

Let the cash in hand be sent at once to the Board of Finance, Security Building, St. Louis, Mo. Remember it is Endowment money, and the Board wants to invest it immediately so that it can begin earning income for the support of the Forgotten Man. When sending payments on quotas, be sure to use the Book of Remittance Forms which was sent to the pastor.

The Home Circle

GRANDMA WHITE'S BEAR.

Before the days of automobiles and when northern Michigan was still new, something happened where Grandma White lives, something unusual. Grandma White has told the story many times to the four little sisters, Vera, Charlotte, Genie, and Baby Ruth, and it never fails, as she tells it, to win their smiles.

It happened that one autumn day late in the afternoon a big boy was passing the farmhouse. He saw Grandma White in the yard. (She wasn't grandmother, though, to the four little sisters at that time.) The boy leaned over the fence to talk with Grandma White about wild raspberries. He said that if he thought he would be safe he would sleep out of doors that night. He had walked many miles before he had found a place where raspberries were plentiful, and he wished to pick both his big pails full of berries before he returned home.

"There is nothing to fear in this well-settled neighborhood," Grandam White said cheerfully.

"That is what I told mother," the boy replied. "I told her not to worry about me because I might camp out to-night. She thinks there are bears in these woods."

"Of course," Grandma White admitted, "when I was a little girl bears used to be common in this vicinity; but they are back in the deep woods now. We haven't seen a bear around here for years."

The big boy thanked her and said, "That's what I told mother." Then he went swinging two big empty pails and whistling cheerfully.

When Grandma White was washing the dishes after supper she said, "I wish I had thought to invite that boy to come back to supper and sleep here to-night."

Later she went to the door for a look into the gathering twilight. The farmhouse is on a hill-top. Just as Grandma White had decided that the night would be warm and that the boy could camp out without feeling cold, she noticed a shadow by the farmyard gate at the foot of the hill. A minute later she believed that she plainly saw Maud at the gate below. Maud was a colt.

After Grandma White went into the house and the lamps were lighted, she forgot about Maud until she heard an animal step up on the porch.

"That is a queer thing for Maud to do!" exclaimed Grandma White. "She must have opened the gate and walked up the hill, but I never knew her to climb the steps and come on the porch before."

Without stopping to think further, Grandma White opened the outside door and walked out on the dark porch to drive the colt away. The next minute she called: "Brother Isaac, bring a lamp quick! This isn't Maud! I believe it is—a bear!"

Brother Isaac instantly stepped to the door with a lighted lamp. Grandma White was just ready to back into the house when the light fell full upon a huge bear with bright and shining eyes.

Now it happened that Isaac was so startled by the sight of that bear that he forgot his sister. Instantly he slammed the door shut, leaving Grandma White outside with the bear.

Fortunately, the bear went down the steps faster than he came up, without offering to hug Grandma White or even to shake hands. That bear ran down the hill so fast that when Brother Isaac went looking after him with a gun a few minutes later he was nowhere to be found.

Grandma White didn't sleep well that night. She didn't blame Isaac for shutting her outside with the bear, because she knew that of course he didn't intend to do such a careless thing. Grandma White didn't sleep well because she couldn't forget that big boy camping out under the shining stars while a huge bear was out for a stroll.

The next morning Grandma White saw the boy coming while he was yet far from the farmhouse. When he came nearer she invited that boy to breakfast. He said he would be glad to come to breakfast because he had been picking raspberries since early dawn and had not taken time to eat a bite.

"I am in a hurry to get home," he explained.

"Well, I am so glad that you are safe and sound this morning that I can't tell you how thankful I am," Grandma White said when she helped the boy to more pancakse, "because a bear came to call on us last night."

"He called to me, too," the boy remarked. "By hard work I had picked one of my two pails full of raspberries before dark. Then I wrapped up in my blanket and made myself comfortable for the night on a bed of pine boughs. I had put my pail of berries on a big stump before I made camp. I had scarcely closed my eyes when I heard an animal walking through the underbrush. Next thing I knew I saw a big bear walk up and lift down my pail of barries. The rascal ate every berry, pawful after pawful. Then he put the empty pail back on the stump and walked away.

"Of course, I was glad the bear didn't offer to touch me, but I was mad enough about the berries. That is why I filled my pails early this morning and started for home.

The big boy said he was glad the bear called on Grandma White the way he did, because he had feared that his story wouldn't be believed. Then how they laughed before the big boy went on his way cheerfully!—Frances Margaret Fox, in The Continent.

WHEN HERBERT FILLED THE WOOD-BOX.

Herbert went reluctantly about gathering up wood and cobs. "O dear," he thought to himself, "if only I didn't always have so many chores to do! Seems as if the wood-box was always empty, though I know I fill it often enough."

Into the wood-box went the wood and cobs, and Herbert turned about to face his mother.

"Just another arm-load, please," said mother gently. "I want a fire all day to make apple butter."

"All right," answered Herbert with a brave little smile. But underneath the smile there were cross, complaining thoughts, such as these: "I hate chores, and I hate filling the wood-box. And when winter comes, there will be more chores, and, O dear, I wish I could have a new sled for next winter!"

Out to the wood-pile he ran, and soon another arm-load was picked up. But listen! what was this? A faint, far-away sound seemed to come from the wood-pile. Herbert dropped the wood and knelt down, peering cautiously about. Then suddenly he arose and clasped his hands. "Turkeys!" he exclaimed in gleeful tones. "The turkey hen has hid her nest away and hatched some baby turkeys."

As fast as he could he ran to the house.

"Oh, come see the surprise!" he shouted. "I've found a nest of baby turkeys!"

Mother looked up from the apple she was peeling. "I knew the turkeys were there all the time—ten of them," she said, smiling, "and I've kept the secret because I meant to give them to you as a surprise. If you wish, you may sell them later and use the money to buy a new coaster. What does my son say to that?"

"Oh, mother, you are so good!" said Herbert joyously.

"You see," mother went on, "I appreciate how good my boy is to fill the wood-box so often without grumbling."

For a moment Herbert's face flushed with shame. Then two little arms went tight about mother's neck. "Oh, mother," he cried, "I did grumble 'bout filling the wood-box, not out loud so you could hear, but inside. But from now on there is not going to be any grumbling of any kind, because I'll be too busy filling the wood-box and tending to the turkeys."—Word and Way.

THE LURE OF HAPPINESS.

Everybody feels it. Everybody gauges the success of life by the attainment of some sort of happiness. Human differences are, very largely, differences in conception of what happiness is and how it is to be won. It is sometimes said, in the name of religion, that we ought not to concern ourselves with happiness. This is not true. We ought to concern ourselves with happiness. We ought to demand and command happiness. It was "for the joy that was set before him" that our Lord "endured the cross, despising the shame." He, also, was looking for happiness; and found it, where we can be absolutely certain to find it, in the service of others. So long as we live and serve, we can count upon that. The happiness of health, of large income, of favors, of honors, is precarious. If we gauge happiness in terms of these things we may, like the Psalmist, "Go a-mourning all our days." If we change our conception of happiness, we may have happiness every day.—George Clarke Peck.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 412 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

MARTYRS AND MODERNISTS: SUGGESTED BY EASTER.

and despondency and death a new and noble life began to arise and take form in the Christian church. From city to city and country to country it spread, until it had nearly pervaded the known world. And that unearthly type of life sprang from professed belief in the resurrection of Jesus, whom it fervently adored, challenging the cold hand of death to quench the heavenly flame. Through all manner of persecutions and martyrdoms it has persited through the changeful centuries of light and darkness, peace and war, until it has reached the distant age in which we live. Upon its continuance in the earth the only abiding hope of mankind depends.

Suppose its earliest advocates had not believed that Jesus rose from the dead, or had considered his resurrection an unimportant matter, what sort of a world would we have to-day? If in the first three centuries they had been as faithless as "the Modernists" among us to-day, would there be any Christian churches to shelter and support the rationalists who feed upon the Christianity which they fight?

If we abandon the faith of "the glorious company of the Apostles" and "the noble army of the martyrs," and in its room set up the rationalistic speculations and specious skepticism of the Modernists, will we have any churches to-morrow, or any Christianity?

The Modernists are repeating much of the irreverence and infidelity of Celsus, which Origen refuted. Can mankind draw spiritual life from the teachings of Celsus, whether uttered in the second century or the twentieth?

We might as well look for the fragrant flowers and luscious fruits of the tropics amid the ice and darkness of an Arctic winter.

Let us on this glad Easter morning turn away from the deluded and doubting Modernists; salute one another with joyous exclamation, "the Lord is risen indeed!" sing rapturously his praises; and go "traveling home to God in the way our fathers trod."

IMPORTANT NOTICE!

Mississippi and North Mississippi Conferences.

We are now approaching the District Conference season in Mississippi. Men will come together in large numbers—laymen and preachers—from a half dozen to a dozen counties in every instance. Scarcely a corner of any county will be without some representation at these meetings. This makes an opportunity of supreme importance. Every one of them ought to be an occasion of notable power which will register a new outlook and mark the opening of a new day in the efficient ministry of Methodism in its territory.

To this end, permit me to urge upon all our preachers and people to see to it that the attendance is a full 100% of the elected delegates from every church—to be there at the first service and stay to the last. Let the presiding elders provide programs that will feature the outstanding needs and responsibilities of Methodism in their sections and lead to concerted plans to meet them. The routine business of the conferences should be so dispatched as to leave ample time for such important features. Speakers should be provided in advance who can present the great interests of the kingdom with conviction. Outstanding laymen should be sought and generously used on these occasions.

As the Discipline directs, religious services should be magnified. Preachers should be appointed to preach who have a message with definite ends in view. Revival fires should be kindled at these conferences and carried home. There is no better place to project plans for a summer campaign that will bring a revival to bless our land. May the coming round be out of the ordinary and mark a new day of efficiency and saving power in every district!

W. N. AINSWORTH.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Dr. J. Sam Barcus has been elected president of Southwestern University, at Georgetown, Tex.

Bishop William N. Ainsworth will spend Easter Sunday in Gulfport and Biloxi, and on April 27 he will be in Clarksdale, Miss. Bishop Ainsworth is indefatigable in promoting the interests of his episcopal district.

Special attention of those concerned is called to the fact that the place of meeting of the Greenwood District Conference has been changed from Carrollton, Miss., to Blaine, Miss. The dates for the gathering are June 4-6.

Rev W. T. Griffin, financial agent in the Mississippi Conference for the Methodist Orphanage, spent last Sunday at Hazlehurst, Miss., with Rev. W. H. Saunders and his fine people. His message in behalf of the orphans will bear fruit.

The Easter cantata, "Our Risen Lord," will be rendered by the choir of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, this city, assisted by other prominent singers, on Monday evening, April 21, at 8:15 o'clock, under the direction of Mr. T. O. Adams.

Rev. F. J. McCoy, our pastor at Houma, La., reports that the first year's quota from his charge for the Superannuate Endowmcut Fund has already been sent to the General Board of Finance. Fine for Brother McCoy and his loyal people!

Rev. W. W. Graves, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, Mississippi Conference, writes that the work of the district is moving along well. Preachers and people are in a happy frame of mind.

Rev. and Mrs. Lastie N. Hoffpauir, of Leesville, La., announce the marriage of their daughter, Verdie Eva, to Mr. George Brown Mooneyhan, on Thursday evening, April 10. The Advocate extends all good wishes to the happy young couple.

Rev. H. H. Smith, Blackstone, Va., has written a very fine booklet, "Robert E. Lee—A Character Sketch"—which is well worth reading. It may be had of the author for 15 cents a copy, two copies for 25 cents, five or more at 10 cents per copy.

Rev. and Mrs. R. H. Bamburg, of Junction City, Oregon, announce the marriage of their daughter, Grace Lee, to Mr. Reuben M. Frank, on Tuesday, April 1. Brother Bamburg was formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference. The Advocate extends all good wishes to the happy young couple.

Dr. Laurence L. Doggett, president of the International Young Men's Christian Association College at Springhill, Mass., announces the addition to the faculty of Eugene C. Foster as director of the boys' work course, his work to begin on May 1. Mr. Foster is one of the best known men in boys' work in this country.

In a note in this column in our issue of April 3, the dates for the Millsaps College commencement for this year were given as May 29-June 4; these dates were incorrect, the proper dates being May 24-27, inclusive. Gipsy Smith, Jr., will preach the commencement sermon, and Hon. R. V. Fletcher will deliver the commencement address.

Rev. W. A. Powell, of Liberty, Miss., had the misfortune to fall and break his hip on Jan. 1, and he has been confined to his bed practically ever since. If he lives until June 13, he will be 80 years old. We extend sincere sympathy to him in his affliction. He writes that he finds great pleasure in reading the Advocate.

The work of the church at Haynesville, La., prospers under the leadership of Rev. A. J. Gearheard. The first year's quota of the Superannuate Endowment Fund has been raised. A revival meeting is now in progress, in which the preaching is being done by Rev. D. B. Boddie, of Glenmora, La., the music being in charge of Mr. K. I. Bean, of Bogalusa, La.

Rev. C. M. Crossley, our pastor at Court Street, Hattiesburg, Miss., writes: "Everything is moving along well at Court Street. We have more than met the quota of the endowment fund for our veterans. We have placed the order for our pews and chairs for choir and balcony. We have a co-operative and plucky set of folks, which assures success for the Master."

On Wednesday of last week, the remains of Mrs. Carradine, wife of Dr. Beverly Carradine, were brought to New Orleans for interment, Dr. W. L. Duren, pastor of the Rayne Memorial Church, officiating. Dr. Carradine was at one time pastor of Rayne Memorial, and his wife was a native of this city. We extend sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family.

From "Methodist Matters"—weekly bulletin of the Central Methodist Church, Columbus, Miss., Rev. Del Longgrear, pastor: "An entirely new class has been formed—not by the officers of the school, but by about forty young matrons, most of whom have not been attending Sunday school. They occupy the class room adjoining the Men's Bible class."

Meetings are being conducted in practically all the Methodist churches of New Orleans during this week. In most of them, the pastors are doing the preaching; at the First Methodist Church, however, Rev. Martin Hebert, Conference missionary evangelist, is doing the preaching. The attendance at all the churches is gratifying, and already there have been many additions to the membership of the church.

Rev. W. L. Broome, formerly of the North Mississippi Conference, now Centenary Secretary of the East and the West Oklahoma Conferences, with headquarters at Oklahoma City, has recently undergone an operation at a hospital. He is recuperating satisfactorily, and will soon be able to attend to his work as usual. He keeps in touch with his Mississippi friends through the Advocate.

The corner stone of Kirby Hall, the new theological building of Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Tex., was laid at 5 o'clock Thursday afternoon, April 3. Bishop John M. Moore officiated at the ceremony, assisted by Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, Bishop H. A. Boaz, and Bishop Herbert Welch, of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The building is the gift of Mr. and Mrs. R. Harper Kirby, of Austin, Tex., and is being erected at a cost of $125,000.

Rev. W. J. Wood, our pastor at Oakland, Miss., writes: "Please announce through the Advocate that the revival meeting at Oakland will begin on April 23, at 7:45 p. m., and run for ten days. Rev. J. A. Wells, pastor of Pearl River Avenue Methodist Church, McComb, Miss., will do the preaching. The local choir will have charge of the music. We covet the prayers of all who will pray that this may be a time of great awakening." Brother Wood is happy in his work—he says he is serving some of the very best people in the Conference. He commends especially the work of the Woman's Missionary Society.

For the purpose of evangelism in the neighborhood of Lake Charles, La., where settlements are not sufficiently large to support regular preaching services, for unifying the moral forces of Lake Charles, and for the encouragement and support of all evangelical churches of the city by the Protestant men of the city, there was recently organized the "Laymen's Association of the Broad Street Methodist Church," with John J. Robira as president and H. H. Hebert as secretary. Messrs. McKee, Hale, and Mayo were appointed a committee to confer with other laymen's organizations on the advisability of a central council for correlated activities.

The following news item, taken from the Magnolia (Miss.) Gazette of April 10, will be read with sorrow by the many friends of Brother Jones: "The continued and serious illness of Rev. Claude P. Jones, pastor of the Methodist church here, has necessitated his asking for a two-months' leave of absence, which was granted him by the board of stewards last week. Mr. Jones consulted a New Orleans specialist last week and was told that only by remaining in bed four or five weeks and following a rigid diet could he hope to regain his health." We are sure many prayers will be offered that Brother Jones may soon be restored to health.

Dr. Henry Felgar Brooks, pastor of the Capitol Street Methodist Church, Jackson, Miss., writes: "We are in the midst of a great revival. Judge Frank Morris, his wife, and singer, from Greenville, Texas, are assisting us. We are having great crowds, great attendance, great messages, a great outpouring of the Spirit, and a great response to the call of the gospel. More than 200 have made profession of faith and been reclaimed, and a great number have been received into the church. There has been a general awakening and the meeting is blessing all denominations. We are hoping for greater things."

The American Bible Society announces that at the Stated Meeting of the Board of Managers, held at the Bible House, New York, on April 3, Mr. E. Francis Hyde was elected president of the Society. Mr. Hyde is, and has been for many years, a leader in the financial, musical, social, and religious life of New York City. He is treasurer of the New York Sabbath Committee, treasurer of Princeton Theological Seminary, and a member and elder of the Marble Collegiate Church (Dutch Reformed) of New York City. He will bring to the presidency a wide and varied experience and a deep personal interest in and knowledge of the Society's world-wide program.

Evangelist Earl B. Moll, of the Mississippi Conference, is now engaged in a meeting at the new Grace Church, Jackson, Miss., assisting Rev. F. L. Applewhite. Brother Moll writes that his singer, Prof. T. G. Mangham, of Atlanta, Ga., will have some time during June and July which he would like to give to any pastor who can use his services. Brother Moll has agreed to give some time during these two months to some of the weaker churches in the Conference, and will be unable to use a singer at that time. Prof. Mangham will be associated with Brother Moll after Aug. 14 for the remainder of the year. Those who may desire to get in touch with Prof. Mangham can do so by addressing him in care of Rev. F. L. Applewhite, Jackson, Miss., until April 27, and after that time at 89 Park Avenue, Atlanta, Ga.

BROOKHAVEN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

At Meadville, 9th inst. at 2 p.m., the Brookhaven District Conference was called to order by the presiding elder, Rev. H. M. Ellis, and after reading the second chapter of Acts and commenting thereon, Brother A. M. Broadfoot led the conference in prayer; the presiding elder also invoked the leadership of the Spirit in the work of the Kingdom throughout the district, and in the deliberations of the conference.

Rev. W. B. Jones being present and having been secretary of the conference last year, was invited to the front, introduced to the conference, and requested to call the roll. Brother Jones is now presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, and from the reports coming from various sections of his field, he is giving great satisfaction.

W. H. Saunders was elected secretary and Brother A. J. Beasley assistant secretary. Notwithstanding Meadville is to one side of the district, there was a most creditable attendance at the opening session of the pastors and lay brethren. It rained that night and all the next day, and no doubt kept many away during the remainder of the session, as a short distance of the road was newly graveled and the river and creek have not been bridged since freshets washed them away some months ago. The good people of Meadville dispensed a most gracious and abundant hospitality, seeing to it that the rain did not interfere with the business of the session and the comfort of the brethren. All the pastors were present except Brother T. J. Weems, of Bogue Chitto, and Brother C. P. Jones, of Magnolia, Brother Jones being prevented by sickness.

Several brethren were present and represented the various interests of the church in the bounds of our Conference. Brother A. G. Ganey represented the cause of Christian Education for Brother J. M. Morse; Dr. A. P. Hamilton spoke for Millsaps; W. D. Hawkins, for the Centenary; Prof. Bobbitt, for Whitworth; Dr. J. M. Sullivan delivered a strong appeal in the interest of the Laymen's work; Mrs. Mamie Myers spoke for the good women, and Brother H. A. Gatlin was present in the interest of the Washington City Representative Church, and Brother A. S. Oliver spoke for the church at Columbus, in which the Mississippi Conference is interested; J. C. Chambers represented the Sunday school work; B. F. Lewis and W. T. Griffin spoke for the Orphanage.

One splendid young man was licensed to preach, Brother Robert Lewis Williams.

The preaching was done by Brother J. L. Sells, Centenary, McComb, and Brother B. F. Ormond, of Tylertown, and both messages came from hearts that felt the touch and power of the Spirit of God.

Hazlehurst will have the pleasure of entertaining the conference next year, and will extend a hearty welcome to the brethren.

The Brookhaven District will be represented at the Annual Conference this fall at Canton by a fine lay delegation composed of: Virgil Youngblood, Wesson; Robert Bennett, Meadville; C. E. Saunders and W. A. Price, of Crystal Springs; Mrs. A. S. Oliver, McComb; Mrs. J. S. Purcell, Wesson; M. L. Everett, Brookhaven, and G. R. Granberry, of Sweetwater.

Reports from the various charges in the district revealed the fact that all the pastors have been diligent, some few revivals have been held, all are planning to hold revivals, and all the benevolent causes are receiving careful attention, with plans to pay up in full, and the spiritual interest showing some advance over the last report a year ago.

This being the last year of the quadrennium of our present presiding elder, Rev. H. M. Ellis, the conference adopted, with rising vote, the following resolutions of appreciation and regard for his faithful service and leadership during these years:

"Resolved, that we desire to record our appreciation of the four years' service of Brother H. M. Ellis as our presiding elder; that we recognize in his service a genuine love for Christ and the church, manifested by labors abundant and self-forgetful zeal, and a deep devotion to the duties required by his official position.

"Our prayers and interest will follow him into whatsoever field his lot may fall, and we commend him to those with whom he may be associated as worthy of all confidence and a workman that needeth not to be ashamed." N. E. Alford, G. H. Thompson and J. T. Abney, Committee.

All the interests were carefully looked into and the conference adjourned at the evening session, after a very happy and profitable meeting, on Thursday at 9 o'clock, by singing "Blest be the Tie that Binds," and the benediction.

W. H. SAUNDERS, Secretary.

A CORRECTION.

In the Jackson District notes published last week, I was guilty of a serious omission when I failed to mention the name of Rev. John C. Chambers, Field Secretary, together with the names of Rev. M. L. Burton and Prof. C. A. Bowen, as deserving credit for our Standard Training School. No one has called my attention to this omission, but I realized my mistake when I read the "Notes," and now hasten to make correction.

John Chambers is doing a great work, and I, for one, desire that it shall be appreciated. No one worked harder and sacrificed more for the school than did he. God bless him.

F. L. APPLEWHITE, Reporter.

Only the rays of God can cure the heart,
Purge it of evil; there's no other way
Except to turn with the whole heart to God.

In heavenly sunlight live no shades of fear;
The soul there, busy or at rest, hath peace;
And music floweth from the various world.

There are times when it is almost impossible for us to realize the work of God as providential; it is hard for us to understand the will of the Father. It was true on the 4th of March, 1924, while anxious hearts and loving hands administered every aid to KIRBY SMITH as he made his flight from this world to one where no sorrow or heartache could reach him. Kirby was just in the bloom of life, only 23 years old, with all of the promise of life before him. He was loved by all who knew him. He believed in the right thing all the time; even from a little boy, he showed a friendly disposition. He was a regular member of Sunday school. Others might go away, but he made it convenient to meet his class. He was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, having joined with a class of thirty in a revival in his home church (Antioch) in 1917. He might not have lived just as he should through these years, but it is evident that he never forgot his vow. He was faithful to his country, a true American boy. Every one who knew him confided in him. Never has such sorrow come upon the young people of the community before. He is gone from our midst, his chapter has been read, his friends will look with hope to the day when they shall meet again.

One who loved him,

J. F. DRING.

SIDNEY LATHAM was born April 14, 1906, and died Jan. 31, 1924. He was the son of G. E. and A. E. Latham. He was a member of the senior class at the Union High School, preparing, after graduation, to attend the Summer Normal that he might prepare for teaching in order to assist his widowed mother, and the brothers and sisters. "Sid," as he was called, had the high esteem of all who knew him for his noble qualities. He joined the Methodist church when quite small, and lived a loyal member, loving the church and Sunday school. A real gem has gone from us. May we not sorrow as those who have no hope. God bless the sorrowing ones.

WINTER EVANGELISM ON THE CAMDEN CIRCUIT.

Dr. Rolfe Hunt, the missionary evangelist, and the pastor of the Camden circuit, spent the entire month of March in a campaign of personal evangelism, going from house to house and talking to people personally about their souls' salvation. Scripture reading and prayer were also a part of each of these visits.

Cottage services were held in all parts of the circuit. These services were very helpful and reached many persons who did not attend church often. Services were held in the churches on Sundays, but on account of weather and road conditions, the other plan was thought best for the week-day services. Dr. Hunt was at his best and brought splendid and helpful messages at all the services. As a result of these efforts, the spiritual state of the churches is very much improved, a new church has been organized, and a few Methodists have been induced to move their letters from the "old home church" and become a part of the church that serves their present location.

This special effort was not without difficulties and hardships, for we carried an ax and shovel in the Ford all the month, and used them several times in getting out of bad places and shoveling the snow out of our way; but Dr. Hunt was a doer of the word as well as a preacher, and he was just as ready to help push the car out of the mud as to push the battle against sin.

I do not believe that we can follow the example of him who gave his life for us unless we are willing to endure hardships if need be in advancing his cause. I am praying for the time to come when we will not feel that all of our efforts in behalf of the country church must be reserved for the months of July and August, and then become a holiday season instead of a Holy Day season.

REV. G. E. ALLEN, Pastor.

FROM ARCADIA, LA.

Dear Advocate: The opening day of the new church in Arcadia, sermon preached by Bishop Dobbs, was followed by a series of meetings, Rev. R. B. Freeman, of Abilene, Tex., doing the preaching. The meeting did much good. Numbers claimed to be blessed, and numbers claimed to be saved. From the meeting we received sixteen members. This gives us a gain of forty since Conference.

I have used several of the general evangelists, first and last. I got the best results from this meeting of any ever held for me by an evangelist. One very serious trouble was quietly settled—a trouble between two of the strongest men of the town. His preaching is attractive. People love to hear him. Brother Freeman is an affable gentleman—one in whose character you readily have full confidence. To those who like to use evangelists, I am pleased to commend Rev. R. B. Freeman, of Abilene, Tex.

IT'S BECAUSE.

By Garfield Evans.

A woman's laconic reply to something about which she has formulated a definite opinion or to something to which she does not care to commit herself, is that striking couplet, well known to ordinary men, "It's because."

You are concerned that the young people of your congregation stay for church after the Epworth League service. The reason they leave may be because they are not given anything when they do stay.

You sometimes wonder why the young people of your congregation seem so distant and cold to you. It may be because you have forgotten to be interested in them and do things with them instead of for them, or better, get them to do things with and for you.

You sometimes criticise the young people for being frivolous and so light-headed as you refer to the problems of the modern youth. It may be because you have forgotten how you were when you were young and the things you did and the more things you wanted to do and would have done if you had been given the chance.

You are deeply interested in their going as missionaries and becoming preachers. But you wonder why they seem soon to get disinterested and seem to forget the idea. It may be because you did not take it seriously any more than to speak about it from the pulpit, and because you never sought personal interviews to help mold the developing conviction.

Youth is not without his faults. He does all the things that are charged against him, but it may be because some one has not recognized that the program of the church and Christian society should adapt itself to the needs of its youth.

"FORGIVE THEM."

By Mrs. W. E. Neely.

"Father, forgive them,
They know not what they do,"
Was the language of our Master,
And he suffering so much, too.

The language of that Blessed One
While suffering on the cross—
Shall it not thus be ours,
No matter what the cost?

It matters not how keen the pang,
How deep may be the wound,
We should follow his example
And should do as he hath done,
And say, "Father, forgive them—
They know not what they do."

Rheumatism Relieved

Renwar is guaranteed to relieve Rheumatism by money back offer. This remedy will positively neutralize the uric acid in the blood, which causes Rheumatism. The amount of Renwar required to effect relief depends on the case which is being treated. Very often one bottle will produce the desired result. If you suffer with Rheumatism, you should by all means try Renwar. It is harmless, even to the most delicate constitutions, and thousands will testify to its effectiveness in relieving Rheumatism. Sold by druggists, price 50c, or by mail from Warner Drug Company, Nashville, Tenn.—Adv.

Get Nerve Force from Nuxated Iron

It will strengthen your nerves and increase your vigor and endurance, often in two weeks' time. It contains the principal chemical constituent of active living nerve force in a form which most nearly resembles that in the brain and nerve cells of man. It also contains organic iron like the iron in your blood, and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. Organic iron enriches the blood and plenty of rich red blood means more nerve force, so that Nuxated Iron not only feeds what might be termed artificial nerve force to the nerve cells, but it stimulates the blood to manufacture a greatly increased supply of new nerve force. Get a bottle of Nuxated Iron today, and if within two weeks' time you do not feel that it has increased your nerve force, and made you feel better and stronger in ever way, your money will be refunded. Sold by all druggists.

REMARKABLE REVIVAL AT EPWORTH, NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans conquered the yellow terror of the tropics; drove the stegomyla from her gates; vanquished all probabilities of the bubonic plague; is dealing knock-out blows to malaria and other maladies which imperil her health and happiness; but she is not immune from infection from the good old-time religion, having recently encountered thrilling installments of it through the impelling messages of that noted divine and famous evangelist, Rev. Daniel E. Kelly, conducting a two weeks' revival at Epworth Methodist Church, located corner South Scott and Banks Streets.

The opening service was held on Sunday morning, March 23, and the meeting terminated Sunday evening, April 6. With the slogan, "No man can lead a people further away from a world of sin than he is himself," the evangelist exemplified the fact that Christianity is to him the most real thing in the univers of God by the splendid success which crowned his devoted efforts in his fifteen days' preaching.

Rev. Dan Kelly is a native Mississippian, but his soul-winning program, which he has followed so effectively for years, is not circumscribed by any geographical boundaries. From the snow-capped hills of the North to the flower-crowned shores of Southern seas, this aggressive soldier of the Cross has waged relentless warfare on the powers of darkness, winning hundreds from the shrine of Mammon into the glorious light and liberty of the Gospel of Jesus Christ. Not, "Will there be any stars in my crown?" But, "How many gems will sparkle in my coronet?" is really the anthem he should sing.

The original auditorium of the church building was first used for the services, but, one by one, the partitions of the new annex to the church were opened up to accommodate the ever-increasing crowds. To take care of the throngs Sunday evening, April 6, when the evangelist brought his last message, all available space was utilized; neighboring churches were called on for chairs; saw-horses and planks were requisitioned to help seat the people. Figuratively speaking "Standing room only" signs were finally lowered, for there was no more space left.

The sermons of the evangelist were all masterpieces, and he ever held the hearts of his hearers in thrill, and lured men from the shores of sin. While there was not a tame or listless sermon during the entire series, some are worthy of special mention—standing out in bold relief, "like some tall cliff that mid-way quits the vale."

By special request, the evangelist preached on the "Four horsemen of the Apocalypse." His exposition and application of these symbols of divine revelation threw new light upon the great subject, and furnished a clearer conception of the appalling truths involved.

His sermon, Sunday evening, March 30, on "Social Purity," stands out distinctly as one of his most notable efforts, producing a very profound impression upon his audience. He inveighed furiously and rightfully against the damning idea of a double standard of morals for men and women; he held up chastity as the strength and beauty of the soul and the best gift of heaven; he lashed unmercifully the vice and follies of the age, smiting a terrible blow to the sensuous Terpsichorean goddess, unmasking her, exposing the slimy coils of passion whose lethal trail leads down the scarlet shadow of shame; he called upon men to be as chaste as their wives, sisters, mothers and sweethearts. It awakened a universal chord of approval in his audience, and it was a large one, for when he said, "If you endorse my sermon, and subscribe to my idea, come and give me your hand," the entire assemblage rose in one solid body and moved towards the pulpit. One sermon to which the evangelist applied the title, "The Magnet," was indeed correctly denominated, for lives hardened in sin were drawn to the foot of the Cross by the force and beauty of his appeal.

The Epworth Methodist Church, where this revival was held, located at South Scott and Banks Streets, is in charge of Rev. James B. Grambling, and not to refer to him in this sketch would be to leave out the real man behind the gun. Brother Grambling is a consecrated, aggressive, progressive and constructive leader of his people. He is a young man of engaging personality, absolutely tireless in his efforts; he has the love and esteem of his congregation, and of all who come within the radius of his consecrated Christian life. There is painted on this church, in large and conspicuous letters, "A Growing Church in a Growing Community," and there might be added very appropriately, "With a going preacher at the helm."

There was no lack of variety in the attractions brought into the revival, which was directly attributable to the devotion and resourcefulness of Brother Grambling. As to this phase of the meetings, there were the choir and the music; a grand piano soulfully handled; cornetists, violinists, etc., with twenty-five or thirty trained voices.

Mr. C. O. Hundley, of Alabama, was in charge of the song service; and this consecrated gentleman, with his fine, rich voice, lighted the fires of hope and new resolution in many a dark and desolate soul. The music was a fine factor in the success of the meeting.

The Mississippi Quartet, composed of young men from the Baptist Bible Institute, sang their way into the heart of the revival. The fine melody of their voices as they brought their inspiring messages of song was one of the outstanding features of the revival. They were present on several occasions.

Brother Grambling conceived the splendid idea of bringing special groups and organizations to hear the evangelist. For instance, on two evenings the nurses from the Charity Hospital came in a body, and special seats were reserved for them. They came in their immaculate service uniforms. Then there was the W. C. T. U., and other similar organizations; the children of St. Mark's Methodist Mission attended in a body, and others. The evangelist always had some eminently fitting remarks for each respective group.

The evangelist found time to make special calls and deliver special talks to individuals and institutions hungering and thirsting to hear the wonderful messages of the Way of Life. He went to the City Reform School for delinquent boys, and stirred those erring youngsters mightily with the appeal he made to them. So impressed were these boys with Brother Kelly that they clamored to hear him at the church. Their request was complied with, and they were present in a body on the evening of the last service.

When certain things are taken into consideration in connection with this revival just closed at the Epworth Methodist Episcopal Church, South, it can be said that it was the most remarkable held in the city of New Orleans for many years. This church is remote from the business section, and is not classed as one of the large churches of the city, yet in this series of meetings its influence was felt throughout the city. A total of eighty-five united with the church, and forty-nine of these, or 60 per cent of the total, came by profession of faith. This was a wonderful showing. The "old-time religious revival" at Epworth Church was a success.

Spontaneously and voluntarily at the close of the last service, Evangelist Kelly was remembered with a handsome love offering in the form of a cash donation, as a token of the depth of gratitude for the good he had done in the community.

The real secret of the success of this gospel meeting is the fact that the pastor of the Epworth Methodist Church has got this "good, old-time religion," and the further fact that he lined up with an evangelist who possesses the same brand—the kind that walked in the fiery furnace with Hebrew children; the kind that closed the lions' mouths and kept them from making a meal off Daniel; that inspired Paul and Silas, sustained Luther, and dominated the life of Wesley—the variety which emanates from the Cross of Calvary in its pristine purity.

SICK HEADACHE WAS RELIEVED

Missouri Lady Says She Was Miserable With Constipation and Sick Headaches Until She Used Black-Draught.

Forbes, Mo.—"I have used Black-Draught, when needed, for the past twenty-five years," recently said Mrs. Emma Grimes, who lives in "Green Valley Farm," near here, "and it has given perfect satisfaction.

"I began taking it for a bad case of constipation. I would get constipated and feel just miserable—sluggish, tired, with a bad taste in my mouth. I didn't feel like doing anything and soon my head would begin hurting, and I would have a severe sick headache.

"I don't know who started me to taking Black-Draught, but it did the work. It just seemed to cleanse the liver. Very soon I felt like new. When I found Black-Draught so easy to take and easy acting, I began using it in time and would not have sick headaches. . . .

"I can recommend Black-Draught very highly for liver trouble, headache or constipation."

Constipation leads to a great deal of sickness among those who neglect to treat it without delay. The poisons which constipation forces your blood to re-absorb may cause great pain and much danger to your general health.

Keep Thedford's Black-Draught in the house and use it promptly for relief at the first sign of constipation.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The third session of the Grenville District Standard Training School is now being held at Clarksdale in connection with the district conference. The present school is in advance of any held in the past. The church at Clarksdale has done all that any one could ask to make it a success. The district has met the expense of the school. The district conference passed a resolution to provide for the school next year. Dr. Clovis Chappell, pastor of First Church, of Memphis, has been the chief preacher for the conference and the school. Dr. Chappell is poetic in his thought, he is witty, he is natural, he is simple, modest, and a prophet of God. He is truly a great preacher. A detailed report of the school will be given next week.

If we mean to do any permanent work in establishing the kingdom of God, we had better begin to enlist the teachers of our schools to attend the Conference Training School to be held at Grenada, June 11-18. It is going to require hard work to get 250 workers to attend this school. but it can be done if we go at it in earnest. Bishop Ainsworth is to be our chief preacher. Bishop Ainsworth is giving his full endorsement of this chief enterprise of the Conference. No one piece of work means more to the future of the church than this training of our leaders.

Is this statement from L. P. Jacks, of Manchester College, true? "To begin by starting the community on the wrong road, in the plastic period, and then, when it is grown up, to send out the preacher and the policeman to bring it back—what fool's enterprise could compare with it?" We magnify the atoning blood of Christ in his saving the life from sin as much as his saving from the guilt of sin. It is wiser to form character from the beginning than to reform and then begin to form character on a faulty foundation.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Only 35 put of 216 shares have been placed so far. Many, many schools that have not paid a cent on their Centenary ought to take advantage of the splendid offer and take a special. We can manage this whole list of specials if we will only rally to the cause.

On April 4, we had the pleasure of meeting with the Men's Bible class of Utica in a social meeting. They had invited the teachers to meet with them. We had a very pleasant and profitable time.

Last Sunday we visited Utica, Carpenter, and Burdenton. The people received us kindly and listened. They pledged themselves to forward steps and the work was outlined by the Sunday School Board. Brother Higginbotham is doing well and the folks are rallying to him.

On Friday, the 11th, we had the pleasure of enjoying the hospitality of the Galloway Memorial Men's Bible Class barbecue banquet. Dr. Geo. Stuart was the guest of honor and the speaker of the evening. It was a great treat to sit down with 300 choice men and to listen to the great man of God.

McComb, Centenary, is the first Sunday school to send in Sunday School Day offering. Their offering was $9 more than last year. If each school will do as well, we will have all the money we need to carry us through this year. It would be a grand and glorious feeling to have this experience. We thank Centenary, McComb, for leading off so well.

Many requests are coming in for non-standard schools. We have several who have voluntecred to teach in these schools. Let us have your dates, and we will do what we can to arrange to help you if you desire it.

Brother Hull is doing a great work. Pray for us.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Young People's Rally in Ruston District.

By Mrs. J. M. Henry.

The Young People's Department of the Ruston Sunday school was the host Sunday, April 6, of a large delegation of young people from Homer, Arcadia, Haynesville, Minden, and Dubach. They had been invited to come promptly at 9:30, so as to see the Ruston department in worship, and also to be present at the lesson hour.

It was an inspiring sight to them—over 225 in number—happy, enthusiastic and eager; it was an impressive sight to see them become very quiet and reverent as the chord sounded for the worship program. None but young people took part in this—a young man led the prayer, a young woman read the Scripture, and a group led the singing of "Lead on, O King Eternal."

Short talks were made on "Definite Class Accomplishments," by the classes represented. Some told of methods in giving the lesson; some of social service work; some of ways of keeping up attendance, etc. Splendid ideas were exchanged.

The lesson was then studied, and the beautiful thought of the day made as impressive as possible. After the benediction, came the church service, and then a light lunch was served. At this time, so many excellent talks were given that it would have surprised those older folks who do not think the young people can really do things.

It was suggested that a chairman and secretary be appointed to assist Mrs. Lewis in her work as district superintendent. Mr. C. O. Holland and Miss Davis, both of Minden, were elected, and plans are already under way for another get-together meeting at either Homer or Minden, during the next quarter.

Mrs. Lewis is thoroughly consecrated to the work of the Young People, and they will make a record this year, under her splendid leadership. Surely God needs these young people; the church needs them, for upon their shoulders must fall the burden of tomorrow. Let us strike, then, while the iron is hot—hot with the fire of ambition and enthusiasm of young manhood and womanhood; hot with the energy and the zeal of youth; let us strike before it is too late, and the iron cools and lies in our hands a lifeless thing, when blow upon blow will avail nothing. Let us, church leaders, give this work of the young people our earnest co-operation.

Woman's Missionary Society

All communications for this Department should be sent to Mrs. Ada Parker Brown, 5611 Woodlawn Place, New Orleans, La.

Dear Co-workers:

At the beginning of my work as editor of the Woman's page, I want to send Christian greetings and love to all my fellow-laborers and friends. I feel that mine is a very important office, that my work is most important, and I want to do it the best possible way so as to bring honor to our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ.

I want to feel that I have the co-operation of all the members of our great organization so as to make this work a success. Please send articles that can be nsed in this column—tell what you are doing, so others can be benefited.

May the risen, victorious Christ be very real to each one in our organization at this joyous Easter season, and may we pray and work together "to help God save the world."

Faithfully yours,

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The Auxiliary at Cheneyville, La.

Dear Friends: As Superintendent of Publicity, I want to call your attention and the attention of the sisters of the Woman's Missionary Society to our Auxiliary, organized only three months ago. We organized with fourteen members, to all of whom the work was new.

We have six subscriptions to the Missionary Voice, have made over $100, have placed a new piano in the church, and, best of all, we are thoroughly enjoying our missionary programs.

Pray for us that we may be truly a missionary society, with love as our motive, that our service may he acceptahle to God.

MRS. S. J. JORDAN.

Echoes from Annual Conference of the Woman's Missionary Society, Held at Bogalusa, March 25-28, 1924.

The delegates left New Orleans on the evening of the 25th, and arrived at Bogalusa at 7:30 p. m., where we were cordially received, and escorted to the beautiful Methodist Church of that thriving city; before entering the church, however, we were treated to a sumptuous lunch, which every one enjoyed.

The interior of the church was tastefully decorated with fresh flowers, which, placed before the grand pipe organ, gave a cordial welcome to the visiting delegates. Quite a splendid musical prelude was rendered hy membors of the church, after which the address of welcome was given hy Rev. E. C. Gunn, the pastor of the church, and responded to by Mrs. C. F. Niehergall, of New Orleans, president of the Louisiana Conference.

Mrs. Niebergall had charge of the devotional service, after which she introduced Mrs. R. W. MacDonell, of Washington, D. C. This gifted speaker gave an earnest, impressive and inspiring talk on "The Belle Bennett Memorial—the Greater Scarritt."

I shall not go into the details of the three sessions held daily, hut let me say, Pause, and think of the self-sacrificing representative women, coming from all sections of our State, to relate what the Lord has done, through them, his servants, in their community, to estahlish his kingdom upon earth; it is indeed inspiring and an incentive to us to "go forward and do more," and try to do likewise.

Mrs. J. W. Perry, vice president of Woman's Missionary Council of Nashville, Tenn., was the conference guest of honor, and her "Quiet Hour" talks each day sank deep into the hearts of her hearers, and each day there existed a feeling of companionship, a fellowship which drew us nearer to each other.

Mrs. C. C. Carver, conference treasurer, of Rayne, La., won the applause of the assembly hy her splendid report of the finances for the year, and her talk on "How to meet the need of an increase." She suhmitted a most excellent plan, which suggested first hy

Prayer—"Pray without ceasing; in all things give thanks."

Love—"Lovest thou me? Feed my lamhs."

All—"It is more blessed to give, than to receive."

Now—"When should we give? Now, now is the accepted time."

On Wednesday, after the mid-day session, the conference ladies were invited to visit the lumber and paper mills of the Southern Lumber Company. This invitation was under the direction of Colonel Sullivan, mayor of Bogalusa. Escorts were in waiting at the mill to show the visitors around, and the trip was interesting and instructive. At night we were entertained at the Y. W. C. A. building with stereopticon slides, giving the particulars from the young trees to full grown, and giving the entire process of hauling, sawing, cutting, making boxes and hauling the waste to the paper mill.

The people of Bogalusa entertained us in every way, made us feel at home, and we were glad to he their guests. By attending these conferences our conception of the missionary work is broadened, and we feel more like putting "our hands to the plow" and going deeper into the suh-soil, into the hearts of all our people as well as our own, and God will do the rest.

Rev. Mr. Duren, of Rayne Memorial, gave a splendid talk on "Citizenship," which was a strong appeal for the women to endorse and support the laws of our country, our State. I am sure every delegate suhmitted this appeal to her Auxiliary, to vote for prohihition, for observance of the Sahhath, and the aholishing of the slot machine.

In conclusion, I must say that the very atmosphere at the conference seemed permeated with His presence; every one happy and filled with more enthusiasm for the future.

When the time for leaving came, and the train bearing all the delegates began to move, a light rain descended, which seemed a "benediction" on the good people of Bogalusa and the Woman's Missionary Conference of Louisiana.

EPWORTH DELEGATE.

IMPORTANT SUGGESTIONS.

1. Program Topics.—The program material for 1924 will seek to set forth the new and unparalleled opportunity offered to the church to-day. This opportunity is as broad as the world, as filled with possibility as the infinite power of the Christ. The task to-day is indeed illumined as never hefore.

2. Program Committee.—Auxiliaries should not fail to appoint a competent program committee. This committee should give time and thought to making and carrying out plans for the program meetings. They should give those who are to take part ample time to prepare, seeking to impress upon them the necessity of putting into their work the best efforts of which they are capable.

3. Bible Lessons, as outlined in the monthly programs, will appear in the Voice. Be sure that the person leading the Bible study really studies the lesson and makes it a vital part of the meeting.

4. Social Service.—Two programs will be given to Social Service Topics—namely, June and December. The Social Service Committee, however, should make quarterly reports of the work accomplished, giving suggestions to the members of the Auxiliary for co-operative effort.

5. The Bulletin.—Give a place on the program for news items, using the Missionary Bulletin for fresh news from the field. Watch the Bulletin for suggestions for the monthly program.

6. Additional Programs.—Some Auxiliaries have weekly programs and others semi-monthly. We wish to call attention to the fact that most of the topics are so arranged that they admit of divisions; ample material may he found for added programs if desired. The Special Belle H. Bennett Memorial Fund Program outlined herein should find a place. An extra meeting should be planned by every Auxiliary some time during the second quarter, or, if desired, it may be used in an all-day meeting in connection with the regular program. The time appointed should be such as will insure a full attendance. Seek through prayer and intercession to make this meeting one of special spiritual power.

ROCHE'S HERBAL EMBROCATION

FROM BENTONIA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: A few lines from the Bentonia charge may be of interest to some of the Advocate readers. I came here the 29th of December last and preached three times on Sunday, the 30th. I found a loyal people, and they received me with outstretched arms. They have been good to me in more ways than one, and I have learned to love them as only a pastor can love his people.

There is no parsonage on this work, so these good people got busy and rented one of the best houses in town for me, and the good ladies here got up the money and bought new furniture and furnished the parsonage throughout. These people believe in doing things on a big scale. They have made this preacher and his wife very comfortable and happy.

We found in the pantry a great quantity of groceries and all kinds of good things to eat, and it keeps coming in from time to time. This is not all—they have given us chickens for the yard, and we are getting all the eggs that we can eat, fresh from the yard. I tell you this preacher is living high.

We have no electric lights here, and this preacher was having a time trying to get used to the kerosene lamp, when, about ten days ago, one of my members gave me a Coleman gazoline lamp, and you should have seen this parsonage the night following—it looked as if the electric lights had been turned on. I can sit any place in the room now and read with all ease.

We have four churches on the work, giving Bentonia two Sundays, and one Sunday to Dover, and one Sunday to Flecher's Chapel, and an afternoon service to Anding. We are praying for and expecting a great revival to come to each church on the work. We are planning to build a new church at Bentonia in the near future.

BEZOVCE.

By D. P. Melson.

Slovakia is the eastern half of Czecho-Slovakia, which was so oppressed under the Hungarian rule that, educationally and religiously, it is a hundred years behind Bohemia and Moravia, the western half of the Republic.

This sketch describes my visit to Bezovce, a Slovakian town of 1,000 population, about seven miles from the railroad, accompanied by a Slovak colporteur, Jan Huraj. We rode out from Uzhorod on a farmer's sled, seated on hay and wrapped around snugly with blankets, for it was bitter cold. About half way, Brother Huraj and I got off the sled and ran a bit to get warmed up. Arriving in Bezovce, I saw a rather attractive town dominated by three church buildings, Roman Catholic, Greek Catholic and Calvinist, a block apart, forming a triangle. The only other public buildings were small school houses; not a store or business of any kind in the place.

Brother Huraj and I stopped at one of his regular places, the home of one of the wealthiest families in the town, a two-room house, one room of which was occupied by seven head of cattle; the other met all the needs of the family. They gave us a hearty welcome, and the lady of the house proceeded with the preparation of the meal. When it was ready, we were ready also, for the cold wind had sharpened our appetites. "I'm giving you the best we have," our hostess naively remarked, and then with a sudden change, "You must excuse us, that we don't have luxury." The meal consisted of tea and cakes, then cabbage cooked with rice, then noodle soup, then ham and sausage, pickled beets and prunes. Though the customs were very different, the spirit was the same; no Methodist preacher in the South ever received a heartier welcome.

Before time for the evening service, a group of boys, 10 to 12 years old, came in, and Brother Huraj taught them songs. It was my first chance to see Brother Huraj at work among his people. He is a genial, consecrated young man, with one of the brightest faces I have ever seen. Those boys love him like a father, and the people all call him by his first name Jan; few know any other. For nearly two years he has come through all kinds of weather, usually on foot, to hold a service for them every Sunday.

The combination kitchen, dining-room, living-room and bedroom also provided a place where the crowd assembled for the service. They brought in a number of rough planks and arranged seats for a few, but most of the crowd stood during the service. About a hundred people crowded into that little room. The three churches there all have nice buildings, and, being State churches, the people are taxed to support them, but they provide but scanty spiritual food for the people. They sang, the leader "lining" out the songs for them, seemingly with the idea that the chief requisite for good singing was loudness, and on the part of the children shrilliness. In that small room the effect was so deafening that I was compelled to put my fingers to my ears. Then Brother Huraj led in prayer, and they all followed, repeating together every word of his prayer, in a lower tone. After another song, I gave them a brief message in Czech, then Brother Huraj preached a sermon. Then followed three or four songs, during which no vocal chords were broken, but I am sure some were badly strained. Brother Huraj then suggested that the service close, and allow the ladies to go home and do their spinning until midnight, as their custom is. But no, the crowd insisted on having another talk from me and another sermon from Brother Huraj. After that, Brother Huraj delivered the Bibles and other religious books that he had brought with him, and took orders for more, and then bade the crowd "good night." The crowd went home looking none the worse for having stood up all the evening packed one hundred in a small room, with no provision of any kind for ventilation.

OPERATIONS FOR FEMALE TROUBLES

Some Are Necessary, Some Are Not

These Women Gave Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a Trial First

Fairview, S. Dakota.—"A year ago I was sick in bed for three weeks and the doctor said I would not be any better without an operation. I had bearing-down pains and sick headaches, with pains in the back of my neck. I felt tired all the time, down-hearted, and got poor and pale and was scarcely able to do anything at all for some time before I took to my bed. The doctor said one of my organs was out of place and caused all my troubles. I was too weak and run-down to think of an operation and as one of my neighbors told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, I began taking it. I have received great relief from it and recommend it very highly. It cannot be praised too much in cases of female weakness." —Mrs. O. M. RING, Box 106, Fairview, South Dakota.

New Jersey Woman Writes

Camden, New Jersey. — "I take great pleasure in writing you this testimonial. I was a great sufferer of woman's ailments and doctors told me 18 years ago that I must have a serious operation to remove some of my organs. I refused to have it done and took a full course of your medicines for six months, then after the full course I took a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound every week or two, also Lydia E. Pinkham's Blood Medicine every Spring. I am well and stout and still have my organs they wanted to remove. It was while I was in the hospital that I heard your medicines praised by other patients there. I have recommended them to my friends and to my own family. You may use this testimonial far and near, from the smallest paper to the largest, and I will gladly answer letters from women who wish to know what the Vegetable Compound has done for me and what it will do for them if they give it a fair trial." Mrs. J. RICH, 322 N. 46th St., Camden, New Jersey.

Through neglect, some female troubles may reach a stage where an operation is necessary, but most of the common ailments are not surgical ones; they are not caused by serious displacements, tumors or growths, although the symptoms may appear the same.

Many letters have been received from women who have been restored to health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, after operations have been advised.

In a recent country-wide canvass of purchasers of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over 100,000 replies were received and 98 out of every 100 reported that they had been benefited by its use. This statement is important to every woman. For sale at drug stores everywhere.

FROM VOSSBURG, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: The second quarterly conference of the Eucutta charge for the present year was held Saturday, Apr. 5, and in some respects it was the greatest quarterly conference occasion it has been my privilege to attend up till this time. Our very affable and much beloved presiding elder, Brother Graves, was with us presiding in the services of the day with his usual spirit of brotherly love.

The attendance for the day was very good. We were fortunate in having with us Rev. W. A. Terry, pastor at Shubuta, and Rev. Earl B. Moll and his singer, Brother Mangham, who are assisting Brother Terry in a meeting at Shubuta.

Upon the request of Brother Graves, Brother Moll preached at both the morning and afternoon services. These services were times of real refreshings from the Lord. Brother Moll preached with power sent down from on high. The Lord blessed, and our hearts were made to rejoice. As a result, three members were received into the church at the close of the services.

The reports at the quarterly conferences this year are an improvement over last year. Our meetings for the year are planned and we are praying for the coming of His kingdom in a larger way to our hearts and to the hearts of the people over the work this year.

SUNDAY SCHOOLS.

SOME LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

The schedule for the Sunday school session in the District Conferences is: Lake Charles District, April 16, 2 to 4 p.m.; New Orleans District, April 27, 2 to 5 p.m.; Alexandria District, May 4, 2:30 to 5 p.m.; Ruston District, May 7, 2:15 to 4:15 p.m.; Monroe District, May 14, 2 to 4 p.m.; Baton Rouge District, June 4, 2 to 4 p.m.

One of the leading topics for discussion at the coming District Sunday school rallies will be, "Co-operating with the District Officers." Each district officer will be expected to make a report and ask for co-operation.

Another interesting feature we hope to introduce in the district rallies will be the roll call of Superintendents and minute reports from each superintendent.

The Conference Superintendent of Missionary Education and Extension, Dr. W. W. Drake, of New Orleans, is putting a great deal of thought and interest in his department. His great message at the Homer Conference was well received. We will be able soon to publish a list of all our Sunday schools which have paid their Missionary Centenary pledge in full.

Mrs. A. K. McLellan, wife of our pastor at Barham, writes in referenee to Brother McLellan's auto accident: "If he does not improve rapidly, he will not be able to attend the Leesville Conference; however, we do hope he can he present."

The Shreveport District is to have an all-day District Sunday school meeting on Tuesday, May 20, at Greenwood.

At some of the district meetings the district superintendents of the Elementary Departments are calling an Elementary District Council meeting, and where it is not convenient to hold such a meeting, these Superintendents will take advantage of the District Standard Training Schools and have their council meeting one day during the school session.

The Monroe Standard Training School will offer the following courses: Three Geueral—Bible, the Sunday School, and The Principles of Teaching; Two Specialization Courses—Primary, and Junior Lesson Materials. The presiding elder, Brother W. D. Kleinschmidt, has been elected Edueational Director of this School, with Mr. S. M. Collins, superintendent of the Monroe Sunday school, as chairman of the Board of Managers.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

A visit to the commercial department, 421 Baronne street, New Orleans, will always pay.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

IT IS EASTER STILL.

We celebrated last Sunday the resurrection of the Lord from the grave; let us not forget that he still lives. The resurrection was not an isolated event—it is a continuous fact. The Lord rose on the third day, and he lives for evermore. We worship not only a risen Christ, but also a living Christ.

PETER.

When Peter denied the Master, he was guilty of one of the cruelest acts recorded in history. He had been one of the most intimate companions of the Lord. He had yielded prompt and cheerful obedience to the call to leave his nets and become a fisher of men; it was from his impetuous lips that those flaming words had sprung, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God;" it was Peter who, on the Mount of Transfiguration, had said, "Master, it is good for us to be here;" it was Peter who was one of his chosen companions in the Garden of Gethsemane; it was this same Peter who, just a little while before, had said, "If I should die with thee, I will not deny thee in any wise."

But the situation has changed. Jesus is in the hands of his enemies, and Peter, so recently bolder than any of the other disciples in his speech, is content to follow him "afar off." As the crisis approaches, his courage fails, his ardor cools. He even sits down with the enemies of the Lord to enjoy the warmth of the fire they had kindled. What a commentary upon human nature!. How many of us, having grown lax in our devotion, not only are following Christ afar off, but are actually finding pleasure in the companionship and activities of those who are his professed enemies!

The cruelest words that ever fell from human lips were those that fell from Peter's when the maid charged him with having been one of the companions of the Master—"Woman, I know him not." And not once, but twice, thrice, he repeated his denial—so far had he fallen from the estate of a disciple! We wonder that Peter could so soon forget his Lord; but men and women to-day are doing just what Peter did. Their loud protestations of loyalty have faded away into the angry, defiant utterance, "I know him not." They have fallen from grace—and how great is that fall!

But Peter repented. The Lord said not a word to him—he simply looked at him. He might have spoken words of stern rebuke and fierce denunciation—but that is not the Lord's way with a soul trembling upon the brink of destruction; he might have looked upon him with anger and scorn and contempt in his eyes—but that is not the Lord's way. There must have been sorrow and pity and love in that look, for it broke Peter's heart—he "went out and wept bitterly." How many of us need to follow Peter here, as we have followed him in his wavering and his denial! We should weep bitterly if we could only see ourselves as the Lord sees us, and we would exclaim, as Peter did on another occasion, "Depart from me, for I am a sinful man, O Lord." But the Lord would not depart, and in his continued companionship we should find peace, and the courage that would enable us to die for him if need be—even as Peter did.

NO "WET" FOR PRESIDENT.

There is a thoroughly organized, well financed plan to foist upon the Democratic Party a presidential candidate who is pronouncedly "wet" in his attitude toward the Eighteenth Amendment—one who, at the very least, will favor a modification of the Volstead Law to permit the sale of light wines and beer. We have not the slightest personal interest in the political fortunes of any man who has been suggested for the presidency, but we have a tremendous interest in the moral issues that are at stake in the campaign. If the politicians who are so industriously trying to secure the vote of certain sections of the North and the East by promoting a "wet" candidate are successful in their efforts, they may get those votes, but we undertake to say that in so doing they will smash the "Solid South" into smithereens. The time has passed when a party shibboleth will induce intelligent men and women to vote against their deepest moral convictions—and the South is more solid in its support of Prohibition than it is in its adherence to a party simply for party's sake. Make Prohibition the issue and bring on your "wet" candidate, gentlemen—and then watch him go down in the worst defeat ever administered in a presidential campaign.

MORE CHAPLAINS NEEDED.

We are in hearty sympathy with the effort now being made by the General Committee on Army and Navy Chaplains to get Congress to increase the number of chaplains and to remove the discriminations against them as compared with other officers of the same rank. According to the investigations made by the committee, there are now 25 large posts, with garrisons ranging from 100 to 1,224 men, that are without chaplains. In addition to these, there are 130 army posts that have only one chaplain each, when they should have at least two, and, in some cases, three or more. At each of the five general hospitals, there should be two chaplains—one Protestant and one Roman Catholic; at present, there are only two chaplains for the five hospitals. The cost of providing these additional religious privileges for the young men of the army and navy is insignificant in comparison with the advantages to be derived. Congress spends a good deal of money for the advancement of the material interests of the country; it could very well afford to spend a little for the moral and spiritual welfare of those upon whom it depends for protection.

COMMERCIALIZING CHRISTIANITY.

We suppose it is all right for men who are in business to take advantage of favorable circumstances for advancing their interests. We can never be brought to believe, however, that Christmas and Easter should be looked upon as seasons when the business community is especially privileged to exploit its wares as if making money were the principal thing on these sacred days of the Christian calendar. Christ cast the money-changers out of the temple because they had made the house of prayer a den of thieves; some modern business men have come perilously near doing the same thing.

GET ACQUAINTED.

Most of our difficulties with people arise from the fact that we do not really know them. A few people, to be sure, are so constituted that they repel the sincerest advances toward better acquaintance and friendship, so that it becomes impossible to know them well enough to develop a liking for them; but the vast majority of folk will be found to be both likable and companionable if we make the effort to become acquainted with them. "A man that hath friends must show himself friendly," is a fact of experience that has come down through the centuries. If we knew even our enemies better, we might learn to love them—and be loved by them.

POOR DOG!

According to press dispatches, Ignace Paderewski, the famous Polish pianist, recently cancelled a concert tour and hastened to Chicago in his private car in order to be with his pet dog, "Pingy," which a telegram informed him was near death. The specialist in charge of the dog's case stated that there was no hope of its recovery, the trouble being that it "has eaten too much, been pampered too much, and has exercised too little." It is altogether to Mr. Paderewski's credit that he loved his dog, and that he was willing to do anything within his power to save its life; but it is a pity that he allowed his affection for the animal to cause him to do the very things that meant its death. Some parents make the same mistake with their children.

BISHOP DENNY ON THE UNIFICATION PLAN.

(This article, which appeared as an editorial in Zion's Herald of Feb. 20, 1924, is published at the request of Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, Chairman of the Commission representing the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in the negotiations looking toward Unification, and member of the committee that prepared the address to the Church, recently published. This article shows how at least one of the leading Northern publications feels towards Unification.—Editor.)

We publish elsewhere in this issue a statement from Bishop Collins Denny, giving his views of the plan of unification as submitted to the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by a Joint Commission regularly appointed to confer concerning this immense matter. Bishop Denny was one of the commissioners of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and was the only one of the episcopal members of the two commissions who did not vote in favor of the plan. He accompanies his statement with a personal letter to the editor of the Herald, asking that as a matter of "justice" his views be published in these columns.

Bishop Denny's colleagues of the Church South can judge better than we concerning any personal equation that may be involved in his views. While we have met the distinguished bishop casually, we have never had with him sufficient conversation to disclose his real inner attitude toward any possible plan of unification. In our own church we doubtless have some men still who would favor no plan that did not mean the utter absorption of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. They live in the year 1844, and in the years from 1861 to 1865, carrying down into 1924 the animosities which they have inherited and which, too, they have even increased beyond the size of the original inheritance. Not many of these men are left in our Zion. They intend to be good; but they approach the subject of unification with their prejudice disguised as reason.

Now it may be that some such men still abide in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South—good men with whom history, construed after their own inclinations, has far more weight than the prophecy of the day of union and brotherhood. Bishop Denny is a man of wide and varied culture. We are sure that he would not knowingly yield to an unworthy sectionalism. But, save for the printed statement in this issue, we have not material wherewith to judge of his attitude of heart toward unification as such. For a judgment of this personal equation we can only advise our readers to find the printed copy of Bishop Denny's fraternal address as it was delivered to our General Conference in Baltimore in 1908. We regret that we have not had time to read this deliverance and so to judge it as being somewhat an index of the fraternal messenger's heart. It might be well to read in connection with Bishop Denny's fraternal address the addresses delivered at later General Conferences by the lamented Dr. Frank M. Thomas and by Dr. E. B. Chappell, so that comparisons or contrasts of spirit in these three excellent men might be duly observed.

The Right of Free Discussion.

The question as to whether full courtesy was granted to Bishop Denny within the Joint Commission itself does not come to us for decision. Nor could we decide as to the wisdom of publishing with the report of the plan the views of any who voted against the plan. We guarantee, however, that Bishops McDowell, Anderson, Hughes, McConnell, and Thirkield, of our own Commission, and Bishops Moore, Mouzon, McMurry, and Cannon, of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Commission, would be even punctilious in granting a dissenting comrade all the usual rights. There are rumors that Bishop Denny had the full play of debate, both in the meeting of his own Commission and in the meeting of the Joint Commission as well, and that the records will not reveal that his rights of speech were in any way abridged. So far as we have seen statements in print in the recent weeks, Bishop Denny's rights to the press have not been denied; for his statement, as published, seems to be about as lengthy as any written argument given by any commissioner representing the majority. We trust, therefore, that there is no real ground for the complaint made by Bishop Denny that his privileges of discussion have been or are distressingly limited.

Concerning the various points urged by Bishop Denny, we would make in each case a brief rejoinder.

Will This Unification Unify?

First, if the plan is not unification, and not "even welding," why should it be taken so seriously? After all, a common constitution and a common Supreme Court would seem to be two very considerable factors in a union. As for the proposal's representing "an unassimilated mixture of two great and prosperous churches," it may be remarked that assimilation is not usually an advance process! If, also, the plan "proposes to experiment with success," it does this with the prayerful hope of larger success.

Second, the plan does not provide for the continuance of existing frictions and irritating competitions, with "altar against altar," because the whole effort of the plan is to bring into existence a mood that will make for one altar. The altars would all be within a church that had declared itself theoretically and governmentally one, and would be at the outset in one church quite as truly, if not quite as much, as Virginia and Massachusetts after many years are in one federal government. We believe, likewise, that any plank in the platform of unification that definitely gave to a quarterly conference a power which a quarterly conference in either church does not now possess, would have made a distracting element. Give this plan of unification its adoption, and we will trust our brethren of both Jurisdictions. Some blunders will doubtless be made; but, as understanding grows, these blunders will be fewer and less meaningful.

The Danger of Prophesying.

Third, we will not quarrel with Bishop Denny's impressive list of quoted worthies by whose discounted prophecies he urges his contention that "in providing a government for state or church, certainty as to results is unattainable, prophecy is childish, only a probable inference is possible." Bishop Denny then proceeds to prophesy in two rather lengthy paragraphs. He has his list of probabilities. His nine episcopal colleagues on the Joint Commission have their list. Inasmuch as this is not a case of the Scriptural lepers, it is at least possible that the nine are right. The bishop asks whether the majority, represented by what is now the Methodist Episcopal Church, would by the usual law of human nature yield in case the minority, represented by what is now the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, should vote against the division of a Conference or the organization of a new Conference. The reply is that, in an honest effort to protect a minority, the plan would bind us to that very thing; and that it would equally bind the minority with reference to the division and extension of work. We have not the slightest idea that Bishop Denny would consent to any plan that would put the minority at the mercy of the majority, and so subject his own Jurisdiction to the possible mastery of the other Jurisdiction! No plan of unification without that assurance embedded in it would have the slightest chance for adoption by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Is the Plan Democratic?

Fourth, Bishop Denny asserts that "the plan gives no voice in the government of the church to those chiefly concerned, the people and preachers." The truth is that the plan leaves preachers and people practically with the powers that they now possess; and that these powers cannot be changed in either Jurisdiction without a vote of the majority in that Jurisdiction. The only possible exception to this might come as a result of a decision of the Judicial Court as provided for in the plan. Even this gives to each Jurisdiction equal representation. A careful study of the scheme of proposed unification does not reveal any point where the powers of the people and preachers are decreased. Nor does the scheme in any way eliminate "the Annual Conference as part of the government of the church." Neither does it make the General Conference "supreme and all-controlling." On the other hand, it limits the General Conference by the Jurisdictional Conferences, as well as by the Restrictive Rules, and does not even take from the Annual Conferences any of their minor powers. We fear that the good bishop in his discussion of this phase is pleading for an imaginary government, fixed up to fit his own personal conception. At any rate, the plan, as submitted by the Joint Commission, nowhere turns the Annual Conference into a nonentity or a weakling.

On the Way to the Ideal.

This editorial rejoinder we think occupies less space than Bishop Denny's statement. We do not regard the plan of unification as perfect; but we do regard it as a thoroughly workable beginning for the mutual life of the two churches to be made into one church. It will involve some difficulties; but these can be met and overcome by the patience of love. The jurisdictional provision is not wholly ideal; but, just as in the republic, the federal idea will win its way as rapidly as safety will allow. We like the plan because it does not attempt too much—leaving the mutual life of the two Jurisdictions to work slowly and surely into a still larger mutuality. If this plan, which provides a living basis of union in a constitution and a Judicial Court, and which still leaves ample room for change and growth, cannot be adopted, we see little reason to hope that any other plan can be realized in this generation. We trust that we may see the day when Bishop Collins Denny will preside over a session of one of the New England Conferences. If that day comes, we shall be glad to join in a fervent doxology; and we shall expect the good bishop to lift his voice in the same glad melody.

A Warning "To Whom It May Concern."

We should add an expression of this personal conviction: The plan of unification should not be used to estop progress in our own legislation. Several times, at the recent meeting of the Council of Boards, changes were adversely discussed on the ground that "we should wait until we see how unification results." In harmony with the address of the nine majority bishops on the Joint Commission, the life of the two great churches should proceed normally and vigorously. If the jurisdictional plan prevails in the united church, large freedom for each Jurisdiction will be the sure result. Our General Conference will duly vote on the plan of unification. We believe that the plan will be adopted by an overwhelming vote. But meantime, and then, let our church work and life go forward; and let each new measure, as proposed, be discussed on its merits and adopted when its worth wins our suffrages.

Boston salutes Richmond and sends salutation to her distinguished bishop and citizen, Collins Denny.—Zion's Herald.

"Oh, where are kings and empires now
Of old that went and came?
But, Lord, thy church is praying yet,
A thousand years the same."

MRS. MATILDA JONES HOLLOMAN—A MEMOIR.

By Rev. V. C. Curtis.

The subject of this sketch, Mrs. Matilda Jones Holloman, was born at the Jones homestead, Jefferson County, Mississippi, March 13, 1847, and died in the home of her daughter, Mrs. M. E. Robertson, Itta Bena, Mississippi, on March 24, 1924.

Sister Holioman came of preacher stock, being the daughter of the Rev. John G. Jones, one of the ploneer Methodist preachers of this State, and was a sister to Rev. J. A. B. Jones, of the Mississippi Conference. Reared in a cultured Christian atmosphere, her mother, Mrs. Jane Ross Jones, being an accompiished and estimable woman, a thirst was created for knowiedge and a determination to have a finished education. After she had finished public schooi, she entered the Port Gibson Female College and later graduated from that institution. Then for twelve years she held the chair of mathematics in her Alma Mater. She gave up this position in Aprli of 1885 and was married to the iate Rev. T. B. Holloman, D.D., and for thirty-five years she was the faithfui helpmeet of this worthy servant of God. She shared the hardships of an itinerant with the courage and fortitude that characterize a true soidier of the cross. She never compiained of her hard iot, but was always ready to encourage and comfort her husband and those associated with bim in the work of the Master. When they were married, Dr. Holioman had six smaii children by a former marriage, and she became a mother to these orphans in deed and in truth. The children, who are now grown and are prominent citizens, remember no other mother and loved her as dearly as if she nad been their own. Notwithstanding these iarge domestic responsibiiities, she was always active in church work untii failing heaith prevented, but then she kept abreast of the times by being a constant reader of the best of iiterature.

After the death of her devoted husband in 1920, she made her home with her daughter, Mrs. M. E. Robertson, of Itta Bena, Mississippi. The next year after her husband's demise, she suffered a stroke of paralysis and after that time was confined to her home. In all of this suffering there was never a murmur or complaint on her part, but she proved to be a veritabie benediction to tbe members of the household. She was suddeniy taken with congestion of the lungs, and on March 24, thirty minutes after high noon, her chastened and refined spirit winged its way to the celestial world to be reunited again with her busbanu and other relatives and friends who had preceded her.

Her body was iaid to rest in the Itta Bena Cemetery by the side of that of her nobie husband, Tuesday afternoon, March 25. The services were conducted by the writer, with whom she had been associated in the work of the church, assisted by Rev. J. T. Lockhart, her pastor, and Rev. N. W. P. Bacon, of the Baptist church, and Rev. G. M. Smiley, of the Presbyterian church.

She is survived by six children; Dr. T. B. Holioman, Jr., J. Ii. Hoiloman, Dr. F. M. Hoiloman, L. C. Hoiloman, Mrs. F. H. Scott, and Mrs. M. E. Robertson and a number of other relatives.

May God comfort the bereaved in their great loss.

Greenwood, Miss.

AN ADDRESS IN BEHALF OF THE SUPERANNUATES.

Delivered By R. E. Lott in The Methodist Church at Crystal Springs, Miss.

My Friends: Do you know what it means for a Metbodist preacher to become superannuated? It means he has run his course and is ready to be offered up; it means he is dependent; that he is the care of some one; that he is forgotten; that he is in the evening of life; that he has fought the fight, kept the faith, and has stacked arms; that he is tottering; that he is on the verge of the grave; that he is unreservedly and pathetically waiting to answer the last roll call, and when answered, it will not be recorded in the church register on earth, but in the Lamb's Book of Life. This picture is sad, but pitifully true.

My friends, do you realize just what a young man gives up, as far as this world's goods are concerned, when he accepts the call to preach the gospel of Christ? it means that he prefers to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ rather than to be the Governor of the great State of Mississippi; that he had rather appeal to the people to let Jesus into their hearts than to own the largest plantation in the Mississippi Delta; that he had rather devote his time and talents in pointing sinners to the Lamb of God that takes away the sins of the world than to be a United States Senator; that he had rather be shifted from pillar to post, from circuit to circuit, across the plains, over the mountains, that he might tell the story, the old, old story of Jesus and his love, than to accumulate a fortune, own a splendid mansion, and live a life of luxury.

It is a common practice for great corporations, after their loyal employees spend the greater portion of their lives in the service of their masters, to make ample provision for their welfare and protection in their declining days. This principle practiced by these worldly corporations is one of the fundamental doctrines of the Methodist Church. We have preached it from every rostrum, every hilltop throughout Southern Methodism, advocating the principle of observing the Golden Rule—"Do unto others as we would have them do unto us." My friends, we have not practiced that which we have been preaching. It is a traversty upon justice.

The sentiment that originated in the minds and hearts of those laymen who resolved that they would give the Sonthern Methodist people an opportunity to correct a serious blunder we have been committing these many years, that we would be given an opportunity to get right with God, was a holy sentiment. They then and there put a plan on foot by which our battled-scarred veterans, our old soldiers of the cross of Christ, after they have worn out their lives in the interest of humanity, provision will be made for their comfort and welfare.

I repeat it, my friends, the sentiment that originated in the minds and hearts of those laymen was an inspiration from heaven.

This proposititon now, my friends, has made its way to the members of the Methodist church of Crystal Springs, Miss. You, too, have the opportunity to correct this serious blunder you have been committing through these many years; you, too, have an opportunity to get right with God; and if you will do your full duty towards this worthy cause, who knows but that this act of mercy, this act of duty, this act of justice, may be the means by which you may become worthy to inherit a crown in glory?

The great government of the United States has recently voted to compensate in a meager way the world war veterans for having offered their lives as a living sacrifice that universal democracy might prevail. The cause for which they offered their lives was a most noble one and the reward was most commendable; but, my friends, all this pertains to this life and this life only.

The battle-scarred veterans of the cross of Christ—they fought a thousand battles and won a thousand victories. They offered their lives as living sacrifices that the Kingdom may come on earth as it is in heaven.

My friends, I appeal to you in the name of humanity to forsake not these soldiers of the cross and their patient companions—mothers in Israel. I appeal to you to forsake them not in their darkest hour.

LOUISIANA COUNCIL OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

On Friday, Feb. 29, 1924, there met in the Y. W. C. A. building, in New Orleans, the official representatives of six denominations and a like number of representatives from the Louisiana Sunday School Association. The day was spent in deliberation, and the results of the meeting will be presented to the Louisiana Sunday School Association Convention, which meets in Lake Charles, April 23-25. By the adoption of the suggestive Constitutlou and Program of Work presented by this reorganization committee, the Convention will bring into existence the Louisiana Council of Religious Education, the accredited agency of the co-operating denominational bodies for the preparation and promotion of a co-operative interdenominational Program of Religious Education for Louisiana.

This report suggests a good many items that the committee think the evangelical denominations in Louisiana can do best, working together. In addition, it is the purpose of the Council to assist the denominations in carrying forward their own denominational program when requested to do so. The committee announce that their report will be available to the public after its adoption by the Convention.

RUSTON DISTRICT FEDERATION OF MEN'S BIBLE CLASSES.

A movement of more than ordinary signiflcance is that of the Federation of Men's Bible Classes of the Ruston (La.) District, which looks to the holding of four great gatherings each year. The first of these meetings is scheduled to be held at Ruston on the fifth Sunday in Jnne. The decision to launch a district-wide Bible class movement was reached at Homer a few weeks ago in the presence of more than a hundred men. A committtee was appointed to work out the details of the meeting, and the committee met in Arcadia last week and formulated final plans.

The united Bible classes of the district will meet for class session at 9:45 Sunday morning, June 29, with Dean Smith, of Centenary College, as teacher. At 11 a. m. the pastor at Ruston, Rev. N. E. Joyner, will deliver the quarterly sermon. A basket dinner will be spread, and the men will reassemble at 2 p. m. for the discussion of Bible class problems. Plans are being worked out that will assure an attendance of at least five hundred men.

The Ruston District extends from Wesley circuit, near Conshatta, on the southwest, to Spring Hill on the northwest, to Marion on the northeast, and to Winnfield circuit on the southeast. Included in this territory, touching ten parishes, are more than seventy churches. It is hoped that at least one automobile load of men from each church will attend the Ruston gathering. Places where large classes of men are now located, such as Homer, Minden, Haynesville, Arcadia, Winnfield, and Ruston, will send large delegations. At the present writing it appears that the goal of five hundred men present at the initial meeting will be easily reached.

FREE TITHING LITERATURE.

We hereby offer free, postage paid, to any minister or church worker who asks for the number needed, a sufficient quantity of the new pamphlet, "Winning Financial Freedom," to furnish one copy to every member of the official boards of his church and to the presidents and secretaries of both the Women's Home and Foreign Missionary Societies; also, a reasonable number for the more influential private members.

This offer will stand until July 1. Please give your denomination and mention the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

THE LAYMAN COMPANY,

When a man has settled affairs with God, he is free from immense hindrances and from every fear; when a man has come to terms with God there is no one he need fear in this world nor in that which is to come.—John Watson.

SARDIS DISTRICT NOTES.

Our faithful and popular presiding elder continues to itinerate with his usual degree of efficiency and enthusiasm. He reports that affairs throughout the Sardis District are in good condition, with progress and a spirit of optimism prevailing among the brethren on the several charges. Recently the "Elder" preached to a full house of eager hearers gathered in a church on the Longtown circuit. The following day he preached to another large congregation of people, at which place the second quarterly conference was held. A representative from each church on the charge was present, something that has not happened on the Longtown circuit during the past decade.

The Woman's Missionary Societies of the district are doing a notable work. They doubled the number of Auxiliaries in the district during the past year; making more points than any other district in the North Mississippi Conference.

The elder reports that he has sent to the preachers of the district 6,500 tracts and leaflets for distribution.

The district conference will convene in Como, May 20-22. Thursday, May 22, will be Laymen's Day. Mr. G. L. Morelock, General Secretary of the Laymen's Movement, will speak and lead a round table discussion with the laymen of the district. In the afternoon of the same day, there will be a love feast and a consecration service, in which a squadron from Clarksdale, recent converts of the Gipsy Smith meeting, will participate, to the delight and edification of the conference.

The second quarterly conference for the Arkabutla charge was recently held at Strayhorn. Brother Wendel reports that ground has been broken for the erection of a new church at Arkabutla which will cost $5,000.

• • •

Rev. W. M. Young, who is serving his second year at Batesville, reports everything in good condition. Salaries are paid to date. The Sunday school is growing in interest and numbers. The Junior Missionary Society was recently awarded the Conference pennant for their superior work. The Character Builders, a class of young people in the Sunday school, have furnished the guest room of the new parsonage at a cost of $60; $250 has been paid on Centenary pledges; $400 raised and subscribed for the new orphanage building.

Byhalia, on the Byhalia charge, Rev. H. M. Young, pastor, has paid in full their pledge of $300 by the Sunday school to the Centenary fund. The monthly contribution to the orphanage received on the first Sunday was $19.22. The attendance at Sunday school is fast outgrowing the capacity of their church.

Charleston, under the capable leadership of Rev. T. M. Bradley, is making history as well as progress. Since January, $1,000 has been raised on the church debt, and they are steadily working to make this a thing of the past. Salaries are paid in full to date; $300 has been raised for the orphanage building. Christian Education pledges and the Superannuate Endowment fund are being looked after. The Sunday school and Woman's Missionary Society are doing a great work. The Epworth League, in conjunction with the Ill. Y., has held eight devotional services in country churches and school houses. Large crowds attend these services, which are held on Sunday afternoons. Twenty-six new members have been received since Conference, 12 by certificate, 14 on profession of faith.

Como, Rev. A. C. McCorkle, pastor, was the first church in the State to pay in full the first year's quota to the Superannuate Endowment fund. The Sunday school is the largest in the history of the church. All finances are paid or pledged up to date. The Missionary Societies have won honors. Rev. S. A. Brown will preach the Easter sermon, at which time this loyal people will provide for the new orphanage building.

Coldwater is making preparations for the District Epworth League Institute, which will be held here April 18. Miss Glenn Moring, district secretary, and the very efficient president of our League, will preside. Salaries are paid in full to date. Rev. S. A. Brown visited our church recently, and our people gave him good assurance of their cooperation in the erection of the new orphanage building. We expect to remit our first year's quota for the Superannuate Endowment fund at an early date. Both of our Missionary Societies, the Woman's and the Juniors, are on the Honor Roll, and are doing an admirable work. The Juniors recently held their Belle H. Bennett memorial service, and a substantial collection was received. The woman's department will observe this occasion in May.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT NOTES.

Our district will make a splendid showing for the first year of the Superannuate Endowment effort. There is a united determination to secure at least the one-fifth minimum quota from every individual church in city, town, and country. First Church, Shreveport, has subscribed approximately $12,000, to be paid the present year, this being $5,000 in excess of its five years' quota. Noel Memorial paid $1,000 at Christmas, and thus secured the honor of being the first church in Southern Methodism to remit its annual quota. Mansfield church is paying its annual quota quarterly as a part of the regular budget. Elm Grove Church, Bayou La Chute charge, will report at the second quarterly conference, full amount in cash for five years. Alden Bridge, Plain Dealing charge, is raising the five years' quota in cash. Pelican Church and Blanchard Church have subscribed the five years' quota.

The following churches, and perhaps others that have not definitely reported, have subscribed or paid the full quota for one year: Bayou La Chute, Belcher, Gilliam, Grand Cane, Stonewall, Keithville, Greenwood, Flournoy, Bethany, Logansport, Keatchie, Trees City, Naborton, Provencal, Robeline, Marthaville, Mooringsport, and Vivian. All the quarterly conferences assumed their quotas on the first round.

The material development of the city of Shreveport is nothing short of phenomenal. The Chamber of Commerce reports, among many other items of interest, a population of 65,000, bank deposits of $50,000,000, or 16% of the deposits of the entire State, assessed property value of $85,000,000, ninety-five miles of paved streets, church property valuation of $2,860,000. In addition to the many residences and public buildings of various kinds recently erected, there are now under construction a $1,000,000 hotel, a $1,000,000 office building, a $1,000,000 high school, and a $500,000 Y. M. C. A. Methodism in Shreveport has a great responsibility to meet at this time.

A Sunday school annex to cost $3,500 has been begun in Cedar Grove and will be built without debt. A special program of ground-breaking was carried out on the afternoon of Easter Sunday, at which time a number took part, including Drs. Sexton, Goodrich, Holmes, the presiding elder, and Mr. W. A. McKennon, president of the local Church Extension Society. The pastor, Rev. H. L. Johns, is happy in the prospect.

The new Claiborne Church in Shreveport has completely outgrown its quarters and must build additional rooms. The pastor, Rev. W. F. Henderson, Jr., is having great success in the development of this congregation.

• • •

Rev. Don E. Dulaney is alert and active as pastor of the Greenwood charge, and made a splendid report at the recent quarterly conference.

The Lay Activities program is being successfully carried out in Mansfield. Mr. W. J. Sharp is the effective lay leader. Naborton and South Mansfield are being supplied by laymen when the pastor is absent. These two churches have been recently placed under the care of Rev. T. J. Holladay, on the Pelican charge.

The old Beulah Church, on Pleasant Hill charge, was accidentally burned while being used as a voting precinct on the State primary election day. The police jury has been petitioned to rebuild the house.

• • •

A special report will be sent as to the large number of accessions to the Shreveport churches as the result of the Billy Sunday campaign and other special efforts.

R. H. WYNN, P. E.

BROTHER SHAW'S CRITICISM OF THE CRITICS.

By Rev. John W. Boswell, D.D.

In the Advocate of April 3, Brother A. M. Shaw, of Oakdale, La., utters several criticisms of men who stand for the old faith against the teachings and attacks of the half-way infidels of the modern school. He does not tell us who the offending critics are nor where their criticisms may be found. Possibly his purpose was to stop "the increase of their influence," notwithstanding he seems to think that one of the benefits of "malignant" criticism is to enlarge the influence of the person criticised.

I do not pretend to "see as deep into a rock as the man who pecks at it," but I can almost be persuaded that Brother Shaw's article was written not so much for the purpose of criticising and condemning the men who write against the materialism and rationalism now threatening the church, as to apologize for those who fail to accept the vital and fundamental teachings of the gospel, and to defend those whom he characterizes as "the devout scholars and thinkers who are freeing the modern democracy of Christian thought from the tyranny of dogma entailed from the Middle Ages." This is not Brother Shaw's first attempt at such work. He wrote a book in which appears an apology for men who are mentally or otherwise unable to accept the mysterious doctrines of grace, such as the miraculous conception and virgin birth of our Lord, contending that, though the facts are as stated by St. Luke, faith in the virgin birth is not essential. A man may believe it or not. If his life is otherwise right, he is on a safe moral basis. That is liberal. Skeptics could not expect Christians to be more so. Upon such a hypothesis a man may reject any one or all of the doctrines of the gospel and be safe if his life is otherwise right. It is hard to conceive of a rottener plank in a man's religious platform.

I know little or nothing about "dogma entailed from the Middle Ages," but I learned in early life that through all the persecutions of Christianity the Word of God was providentially, if not miraculously, preserved, and that it has been handed down to us in its purity as "first delivered to the saints." It is in this Book we place our faith, from it we draw our inspiration and derive all the information we have of God and his Son, and the plan of salvation. We do not hark back to the Middle Ages for an interpretation of its meaning. We interpret it for ourselves, and those of us who see alike unite ourselves in a brotherhood for the purpose of teaching it and saving our fellow-men. Methodism is such a brotherhood. It is composed of a vast multitude of men and women, well organized, with rules and regulations for the common good, which every member is supposed to keep. Our preachers are not only supposed to obey, but they bind themselves to do so. Especially do they vow to keep the faith, and to "banish and drive away all erroneous and strange doctrines contrary to God's Word." When a preacher is unable, or cannot for any reason obey that vow, he is at liberty to retire and he absolved. But if, instead of doing that, he undertakes to short-line the gospel, and condemns his brethren for repudiating and criticising gainsayers and skeptics such as the men now trying to impose on the world "another gospel which is not another," he is gone from original Methodism.

Democracy is a word to conjure with—a fine word and a fine thing in its place; but what Brother Shaw means by "freeing the modern democracy of Christian thought from the tyranny of dogma" is by no means clear to me. What bothers me is the expression, "modern democracy of Christian thought." I do not know what that means. But I am going to take it for granted that he means to bid Godspeed to the "devout men and thinkers" who are endeavoring to free Christendom from creeds and catechisms, and bring the whole body into the light and liberty of modern thought, coming into which, men will be no longer under limitations, but free to think and believe what they please. They will interpret the Scriptures without let or hindrance, and worship God according to the dictates of their own consciences.

There was a time when men were not free to believe and express opinions contrary to the established religion. That was under "the tyranny of dogma." But no body of Protestants in this age is under that sort of tyranny entailed from any source, ancient or modern. I admit the evils of a State church in which conformity is enforced by law, but we have no State church among us, nor any church upheld by State authority; and while I do not believe there is any great amount of democracy in Christianity, I am free to say that we are as fully at liberty under the gospel to exercise the right of choice as it is possible for democracy to make us. God's church is militant, and Methodism in its organization and plans is militant, but there is no way to compel a man to be a Methodist or to join any church of any name. In this, men are free, and I can think of nothing more out of place than an accredited Methodist preacher expressing satisfaction at the effort of modernists to free the church from the so-called "tyranny of dogma"—that is, to free the church from something to which it is not in bondage.

It is true that churches with any sort of discipline try to keep their members in accord with their doctrines and usages. There is every reason why they should. But if a member walks disorderly and will not be reproved, or imperils the peace and success of the church by sowing discord, or preaching heresy, or undertakes to create a schism, no principle of democracy is violated if the evil is cured by cutting off the offender. The church is bound to do it or prove faithless to its trust. It is commanded. St. Paul, speaking to Timothy concerning men who preached doctrines contrary to the traditions as handed down by the apostles, said: "If any man teach otherwise, and consent not to wholesome words, even the words of our Lord Jesus Christ, and to the doctrine which is according to godliness, he is proved knowing nothing, but doting about questions and strifes of words whereof cometh envy, strife, railings, evil surmisings, perverse disputings of men of corrupt minds destitute of the truth, * * * from such withdraw thyself." To Titus the apostle said: "A man that is a heretic, after the first and second admonition, reject, knowing that he is subverted, and sinneth." A heretic has no place in the Christian church.

"All Scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine." Or, as translated by Dr. Adam Clarke, "Every writing divinely inspired is profitable for doctrine," etc. St. Paul had in mind the Old Testament, as at the time he wrote this to Timothy it contained the only inspired writing in existence. To-day we include the New Testament, which, together with the Old Testament, makes up the Canon of Scripture. The Scriptures are divinely inspired, and are the only source of information concerning the essential doctrines of the gospel. From them we learn that Jesus is the only begotten Son of God, conceived of the Holy Ghost and born of the Virgin Mary; that he is divine and equal to the Father; that he is the mediator between God and man, and that by his death he made it possible for all men to be saved from sin. Acceptance of these doctrines, one and all, is necessary to salvation. We eliminate either one of them from the plan of our salvation at our peril.

To any one brought up to believe these doctrines, and to accept them as the hope of eternal life, there is peace and a sense of security. To surrender faith in any of these facts necessarily weakens his hold on God. What his chances are when he surrenders all and makes our religion wholly materialistic, we leave the Holy Scriptures to determine.

A FOLDING ORGAN NEEDED IN THE FRENCH MISSION.

Dear Brother Carley: Since taking up the work of Evangeline Mission, I have been confronted with the urgent need of securing a folding organ for use in missionary work among our French people who have extended me the invitation to hold services for them in schoolhouses in their communities. In this kind of work I have found that the most effective way to reach the audience and ultimately win them for Christ, is to have plenty of music, especially the singing of French hymns, which is their own language and which they would gladly walk miles to hear sung. And when I go to hold services for these good people, who make true and staunch Christians when converted, it is my purpose to be prepared to give them the best possible service in the way of good music, so that their hearts may be ready for the reception of the Gospel messages. But in order to do this, I need a folding organ to take along with me in the faithful Ford and thereby be prepared to hold religious services anywhere I may have an invitation to come. I have already three schoolhouses in which I am welcome to come and hold services at any time.

Therefore, if this notice should come to the attention of some of our brethren, both clerical and lay, who may be in a position to help in securing the small sum of money needed to get a folding organ for this precious work, I desire most ardently that they will communicate with me at once and let me know what they are able to do to help me in that respect. I feel sure that some one whom God has blessed abundantly with material and spiritual wealth will be glad to extend a hand of Christian fellowship in helping to provide me with this necessary instrument, so that the work of God's kingdom in this part of the field will move on unhandicapped to success and victory in the name of our Lord Jesus, who died for us that all people everywhere may have life more abundantly. With eager anticipation, I shall wait to hear from some of the brethren who read this notice and call for help. Will you help me in this work?

LAKE CHARLES DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The fifty-fifth session of the district conference of the Lake Charles District, held at Leesville, La., on April 15, 16 and 17, 1924, will long be remembered by those attending from many experiences of inspiration, helpfulness, and good fellowship.

Rev. J. B. Williams, the presiding elder, was at his best. While he had an easy and happy time and so expressed himself, the brethren also resolved that he was at all times helpful and brotherly, and they enjoyed his presidency at this conference.

All the preachers were present but two, who were unavoidably detained. The reports of the preachers had an optimistic tone throughout, and progress along all lines was the result.

The connectional interests were represented, as follows: The Centenary, by Dr. O. S. Welch, Secretary; District Woman's Missionary Society, by the retiring secretary, Mrs. J. W. Wynn, and the incoming secretary, Mrs. J. M. McDonald; the Orphanage, Education, and Memorial Home for Young Women at New Orleans, by Rev. Briscoe Carter. Prof. Bratton, president of Mansfield College, and Dean R. E. Smith, of Centenary College, represented their schools.

One young man was licensed to preach, Harold Thomas Young, son of Rev. Henry T. Young, our pastor at De Ridder.

Sulphur was selected over Lake Arthur and Kurthwood as the place for holding the 1925 conference.

The lay delegates elected to the Annual Conference were: G. R. Ferguson, A. M. Mayo, W. H. Moore, Mrs. R. J. Gould, Rob't J. O'Neal, Mrs. W. M. Buchanan, W. L. Doss, Sr., and Jos. W. Wynn. The alternates were: Mrs. J. W. Wynn, S. H. Porter, S. C. Carroll, and J. M. Mashburn.

The Sunday school interests were looked after with a fine program by Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Conference Superintendent, who was present.

The district officers elected for the ensuing year were: A. M. Mayo, Secretary; Mrs. A. Early, Elementary Superintendent; Mrs. H. H. Hebert, Intermediate-Senior Superintendent; Mrs. B. M. Lambert, Young People's Superintendent; J. M. Mashburn, Adult Superintendent; Mrs. C. E. Roberts, Teacher Training Superintendent; Mrs. J. T. Adams, Missionary Superintendent.

The laymen had a very helpful session under the leadership of Rob't J. O'Neal, Esq., of De Ridder, who was re-elected District Lay Leader, with Jos. W. Wynn, of Rayne, and J. Ed Eaves, of Lake Charles, as associates.

The report of the Committee on Quarterly Conference Records showed that most of the records presented were kept in fine shape, the gravest criticism being that the reports of the trustees to the fourth quarterly conference were not recorded.

The names of eight local preachers were called and their characters passed, and the licenses renewed of two licentiates.

The preaching at the conference was of a high type and well received, being done by Rev. A. Early, Rev. O. S. Welch, and Rev. J. Ivy Hofpauir. A. M. MAYO, Secretary.

FUNERAL OF MRS. KATE CAVIN FLOWERS.

Mrs. Kate Cavin Flowers, widow of Rev. Ephraim A. Flowers, who at the time of his death, April 28, 1901, was a member of the Mississippi Annual Conference, died at 3 a.m., Sunday, April 13, 1924, at the home of her brother, C. Wiley Cavin, Waterproof, La., with whom she had made her home during the last three years, and was buried in the cemetery near Darrington, Wilkinson County, Miss., at 3:30 p.m., April 14, from the home of her niece, Mrs. B. G. Brown, the writer of these lines officiating.

During most of her married life of several years, her husband was superannuate in the ministry; she was ever constant and faithful to him, and loyal to the gospel cause. The large crowd brought together at her funeral attested her standing, and the place she held in the hearts of others.

During many years, both before her marriage and during her widowhood, she lived alone in her own home near Darrington; and in life and in death trusted her case to the Father above.

She had no children, but is survived by two brothers, Tom Cavin, of Darrington, Miss., and C. Wiley Cavin, of Waterproof, La., and by a large group of nephews, nieces, grandnephews and grandnieces. Many of these were present at the funeral, some having traveled several hundred miles by train and automobile.

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

"A WINNER NEVERE QUITS AND A QUITTER NEVER WINS."

What about the cash received on Subscription Day? It should be sent to the Board of Finance, Security Building, St. Louis, Mo., without delay.

It should be clearly understood that all payments on quotas in the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment are to be made direct to the Board of Finance, St. Louis. If these payments are sent in any other direction, it will be contrary to the Special Effort plan and cause endless confusion.

* * *

Pastors should make it very plain to the Treasurers of their Special Effort Committees that they are to use the book of Treasurer's Remittance Forms when sending payments on quotas to the Board of Finance, St. Louis. This book of Remittance Forms was sent to every pastor in the package containing the subscription envelopes. If any pastor did not receive this book, he should notify the Board at once so that another book can be sent for use in his charge.

Many charges are now sending to the Board the cash collected on Subscription Day, and receipts are being sent promptly for these remittances. But hundreds of charges have failed so far to send the cash, and this means lost motion. Please remember that endowment money means nothing for the support of the "Forgotten Man" until it is invested. If throughout the whole church subscribers have already paid in cash $500,000 to Treasurers of Special Effort Committees, that sum should be sent immediately to the Board of Finance, St. Louis, so that it can be invested without delay. Such a sum will yield $30,000 annually in income for the support of the claimants, provided it is invested. But if this sum is held in the local banks of the charges and not sent to the Board, it serves to help the banks instead of the "Forgotten Man."

If every Treasurer of a Special Effort Committee will bear in mind that cash in his hands means no cash in the hands of the "Forgotten Man," I think he will not be comfortable until he gets the cash out of his hands and into the keeping of the Board of Finance, for the benefit of the "Forgotten Man."

A few Treasurers of Special Effort Committees have already made several remittances to the Board in payments on quotas. They are feeling the thrill of seeing their quotas reduced by these payments, and they enjoy the thought that the support of the superannuates is increased by them.

A Lazy Dollar Soliloquy: "I am a dollar. Some one gave me to the Treasurer of Do-It-Now-Charge to help meet its quota for Superannuate Endowment. The Treasurer, Mr. Wait-a-While, put me in the bank of What's-Your-Hurry. I am having an easy time of it—nothing to do but rest and be counted once a day. Gee, but it is better here than it was when I belonged to the man who gave me to the Treasurer, for then I had to work with all my strength every day. Now I am on a vacation. They tell me I am bound for St. Louis to work in an endowment business. Man, I know what that means, for I have done it before! Excuse me from workin' night and day throughout the year with never a vacation. I am awfully glad Mr. Wait-a-While is taking a lot of time before sending me on my way. I have heard about that Board of Finance in St. Louis, and they tell me that they are hard taskmasters for dollars. They make them work to beat the band to earn income to support a lot of old and broken-down preachers. Oh well, I should worry, I don't have to go until Mr. Wait-a-While decides to send me on, and that may be a long, long time. But I do feel sorry for the man who gave me to Mr. Wait-a-While, and who thinks I am already busy at my task working for the 'Forgotten Man.'"

HEARTENING MESSAGES FROM WIDE-AWAKE PEOPLE.

Rev. R. M. White, pastor of Farmville Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Farmville, Va., writes that on a quota of $2,860 his charge has raised in cash and subscriptions $5,525.50.

Mrs. J. A. Wilder, member of First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Brownsville, Tenn., has contributed $1,000 on the annuity plan for Superannuate Endowment. This splendid contribution through the co-operation of Rev. Earl G. Hamlett.

Woodlawn charge, Los Angeles District, Pacific Conference, is a small mission of 85 members, all of whom are wage-earners. Minimum quota, $860; assumed quota, $1,000. The pastor, Rev. W. L. Whisnant, writes that there has been secured in cash and subscriptions $1,720.

Central Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Petaluma, Calif., Rev. Charles P. Martin, pastor, had an assumed quota of $1,030, but the pastor writes that he has secured in cash and subscriptions $1,385. California is making a fine record in the Special Effort.

Rev. Joseph Lee, pastor of Goldthwaite station charge, Goldthwaite, Tex., wires that they have raised in cash the full amount of their first year's quota for Superannuate Endowment. Come on, Texas!

The unusual long and hard winter has kept the roads in such condition that many country charges have had to postpone the Special Effort for a few weeks. Some of these days snow and ice and slush and mud will disappear. The sun will shine again, the birds will sing, and the children will pick spring flowers. Yes, the time is coming very close now when the boys who ride the circuits will have a chance to do their duty by the "Forgotten Man." Men of the circuits, I appeal to you not to miss your chance. Surely you will not let slip away from you your opportunity for doing your part in this great movement. These are test days, and we are going to win or lose by the way you faithful men stick to the task. Ours is a circuit church to a considerable extent, and the outcome of the Special Effort will be largely determined by circuit pastors. Hang to it, boys!

ONE-FIFTH OR MORE OF TOTAL QUOTA PAID.

The following charges have remitted to the Board of Finance enough to pay one-fifth or more of their total quotas:

Sarasota Mission, Tampa District, Florida Conference, Rev. W. B. Trosca, pastor: Total quota, $250; amount remitted, $62.75.

Decatur charge, North Georgia, North Atlanta, Rev. G. M. Eakes, pastor: Total quota, $3,975; amount remitted, $1,738.15.

Amory charge, North Mississippi, Aberdeen, Rev. W. R. Lott, pastor: Total quota, $2,400; amount remitted, $480.

Tupelo charge, North Mississippi, Aberdeen, Rev. C. C. Alexander, pastor: Total quota, $3,500; amount remitted, $1,300.

Apopka charge, Florida, Orlando, Rev. J. W. Jackson, pastor: Total quota, $568; amount remitted, $114.

Collierville charge, Memphis, Memphis, Rev. Yates Moore, pastor: Total quota, $2,000; amount remitted, $400.

Blue Springs charge, Southwest Missouri, Kansas City, Rev. W. S. Butts, pastor: Total quota, $1,320; amount remitted, $300.

Warsaw charge, Southwest Missouri, Sedalia, Rev. John S. Hughes, pastor: Total quota, $1,320; amount remitted, $264.

Logtown charge, Mississippi, Seashore, Rev. T. H. King, pastor: Total quota, $2,000; amount remitted, $1,713.75.

Shelbyville charge, Kentucky, Shelbyville, Rev. Walter V. Cropper, pastor: Total quota, $3,000; amount remitted, $813.37.

Waynesboro charge, South Georgia, Savannah, Rev. J. B. Johnstone, pastor: Total quota, $3,300; amount remitted, $800.

Belmont charge, Tennessee, Nashville, Rev. W. S. Taylor, pastor: Total quota, $5,360; amount remitted, $1,072.

Weimar charge, West Texas, Austin, Rev. J. C. Wilson, pastor: Total quota, $1,320; amount remitted, $265.

Smithfield charge, North Carolina, Raleigh, Rev. D. H. Tuttle, pastor: Total quota, $3,000; amount remitted, $600.

Jenkins Memorial charge, North Carolina, Raleigh, Rev. W. H. Brown, pastor: Total quota, $1,175; amount remitted, $332.65.

York charge, Alabama, Greensboro, Rev. Samuel T. Trotter, pastor: Total quota, $1,670; amount remitted, $384.

Cocoa charge, Florida, Palatka, Rev. P. A. Fletcher, pastor: Total quota, $2,070; amount remitted, $432.41.

Madison charge, Tennessee, Clarkesville, Rev. W. T. Haggard, pastor: Total quota, $6,000; amount remitted, $2,010.65.

KEEP THE DOLLARS ROLLING, BOYS!

Lest the Treasurers of the Special Effort Committees might forget, they are reminded again to send the cash received from payments on quotas to the Board of Finance, Security Building, St. Louis, Mo. Please do not let these dollars stand still. Send them to the Board as straight and quickly as possible. The Board will place them in good dinvestments, from which interest will come back to the Board, to be sent to the "Forgotten Man" for his support. This is the program, let us work it.

The Home Circle

WHY I WAS KEPT IN.

To-day at school I laughed out loud
At Tommie Green when he
Screwed up and made that awful face,
And teacher didn't see.

But teacher heard me when I laughed,
And asked the reason why.
What child would be a tattletale?
I'm sure it isn't I.

And so, I had to be kept in,
While all the rest went home.
That hour seemed just like a year
When I stayed there alone.

But Tommie Green felt sorry, and
The way I know he did—
I found two apples after school
That in my desk he hid.

A NEW GAME.

Percy Saunders had come up to Perryville to spend a week. He had been there just twelve hours, having come the night before, and he had already been classified and pigeon-holed by the Goodrich twins, his country cousins, whom he was visiting. He couldn't climb a tree; he couldn't swim; he threw a ball like a girl; the delights of using a sling were unknown to him; and—he had to go to bed at half-past seven! As he was a year older than the twins, who were eight, this last was too much.

After breakfast the three boys went out to the barn, where the twins ran up ladders and walked the narrow crossbeams thirty feet above the ground as unconcernedly as if they were on the ground.

Percy caught his breath. "O, I wish I could do that! I'd love to do all those things, but mamma won't let me because it makes me dizzy."

"O, it's easy. See me fly." And Albert took a flying leap of fifteen feet into the hay, followed by his brother.

Then they compared muscles, and found that Percy's were "awfully flabby." Their own were like iron. But showing off soon palled on all three of the boys, and they began to wonder what they could play.

"I made up a game the other day," said Percy in the slow, sober tones that had struck the twins as so curious. They chattered as fast and as shrilly as monkeys themselves in spite of their mother's hourly protests.

"Did you?" said Albert.

"Out of your own head?" said Herbert.

"O, it's easy. I often make 'em up," said Percy, delighted to have made an impression on these athletic boys, who could do so many things which he could not, although he was so much older.

"Tell us how you play it," said the twins together, eager for some novelty.

"Well, it's a kind of tag. I'll be it, and I'll start to run after you just the same as I would in tag." As he spoke, the twins, who had been lying in the barn, jumped to their feet and ran out of the barn. "Hold on," said Percy. "I must tell you something about it first. As I run after you I holler out a letter of the alphabet, like C, and then if you think of an animal whose name begins with C, and shout it, I can't tag you; but if you don't, then I tag you and you're it and must run after the others and holler out a letter. It must be some animal; or, if you choose, you can call out flowers. But it must be either animals or flowers or countries or fruits; you must not mix 'em up in the same game. Now start, and I'll follow."

"I hope he says the same letter again, because I've got a fine animal all ready," said Herbert to Albert.

The boys had not run fifty feet before they found that, whatever else Percy could not do, he certainly could run. He was almost upon Herbert before he shouted, and then he yelled "C" as before.

Herbert waited until Percy reached out his hand to tag, and then he shouted "Seal!"

"Tag!" said Percy, with a burst of laughter.

"That's not fair," said Herbert. "I said 'seal' before you touched me."

"But seal doesn't begin with a C; it begins with an S," said Percy soberly.

"How about sealing? Isn't that c-e-i-l-i-n-g?"

"The plaster one is, but hunting the animal isn't," said Percy, with authority.

He's right, Bert," said Al, who had run up. "You're it."

"Very well," said Bert. "Ready."

And the two fled before him. He pursued Percy, who ran fleetly out into the road. After a long chase, Percy stubbed his toe, and Herbert gained enough on him to call out "G."

"Gnu," yelled Percy. But with a derisive laugh, Herbert closed on him and tagged him.

"I didn't say "N"; I said "G."

"And I said gnu—g-n-u," said Percy, simply.

"Say, a fellow needn't ever get caught if he spells that way," said Bert angrily. "G-p-o-n-y—pony. That's easy." But Al came up and declared that Percy was right.

They played the game for over an hour. Sometimes even Percy did not think fast enough to avoid being it, and after a while they gave variety to the game by changing to flowers; and there they rather got the best of Percy, who was not familiar with as many varieties as the country boys were. Bert made many laughable mistakes in spelling, and Al gave "phlox" as an F flower.

At last when they grew tired of the sport they all went up in the hayloft together. The twins helped Percy up the ladder. They tumbled into the hay.

"You're all right," said Al. "You can run fine, and that's a splendid game."

"And you can spell fine," said Bert.

"I'd rather be able to climb a tree like you fellows than spell any word I ever saw," said Percy modestly.

"Come on out then, and we'll teach you," said the twins in unison.—St. Nicholas.

"IT'S ME, JESUS."

At a religious meeting in the south of London, a timid little girl desired the prayers of Christians for her that she might be saved; so she said to the gentleman conducting the meeting: "Will you pray for me in the meeting, please? But do not mention my name."

In the meeting that followed, when every head was bowed in silent prayer, this gentleman prayed for a little girl who wanted to come to Jesus, and he said: "O Lord, there is a little girl who does not want her name known, but thou dost know her; save her soul, Lord."

There was perfect silence for an instant, then away in the back of the meeting a little voice said: "Please, it's me, Jesus, it's me!"

She did not want any doubt or uncertainty. She wanted to be saved, and she was not ashamed to rise in that meeting, little girl as she was, and say: "It's me, Jesus, it's me."

Are we as willing to confess our needs, and make our wants and wishes known?—Selected.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable tu the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Professor C. A. Bowen, of Millsaps College, delivered the commencement address for the Leake County Agricultural High School, Carthage, Miss., on Friday, April 18.

Brother J. W. Lipscomb of Baton Rouge, La., says: "I have been reading the Advocate ever since I was a boy. I am now 83 years young." Blessings upon him.

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Greenville, Miss., sent out an attractive post card announcement of the Easter service last Sunday.

Dr. J. Marvin Culbreth, of Fayette, Mo., has been called to the directorship of the Department of Religious Education of our General Board of Education. He will assume the duties of his office at an early date.

We learn from the Southern Reporter, Sardis, Miss., that the revival services at the Methodist church, conducted by Rev. Jas. M. Smith, attracted large congregations and that the community was greatly blessed by the meeting.

Central Methodist Church, Columbus, Miss., Rev. Del Longgrear, pastor, held a short service every morning at 6 o'clock during the week preceding Easter Sunday. On Friday morning, the sacrament of the Lord's Supper was administered.

Miss Ethel Phillips, of Liverpool, La., writes: "The Advocate has been coming regularly for fifty years to my home, my father being a subscriber 26 years before his death, which occurred 24 years ago. I want it to continue coming."

Dr. Theodore Copeland is holding a successful revival meeting at Frederick, Okla. On a recent evening, a special coach was chartered to carry people from Altus, a neighboring town, to the meeting.

Mr. Thos. Kane, president and manager of the Layman Company, the organization which has done so much to promote tithing in the churches, writes, "I have never witnessed as great and increasing interest in tithing as now prevails in practically all denominations."

Rev. I. T. Cameron, of the Institutional Church, Kansas City, Mo., will be the preacher at a series of meetings at the St. Mark's Methodist Church, this city, beginning on April 22 and continuing through May 3. Services will be conducted in two languages—English and Italian.

Rev. H. N. Brown, presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, Louisiana Conference, requests us to state that Dr. Rex Singletary has resigned the office of lay leader for the district, and that Rev. L. A. Sims has been appointed to serve until the meeting of the district conference.

We learn with sorrow of the death of Mrs. Josephus Tarver, of Hawkinsville, Ga., on April 17, after a long illness. She was the mother of Mrs. E. G. Mohler, wife of our pastor at Booneville, Miss. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family and friends.

The following inspiring telegram was received on Monday from Mr. W. E. Upchurch, Ruston, La.: "Easter unusual day for Ruston. Large crowds, great sermon by Rev. R. W. Tucker on Immortality. Offering for Orphanage, $1500." It was a great day indeed.

Rev. and Mrs. W. G. Forsyth, of Sumrall, Miss., announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Nannie Mae, to Mr. William A. Montgomery, of Leeds, Ala., the marriage to take place at Sumrall early in May. The Advocate extends all good wishes in advance of the happy event.

From the "Big Brother," Greenville, Miss.: "Every Big Brother, as well as every member of our church, sympathizes deeply with Mrs. E. H. Cason over the death of her father. Mr. Perkins a few years ago was a faithful and devoted member of our church, and numbered his friends in Greenville by the score." The Advocate extends sincere sympathy.

Dr. Orison Swett Marden, editor of Success, and author of many inspiring books on self-help, died early in March in Los Angeles, Calif. His last words are reported to have been: "Death is not the end, for in the miracle of resurrection life has triumphed over death. At this Easter season, I extend my greetings. May it be your resurrection and mine."

Press dispatches from Jackson, Miss., announce that Dr. D. M. Key, vice president of Millsaps College, was elected president of the college at the meeting of the Board of Trustees on Tuesday of last week. Dr. Key has served as acting president during the past year, and his administration has been eminently satisfactory and successful.

Rev. Walt Holcomb, general evangelist, who has been holding revival services in San Diego and Hollywood, Calif., met with a serious accident recently when the automobile in which he was riding was struck by a truck. He has been in the California Lutheran Hospital for two weeks, but is recovering as rapidly as could be expected. He will return to his home in Cartersville, Ga., as soon as he is able to travel.

Rev. E. L. Cargill, of Boyce, La., gives us the sad news of the death of Brother J. C. Cudd, father of Rev. H. Wade Cudd, of the Louisiana Conference, on April 11. Brother Cudd was a long-time member of the Methodist Church, faithful in all the relationships of life. He was buried in the Hemphill cemetery on Saturday, April 12. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones and friends.

Mr. K. A. Bachman, of Winona, Miss., writes to the Advocate to suggest that the presiding elders of the two Mississippi Conferences and the Methodist pastors of Jackson, Miss., call a meeting at Jackson to consider the matter of inviting the next General Conference to meet at that place. The Committee on Arrangements for the General Conference, of which Dr. S. H. C. Burgin is chairman, will meet in May.

The Sunday school attendance in the Methodist churches of New Orleans on Easter Sunday was 2002. As a result of the special services held in the churches preceding Easter Sunday, approximately 275 new members were added. Since the Annual Conference, about 425 members have been received, half of that number being on profession of faith. So far as reports have been received, the offering for the Orphanage on Easter amounted to more than $1,000.

Rev. W. Fred Long, general superintendent of the Mississippi Sunday School Association, requests us to announce that the forty-seventh annual convention will be held at Winona, Miss., April 28-30. Forty speakers are on the program, and every phase of Sunday school work will be covered. Winona offers free entertainment to those who notify Mr. Walker Ward, chairman of the Winona committee, of their intention to attend.

The Wesley Bible Class of Como, Miss., held an inspirational and social meeting recently, at which the guest of honor and principal speaker was Mr. J. R. Hyde, of Memphis, founder and teacher of the great Character Builders' Class of that city, which has an enrollment of 1500 members, with an annual budget of $26,000. Rev. A. C. McCorkle, pastor at Como, conducted the devotional exercises, and special music was rendered by local talent. The occasion was a very delightful and profitable one.

Dr. John S. Chadwick, editor of the Southern Methodist Handbook, reports that the volume has had a larger sale this year than for several years past. It now appears probable that a second edition will be necessary. This is a good book for every Methodist to possess. It can be had for fifty cents a copy, or $4.50 a dozen, of the Ambrose Printing Co., Nashville, Tenn. Any information concerning special rates in large quantities, etc., can be had of Dr. John S. Chadwick, Roanoke, Alabama.

The revival at Millsaps College, which continued one week, came to a close on April 17. Dr. R. H. Bennett, Secretary of Ministerial Supply and Training in our church, conducted the services. The standard of his preaching was exceptionally high, and the students esteemed it a genuine privilege to hear him from day to day. The attendance at the services was the largest in the history of revivals at the college, so it was generally stated. At the close of the services, the student body with real spontaneity expressed their commitment to a closer walk with God, and there is a fine atmosphere of spiritual life on the campus.

The following telegram was received from Rev. H. L. Johns, pastor of the Cedar Grove Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., on Monday of this week: "Shreveport Methodist churches received 752 members since Annual Conference. Registered Sunday school attendance, Easter Sunday, 4,150. Members received as follows: First Church, 315; Noel Memorial, 179; Texas Avenue, 100; Mangum Memorial, 90; Claiborne, 28; Cedar Grove, 29; Bossier City, 11. Sunday school attendance Easter Sunday: First Church, 2,336; Noel Memorial, 669; Texas Avenue, 265; Mangum Memorial, 325; Claiborne, 125; Cedar Grove, 200; Bossier City, 200." Great for Shreveport Methodism!

Easter Sunday was a great day for the First Methodist Church, Gulfport, Miss. There was a sunrise prayer meeting and communion service, at which about 100 persons were present; the Sunday school attendance was 1,193; at 11 o'clock, Bishop William N. Ainsworth preached a great sermon to what was probably the largest congregation ever assembled in the church; the long-standing church debt was entirely wiped out, more than $4,000 in cash being raised; 83 members were received into the church; in the afternoon, the Gulfport Flying Squadron held a great service, and in the evening the choir rendered a special Easter song service. Rev. W. J. Ferguson is the pastor of this great church.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

A delightful session of the Shreveport District Conference, said to be its best in many years, was held in Logansport, La., April 8-9, Dr. R. H. Wynn, presiding elder. A splendid attendance of lay delegates and pastors, and an interesting presentation of the many phases of our Methodist work, coupled with the abundant hospitality of the Logansport people, combined to make this district conference a success.

The opening sermon of the conference was preached by Brother B. T. Crews, a beloved superannuate, who stirred the hearts of his hearers with a great message on Christ in the Garden of Gethsamene.

The cause of the Superannuate Endowment was featured on both days of the conference. A number of churches reported having raised funds for the cause, Noel Memorial being the first church in the entire connection to raise its first year's quota in full, and Shreveport, First Church, reporting $12,000 raised. On the second day of the conference, after a sermon on the Superannuate Cause by W. W. Holmes, members of the conference came forward and gave their hands to the three superannuates present—W. F. Henderson, Sr., B. T. Crews, and S. J. Davies—as a token of love and a pledge of fidelity to the Superannuate Fund.

Mrs. J. M. Collins, district secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society, spoke of the women's auxiliary in the district and announced the district meeting for Grand Cane, May 9. Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Conference Sunday School superintendent, urged a full attendance at a district-wide Sunday school meeting at Greenwood, Tuesday, May 30. The Louisiana Methodist Orphanage was represented by Rev. N. E. Joyner. Dr. O. S. Welch, of the Alabama Conference, delivered an inspiring missionary address, representing the Centenary.

The cause of Christian education was ably represented by the forces of Centenary and Mansfield Colleges. Dr. George S. Sexton spoke of the great contribution of Centenary College to the church, State and South during 100 years of history, and told of plans for a Centenary Centennial in 1925, at which time a thank offering of a million dollars to complete the college endowment and equipment would be asked. Dean R. E. Smith told of the present work of the college and faculty. Dr. W. M. Bratton, president of Mansfield Female College, spoke of the place of this important school as related to the field of Christian education, and of his plans to have 240 girls in the college next session, and that $100,000 had been raised this year, largely in De Soto Parish, for the college.

The following lay delegates were elected to the Annual Conference: J. F. Russ, A. Hoffpauir, Mrs. N. L. Hudson, W. L. Byers, W. A. McKennon, W. M. Bratton, E. L. Joyner and W. J. Sharp; R. R. Perkins and A. J. Scott, alternates. R. J. Russel was elected a steward of the district parsonage property. J. F. Russ was elected district lay leader, with W. J. Sharp and Dr. H. B. Wren as associate district lay leaders.

The Lay Activities work was discussed by S. O. Williams, district lay leader, W. F. Roberts, and W. J. Sharp. T. L. Edwards, lay leader of the Alexandria District, representing Conference Lay Leader T. W. Holloman, was present and made an address. Twenty-seven subscriptions to "The Methodist Layman," the publication of the Lay Activities Board, were received.

A resolution expressing appreciation of the leadership and labors of Dr. R. H. Wynn, presiding elder, and Mrs. Wynn, during the past four years, presented by Dr. Sexton, was unanimously passed by rising vote.

H. L. JOHNS, Secretary.

SAFETY SIGNNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

"What is the chief end of man?" "To serve God and to enjoy him forever," are the question and the answer in the old catechism. The religion of this present time is rather manward than Godward. Service has largely supplanted worship. In doing works of benevolence, charity and beneficence too often God is forgotten or ignored. The divine is obscured by the human. Great plans are projected, great buildings erected, great sums of money are raised and invested, and too often material and physical welfare is substituted for spiritual values.

Now all these things should be done, but the souls of men starve without God. The bread of eternal life is evermore greater in value than the loaf of wheat. "Prayer and provender hinder no man's journey;" but the prayer and the things belonging to prayer are so often neglected for some fancied material advantage. Vital religion means that the soul is alive to the touch of the spirit and really lives the greater life. Nothing else can supplant this—all other is but sounding brass and tinkling cymbal. Read I Corinthians, thirteenth chapter, and substitute "religion" in its modern meaning for the Pauline term "charity" or "love," and you will have a new estimate of the divine life. Mountains removed, and martyr fires, angelic eloquence and ministry to the poor, are among the lesser values. Oh friend, when you do good, do it for the blessed Christ's sake, in his name, for the race because he died to redeem it, and bring it back to the Father. Then, and only then, shall your reward come. This makes life worth living, because its incentives are wrought of the stuff that made martyrs and heroes, great in humility, sublime in lowliness, having the true vision of God, and in some measure at least his estimate of eternal values. Herein lies the glory of life and the end or purpose of man.

History tells that Edward, the Black Prince, took the motto from the helmet of the Duke of Brunswick, slain in battle, and appropriated it to himself. "Ich Dien." "I serve" has been, since the battle of Crecy, an epigram for the insignia of this warrior prince's descendants. To be, to do, to dare, and in being, doing and daring, to serve, impelled by a noble purpose, urged onward by the impulsive power to help, comfort and save men from sin to righteousness, that is Christ-like. Floating down the stream of memory, there comes to me now the refrain of the old song, "Bringing in the Sheaves." But you can't bring in the sheaves until you have plowed the stubborn soil, sown the seed and reaped the grain. Toil first, through biting winds and days of steaming suns, possibly guarding the field against blight, birds, or insects—all harvests of grain are the fruition of service and of care. All ingathering of souls demands more service, greater care. Oh, how the servant of Jehovah taught us to serve! Through the long silence of those years between the time of the boy hearing and answering the doctors in the temple and the opening of his ministry, teaching, healing, helping the poor, half-seeing disciples to clearer vision, bending over their grimed feet with towel and basin in hand, all his life was service, and all his service was divine; and when those pierced hands were lifted in the last farewell message it was, in essence: "Go and serve. Since I served, in service you will always find me with you." Then to serve with him and for him is true service. Its joy and reward are in its very doing, knowing full well that all else is in his keeping. The servant is never greater than the Master, yet he is so generous and great as to share with the servant the fruitage and glory eternal.

TO THE PASTORS OF THE MERIDIAN DISTRICT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brethren: The date for our District Conference at DeKalb is rapidly approaching, May 12-14.

Brother White is anxious to receive names of delegates and others who will attend so that he can provide for their entertainment. Brethren, attend to this without delay.

The local preachers will be expected to make reports of their labors, also formal requests for the renewal of their licenses for another year.

Let the pastors and recording stewards see that the quarterly conference records are presented for examination by the committee.

Brethren, please come for the opening sermon, Monday night, and remain until the close of the conference.

Let us pray that this will be the greatest meeting of its kind ever held in the Meridian District.

PAUL D. HARDIN, P. E.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Mrs. Elizabeth Burt, Lyon, Miss., 5; Rev. C. M. Ray, Victoria, Miss., 2; Rev. T. B. Cottrell, Vicksburg, Miss., 6; F. A. Howell, Durant, Miss., 3; Rev. W. J. Dawson, Brandon, Miss., 4; Rev. T. H. Porter, Senatobia, Miss., 1.

ONLY IN CHRIST.

Though all the earth were covered with helpers and lovers of my soul, "as the sand by the seashore innumerable," and all the heavens were sown with faces of angels who cared for me and succored me, thick as the stars in the milky way—all could not do for me what I need. Yea, though all these were gathered into one mighty and loving creature, even he were no sufficient stay for one soul of man. We want more than creature help. We need the whole fullness of the Godhead to draw from. It is all there in Christ, for each of us. Whosoever will, let him draw freely. Why should we leave the fountain of living waters to hew out for ourselves with infinite pains broken cisterns that can hold no water? All we need is in Christ. Let us lift our eyes from the low earth and all creatures, and behold no man any more, as Lord and helper, save Jesus only, that we may be filled with all the fullness of God.'"—Alexander Maclaren.

A WAYFARING PSALM.

He leadeth me in the lowly path of learning,
He prepareth a lesson for me every day;
He bringeth me to the clear fountains of instruction,
Little by little he showeth me the beauty of truth.

The world is a great book that he hath written,
He turneth the leaves for me slowly;
They are all inscribed with images and letters,
He poureth light on the pictures and the words.

He taketh me by the hand to the hilltop of vision
And my soul is glad when I perceive his meaning;
In the valley also he walketh beside me,
In the dark places he whispereth to my heart.

Even though my lesson be hard, it is not hopeless,
For the Lord is patient with his slow scholar;
He will wait a while for my weakness,
And help me to read the truth through tears.

—Henry Van Dyke.

Carroll County, Miss., was exceedingly fortunate in the character of her early settlers, who were men of heroic mold and women of superior grace and charm. Among the best of them were the Bryans and Marshalls. These two families were happily united when Samuel W. Bryan and Martha Ann Marshall were married in 1844. Children were as welcome in this Christian home as they were in homes of ancient Israel. Eleven sons and daughters came to bless Samuel and Martha Bryan, six of whom survive here. The church home of these noble people was Oak Grove, three miles west from Carrollton, till that pioneer church ceased to exist, a result of the ravages of war. In the early seventies their church membership was renewed in the Carrollton church, when it was re-established after a suspension for a decade. They continued acceptable members thereof till the moment of their translation. Their last child was born April 4, 1869, and was named MARVIN WIGHTMAN. He was a dutiful son, studious at school and industrious on the farm, and became one of the successful and useful farmers of Carroll County. He was converted and joined the church Oct. 22, 1882, under the ministry of Rev. J. S. Oakley. Aug. 19, 1893, his membership was transferred to Longview Church, of which he was an active steward, giving serious, glad, cheerful service till the day of his death. His custom was to be present at the regular appointments, and to attend quarterly conference, not only at his home church, but at the other churches of the circuit, regardless of time and distance. To worship devoutly, listening to the preached word with shining eyes and glowing heart, was his chief delight. The pastor and presiding elder never had cause for disappointment in Brother Marvin. Several years ago his health failed, but his faith failed not, and his cheerful spirit never wavered. In 1903 he was married to Rosa Harris, granddaughter of Greenwood LeFleur, last chief of the Choctaw Nation. Their married life was brief but beautiful and blissful. A devoted Methodist, his interest and service were not restricted in denominational channels. No worthy call for gifts or service went unheeded by him. To his Lord he was a faithful servant; to the wife of his bosom he was a chivalrous husband; to his church, a loyal son; to his family, a devoted member; to his neighbors, a true helper; to his tenants, a just landlord; to his beasts, a merciful master. Earth became poorer, heaven richer, when suddenly, on Tuesday, Feb. 26, 1924, Marvin Wightman Bryan "fell on sleep."

RESOLUTIONS.

Another mother of Israel has passed from the church militant to the church triumphant. MRS. ARZELIA C. COLLINS has gone from our midst, and joined the invisible hosts above.

Her greates joy through seventy years of church membership was in worshiping with the saints on the Sabbath, and showing hospitality to the ministry. She was ever seeking opportunity to do good, and her heart responded to every call of her church.

She was a charter member of the "Pastors' Aid," bearing much of the burden of the building of the first parsonage in Lecompte, and a faithful and active member of the Woman's Missionary Society to the day of her death, at 93 years of age.

Whereas, she was faithful to every duty, loved by one and all; therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we have lost a great friend and faithful Christian and a devoted member of our Missionary Society.

2. That the church has sustained a great loss.

3. That the community has lost a shining example of a Christian life.

4. That we extend our sympathy and love to the bereaved ones, and pray that the influences of this godly woman may still lead them on, till at last they join again where partings never come.

5. That a copy of these resolutions be spread on the minutes; one be sent to the family, and one be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Signed: Mrs. H. W. Bowman, Mrs. A. C. Lyon, Mrs. Raiph Brewer, Committee.

RESOLUTIONS.

Whereas, our Heaveniy Father has seen best to remove from this world of sin and sorrow, to that continuing city, not built with hands, our esteemed friend and brother, C. P. HAMPTON; and,

Whereas, he has been a faithful servant of the Master's cause many years, serving as steward and trustee, also standing for the spiritual and morai good of the community; therefore, be it

Resolved, That the wife has lost a true and affectionate husband; the children, an indulgent father; the neighborhood, a useful citizen, and the Methodist church a good member.

Resolved further, That a copy of this be sent to the family, and one each to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and Lake Charles Press for publication.

Signed:

Mrs. B. B. Davis, Mrs. J. F. Reaney, Mrs. T. N. Baker, Committee Woman's Missionary Society.

NEWS FROM ROCHELLE CHARGE, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

After our first quarterly conference, which was held at Rochelle, followed by a laymen's meeting which produced good results in the way of cooperation and laying foundation for this year's work, Rev. C. C. Wier, P.E., delivered a very appropriate sermon, followed by the administering of the Lord's Supper, which brought us in closer touch with our Lord.

Brother Price has won the love of his people. From general appearances there will be a great change spiritually, which is needed. There is not a better class morally of Methodists to work with than we have.

The fifth Sunday in March we met at Olla, when we had a splendid day, discussing matters pertaining to our Sunday schools. The so-called lunch that was served by the ladies was a sumptuous dinner. Our next meeting will be held at Rochelle.

Rev. F. C. Cady, a junior preacher, who will help Brother Price this year, is located at Pollock. He preached for us last Sunday and made good impressions; no doubt he will be a great help.

I find the Methodist people from Pollock, Selma, Rochelle, Olla up to standard as a rule. A majority are neglecting obligations which they promised in taking the vows for church membership, namely, searching the Scriptures, family worship, subscribing for our church papers. My conviction is there has not been stress sufficient upon these all-important obligations.

At one of the churches on the charge I filled an appointment in behalf of the Centenary fund. It was foreign to them—they claimed they knew nothing about it. As to whose fault it is, I do not know—somebody's. What we as Methodists ought to do when we have "cooled off" is to renew our vows and abide by them, so our fellowship and hospitality will be exhibited when we meet abroad or at home with each other. We are brethren united by Christian love; if so, let us prove it by our actions, addressing each other in public as "Brother," instead of "Mister." If your consecration is not sufficient, retire to some secret place and talk to God about what you need.

FROM OAKDALE, LA.

On this, the 9th day of April, our pre-Easter campaign of personal evangelism has reached the fourth day, with the pastor and local congregation "carrying on." The months that have passed since Conference have been happy and fairly prosperous ones, even though we have had sickness and many hindrances. Attendance on these special services is good, and the interest seems deep and genuine.

We expect to close Easter Sunday with a great program. Sunrise communion service at 5:30 a.m.; an unusually good Orphanage Day—we trust—in the Sunday school; baptism of infants, and resurrection sermon at 11 a.m.; and, we trust, the reception of a large class into the church at the evening service. Pray for us, brethren, that our fondest hopes may be realized, for Jesus' sake.

Work on our new building, which was suspended about a year ago, when the "hull" was completed, has been resumed, and is progressing rapidly. It will not be the best church in Louisiana; but it is safe to say it will be the only one of its kind, and the best in this section. Built on tabernacle style, 98 feet long and 70 wide, it is the most beautiful building in Oakdale, and the best auditorium in Allen Parish. Nine commodious Sunday school rooms, a pastor's study, and a spacious and beautiful balcony are being constructed within the building. After taking out space for these rooms, the auditorium will still easily seat more than a thousand people. Although it is a wood structure, it is of the best materials obtainable here. The work goes on in the daytime, and we clean up and hold our services at night.

We are having a good time. This is a most heroic congregation. Few churches of like strength would undertake so much in such a spirit. We have the banner Epworth League of the district, now in its fourth year; a fine force of Sunday school teachers and workers; our board of stewards are as fine a body of men as it has ever been my lot to work with; and the ladies of the Missionary Society really surpass any organization of Christian women I have ever been associated with. Prospects for this year are full of promise.

HEARING RESTORED OFTEN IN 24 HOURS

Amazing Results Secured In One Day by Use of K-17, Formerly Known as Rattle Snake Oil.

Deafness and Head Noises need not be dreaded any longer since the discovery of a widely known physician. Now it is possible for some of the most obstinate cases of deafness to be relieved in a day's time by the application of a prescription formerly known as Rattle Snake Oil. This treatment is meeting with wide success all over the country.

Mr. D. Dey, a Nebraska resident, 67 years old, says, "I have used the treatment for only two weeks and my hearing is restored perfectly. The relief was almost instantaneous and now the head noises have disappeared. My catarrh, a case of many years' standing, is improving wonderfully."

Fred McIntyre, a Kansas resident, says: "I have used K-17 for two weeks and can hear a watch tick. It has also nearly removed all evidences of my catarrh."

Head Noises Stopped.

Henry Vertein, a Wisconsin resident, says: "I have used K-17 for only ten days and my head noises have stopped entirely and my hearing has shown a wonderful improvement."

Hears Clock Tick.

Frank Quinn, of Mississippi, says: "Before I used K-17 I had not heard the clock tick in a long time. And after I had taken the treatment two days I could lay in bed and hear the clock tick plainly."

D. E. Bryant, of Georgia, says: "I began using K-17 on Monday and on Saturday of the same week I was hearing and have been hearing ever since. Thank you once, twice, thrice."

Head Noises Stopped in 5 Days.

Mrs. D. C. Wilkins, of Mississippi, says: "K-17 has helped me wonderfully. In five days it has stopped that awful noise in my ears. I think it is a grand medicine."

Mrs. C. Roberts, of Florida, says: "I was entirely deaf in my left ear for two years and then in both. When I got your treatment I could hear in twenty-four hours."

Such amazing reports come from all over this country and foreign countries. The prescription, which is known as K-17, is easily used at home and seems to work like magic in its rapidity on people of all ages.

So confident are we that K-17 will restore your hearing quickly, and to introduce this remarkable treatmentt to a million more sufferers, we will send a large $2 treatment for only $1 on ten days' free trial. If the results are not satisfactory the treatment costs nothing.

Send no money—just your name and address to the Greene Laboratories, 247 Greene Bldg., Kansas City, Kan., and the treatment will be mailed at once. Use it according to the simple directions. If at the end of 10 days your hearing is not relieved, your head noises gone entirely, just send it back and your money will be refunded without question. This offer is fully guaranteed, so write today and give this wonderful compound a trial.—Adv.

INTERNATIONAL MONUMENT CO. 13 CONE ST., ATLANTA, GA. DEPT. 34

FROM DE RIDDER, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: We have just closed a meeting here. A large number decided for Jesus and a better life. Twenty-six joined the church, and a large number of family altars were established. Brother A. J. Martin led the singing for us, and I did the preachings. The salary of the pastor was raised to $3,000.

Brother Otis Spinks, a student at Centenary College, and an experienced evangelistic singer, has some open dates for the summer. He can be reached at the college.

Several of the brethren have written me that they have some dates they can give for revival work, and any one desiring help, who will write me, can get in direct touch with these brethren.

Any member of the Committee on Evangelism will be glad to get suggestions about the evangelistic work of the State, as we hope to work out and present to the Conference at its next session plans by which we can do the work of the Conference in this great field.

Brother Oscar Sanden, of this place, who has finished the three years' course at Torrey's school, at Los Angeles, in evangelism, is coming into our church at this place next Sunday. He is an ordained minister, and has had quite a bit of evangelistic experience. I heartily endorse him as an evangelist. He is sane, practical, and thoroughly believes the Bible in the true Methodistic way. He wants to do work as an evangelist among us. Brethren, this young man is a power, and capable of holding a meeting in anybody's church.

Fraternally yours,

HENRY T. YOUNG.

TO THE PASTORS AND EPWORTH LEAGUERS, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Co-workers: I hope you observed Epworth League Anniversary Day, on Sunday, April 13. I am sure if you did, you enjoyed the occasion. If you have not already done so, please send the offering to Rev. L. F. Alford, Pascagoula, Miss. If for any reason you have not observed Anniversary Day in your League, please do so, take the offering and send it to Rev. L. F. Alford. Even if you have no League in your church, it is all right to observe the day and take the offering. We want to be 100% in the Epworth Leagues in our Conference, and this is very important, and we hope you will do this.

Of course, you are gtting ready for the Assembly at Whitworth College, June 9 to 15.

Miller's Antiseptic Oil, Known as

Snake Oil

Will Positively Relieve Pain in a Few Minutes.

Try it right now for Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Lumbago, sore, stiff and swollen joints, pain in the head, back and limbs, corns, bunions, etc. After one application pain usually disappears as if by magic.

A new remedy used externally for Coughs, Colds, Croup, Influenza, Sore Throat, Diphtheria and Tonsilitis.

This oil is conceded to be the most penetrating remedy known. Its prompt and immediate effect in relieving pain is due to the fact that it penetrates to the affected parts at once. As an illustration, pour ten drops on the thickest piece of sole leather and it will penetrate this substance through and through in three minutes.

Sunday School

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

At the first training school we held in the Greenville District at Shelby in 1922, we issued 14 credits; at Leland last year we issued 32 credits; this year at Clarksdale we enrolled 93, issued 59 credits and 3 office credits, a total of 62. We had 23 schools represented in the enrollment. Clarksdale and school adjacent underwrote for another school to be held some time in October. I heard it said that the school was worth more than any revival ever held in the city.

Principles of Teaching.

Bible.

Recreational Leadership, a non-credit course.

Our aim is to do the one thing Christ commanded us to do, "Go teach all nations," in that his kingdom should come on earth as it is in heaven. Some years ago, when Dr. Charles H. Fowler left the pastorate of a large city church to become the president of Northwestern University, one of his friends said to him: "I see you are going to quit teaching men and are going to teach boys." Dr. Fowler replied: "If you wanted to write your name on a brick, would you wait until it is burned?" The church that writes God's truth upon the tender heart of childhood to-day must be the church of to-morrow.

The presiding elder of the Greenville District, Rev. James H. Felts, recently said something like this: "The Sunday school that has one trained teacher or superintendent is functioning the year round, and the schools that have three or more trained teachers have but one difficulty, and that is to find a place for the people who want to attend the school."

It is great to reform a thousand souls, but it is greater to train a thousand men and women to be used of God so to form Christian character in multiplied thousands of children, that they will not need to be reformed. Bishop Ainsworth is back of this school. He is to be our chief speaker. Will you send the names of those you wish to attend this school to Rev. J. E. Stephens, Grenada, Miss., by the next mail, as we hope to mail our announcement within the next few days?

SOME LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

By Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Confereuce Superintendent.

The writer has recently attended two district conferences—Shreveport, at Logansport, and Lake Charles, at Leesville. The spiritual tide at each of these conferences was fine. At the Sunday school session of the Lake Charles District, the same district officers were re-elected, with one exception. The district officers for the Shreveport District will be elected at the all-day district meeting, May 20, at Greenwood.

The sub-district organization of the Lake Charles District, Rev. W. H. Giles, president, will hold its next rally on the fifth Sunday in June, at the old historic country church known as Holly Grove, near Leesville. Mr. J. M. Mashbourn, the district superintendent of adult work, will preside at the Bible class department of this rally.

Mr. W. B. Robinson, superintendent of the Sunday school at Lecompte, writes: "If there is anything further you would like for us to do here, you only have to advise us and we will try and have it attended to." The prospects for attendance at this conference are very fine. All of the district officers are working on this great rally at Lecompte, and we expect several hundred Sunday school workers present. Judge H. H. White will be invited to address the Bible class department at this meeting.

Interest in the Sunday school work in the Ruston District is at a high level. The Homer conference, which was State-wide, was in this district. The Young People's Rally, which was held at Ruston on April 16, was district-wide in its scope, and full of interest. The adult Bible classes of this district are planning a big rally or district federation at Ruston, on the fifth Sunday in June. The Sunday school program at the district conference includes Wednesday afternoon, May 14. The presiding elder, Brother K. W. Dodson, writes, April 14, as follows: "I saw Brother Childress at Minden last week. He said they would like to have a training school about the 1st of June. I think we would get enough outside the Ruston school—Haynesville, said they could go down to Minden, and Homer, I think, would. Then Winnfield, Ringgold, Sibley, Haughton and Doyline, Springhill, Cotton Valley, and others. What do you thiuk of two schools in this district? I will be at Minden next Sunday, so write me what you think."

The first preacher to enroll in the Standard Training School in the Lake Charles District was the presiding elder, Rev. J. B. Williams, who wants all of his preachers to follow his example. This was the way teacher training started in the Ruston District, with the preachers, by Presiding Elder Dodson leading the way.

Mr. W. S. Holmes, chairman of the Conference Board, also member of the General Board, writes, April 14: "I leave in the morning for a meeting of the General Board at Nashville. Please write to Brother R. L. Armstrong, our assistant pastor, as to the date of our training school."

The Board of Managers of the New Orleans Standard Training School will meet soon to decide on definite courses and instructors for their fourth session of their Standard Training School. It would not surprise me if we have 20 or 30 to receive their gold seal certificates at this school.

The writer enjoyed a visit to the Winnfield Sunday school on April 13. Dr. Wren, the faithful superintendent of this Sunday school, and his corps of workers are doing a fine type of work.

The Stirring Book that American College Students Are Now Reading

The REVOLT of YOUTH

By STANLEY HIGH

"No student of current history can afford to miss this amazing résumé of the student thinking in this chaotic generation."—Minneapolis Daily Star.

"This book sheds a ray of light on the chaos of the present day. The youth are in revolt. They propose not again to be used as cannon fodder. Theirs now to reason why. It is one of the most enlightening, encouraging and hopeful books that has come to this reviewer's desk for a long time."
—Boston Evening Transcript.

"A book of to-day for those who think about the international problems we are confronting. It is a book of interpretations for those who wish to know the thoughts which are surging in the minds of young people all over the world. It tells a story which every leader of public opinion in the United States ought to know."

FINE MISSIONARY SOCIETIES AT WEBB, MISS.

The Webb Missionary Society has completed a course in Bible Study with Miss Townsend instructing. The average attendance of this class was ten, and much good has been derived from her efficient teaching. The next quarter will be devoted to mission study work and it is hoped that as much enthusiasm will be put into this study as was in the one just completed. The returned delegates from the annual conference brought us the good news that Webb Societies, both adult and junior, were on the honor roll. This standard of excellence is due to the faithful and efficient work of the president. No new members were enrolled this year.—The Sumner Sentinel.

HOW THE TRUE SOUTHERN WHITE MAN REGARDS THE TRUE BLACK MAN.

In the light of recent efforts to misrepresent the attitude of the better class of Southern whites to the better class of Southern blacks we commend to our readers everywhere a tribute paid by James W. Austin, an Atlanta attorney, to Sam Bell, a negro—Uncle Sam, as he was known—who had just died. Mr. Austin wrote:

"A letter comes to me to-day. It is from the white-haired mistress of the old plantation home of my boyhood, my mother. 'Dear son,' she writes, 'Uncle Sam is dead—Sam Bell is dead and I want you to write a tribute to him.'

"I sit in my office chair with the letter in my hand and look absently from the twelfth floor of a skyscraper on the great city stretching out before me. I hear the roar of the traffic in the crowded streets below, but these sights and sounds pass by unheeded. Memory is throwing on the screen of my fancy a picture of the long ago. I am a little freckle-faced boy of seven, back again on the old plantation, sitting on the kitchen steps under the shade of the spreading mulberry in the back yard, counting with nervous and eager fingers a nest of partridge eggs, and glancing up gratefully at 'Uncle Sam' standing over me, grinning with delight at my joy over the present he has salvaged for me from the wheat field. There are an even dozen of the little eggs. Ranger, my dog, is standing by, eying my booty wistfully as I count my treasures.

"Yes, there before me at the old South Carolina home is 'Uncle Sam,' sturdy in build and frame as a rock, with a heart as kind, as gentle and as steadfast as ever beat under any man's shirt, whether that man be white or black.

"And for more than fifty long years he was as familiar a figure around the 'big house' on the farm as the great white oak in the front yard, and as dependable and standing as straight-up for right, for truth, and in honesty as immovable.

"South Carolina can boast of one ante-bellum crop which never failed—gentlemen—gentlemen 'to the manner born.' And a great host of them were white and some were black, and black though his skin, Sam Bell was 'a South Carolina gentleman,' instinctively refined, spontaneously courteous and polite, in speech truthful, in conduct without guile, in simplicity and humility, a little child.

"Can I write a tribute to Sam Bell? Can I write a tribute to this faithful old servant and friend of my father and mother, of their sons? Yes; for I who knew this princely old negro—knew him as he was—can say of him that I have known few men of nobler character, a character of granite texture. I have known few men of finer loyalty.

"And his faith in the Gospel of Jesus Christ, the Great Redeemer, never waned or wavered during more than a half century of Christian life and experience. Sam Bell's body goes back to mother earth, but his soul goes marching on, as I verily believe, with the great company of the redeemed."—Manufacturers Record.

AMERICA'S AMAZING MAN.

By William G. Shepherd, in the Christian Herald.

I went into a sick room to see him. It was a gray, winter day; through the window I saw the cold, winter ocean. I found him a huge bulk of a man. He seemed to have lost weight, for I noticed that his vest seemed a little too large and his coat hung loosely. I caught a tired look, just for a minute, in his eyes.

And then in one minute, after a handshake—my biggish hand was lost in his—the sunshine was turned on. He smiled and—I was under the charm of Russell H. Conwell. It is a charm that has held millions of men and women in our land.

He was not too old, even with his eighty-one years, or too weak in his convalescence, to be himself. And there is not a more amazing man in America than he. Five different famous writers have tried to write biographies about him and his astonishing life; he has always done more astonishing things, after the biographies were written, than he had done before, thus making the books look like unfinished documents.

As he talked I had a picture back in my mind. It was nightime on the battlefield of Kenesaw Mountain. A huge bulk of a twenty-year-old boy captain lay on the ground. A stretcher-bearer, seeking for wounded, bent down to try to hear heart-beats. "He's gone!" said the bearer; "his chest is blown open." They went away and left that pile of bleeding flesh in the darkness.

But there was life in that body. It was motionless with weakness, but in the brain a mighty parade of thought was passing. All that his father and mother had taught him of religion and God came back to him.

This big, smiling man who was talking to me had been that motionless mound of misery.

"I was converted there that night, waiting for some one to come and pick me up," he told me.

"The next morning, when some one found I was alive and took me to the hospital, I called for a chaplain and told him that, from then on, I was going to be a Christian."

What came out of that bleeding boy on that battlefield that night? For one thing, the great Temple University of Philadelphia; for another, three great hospitals; education for hundreds of young men and women, to which object, it is estimated, Dr. Conwell has donated more than $8,000,000 earned in lecturing.

He has given his famous lecture, "Acres of Diamonds," over 6000 times. He has never taken one cent of the proceeds for himself. After deducting traveling expenses, he sends a check for the remainder to some college president or, perhaps, directly to some student, to help pay for an education.

Here's how the great Temple University, through which over 125,000 students have passed, was started by Dr. Conwell:

A young man came to Dr. Conwell and asked him where he could study, of evenings, for the ministry. Dr. Conwell knew of no school that could meet this need.

"Come to me next Saturday evening and we'll begin lessons," he told the young man. "We'll fix things up some way."

Saturday evening the young man came with two other young men who wanted to study, of evenings, for the ministry. Within a few weeks the group had grown to a dozen. Dr. Conwell secured a classroom. The class grew until daily sessions became necessary. Pretty soon a building went up to house the classes. To-day there are about 10,000 students in the various courses.

CHINA AND JAPAN

Ahead of the United States in the Circulation of the Scriptures.

China and Japan rival the United States in the number of volumes of Christian Scriptures circulated annually. The total circulated in 1923 by the American Bible Society in those eastern countries was 2,868,605 as against 2,395,000 in the United States. The increase in the Orient was more than 770,000 volumes, or 30 per cent over the preceding year. According to Frank H. Mann, General Secretary, there was no increase in the society's budget for that year to account for this large expansion in the Far East. It is believed that the growing respect for the moral and spiritual values of the Bible accounts for this phenomenal increase in circulation.—American Bible Society.

"It is a mistake to train young people in all lines of knowledge and give them full college equipment for undertaking the big tasks of life without making sure also that fundamental principles of right and wrong as taught in the Bible have become a part of their equipment. There is a control of forces and motives essential to the management of vast affairs which comes only through an educated conscience."—J. J. Hill.

"The object of scholarship, the object of all knowledge is to understand; is to comprehend; is to know what the need of mankind is. This is the reason why scholarship has usually been more fruitful when associated with religion, and scholarship has never, so far as I can at this moment recollect, been associated with any religion, except the religion of Jesus Christ."—Woodrow Wilson.

REVIVAL AT GIBSON MEMORIAL, VICKSBURG, MISS.

Dear Dr. Carley: Just a few lines to state that we have recently closed a very successful meeting at Gibson Memorial Church. We had with us in this meeting Rev. Earl B. Moll and his singer, Prof. T. G. Mangham. These brethren made a splendid impression on the church and community, and their work among us will be long remembered, and the great good done no doubt will be lasting.

Brother Moll is gifted and tactful in his work aad methods, preaching a full gospel uncompromisingly, and using the old-time altar method, which carries with it power and blessed results.

I shall say to the brethren, if they want an old-time revival in their church, get Moli; if they want another kind, get somebody else. Brother Mangham is a consecrated young man, a sweet siager and an efficient leader of song. These two work well together.

As a result of the two weeks' campaign, our church received a great spiritual uplift; and at the last service we received into the church twenty-sevea on profession of faith and thirty by certificate.

We are moving along well in our church activities and are praying for and expecting the best year of the four speat with these good people here. We are in love with our people, and judging from the way they look after us in a temporal way, and from their kind expressions in words and acts, it is a mutual affair.

Am sending you a list of subscribers to the Advocate.

With best wishes, and thanking you for the good paper you are giving us, i am, Fraternally,

WOMAN AILING FOR A YEAR

Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound—Happy Results

Newcastle, Pa.—"I was all run-down and everybody thought I was going into a decline. I had been ailing for a year with pains in myright side so that I could hardly stand on my feet. When I walked I felt as if something was falling. I was not able to do any work and had a nurse most of the time. She spoke to me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, so I gave it a fair trial. Some women think one bottle should cure them, but I did not stop at that. I took more and got better, and am able ever since to do my own housework. There was a time, when I would complain of not feeling well, that my husband would say, 'Go to the doctor.' But now he will tell me to get a bottle of Lydia E. Pinkham's, and it has always helped me. I have had druggists tell me that they had something better, but they don't tell me that now, for I take no other. I have been taking the Vegetable Compound now for five years. Any woman who cares to call or write, I will be glad to tell her how it helped me."—Mrs. MABEL LIST SHERBAHN, 515 Newell Ave., Newcastle, Pa. For sale by druggists everywhere.

THE SUNDAY SCHOOL.

By Rev. Jesse F. Watson.

A church is not complete without a Sunday school. The very existence of a church is dependent upon the training which it affords its supporters.

In the formative days of Methodism the class meeting and the hand meeting served the purpose for training and binding together the recent converts. These agencies did effective work. They performed a service which our present Sunday school system must perform or else the future of this church will be seriousiy handicapped.

Since the Sunday school has become the chief training agency of the church, it is fitting that every minister spend some time in studying the different phases of Sunday school work, and the problems connected with the operation of the average Sunday school.

Now the question arises: How shall the minister study the work of the Sunday school and its problems of operation?

The following suggestions may asslst in answering this question: First, make a study of the literature from the Beginners up through the Senior courses; second, attend the Sunday school; third, arrange some plan by which all officers and teachers of the Sunday school may be ahle to get together with the minister in a conference at least once a quarter to talk over the work of the Sunday school. Such a program as this, if carried out by the minister, will give him considerahle materiai for thought and bring him face to face with the problems vital to the supervision and administration of the Sunday school.

Importance has been attached to Institutes, training schools, and conferences on Sunday school work for ministers and teachers, and rightly so. But it is evident that no school, instltute, or conference can give as good aid iu solving the questions and probiems as cau a close, first-hand study of the situation. The answers to your problems are to be worked out, and you are the person to do the joh.

Some of the more common probiems in Sunday schools are: What courses shali be used? Who shall teach? and, How can a Sunday school be maintained in a small church, especially those churches in the open country?

There are two courses offered from which to choose, the Uniform and the Graded. In those places where trained teachers and adequate equipment are not at hand, the Uniform course usually gives the best results. Yet almost every schooi could use advantageously some part of the Graded course, especially in the Junior and the intermediate classes.

Then, who shali teach? By all means that person who is willing to teach and pay the price of teaching. Sometimes it is true that willing hands are found that are not suitable. Others are found that are not willing to pay the price of teaching. It is in this place that the minister and the superintendent can do much towards solving the probiems in the Sunday school by helping train the teachers.

The Sunday school in the small church, especially in the open country, is a problem which has been, and is now, a topic for a great deai of discussion, hut of no avali. Many answers to its questions of maintenance have heen proposed, yet none of them are satisfactory.

Prohlems come thick and fast when the country church is considered. First, the house is unsuited for holding Sunday school in, especially during cold weather; the roads hecome so had as to he almost impassabie in the winter; the popuiation is transient, usuaily tenants who move every year; the more progressive people, both young and old, move away as soon as they think they have found a better place, or as soon as they grow up.

The solution of these prohlems will come when a different spirit from that which now moves them takes hold upon them. But what must be done while this change is taking place?

The only hope for the country church and Sunday school, it seems, is to organize in each church an "Old Guard," who will pledge themselves to renewed zeal in the Sunday school work. Then the minister shouid hend every effort towards helping and training this "Old Guard."

FROM LAKE CHARLES, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: The First Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Lake Charles has succeeded in putting over the Superannuate Endowment Fund campaign in great style. We are agreeing to raise our quota one year at a time, and we are confident that there will he no trouhle in more than paying our part each year. On a $900 apportionment, we have raised more than $1,000.

Last night we organized a Methodist Men's Club, and there is a very fine interest in the movement to start with. The ladies of the Missionary Society served a banquet, and we had the second quarterly conference the same evening. All the departments of the church are functioning fine, and we note a rising tide of interest in the things religious.

We are expecting to put on a revival campaign here in May. This meeting will be known as "The Jimmie Smith Campaign," and will be held under a large tent.

The four church committees known as the Evangelistic, the Social Service, the Missionary, and the Stewardship and Tithing Committees, have had charge of the prayer services during this year, and they have been fine, both in attendance and interest.

We have had an unusual amount of sickness since Annual Conference, and have lost some of our prominent members by death. We have had two epidemics, one of measles and one of "flu," which have hindered us very much in our work here, but it seems that things are getting normal once more, and the work is going forward.

Does Your Blood Need Iron?

How To Make The Test That Tells

A PALE face, a nervous irritable disposition, a lack of strength and endurance—these are the warning signals that Nature gives when your blood is getting thin, pale, watery and starving for iron. Iron is constantly leaving the body, especially toward the period of middle age and you must make up for this iron deficiency if you want to escape disease and be strong and well.

When the iron in your blood runs low signs of old age creep into your system. In such cases ordinary iron-containing foods seldom supply a sufficient quantity of this important element to make up for the waste. Therefore, many physicians now prescribe a concentrated form of organic iron—Nuxated Iron—which contains iron like the iron in your blood.

If you are not sure of your condition, go to your doctor and have him take your blood-count, or else make the following test yourself: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired; next take two five-grain tablets of Nuxated Iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. All good druggists sell Nuxated Iron, on the distinct understanding that if you are not satisfied your money will be refunded.

"THE TRIALS THAT NEVER COME ARE THE ONES THAT FRET US SO."

With some of us present trouble has a way, in our morbid hours, of not only projecting its magnified shadow into the future, but deepeniug that shadow by importing into it all the regrets, sorrows and failures of the past. Under such circumstances it is not difficult to make ourselves about as miserable and downcast as it is safe to be, and those around us as correspondingly uncomfortable. Life, indeed, presents a dreary and depressing aspect, and it may take some sane reasoning or a sharp jolt to convince us how futile and mistaken such a mood is, and how demoralizing and disheartening this undue multiplying of our fears.

In the words of Sanskrit, "Yesterday is but a dream, and To-morrow is only a vision"—the first outside our power to recall, the other beyond our power to actually endure before its allotted time. The heat and burden of yesterday will never oppress us again in the same way, and who knows what turn in the tide of affairs may brighten and relieve to-morrow? "To-day is ours and to-day alone"—our only concern, to bear up steadfastly under to-day, its toil, its pain, its grief or disappointment, confident that, whatever the morrow brings us it will also assuredly bring grace and strength to bear us over the flinty places of life's road.

"Charge not thyself with the weight of a year,
Child of a Master, faithful and dear.
Choose not the cross for the coming week;
For that is more than He bids thee seek.

"Bend not thine arms for to-morrow's load—
Thou mayest leave that to thy gracious God.
Daily, only, He saith to thee,
'Take up the cross, and follow me'."

We have only to take a glance over the lives of really great men and women in any walk of life, and the truly brave and inspiring people of our own acquaintances, to see that one of the secrets of their strength and serenity is this higher wisdom of the art of living a day at a time. Who of them has not had his sorrow, his difficulty, his failure and despair?

A noble disregard for yesterday or to-morrow is neither a refusal to learn from the mistakes and defeats of the past nor neglect to plan for and fortify against the future, but it is a courageous and sanctified common-sense disinclination to burden the heart and paralyze the energies with the hampering lumber of what has been and what may possible be to-morrow.

That wonderful man, the late Sir William Robertson Nicoll, the influence of whose life and writings has been incalculable, handicapped from early manhood through a long lifetime by ill-health, wrote with characteristic imperturbability out of an understanding heart, born of the wisdom of the years: "It is wisest to make the best of our allotment and to live tranquilly one day at a time. The most burdened can see to the end of one day; he who can do that will come to the last day and see to its ending also."

"Only a day at a time. There may never be a to-morrow.
Only a day at a time, and that we can live. We know
The trouble we cannot bear is only the trouble we borrow,
And the trials that never come are the ones that fret us so.

"Only a step at a time. It may be the angels bend o'er us,
To bear us above the stones that wound our feet by the way.
The step that is hardest of all is not the one just before us,
And the path we dread the most may be smoothed another day."

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

A visit to the commercial department, 421 Baronne street, New Orleans, will always pay.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

"THE GREATEST OF THESE."

The thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians, universally considered one of the most beautiful passages in all literature, is at the same time the most emphatic statement of the great essential of the Christian life to be found in all the writings of the great apostle. One by one he mentions the power to "speak with tongues," the gift of prophecy, the faith that can remove mountains, the bestowment of all one's goods to feed the poor, martyrdom at the stake, and then adds: "But if I have not love, it profiteth me nothing." Then, as if in answer to the question that somebody would be sure to ask, "What is this love you are talking about?" he proceeds to give the characteristics of love: "Love suffereth long, and is kind; love vaunteth not itself, is not puffed up, doth not behave itself unseemly, seeketh not its own, is not provoked, taketh not account of evil; rejoiceth not in unrighteousness, but rejoiceth with the truth; beareth all things, believeth all things, hopeth all things, endureth all things." Then, lest somebody should say, "This is too much for us to expect of love," he adds, "Love never faileth," and further along he says: "Now abideth faith, hope, love; and the greatest of these is love."

After reading this wonderful thirteenth chapter of First Corinthians, our minds naturally and inevitably go back to those words of the Master after the lawyer had stated the great commandment, "Thou shalt love thy Lord thy God with all thy heart, and with all thy soul, and with all thy strength, and with all thy mind; and thy neighbor as thyself"—"Thou hast answered right; this do, and thou shalt live."

PROHIBITION OR NO PROHIBITION.

If the friends of prohibition allow themselves to go to sleep in fancied security, they are likely to be rudely awakened some bright morning by the news that Congress has passed a law authorizing the manufacture and sale of beer and wine with an alcoholic content of at least 2.75 per cent. The enemies of the Volstead Law are constantly on the alert and are flooding the members of Congress with letters and telegrams to the effect that the sentiment of the people is overwhelmingly in favor of a modification of the present liquor regulations. The following, taken from a morning newspaper of this city last week, shows how the friends of modification are making themselves heard:

"A survey of the office of Representative O'Connor is all that is necessary to indicate that a large number of residents of the First Louisiana District are in favor of legalizing wine and beer containing not more than 2.75 per cent of alcohol. Judge O'Connor has received literally thousands of letters on this subject. Not only is he unable to reply to these letters, but he is having great difficulty in finding room for them. When his turn comes to appear before the judiciary committee to urge the passage of the light wine and beer bill, he expects to display these piles of letters on the committee's table so the members may visualize this evidence of public sentiment. As a part of his testimony, Judge O'Connor will read into the records letters which are representative of various elements making up the population of the district. Practically every member of the Legislature from Orleans Parish signed one of the telegrams which Judge O'Connor has received. In addition, he has telegrams and letters from prominent city officials, former city officials, bankers, wholesalers, retailers, and from industrial interests."

Even if it be assumed that a majority of the First Louisiana District are in favor of modification, it does not follow that a majority of the State are; but if the drys remain silent, their views will not have much force. The same thing is true throughout the United States. The fight is on, and the liquor forces are doing all in their power to bring back the sale of intoxicants. It will take prompt, vigorous, and persistent action to defeat them.

"PAPINI UNMASKED."

Under the above caption, the Christian Advocate (New York), one of the leading organs of the Methodist Episcopal Church, says editorially:

"We Americans are an easy mark. The frosty Italian atheist Papini turns into an incandescent Catholic and writes a 'Life of Christ.' Crafty American publishers cut out that 'Prayer to Christ' which might have made it offensive to Protestant readers and bring out a spirited translation by a minister's daughter. Its sales leap to the lead. Sermons are preached about it. Advertising, free and otherwise, sells copies by the tens of thousands, enriching publisher and Papini, who stand tongue-in-cheek. Again Papini writes, this time the first part of a "Dictionary of a Savage,' a book so soused in Romanism that nothing could denature it. No American publisher has yet had the boldness to announce an edition in English. * * * Would any Protestant stultify himself by reading anything which this Italian stylist might say about Christ, when he indulges in such scurrility regarding those Christians who have learned their religion from Epworth and Wittenberg rather than from Rome? Here is a paragraph from his new 'Dictionary,' translated by Winfred Garrison for the Christian Century:

"'We protest, and we protest with greater vigor than all the other protests, against those Protestants of whatever congregation, sect or stall, who come into Italy to snatch away the poor, ignorant Catholics from the medieval tyranny, as they say, of the bishop of Rome. We protest against the apostles of disunion and disobedience of whatever tribe they may be: the hemorrhoids of Luther, the scabs of Calvin, the claws of Huss, the spittle of Zwingli, the blisters of Socinus, the blotches of Wesley, the corns of Fox, the catarrh of Spencer, the chilblains of Jansen, the crusts of Arius. Leave to the Italians their poverty; it is the widow of their honored Saint Francis. Leave them their ignorance; it is the same as that of Saint Peter, and the same as that recommended by the Imitation of Christ and by the Fool of Christ, Jacopone. * * * Leave us under the tyranny of the Pope; it is a tyranny established by Christ, the tyranny of a father, and we infinitely prefer it to the tyranny of pastors, of quacks (or Quakers), of consistories, and of books. We medievalists still hold to the bull Unam Sanctum, which says: "We declare and pronounce that it is absolutely necessary to salvation for every human creature to be subject to the Roman pontiff."'"

If the above quotation from the "Dictionary" is properly translated (and we have no reason to doubt its correctness), the New York Christian Advocate has done a real service to Protestant America by unmasking Papini.

ANOTHER PENTECOST.

The Day of Pentecost was a wonderful experience in the lives of the apostles. The manifest presence of the Holy Spirit stirred the hearts of the disciples, and brought together a great multitude of people, who, under the influence of Peter's preaching, were "pricked in their heart," and who began to say, "Men and brethren, what shall we do?" The way of salvation being made plain to them, about three thousand that heard were baptized and enrolled among the disciples.

The enrollment of members is not always to be taken as proof that the spirit of Pentecost is resting upon the church, but the addition of great numbers to the body of professing Christians is presumptive evidence that a great work of grace is being accomplished. We heard a speaker recently make the statement that for the past two years an average of five thousand people have joined the Protestant church every day for the entire period, and that an average of four hundred have joined the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, every day for the same period.

There may be good reason for saying that this great movement on the part of so many people is not the Pentecostal movement recorded in the Book of Acts; but it certainly is an answer to those who complain that the church is decadent and that Christianity is losing its power. As a matter of fact, there is ample evidence that the gospel is being heard by more people to-day and is being accepted by greater multitudes than ever before in its history. The world is not all that it ought to be by a great deal—but we are constrained to believe that it is getting better every day. Let us continue to pray, "Thy Kingdom Come."

FAITH.

By Frank Duryea Deats.

Faith is the courage to assay
The pilgrimage of night
And in the candle's feeble ray
Envisage morning light.

Faith is a willingness to see
In a petal, all the rose;
In russet leaf, the fruitful tree;
Through hedge, the gardens close.

Faith is the phalanx thrust of spears
Through dark toward citadels of dawn;
A trumpet sounding down the years
This challenge: "Soldier, follow on!"

OUR NEW AMERICANS.

By Dr. R. L. Russell, Home Missions Secretary.

The immigrant is a new international opportunity, and if we so regarded them and our conduct was in accord with our belief, we would the sooner make good Americans out of them.

There are at the present time, in round figures, fifteen millions of people in this country who were born under another flag, and seventeen millions of their children; so, to all intents and purposes, there are now thirty-two millions of foreign-speaking peoples under the Stars and Stripes. That is not so bad, provided they have a fair chance to become good American citizens. We must remember that our sires migrated to this country from somewhere and for some reason; perhaps for no better reasons than some of the present new Americans have come. Let us, therefore, manifest the spirit of fair play to our "newcomers."

It might be of interest for our own church people to know that we, through the Home Department of the General Board of Missions, are doing Christian work among the following alien groups, viz.: Mexicans, Syrians, Greeks, Bohemians, Italians, Japanese, Koreans, and Cubans.

1. The Orientals. According to the 1920 census, there are in the United States 111,010 Japanese, 61,639 Chinese, 5,603 Filipinos, 2,507 Hindus, and 1,224 Koreans. Their coming to America gives us a rare opportunity to make Christians of them and start influences which will eventually bring Christ to the lands from whence they came. All of the reasons which lead us to send missionaries to Japan and Korea may also be urged for the evangelization of the Japanese and Koreans in America. They certainly need Christ as much after they come here as they need Christ before they decide to leave their native lands. Missionary service to them here is just as heroic as missionary service to them in their native land can possibly be.

There is further reason why we should manifest the spirit of Christ toward them, viz.: In many American communities these same Orientals are the victims of a decided race discrimination. It is, therefore, highly important that some people give them the attitude of a disciple of Christ Jesus. This we are striving to do in several congregations of California. Our sincerity is being tested by these people of alien races who are among us. We may need to limit immigration, and we may need to throw more restraint around those who are here, but there is no reason why we should not treat them as Christians would treat all others. We cannot eliminate them, but we can give them the very best thing we have—the Christian religion. What better form of missionary work could we do for the lands from which these people have come than to Christianize these aliens and send some of their children back as our Christian missionaries?

2. Our Spanish-Speaking Neighbors. By these we mean the 40,000 Cubans in Key West and Tampa, Fla., and the 2,000,000 Mexicans in Texas, New Mexico, Arizona, and California. The Cubans, both men and women, are largely employed in cigar factories and have the marks of modern industrial life upon them. They have need for just what our schools, churches and home life can give them. The Cuban is slow to accept the interpretation of religion which we Protestants have. So long have they known the false religion of the only church of which they know anything that many of them are anti-religious, while others are indifferent to the church. It is a slow process, but essential, if we do a Christian's part by a less fortunate people.

We may correctly speak of "our Mexican problem in the Southwest." By the treaty of Guadalupe Hidalgo in 1848, made with Mexico, the United States took over not only a large strip of territory, but a large group of Spanish-speaking people, whose deseendants are still with us. While these people are American citizens, they still speak the Spanish language and carry many of the old Spanish customs. To this day sixty per cent of the population of New Mexico belong to this class. Even the work of the courts and the State Legislature must be carried on in Spanish, or translated into that language so that those concerned may understand what is going on.

On the other hand, we have a large number of real Mexicans who have, for various reasons, migrated to this country, and this number is growing year by year, month by month, week by week and day by day. It is doubtful if we will ever have fewer of them than we have at this time. The overthrow of the Diaz government and the revolutions which have followed have made living so intolerable in Mexico that the Mexicans have entered this country as refugees and for the sake of quiet and a livelihood. There is no need to ask how they got here. That does not matter. They are here and we must deal with them. We should do it as Christians. Too often we have dealt with them in a most un-Christ-like manner. For a long while they were congested in such centers as San Antonio, El Paso and Los Angeles, but in recent years they have filtered out to the farms and mining centers. There are now, it is said, more Mexicans in Los Angeles than any other city of the world except the City of Mexico.

Whatever may have been the original intention of their coming to our land, they are now a permanent part of our civilization. They have already made themselves essential to the mines, railroads, to the sugar beet industry in Colorado, the onion growers in Texas, the cotton growers in Arizona, and to the producers of vegetables, walnuts and citrus fruit of California.

Through these two million Mexicans now in America, we have an unpreeedented opportunity to interpret the Christian religion to our next-door neighbor "across the border," and to promote a better understanding between these two nations. This, too, may be a slow process, but essential if we preserve the peace and unity even of our own national life. Herein we can test our loyalty to the Master, who said: "Thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself." There is no other love that is genuine. We cannot long keep our civilization at its present status if we neglect these 2,000,000 humble people who are under our flag. They are a part of our national life whether we want it so or not. To make Christians of them and to send some of their sons and daughters to Mexico as our missionaries is to save our neighbor Republic and make more secure our own national prosperity. Not to do so is to neglect one of our greatest foreign mission opportunities.

One of our greatest opportunities as a church to minister to the immigrant is offered in the large, increasing groups of Italians to be found particularly in the Gulf States. Until recent years, we have had no well defined policy looking to bringing these interesting people within our Christian program. They are very susceptible to the gospel as preached by our missionaries. Thousands of them have broken with the Church of Rome and stand waiting for a religion that will mean something to their hungry hearts. They are coming to the South and becoming a very essential part of our commercial and political life. The Protestant churches have neglected them. Our own church must institute a more vigorous program to reach them with the gospel and its program of service. Here is an open door for the church. Who will enter and occupy this fruitful opportunity in the name of Christ?

Do we want to give Italy the same view of Christianity that many Americans have? We trust so. What more effective missionary could be had than the Italian himself, who has been brought to this conception by American Christians and trained in American churches and schools and sent back to his own people with the Italian's viewpoint of Christ and the Italian's approach to the heart of the Italian?

Then, what about the safety of our nation if these hordes of Italians never become Christian American citizens? How long can a Christian civilization stand the test applied to it by these many alien groups, whose conception of religion, morals and government are so different from ours? We are walking on the thin crust of a volcano that will not much longer endure the heat of so many contending forces. We had better put out the fire. Arguments, strife, war, imprisonment, segregation, nor even education can do it. But that love of Christ which the Christian has to give will do it. It is this for which we plead. All else will be in vain. If we will not go to these, "our newcomers," with the gospel of light and salvation, then in the name of heaven let's cease to cry over their brothers across the seas; for the gospel that is not strong enough to reach the foreigner in America will certainly not reach his family on the other side of the world.

STATEMENT ADOPTED BY THE GENERAL SUNDAY SCHOOL BOARD AT ITS RECENT MEETING.

The Sunday School Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is charged with a very great responsibility. To promote religious instruction and training of our children, youth and adults, and to spread Bible knowledge, is a task that commands the greatest possible wisdom and the most sincere loyalty to Christ and the Kingdom of God on the part of all those who are in any way charged with this responsibility. The church thus commits to the Sunday School Board and its officers more than two million of people, teachers, officers and pupils, to be trained in religious knowledge and brought into a more complete understanding and appreciation of the unfolding of Christ's Kingdom, and the enlarging application of the gospel of Jesus Christ to all the relations of life. For all of these purposes of religious education and Christian guidance, the Bible is the central and supreme book of study and authority. The Sunday School Board has developed a very remarkable program of standard training schools and leadership training schools, the purpose of which is to equip teachers, leaders and officers for more effective service in all departments of the Sunday school work. These standard schools have had a most remarkable growth, and are doing a most noteworthy service in training Sunday school teachers throughout our church. In 1918 there were three standard schools; in 1923 there were one hundred and eighty-five, and the number of students enrolled has grown from an unlisted group to more than twenty thousand. The value of religious education thus promoted in standard schools, leadership schools, and in colleges, cannot be over-estimated. Certainly, according to the record shown in this department of the work of the Sunday School Board, we are rapidly reaching the goal of producing efficient teachers and leaders for our entire church.

It is a matter deeply to be regretted that the widely discussed incident at the Leadership Training School at Lake Junaluska last summer should have occurred. It is very difficult to secure the actual historical facts of this incident. Statements concerning it will be colored by the attitude of mind of those who make such statements. The Board has diligently sought to know just what did occur. The Board in making this statement to the church is more concerned for the Kingdom of God and the part and responsibility of our church in promoting that Kingdom than for the opinion of any individual involved in this incident. It is not the mission of the Sunday School Board to promote the discussion of technical questions of Bible criticism, and we deem it a mistake that any teacher or scholar be invited to any of our schools, training or standard, to promote such discussions. We realize, however, that in standard training schools or leadership training schools questions may arise concerning scriptural interpretation and criticism. We believe it is the duty and responsibility of those directing and teaching in these schools frankly and honestly to meet these issues raised in accordance with the historic teaching and spirit of Methodism. Methodism has a body of teaching which is well known and generally accepted by her leaders and her membership. The emphasis of our great denomination in her teaching has been from the beginning upon experience and Christian living. We have held from the beginning and do hold now that the Holy Scripture containeth all things necessary to salvation; but whatsoever is not read therein may not be required of any man. Methodism holds to the necessity of a vital faith and experience in Jesus Christ. We have held as a church tenaciously to great central truths of Protestantism, but Methodism has always exhibited an open-mindedness to the truth, new or old. While deploring any incident that may seem to be violative of the common faith and creed of our church, we do not deny the right to any and all our people, teachers or students, to sane and constructive investigation of the truth. We do, however, urge all the officers of this Board whose business it is to interpret by word or by writing the teachings of the Bible to do so with full knowledge of and loyalty to the teachings of our church. While it is not the responsibility of the General Sunday School Board of our church to write creeds or confessions of faith or to promote questions of Biblical criticism, it is the responsibility of the Board to the church which it represents to see that all the teaching done and work carried on by the officers of this Board shall be in harmony with the teachings and spirit of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Therefore, be it Resolved, First—That the General Sunday School Board affirm its loyalty to the cardinal doctrines of our church, the foundations of which were given by Mr. Wesley, and which are formally set forth in the "Twenty-five Articles of Religion" contained in our book of Discipline, and more concisely expressed in "The Apostles' Creed," all having their origin in, and being consistent with, the Holy Bible.

The Board will always disapprove of any acts or utterances of any of its agents or agencies, as such, that are contrary to our standards of faith, and pledges itself, as far as it may be able, to see that all agencies for which it is responsible shall be conducted in harmony with the accepted doctrines of the church.

Second—That the Board hereby re-establish a Standing Committee on Leadership Training Schools whose responsibility it shall be to pass upon all programs of Leadership Training Schools. We recommend the following as the Committee for the coming year: Bishop W. B. Beauchamp, Dr. M. T. Haw and Dr. E. B. Chappell.

THE PREACHER—HIS SERMON.

By Payton A. Sowell.

It appears we are fated to have preachers; if so, we ought to have sermons. It does not follow in reality, but courtesy suggests we call them sermons. There is a fit adjustment between the terms—preacher and sermon. Where one is, the other ought to be.

I was once pastor in a good Tennessee town—a town sitting in a fertile valley, situated in a sward of blue grass, made historic because a great battle had reddened its soil in the 60's. The church was composed of as fine a company of people as ever grew in the Volunteer State.

There were splendid companies of people composing a number of other denominations.

I had a friend, a member of the Presbyterian Church. He was a regular attendant on worship. If there was no worship in his church, he came to ours. One evening, at the close, he walked several blocks with me, as I went to the parsonage. He said to me, "you gave us a good talk this evening." I replied: "I thank you, but I want to ask you why you say I 'talked,' and your pastor 'preached?' There is no very marked difference in our abilities."

He could not well define the cause of his unstudied use of the two terms. But, grounded in him, there was an indescribable reason.

It lay in the preacher first, and perhaps in the sermon also. First, in the preacher: the preacher was a Presbyterian—so was my friend; the preacher had a pleasing personality—and these men were congenial. There were sermons which themselves had merit; the personality and the sermons could not be separated.

Therefore two things are involved—the preacher himself and the sermon in itself—and the preacher and the sermon as they are identified with each other.

Whether we of to-day do or not, it is absolutely true that Methodism in all its historic personality believes in a Divine call to preach. So that not only are preacher and sermon identified, but both of these are related to God—to the Holy Spirit.

Neither preacher nor sermon can exist in a spiritual normalcy unless the Holy Spirit is related to them.

It is true that in the preacher there is the human element, and it is also true, this same element is in the hearer, so that we may philosophically say, "How shall they hear without a preacher?"—a human preacher?

It is one of the mysteries how a Divine agent, calling into the ministry men, selects such diversities. This is manifest not only in features, voices, temperament, but also in mental endowments. Yet it is not strange to say, often the humblest called are the most wonderful evangels. Paul saw this when he said: "Not many wise men after the flesh, not many mighty, not many noble, are called."

Therefore the human in the preacher, while it is a clog to the high value of the sincere, is also properly related and exercised, an endowment, an endowment for right purposes, greater than an angelic or purely spiritual nature.

It is no doubt possible for the disembodied to take interest in and render service to those in the flesh; but they are not capacitated to render the full, rich, and fruitful service that a human can.

Then he who is called is also called to improve his own personality. And the obligation is the same if the called be the humblest or the greatest. For the sermon, in its divine intent, in either class, is a failure without a personal character back of it.

Two things enter into the merit of a sermon—as to the estimate placed upon it by the hearer. Who preached it—what is he? How much has he wrought upon it, and its delivery? Those who heard Rev. Sam P. Jones when he was throwing his whole life with an utter abandon into his preaching in the earliest years of his great popularity, and in the latest years of it, could see the difference. He was the same great man even greater at the last, for the thousands waited on his ministry but there was absent that touch of pathos that won and moved to high action, that was present in the earliest years. Crowds are desirable, but converts are better.

In the making and preaching of a sermon, a just and real estimate should be had by the preacher of himself and the sermon. Paul said, "We are ambassadors for Christ," and our sermon is "good news."

Preachers and their sermons constitute much of the influence that keeps "faith" on the earth.

When I realize how much is at the hand of the preacher—in sea and land, in plain and mountain, in flowers and forests, in light and shadow, in nature and revelation, in history and Providence—I wonder how men divinely charged with this high service can come to the occasions for preaching with such trite and empty messages.

With the changing centuries it is possible that adjustments are to be made in minor details in preacher and sermon; but in essentials, there is no change. The preacher is still God's choice—the message is the word of life.

In the earlier days, the Methodist built his sermon most frequently, from beginning to end, for a purpose; that purpose was to set before the sinner his spiritual state, and how to find the way of salvation.

I have noticed that the preachers, great and small, of the "Christian" brotherhood, before closing any sermon on any subject, put a succinct and complete view of their understanding of the "sinner and the way of salvation" as a final part of the sermon. And it is true the hearers understood the early Methodists, as they wove it into the entire sermon, and so they do of our Christian brethren.

Preachers and sermon are set to win men to Christ. Lawyers frame their speeches to win a verdict. The man, in himself, must strive under God to be a "fit vessel" he must build his message to set Christ before men and persuade them to be reconciled to God.

LOOK UP.

There are times in the experience of every person when in dire distress he knows not whither to turn. In our sorrows, in our distresses and perplexities, oftentimes it seems as though nowhere upon earth can succor and help be found. There are moments in human experiences, like the times of earthquake and great convulsion in nature, when all the foundations upon which we have rested are shaken. When the great traveler, Baron Humboldt, was journeying in South America, there came one day a sudden stillness in the air, which seemed like a hush over all nature. But that was followed by a fearful convulsion of the earth which made all hearts quake. And Humboldt tells us that the earthquake within his soul was as great as that in the world without. All his old views of the safety of the earth were destroyed in a moment. Should he fly to the hills for help? The mountains were reeling like drunken men. The houses were no refuge, for they were crumbling and falling, and the trees were overthrown. Then his thoughts turned to the sea; but, lo, it had fled. Ships which just before were floating securely on its surface were now left rocking in the sands. Being thus at his wit's end, he tells us, he "looked up, and observed that the heavens alone were calm and unshaken."

So in human experience there come times when there seems to be no human help, when we can do nothing but look up and abide in loving trust in him who abideth forever. Lutheran Observer.

I Jesus have sent mine angel to testify unto you these things in the churches.—Rev. 22.16.

NOTES FROM COLUMBUS DISTRICT.

The Columbus District Conference and Standard Training School, combined, will be held at Columbus, June 23-28. We are expecting a good attendance for both. We are hoping that every preacher in the district will take one of the courses offered by the Training School. Several preachers have already enrolled and ordered their books. In view of the fact that we will have a crowded program, combining the two meetings, it would be much better if all who expect to attend would order their books and study before coming. This applies especially to delegates to the District Conference who expect to take one of the courses in the Training School. Dr. Clovis G. Chappell will preach twice daily throughout the entire week. It will be worth a trip to Columbus to hear this series of sermons by this noted preacher.

We are in the midst of our Rally Day campaign for the rural churches of the district. This campaign does not include all our rural churches, only six charges being reached this round. We have already visited the Chester, McCool, High Point, and Mashulaville charges, and in spite of bad weather and all but impassable roads, we have succeeded at every place. Brothers R. H. B. Gladney, B. P. Jaco, and W. M. Campbell have been with us on this campaign. I don't think it would be possible to get a stronger team of speakers. These brethren have stirring messages, and the people have received and responded to these messages. Brother J. H. McKinnon, our District Lay Leader, has been with us at a few places. Few laymen, if any, have a stronger message than Brother McKinnon. Brother Gladney never fails to organize a Sunday school where they have no organization, and always strengthens the one already organized. No man among us has a stronger message for the people than Brother Gladney. In fact, it seems that these brethren, working with us in this campaign, have just the message needed at each place. The Lord has wonderfully blessed our efforts. We will be with Brother Bowlin, Kosciusko circuit, April 23-27, and close with Brother Ellis, Ethel circuit, May 1-4. We hope to carry a similar program to all our rural churches before the end of the year.

Thus far, this quarter, the financial reports have been considerably in advance of last quarter. We are glad to report that everything looks promising along all lines for a great year throughout the district. We cannot make a definite report as to the Superannuate Endowment until the end of the quarter. We are glad to report, however, that a number of places either have the first year's quota in cash or well provided for to be paid later in the year.

We are planning to hold quite a number of consolidated conferences for the third round. Our plan is to group all the conferences for this round except two, holding from two to four at one time. Most of these conferences go to the country for an all-day meeting.

GREENVILLE DISTRICT NOTES.

District Conference.

The District Conference was well attended, the work done at the Standard Training School most encouraging, the reports of the pastors indicating a growing spirituality. The outstanding features were the living testimonies given by laymen and pastors, the singing led by Rev. J. W. Robertson, and the preaching done by Rev. W. N. Dodds, Rev. E. Nash Broyles, Rev. W. W. Woollard, and our guest of honor, Rev. Clovis G. Chappell, D.D., of Memphis, Tenn. Capacity crowds heard Dr. Chappell. He is easily one of the most interesting and effective preachers in our church. In every way he met all expectations. We yould do the church a great service to elect such a man bishop. He combines common sense, marked culture, a genial and evangelistic spirit with the instinct of a great pastor that is always needed in our college of bishops. He made a great impression for good in Clarksdale.

Church Buildings.

Arcola charge, Rev. H. D. Suydam, pastor, recently completed a $2,500 church at Murphy, on the Sunflower charge. This building was dedicated by the elder, assisted by Revs. S. A. Brown, T. E. Gregory, and the pastor of the charge.

The Leland congregation is worshiping in the basement of their new church. In a short time the whole building will be ready. It is the last word in modern church srtucture.

Rev. A. R. Beasley and his people at Glen Allan will be in their new building in a few weeks. It is ample in every way for their needs, and represents an outlay of money and an investment of faith beyond the ordinary.

The new church at Merigold is now taking form in a most happy way. Here is combined the steady pulse of a happy pastor and an equally happy people.

And Dundee has the fever. Their new church enterprise has passed the stage of experiment, reaching solid ground. It is badly needed, and this sorely pressed people, financially, deserve much credit for their pluck and devotion. Brother Wyatt is on the job with intelligence and enthusiasm.

Do not forget Greenville. They have been suffering in the flesh for many moons. They have made all kinds of shifts. Their Sunday school is scattered from the City Hall to the Big Brothers' class room. They are behind a movement, under the leadership of Rev. E. Nash Broyles, to construct a modern Sunday school building that will take care of all their needs. It will cost them about $20,000.

Rev. W. S. Selman is occupying a new parsonage at Dubbs. It cost that enterprising people some four thousand dollars, and is a most delightful preacher's home. At least a half dozen other buildings are being planned. Nothing but the financial stress prevents building.

Revivals.

A most remarkable revival spirit pervades the whole district. The Gipsy Smith meeting at Clarksdale was remarkable in many particulars. It reached far beyond Clarksdale. Men unknown to church circles are now actively engaged in reaching men for Christ.

Friars Point had the greatest meeting ever known in that charge. Rev. J. W. Robertson did the preaching. Rev. Dan Kelly did the preaching at Duncan and Alligator. The membership was doubled at Alligator.

Shelby is in the midst of a great community revival, led by Rev. Clovis G. Chappell, D. D., of Memphis. The church building is wholly inadequate for the crowds.

Rev. Burke Culpepper will beging a three weeks' meeting at Cleveland the first Sunday in May. Pastors in adjacent territory will cooperate.

A fine revival was held at Merigold recently by the Baptist brethren, our people co-operating. Very gracious ingatherings followed. The end is not yet. Then the happy and effective pastor of that charge is having conversions at his regular services as well as a great hearing. This is notably true at Shipman's Chapel.

The Billy Sunday meeting at Memphis is reaching far into this territory for good. In my whole ministry I have not seen so great and universal interest shown in the salvation of men. Our church is growing at practically every point in the district.

Finances.

A survey of reports indicate that our finances are at least in as good condition as at this time last year, despite marked financial depression. Every charge in the district accepted its quota for the S. E. F. and some of them are already making payments on same. Tunica increased the pastor's salary six hundred dollars, Merigold two hundred, and others smaller amounts. By every token this district will report "level columns" next fall, and the largest number of additions in any one year in the history of the district. If there is a preacher in the district who is not working, I have no knowledge of the fact. If there is a serious friction point, I have no knowledge of it. The district spirit is the finest ever. Bishop Ainsworth will preach to our Clarksdale people next Sunday. JAMES H. FELTS, P. E.

GENERAL HOSPITAL BOARD REVIEWS YEAR'S WORK.

By Dr. Charles C. Jarrell, General Secretary.

In less than two years' time, the General Hospital Board of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has come to be a Board with "Big Business" on its hands.

Properties worth $700,000 were offered to the Board at its annual session, April 16, in Atlanta, Ga. This is additional to the $250,000 property acquired at Montgomery, Ala., by this Board last May. Members of the Board asserted that this was the largest amount of property acquired by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in such a short time and at such small outlay by the church known to them.

Fairmont, West Virginia, sent Mr. C. H. Bischoff, Secretary of the Fairmont Chamber of Commerce, and Mr. Smith Hood, who appeared before the Board. These gentlemen presented the offer of $250,000 from that city to secure a Methodist Hospital. Huntington, West Virginia, sent word that they had a similar or larger offer brewing, and on this account the selection of the West Virginia site was referred for final action to the Executive Committee. This Committee will hold the matter open for several weeks longer.

Large properties at Clifton, Arizona, were offered to the Board as a site for its proposed Tubercular Sanitarium. The General Secretary, Dr. Jarrell, will leave this week to inspect this property.

The Good Samaritan Hospital of Lexington, Ky., was offered to the church. This splendid property, beautifully situated "in the heart of the Blue Grass," is worth at least a quarter of a million dollars. This offer was referred to the Executive Committee, with power to act, and the General Secretary was instructed to secure promise of the widest possible Methodist "backing" for the institution in Kentucky pending final action.

The meeting was held in the offices of Dr. C. C. Jarrell, General Secretary of the Hospital Board, with Bishop Warren A. Candler, senior bishop of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, president of the Board, presiding.

Dr. Jarrell's annual report, showing great progress in the hospitalization of the Southern Methodist Church, was read and was one of the decided features of the meeting. It was brought out most forcefully that the Hospital Board has accomplished much in its brief existence and that Southern Methodism is aroused over the importance of the project. The following statistics were quoted in Dr. Jarrell's report:

"During the year just ended, 10,830 patients were treated; the total income of the hospitals amounted to $647,795; the total hospital properties of the church are valued at $4,249,822; the total hospital endowment is $1,025,321; the total hospital values are $5,275,154; the average cost of a patient for one day is $5.03."

Dr. Jarrell gave the Board the results of the last enrollment of the Golden Cross. The figures showed that North Georgia led the church with $16,568. The Alabama Conference came next with $6,846, North Alabama third with $2,600, and South Georgia fourth with $1,464. The North Texas Conference has not made its report to this office, but the Golden Cross Enrollment was widely observed in that Conference.

Dr. F. W. Brandon, superintendent of the hospital at Montgomery, Ala., was present and made a report showing marked progress in the hospital venture there.

Dr. Jarrell asserted that this Board would likely report to the next General Conference not less than twelve hospitals in operation. He stated that communities were so ready to co-operate in the hospital program that if he had $10,000,000 he could in a few years build $20,000,000 worth of hospitals.

The General Hospital Board was authorized at the General Conference, May, 1922. The Board organized on July 19, 1922, with Bishop Candler as Chairman, and Atlanta as headquarters. The General Secretary, Dr. C. C. Jarrell, began his duties April 1, 1923.

Those present at the meeting just held, in addition to Bishop Candler and Dr. Jarrell, were: Dr. T. A. Smoot, of Danville, Va., vice-president of the Board; Walker White, treasurer; A. F. Smith, of Nashville; M. M. McCall, of Opelika; J. B. Ivey, of Charlotte, N. C.

Bishop Candler expressed his opinion that hospital service is one of the major philanthropies of present-day society. He believes that there is an immense hospital future before the Methodist Church and declares that he will labor incessantly to promote this program of the Christian religion.

BOOMERANGS.

By Rev. H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

The boomerang is a crude weapon invented and used by the Australian aborigines. It is so constructed that when hurled and failing to strike an antagonist it returns with such force that unless the thrower is careful to avoid his returning weapon he will be injured by it. Some of these so-called higher critics hurl recklessly at their antagonists supposed arguments, that come back upon them, boomerang-fashion, with fearful force.

Boomerang No. I.

I have lately read in "A Critical Introduction to the Old Testament," by George Buchanan Gray, D.D., D. Litt, Professor in Mansfield College, Oxford, and on page 17 the following: "The Pentateuch itself makes no claim to be the work of Moses." In Exodus 17:14, I read: "Jehovah said unto Moses, Write this for a memorial in the book and rehearse it in the ears of Joshua." Note that the American R. V. Margin, by all odds the most accurate version we have, says "the book," i.e., the Book of Exodus, which Moses was then writing. Again I read in Exodus, 24:3, 4: "Moses came down from Sinai, where he had received the law and the ordinances and told the people all the words of Jehovah and all the ordinances, * * * * and Moses wrote all the words of Jehovah." In Exodus 34:27: "Jehovah said unto Moses, Write thou these words, for after the tenor of these words I have made a covenant with thee and with Israel." The import of this passage is: "Be sure not to fail to get these words into your book; for they are specially important."

Even the Book of Numbers claims a Mosaic authorship for at least four books of the Pentateuch! Numbers 33:2, "Moses wrote their goings out according to their journeys," and indicates that the "journeys" alluded to began in Egypt and ended "in the plains of Moab by Jordan near Jericho."

So far as Exodus, Leviticus, and Numbers are concerned, Moses is declared unequivocally to have written them. "All the words of Jehovah," "all the laws and commandments and ordinances," the history of "all their journeys from Egypt," where they began, "to Jordan" "near Jericho," where they ended. Is there anything else left in these books for some one else to have written?

How about Deuteronomy? In chapter 31:9, we read: "And Moses wrote this law, and delivered it unto the priests, the sons of Levi, which bare the ark of the covenant of the Lord, and unto all the elders of Israel." 22: "Moses wrote this song" (set down as. 33:1-43); at 31:24-26, we read: "And it came to pass, when Moses had made an end of writing the words of this law in a book, until they were finished, that Moses commanded the Levites, which bare the ark of the covenant of the Lord, saying, Take this book of the law, and put it in the side of the ark of the covenant of the Lord your God, that it may be there for a witness against thee."

Now let us recapitulate: The Pentateuch specifically declare that Moses wrote:

1. Some special things needful to be impressed on the minds of the children of Israel.
2. All the history of all the journeys of the Israelites from Egypt to the border of Canaan.
3. All the laws and commandments and ordinances laid down for them.
4. All the words Jehovah had spoken to him.
5. The Book of Deuteronomy written as a sort of second edition of the law nearly forty years later than the law given on Sinai.
6. One great hymn certainly, and probably two others. See Exodus 15 and Deuteronomy 32 and 33.

Dr. Gray cautiously indicates that certainly Moses did not write the last chapter of Deuteronomy that details his death. Mirabile dictu! Who ever supposed that he did? Dr. Gray's boomerang strikes him with tremendous force. Alas! he is not the only so-called learned man to set forward these absurd contentions.

Boomerang No. II.

It has been the habit of these so-called higher critics to ignore utterly everything concerning the authorship of the Pentateuch said by Christ. Some things will not be ignored. Such are the things said by Christ. He spoke again and again of "the law" as being "by" or "through Moses." His truest and most thoughtful member of "the twelve" declared, "The law was given through Moses." Christ himself defied "the Jews" thus: "Did not Moses give you the law, and yet none of you doeth the law?" The Gospels yield abundant evidence of this kind. It will not do to say that Jesus ignored the fiction of Moses writing the Pentateuch. He never ignored fictions of this kind. For him to have repeatedly lent his endorsement to the Mosaic authorship of the Pentateuch, when he knew that Moses was not the author, would have been a palpable deception, and if he did not know, his ignorance would be a revelation but little less horrible than deception. If Jesus is what he claimed to be and what our faith holds him to be, his evidence in this matter must be received. He who denies the validity of Christ's testimony in this matter hurls a fearful boomerang.

Boomerang No. III.

Some years ago it became known that the textbook on the History of Religion used by Vanderbilt University taught that the Hebrews borrowed their worship of Jehovah and the name from their pagan neighbors. Having studied those heathen cults, and having found them very low and inexpressibly vile, I shuddered at the very suggestion. The shuddering suggestion is still occasionally repeated. I find it to be only a boomerang. In Exodus 6:2,3, I read: "God spake unto Moses, and said unto him, I am Jehovah: and I appeared unto Abraham, unto Isaac and unto Jacob, as God Almighty (El Shaddai); but by my name Jehovah I was not known to them;" in verse 6: "Wherefore say unto the children of Israel, I am Jehovah;" again in verses 8 and 9: "I am Jehovah. And Moses spake so unto the children of Israel." Here is when and how they learned the name of their God, and at Sinai they learned better how to worship him; and not at all from the vile cults of the Canaanites doomed because of their incurable vileness to be utterly exterminated. What a boomerang was this book on the History of Religion!

Boomerang No. IV.

In 1921 there was held in Cambridge, England, a "Conference" of supposedly learned men: teachers in theological schools and pastors and writers of supposedly theological books—one a dean in the Church of England and one a Methodist preacher, writer, and teacher. Here are some of the wild things they said:

"There is no more reason for supposing that Jesus * * * knew more than his contemporaries about the true scientific explanation of the mental diseases which current belief attributed to diabolic possession than that he knew more about the authorship of the Pentateuch or the Psalms." (Rev. R. G. Parsons.)

"We are still far from having any proof that we have the very words of Jesus or any guarantee that the events of his life are related with absolute accuracy in the Gospels * * *. It is no longer possible to insist on the literal accuracy of the Gospel narratives." ("Peake's Commentary.")

"Jesus claimed to be God's Son in a moral sense, in the sense in which all human beings are sons of God." (H. D. A. Major, B. D.)

What do we mean precisely when we ascribe divinity to Jesus? The leaders of the conference (the assembly or court at Cambridge) are agreed in their answer that the deity of Jesus is to be seen in his perfect humanity—that is in the sense in which all human beings are." (H. D. A. Major, B. D.)

"I do not for a moment suppose that Jesus ever thought of himself as God. Nor do I think that the fourth Gospel so represents him." (Prof. J. F. Bethune-Baker.)

"Jesus did not claim divinity for himself. Never in any critically well-attested sayings is there anything which suggests that his conscious relation to God was other than that of a man toward God." (Dean Rashdall.)

"Whatever Jesus means by calling himself Son of God or by saying, if he did say, 'I and my Father are one,' it is clear that he did not mean that he was identical * * * with God." (Nowell Smith, M. A.)

Now hear what Jesus and his Apostles say about these matters:

"I am the light of the world: he that followeth me shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life. (John 8:12.)

"That was the true Light, which lighteth every man that cometh into the world." (John 1:9.)

"Whosoever shall be ashamed of me and of my words, of him shall the Son of man be ashamed, when he shall come in his own glory, and in the glory of the Father, and of his holy angels." (Luke 9:26.)

"The Comforter, which is the Holy Ghost, whom the Father will send in my name, he shall teach you all things, and shall bring all things to your remembrance, whatsoever I have said unto you." (John 14:26.)

"That which was from the beginning, which we have heard, which we have seen with our eyes, which we have looked upon, and our hands have handled, of the Word of life; * * * that which we have seen and heard declare we unto you." (I John 1:13.)

"In the beginning was the Word, * * * and the Word was God. * * * All things were made by him; and without him was not anything made." (John 1:1-3.)

"I and my Father are one." (John 10:30.)

"Verily, verily, I say unto you, Before Abraham was, I am." John 8:58, Revised Version.)

"And the Word was made flesh, and dwelt among us, (and we beheld his glory, the glory as of the only-begotten of the Father,) full of grace and truth." (John 1:14.)

"He was in the world, and the world was made by him, and the world knew him not." (John 1:10.)

"Father, glorify thou me with * * * * the glory which I had with thee before the world was." (John 17:5.)

"All things whatsoever the Father hath are mine." (John 16:15.)

How utterly insignificant seem these supposed high-brows! Oh, the boomerangs they hurled; how terrible their return!

Serve Him with a perfect heart and with a willing mind. I Chronicles 28:9.

Blessed is the man that walketh not in the counsel of the ungodly, nor standeth in the way of sinners, nor sitteth in the seat of the scornful. —Psalm i. 1.

146. North Alabama, Huntsville, Rev. J. M. McCleskey, P. E.

147. North Mississippi, Columbus, Rev. A. T. Mellwain, P. E.

148. North Alabama, Russellville, Rev. F. L. Aldridge, P. E.

149. North Georgia, LaGrange, Rev. Wallace Rogers, P. E.

150. Memphis, Paducah, Rev. J. Mack Jenkins, P. E.

151. North Georgia, Elberton, Rev. Horace S. Smith, P. E.

EXTRACTS FROM LETTERS WHICH THRILL.

Rev. H. T. Gilbert, pastor of Coal Creek charge, Holston, Knoxville: "Minimum quota of this circuit is $900. We have pledged $2050 and hope to get more. Our entire membership is not over 150."

Rev. C. M. Raby, pastor of San Marcos charge, West Texas, San Marcos: "Have $5000 in signed subscriptions to Superannuate Endowment, to be paid in three years. This is $1600 above our quota. Have already remitted $1107.44."

Rev. S. A. Barnes, pastor of Floral Heights Church, North Texas, Wichita Falls: "We assumed a quota of $6000 and have secured pledges amounting to $9000. Will send you in a few days one-half of our quota in cash. It was the easiest collection that I have ever taken. We hope to make $10,000 before we are through."

Mrs. Jno. R. Nelson, wife of the presiding elder of the Memphis District, Memphis Conference: "Yesterday I attended an all-day meeting of the Missionary Society of St. John's Church, this city. The Society enthusiastically doubled what they had previously pledged for Superannuate Endowment ($500), thus deciding to raise $1000 for this sacred cause. This makes the assumed quota of St. John's Church $16,000."

Rev. Robert E. Goodrich, pastor of First Methodist Church, Louisiana, Shreveport: "Against our accepted quota of $6720 our congregation has pledged $11,700, and practically all of it is to be paid within thirty days.

Rev. Walter V. Cropper, Centenary Church, Shelbyville, Ky.: "Against a quota for the first year of $600 this charge made a cash offering in gold of $850. The joy experienced by the people in making this gold offering was the most delightful and beautiful expression ever seen in this church. The gold coins in $20, $10, $5, and $2.50 pieces were displayed before the congregation on a tablet prepared for the purpose and as the cash offerings were made by the people. It was wonderful."

Rev. J. B. Yoak, pastor of Enterprise charge, Western Virginia, Fairmont: "Against a quota of $1640 we have subscribed $1907, with $507 in cash. Easiest task I ever performed. Like falling off a log—just let go and you are gone. We let go."

Rev. Richard L. Ownbey, pastor of First Methodist Church, Columbia, Tenn.: "Our minimum quota for Superannuate Endowment is $3382. We presented the matter to our people March 30 and secured $4200 in cash and good subscriptions made in fine spirit. Many of our people were not present and they are being seen. We hope to go well over $5000 within a week."

IMPORTANT THINGS TO KEEP IN MIND.

All remittances on quotas in the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment must be made direct to the Board of Finance, Security Bldg., St. Louis, Mo. This rule was approved by the General Conference and it should be followed without exception.

Treasurers of Special Effort Committees should make remittances to the Board of Finance as rapidly as the cash comes into their hands. Do not wait to have a big sum before remitting, but keep the money on the jump until it lands with the Board in St. Louis.

Endowment money not invested is dead money. Special Effort money is Endowment money, and when it tarries in the hands of local treasurers it is dead and useless. But when the treasurers send it promptly to the Board of Finance, it is invested and becomes alive and active in earning income for the support of the Forgotten Man.

Do not send subscription envelopes to the Board of Finance. The Special Effort Committee should take charge of them, collect the amounts subscribed, and keep the accounts with the subscribers. The money only should be sent to the Board in St. Louis, using the treasurer's remittance form in sending it. The Board keeps the account with the Charge as a whole, but the local Committee keeps the account with individual subscribers.

O Lord, thou art the way, the truth, and the life; in whom is no darkness, error, vanity, or death—the light without which there is darkness, the way without which there is wandering, the truth without which there is error; the life without which there is death; say, Lord, "Let there be light," and I shall see—light and eschew darkness; I shall see the way and avoid wandering; I shall see the truth and shun error; I shall see life and escape death.—St. Augustine.

The Home Circle

A CHEERY SMILE.

A cheery smile will often prove
A most contagious thing.
It spreads and scatters happiness
Like blossoms in the spring.

And when things all go crookedly
And everything looks blue,
A cheery smile is well worth while
And always helps you through.

IN PARTNERSHIP WITH GOD.

It was a bright, beautiful morning, writes Mrs. C. B. Dyson in one of the story-leaflets of the Home Missionary Society, and I was in the yard tying up a spray of roses here and there when my niece, little Mary, seven years old, who lives across the street, came in to see me. (She is fond of coming over and we always have good, lively times together.)

This morning, of which I am writing, she asked me to tell her about the boys and girls in my Sunday school.

Then she said, "Let's play we are in Sunday school," and although our attendance was small, Mary proved such an attentive pupil that I became greatly interested. After being the pupil for a while she said, "Oh, let me be the teacher; I know verses out of the Bible and I know how to pass the plate around for money."

The plate proved to be the card-tray, and buttons and small pieces of paper were put in for money. She seemed very much mystified when I suggested for the offering verse, "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

She said, "Oh, I don't like that verse."

"Why?" I asked.

"Oh, I like to get things, but I don't like to give anything away."

I saw that I would have to explain and make clear to Mary the responsibility of individual giving. My task was not an easy one.

I then talked to her about the tithe or tenth of everything we have being the Lord's, telling her that God, our Heavenly Father, is the owner of everything, but that He gives all into our hands and only asks that we each give Him our heart's best love and one-tenth of everything that we call our own. If we do this, we are working with God and that is being in partnership with Him.

I asked her if she would like to be in partnership with God.

Mary said eagerly, "Can a little girl, or a little boy, be in partnership with God?"

I replied, "Certainly."

"Then please show me how," said Mary.

I told her I thought a good way would be to get a little box and call it her Tithe Box, and put one penny into it out of every ten she received.

A few days after our little talk Mary came in great haste to where I was seated sewing, and said, "Now watch me, Auntie, for something nice is going to happen."

Opening her purse, she turned all the pennies out on a chair, and picking out the brightest one she held it up and said, "That is God's. This is His part and goes in my Tithe Box." And then looking at the pennies that were still on the chair she added:

"Why there are nine pennies left. I don't often have so much money at one time. Do you think it is because I am in partnership with God?"

Then she said, "The second penny is for some candy. My! I am real hungry for candy; I have not had any for——, oh, it seems such a long, long time, for I have been saving my pennies so I could get God's part out and start my Tithe Box."

Still looking at her pennies, she said, "These two I am going to save, for next week is mamma's birthday, you know, and I want to buy her a prize package. Did you ever buy one, Auntie? You see you don't know just what you are getting. Oh, it is such fun!"

Taking two pennies in her hand, she said, "These I am going to give to Jesus."

"Why," I said, "you have given your first one to Jesus."

But she quickly said, "Oh, no, Auntie dear, that first one belonged to Him, and was His part of the ten pennies, but now I want to give Him two pennies."

I said, "Certainly, Mary, you can give Him just as many as you want, and I would call them love offerings. But always remember, if you are in partnership with God that one penny out of every ten pennies belongs to Him."

Mary went home a very happy little girl. That evening, going up to her papa, in the library, and climbing into his lap, she put her arms about his neck and asked softly, "Papa, did mamma tell you that I am in partnership with God?"—New York Christian Advocate.

DREADING AND WORKING.

Dreading is harder than working. A little girl learned this lesson. Her mother had told her she must pick the pods from a row of peas in the garden the next day.

"O, mother," cried Martha, "all those dreadful peas?"

"There are not many. Only the ones that I have left to dry for seed," answered her mother.

"But I do hate to pick peas. It is so tedious," grumbled Martha.

She thought of the morrow's task the last thing before falling asleep and the first thing in the morning, and the thought made her miserable.

"Why don't you pick them and be done with it?" asked her brother, who heard her complaining about them. But no, Martha dreaded her work so much that she put it off as long as possible. She didn't pick the peas, and yet the knowledge that she had to do it kept her from enjoying anything else she tried to do the whole morning through.

In the afternoon her uncle drove up in his car and asked if Martha might go for a ride with him.

"O, mother, may I go?" cried the little girl.

"Yes, if you have gathered the peas," said her mother.

"Please let me go, and I will gather them as soon as I come back," begged Martha.

But Martha's mother felt that her little daughter needed a lesson, so she said, "No, dear," and Uncle Fred drove away alone.

"I might just as well pick the old mean things now that they have spoiled my whole day," Martha said to herself.

She was surprised to find that there was only a small panful of them, and felt a bit ashamed when she carried them to her mother.

"Martha, it has just taken you fifteen minutes by the clock to do the task which you have been dreading and putting off for more than fifteen hours," said her mother.

"Yes, and I missed a ride, and I am just as tired as I can be, besides. Why, mother, I believe dreading to work is the hardest work there is," said Martha. Which was a very wise remark and a true statement, even if it was only a little girl who said it.—Herald and Presbyter.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page, leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

A RESPECTFUL PROTEST.

As a member of the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, representing the North Mississippi Conference, I desire the privilege of stating in our official organ, as one in part responsible for the administration of the Advocate in harmony with the purpose of its publication, that I do not concur in the modernistic tendencies apparent in editorial utterances and contributed articles, becoming more obvious of late, contrary to the official action of the Publishing Committee, accepted by the Editor; quotations in proof of which from the columns of the Advocate can be cited if desired.

I desire to register also my respectful protest against the repeated refusal of the Editor to publish articles by representative Methodist ministers (including a Bishop—McMurry—our Secretary of Ministerial Supply and Training, and the writer, articles all soundly orthodox in doctrine and purpose), as subversive of our fundamental Protestant and American doctrine of freedom of speech and press, and as keeping our members in ignorance of matters of vital concern to the church, the correct view and spirit of which the people themselves should be allowed to judge after hearing both sides: the policy objected to being continued by the Editor in disregard of the Resolutions adopted at the last annual meeting of the Publishing Committee, "That the columns of the New Orleans Christian Advocate be kept open for a free discussion of all matters of vital interest to the church, that our people may be fully informed of all facts and issues before us."

Regretting the necessity which impels me in fidelity to my personal convictions and I believe the welfare of the church to present this statement, in malice toward none and in loyalty to the Methodist Church and its great Head and the ends for which the Christian Advocate exists, I remain,

Fraternally and faithfully,
T. H. LIPSCOMB,
Member Publishing Committee,
North Mississippi Conference.

With reference to the above, the Editor of the Advocate desires ouly to say that he stands squarely upon the record of his official administration. Mindful of the responsibilities of his position, he has exercised the right—and he will continue to exercise it as long as he holds the position—to pass upon the acceptability of any matter offered for publication from any source whatsoever. His judgment is not iufallible—but his conscience is clear.

The Publishing Committee itself is competent to pass upon the whole matter, and to the Committee it is referred.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Two new Epworth Leagues—Junior and Intermediate—have recently been organized in the Central Methodist Church, Columbus, Miss.

The Sunday school atteudance of the First Methodist Church, Columbus, Miss., on Easter Sunday was 744.

The College of Bishops will assemble in Nashville, Tenn., May 2-5, for the regular spring meeting. The plan of episcopal visitation will be arranged at this meeting.

The Annual Meeting of the General Board of Lay Activities will be held at Mt. Sequoyah, Fayetteville, Ark., July 29-31. Judge W. Erskine Williams, Fort Worth, Texas, is president of the Board.

Among the speakers engaged for the second annual session of the Winona Lake Bible School of Theology, July 25 to August 21, we note the names of Bishop Warren A. Candler, Dr. Geo. R. Stuart, and Rev. Bob Shuler.

According to the report of Rev. J. J. Morgan, Southwestern Agency Secretary of the American Bible Society, with headquarters at Dallas, Tex., last year was a record-breaker in the distribution of the Scriptures, more than 226,000 volumes being distributed, in 62 languages.

We learn from the Fayette, Miss., Chronicle that Rev. J. L. Smith, our faithful pastor at Fayette, is still confined to his home as the result of a sprained ankle, the accident occurring several weeks ago. We trust that he will soon be entirely recovered from the injury.

Rev. J. H. Sharp, Perth, Miss., reports that all goes well on the Nebo charge, which he serves. Brother Sharp preached on the evening of April 13 for Rev. J. L. Smith, who has been kept out of his pulpit at Fayette on account of a sprained ankle.

Mr. Geo. Avery, Sr., of Biloxi, Miss., father of Rev. Geo. Avery, Jr., Liberty, Texas, and of Rev. C. W. Avery, Crawford, Miss., passed away at his home on April 17 and was buried at Biloxi on Sunday afternoon, April 20. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the bereaved family and friends of the deceased.

On Sunday evening, April 20, Rev. M. M. Black, our pastor at Richton, Miss., preached the commencement sermon for the high school at Ovett, Miss., and on Friday evening, April 25, he delivered the address at the closing exercises of the Washington Consolidated School at Neely, Miss.

The opening service of the new church building at Franklinton, La., will be held on the first Sunday in May, the editor of the Advocate being honored with an invitation to preach the opening sermon. Rev. L. W. Cain is the faithful pastor under whose leadership this beautiful and commodious building has been erected.

The announcement last week of the death of Mr. J. S. Turner, of Hattiesburg, Miss., was received with sorrow by his many friends throughout the State. He was a successful business man, a lifetime member of the Methodist Church, and a devout Christian. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the family and friends of the deceased.

Mansfield College presented in recital, on the evening of April 24, Miss Greeta Gearheard, soprano, and Miss Ladye Nelson Boykin, pianist, at the First Methodist Church, Mansfield, La. Both these young ladies are daughters of members of the Louisiana Conference, and their many friends congratulate them upon the proficiency they have attained in their chosen art.

The Easter services in the Methodist church at Lake Providence, La., where Rev. Jno. F. Foster is pastor, were largely attended. The offering for the Orphanage amounted to $144, with more to follow. Brother Foster, the indefatigable pastor, speaks twice a month at the high school, and he is also giving a series of lectures at the church on the Holy Land.

We learn with great sorrow that Rev. J. L. Greenway, Jr., our pastor at Farnerville, La., was suddenly stricken with serious illness on Monday of last week. Brother Greenway is a son of Rev. J. L. Greenway, of the Mississippi Conference, and is one of the most promising of the younger members of the Louisiana Conference. Earnest prayer will be made, we are sure, that he may be speedily restored to health.

The Commission on Temperance and Social service, of which Bishop James Cannon, Jr., is chairman, will hold two conferences this summer, one at Lake Junaluska, July 6-13, and the other at the Western Assembly, Mt. Sequoyah, Fayetteville, Ark., August 1-4. The general topic for discussion will be, "The Christian Home as a Vital Factor in Civilization." Speakers of national note have been secured for the program.

Mr. John R. Pepper, for more than forty years superintendent of the Sunday school of the First Methodist Church, Memphis, Tenn., was recently elected chairman of the General Sunday school Board in place of Bishop James Atkins, deceased. Mr. Pepper is recognized as one of the great Sunday school leaders of the church, and his election to this high position will give general satisfaction.

Since January 1, some much-needed repairs have been made on the parsonage at Richton, Miss., Rev. M. M. Black, pastor. A new cypress roof has been put on, the exterior has received two coats of paint, and the interior has been papered and repainted, all at a cost of about $500. The work of the church prospers, several members having been received on profession of faith, and twenty or more by certificate.

We take this interesting item from the "Big Brother," Greenville, Miss.: "During a 'fanning bee' after our class service last Sunday, some of our orchestra members were bragging on their musical instruments, and during the argument a most conservative estimate was made and it developed that the minimum value of the instruments that go to make up our music each Sunday is $5,000." No wonder the music is so fine!

A great song service was held in the Moore Memorial Methodist Church, Winona, Miss., on the evening of Easter Sunday. The seating capacity of the building, including the Sunday school auditorium, was inadequate for the attendance. The largest congregations in the history of the church are attending the services Sunday after Sunday, and the work goes forward most auspiciously. Rev. Carroll Varner is the happy pastor.

The sad news comes from Rev. W. W. Nelson, Georgetown, Miss., of the death of Mrs. J. N. Ware, widow of the late Rev. J. N. Ware, of the Mississippi Conference, and her burial at the old Providence Camp Ground, near Rockport, on April 22. Sister Ware was nearly 72 years old. She had been a member of the church for 54 years. She was a devout Christian, ready for heaven. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones and friends.

Easter Sunday was a great day in the Trinity Methodist Church, El Paso, Texas, of which Rev. W. B. Hogg, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, is pastor. A sunrise prayer meeting was held, attended by 400 people; a children's service was held at 9:30 o'clock, with 700 in attendance, at which 52 children were received into the church, and 17 infants baptized; as many were turned away from the 11 o'clock service as were able to get into the building, and 179 members were received into the church at that service. The offering for the day was nearly $1,500.

The Sunday school attendance of the Galloway Memorial Methodist Church, Jackson, Mississippi, on Easter Sunday, was 1382, breaking all previous records. The attendance at the Men's Bible Class was 512. It is claimed that this is the largest number that ever attended a Bible class in Mississippi. The Easter address to the class was delivered by Judge J. Morgan Stevens. After the Sunday school, one of the largest congregations ever assembled in the church heard a great sermon by Rev. E. K. Means. Galloway Memorial is steadily developing into one of the great churches of the connection.

The following is taken from the West Carroll Gazette concerning the meeting in progress at Oak Grove, La., Rev. George Fox, pastor: "From the crowd that was present on the opening night of the revival meeting at the Methodist church, and continued increase since Wednesday, the meeting promises to be a great success. Rev. W. E. Thomas, a noted evangelist from Louisville, Ky., assisted by Mr. Cassedy, song leader, is conducting the meeting. Services will begin promptly at 10 a.m. and 7:45 p.m. The business houses are asked to close for one hour each morning during the meeting."

Rev. Robert Selby, of Vicksburg, Miss., in returning from the recent meeting of the Board of Education in Nashville, called on Bishop W. B. Murrah while passing through Memphis. He found the Bishop greatly improved in a general way, though he is unable to articulate. He is able to walk about the house and takes an occasional drive. His right side is not in normal condition, though he uses his arm and leg well. He looks well as to general health, and is interested in all that pertains to the welfare of the church. The fact of the Bishop's improvement will be noted with pleasure throughout the church, and earnest prayer will continue to be made that he may be restored to health.

The meeting of the New Orleans District Conference in Houma, La., last week was a very delightful occasion. The presiding elder, Dr. W. Winans Drake, presided with great grace and dignity. Rev. J. Cude Rousseau was elected secretary. Dr. O. S. Welch, Centenary Secretary, was present and delivered an inspiring address. The business of the conference was carried out with dispatch but without hurry. The following delegates to the Annual Conference were elected: Jno. H. Carter, J. H. Thatcher, Dr. M F. Wilson, Chas. O. Chalmers, W. M. Brown, Miss Ella Hooper, Mrs. C. F. Niebergall, Mrs. W. A. Gable. The following were elected as alternates: Mrs. J. A. Alford, Mrs. Laura M. White, Rev. J. B. Grambling, Miss Lida Steele. The editor of the Advocate greatly enjoyed the hospitality of the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Pullen. A very delightful feature of the conference was the basket dinner on the lawn of the MacDonell Wesley House.

It has become known that some friends are raising a fund to send Rev. and Mrs. F. B. Hill to Glasgow, Scotland, as delegates to the World's Sunday School Convention. Brother Hill is the faithful pastor of our church at McDonoghville, La., just across the river from New Orleans. Brother Hill is a native of England, and if the proposed trip to Glasgow materializes, it will give him one more opportunity—probably the last—to see his two sons, who were in the World War for more than four years, going through the campaign in Egypt and Palestine under General Allenby. At the New Orleans District Conference last week, unsolicited by Brother Hill, mention was made of the proposed visit, and it was suggested that some of the churches outside the district might be interested in a small way in making it possible. The proposed date of leaving is the last week in May, and the Advocate joins in the wish that this visit may materialize for the pleasure it will give Brother and Sister Hill.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. H. R. McKee, Silver Creek, Miss., 3; Rev. J. T. Weems, Bogue Chitto, Miss., 5; Rev. W. L. Graves, Mt. Pleasant, Miss., 2; Rev. T. B. Cottrell, Vicksburg, Miss., 2; Miss Mollie Higginbotham, Mer Rouge, La., 3; Rev. A. J. Henry, Ebenezer, Miss., 6; Rev. T. J. Hopper, Mashulaville, Miss., 5; Rev. W. O. Hunt, Abbeville, Miss., 2.

SOMETHING TO DO FOR PUBLICITY.

By William T. Ellis.

"What can we Christians do about it?" is the query on countless lips, as the scandals at Washington and the muddles of world affairs cry out for a moral and Christian solution.

Before they can do anything else effective, Christians must make themselves felt as a force in the field of public opinion. This first step may be called practical publicity, or fundamental witness-bearing.

That Christian sentiment has been so largely negligible in the realm of politics and social and business life, and thus also in the press, is a grave indictment of the efficiency of organized Christianity.

There is a remedy—a workable and winning way of witnessing. It is possible everywhere and always. Its practicability has been proved to the limit. No money is needed to carry it out, and no organization is required. Once let the idea find definite lodgment in the minds of Christian workers, and the principle will be promulgated everywhere.

This simple plan—really it is more of a principle than a plan—is for Christian men and women to acquire the habit of saying "Please" and "Thank you" to the editors. In other words, it means that the right sort of citizens and readers should become as vocal in newspaper and magazine offices as the wrong sort seem to be. The average editor has been given no personal reason to believe in the might and militancy of the Christian sentiment of the land. He hears frequently from organizations representing religion and reform; but he rather discounts this, as being the work of some salaried secretary. What he needs to know is where his own subscribers stand, and what is their genuine, unprompted opinion upon the policy of his paper. Every publication in the world customarily follows the course which it believes pleases the majority of its readers.

So when Christian readers write, in friendly fashion, to the editors of the papers they buy, saying, "Pleas give us more church news;" or "Please give us more Sunday school and Christian Endeavor news"; or "Please give us a Sunday school lession, or other religious article;" or "Please keep on printing the daily verse of Scripture," the editors are sure to heed such requests, if they come in sufficient volume to be representative.

Especially does Christian sentiment increase in power when church folk say "Thank you" to the editor for his position upon moral issues; and for his recognition of the Christian constituency by the publication of news and features for them. Every "Thank you" is also an implied "Please."

Similarly, when readers write to an editor and say, "Why did you drop the Sunday school lesson"—or other religious feature—"that you used to print? We miss it," the editor is likely to reconsider. Some months ago, the Baltimore Sun, in its annual overhaul of features, discontinued a weekly Bible Talk, along with the "Mutt and Jeff" comic strip, and other special contributions. Three persons wrote to inquire for the Bible Talk; hundreds wrote asking for "Mutt and Jeff." So the Bible Talk stayed out, and "Mutt and Jeff" went back.

All of this practice of publicity by everyday Christians is but a proper expression of the Christian teaching of witness-bearing: "Ye shall be my witnesses"—in the newspaper offices, in political circles, in public life—"and to the uttermost parts of the earth."

All that any expert upon publicity needs to teach the church is, "Let the redeemed of the Lord say so."

PATIENCE.

It is well to remember constantly that there is a noble and an ignoble patience. Of this, as of all the other virtues, the devil always has his counterfeit. If we seek for the perfect pattern of patience, instinctively we turn to our Redeemer; yet of one thing Christ was utterly impatient, and that one thing was evil. Those fierce denunciations of the Pharisees, that groaning beside the grave of Lazarus, are all in the picture of the patient Christ. It is the duty of no one to be patient when evil can be checked or wrong be righted. All our liberties were won for us by heroic impatience of wrong. There are times when patience is the badge of weakness and ruthlessly betrays the faithless heart; on the other hand, there are times when patience is divine.

Had Robert the Bruce been patient under tyranny, where would our liberty have been today? Had Knox been patient, and borne the yoke in meekness, where would have been the Kirk of Christ in Scotland? And had we been patient during the World War, when the dearest human rights were imperiled, when nations were being trampled under foot, when the bond of honor was a scrap of paper, Christ would surely have said to us: "I never knew you; depart from me, ye cursed of my Father."

So long as evil is avoidable, every follower of Christ must be impatient of it. It may be criminal to be a martyr when it is possible to be a soldier. No man is worthy to be a Christian citizen, or to have place within the Christian commonwealth, who cannot be splendidly impatient sometimes with tyranny and cruelty and evil.

My Christian friend, that is ignoble patience—shall I tell you what noble patience is? Noble patience is the cheerful bearing of what is inevitable and unavoidable. It is in the chastisements sent to you from God; it is in the sufferings which you have to bear; it is in the trials upon the line of duty, that "ye have need of patience." Ignoble patience is the child of cowardice. It is the perpetuator of social abuses. Noble patience welcomes what is sent, believes that behind everything is God, issues in a quiet which is victory.

Matthew Arnold, in one of his choicest poems, calls patience "the neighbor of despair." But the patience of the Lord Jesus Christ is never the neighbor of despair. It is the neighbor of high and quenchless hope, of confidence that the best is yet to be, of trust in the providence which counts the stars and providently cares for the sparrow.—George H. Morrison.

JESSIE A. BRUNNER was born March 22, 1872, and died March 22, 1924. Having been reared in an old-time Christian home, he was always true to his early teaching. So when he faced the last enemy, he did so with full assurance of faith. Jessie was a son of Rev. and Mrs. W. A. Brunner, of Pine Valley, Miss. He was converted and joined the Methodist Church at the age of 15 years, and lived one of the most consistent Christian lives I have ever known. I first met him 26 years ago, and the more I saw of him the better I loved and appreciated him for what he was. As his pastor, I found in him a true friend and wise counselor. His home life was beautiful indeed—true to his every obligation—as husband, father, and neighbor. Six years ago he moved to Arkansas and there died of pneumonia, in the midst of his splendid family; and on the 24th of March we laid his body to rest, out from Bay City, to await the resurrection morning. The high esteem in which he was held by his neighbors was attested by the large concourse of people that attended the funeral service, conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. Frank Turner. Brother Brunner leaves a wife and seven children—five sons and two daughters; also four sisters and three brothers. One (W. W. Brunner) is a preacher in the North Mississippi Conference, now on the Corinth circuit. All the brothers, one sister, and his dear, aged father (80 years old) were present at the funeral. The writer has conducted not a few burial services, and preached many a funeral, but this was the most remarkable funeral I have ever conducted, or witnessed, because of the manifest presence of the Holy Spirit. Dear sorrowing ones, remember that our friend and beloved will in due time come forth, by the power of him that hath power over death, with a crown of victory upon his brow. Jessie is just around the corner, and we will meet him in "the bright, beautiful beyond," just inside, "the Eastern gate."

His former pastor,
Oxford, Miss. D. M. GEAN.

RESOLUTIONS.

The second quarterly conference of Arcadia station, Louisiana Conference, convened April 6, 1924, passed the following resolution:

Whereas, Dr. Joseph Atkinson, who passed to his heavenly home March 10, 1924, at the good age of eighty-four years and five months, lived a life devoted to the Master, and was a faithful official of the M. E. Church, South, for many years, and at the time of his death;

Therefore be it Resolved: That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy, and while sorrowing with them, yet we feel that they have the satisfaction and sense of deep peace that comes from the consciousness that he lived the life that won through Jesus Christ the crown of immortality; that he left a legacy that is undefiled and fadeth not away; that he bequeathed to us an example worthy of emulation.

That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased, a copy to the New Orleans Christian Advocate, and one to the Bienville Democrat.

W. M. Deas, H. W. Ledbetter, Committee.

AN APPRECIATION.

MRS. LAURA ANNE NELSON, one of our beloved members, has passed away. Although Mrs. Nelson had lived in our community only a few months, she had endeared herself to all of us who had the privilege of knowing her. Her sweet, charitable nature was a constant inspiration, and her presence a gentle benediction. We loved her, and love her memory still, feeling that we have a closer kinship with Heaven since she lives there. May her family have the comforting assurance that "They are not dead who live in hearts left behind."

The Wesley Class of the Long Beach, Miss., Sunday School.

IN MEMORIAM.

Thursday morning, April 3, 1924, the gentle spirit of EMILY BONNER BEAL passed quietly from earth to her eternal reward. She was a cripple for several years, but endured her sufferings patiently. Mrs. Beal was born July 10, 1841, at Bovina, Warren County, Miss. Her parents were Willis Bonner, of Warren County, and Louise Holden Tate, of Marion County, Miss. She attended college at Clinton and at Jackson, Miss., and was the widow of J. W. Beal, who died nine years ago. Besides several nieces and nephews, she is survived by one devoted daughter, who ministered so tenderly to her for several years past. She was a member of the Methodist Church and loved her God and enjoyed hearing his praises sung. She loved home, and was a devoted mother. May "He who tempers the wind to the shorn lamb" bring sweet resignation to the bereaved ones, by keeping in view the precious promises of our Lord, and may they be given a vision of the joy of that world which still lies beyond our ken, but which may be seen by the eye of faith—the peace and joy in our Father's home. To a Christian—"There is no death—what seems so is transition.

This life of mortal breath
Is but the suburb of that life elysian,
Whose portals we call death."

A FRIEND.

On March 27, 1924, Mr. CUSTIN DAILY, of Indian Bayou, La., was called suddenly to the eternal home. His death was a shock to family and friends. The deceased was converted and joined the old Indian Bayou church at the early age of 13 years. He was a faithful worker for about 70 years, living to the ripe old age of 83 years. He was often heard to shout and rejoice in the love of God. His father was a native of old Kentucky, coming to Southwest Louisiana nearly 100 years ago. The deceased leaves a wife, four children, 28 grandchildren, 15 great-grandchildren, two brothers, and one sister, besides a host of other relatives and friends. He was a Confederate soldier, and was loyal to his country as well as to his church. He married Miss Elva Spell about 1863. He was among those who organized the first Protestant church in Southwest Louisiana. His funeral, which was conducted by his pastor, Rev. L. E. Crooks, was largely attended. He was buried in the old home cemetery at Indian Bayou. T. H. HOFFPAUIR.

JUST A BOY.

By E. H. Cason

A day or so ago I stood on the post-office corner. It was getting along toward the middle of the afternoon and the sun was doing its best to make up for the few preceding gloomy days. Likewise the rustling, scurrying, jamming crowd of people indicated that they, too, were trying to regain any lost time occasioned by the downpour of the two preceding days.

Each fellow seemed bent on making his destination as quickly as possible, and as one stood and listened to the honk, honk, of the passing cars and watched the scurrying pedestrians darting to and fro, you could not help thinking, "Yes, not only is it a fact that time and tide wait for no man,' but let's add, 'neither does the crowd.'"

In the midst of it all I noticed an old blind negro standing on the opposite corner rapping the sidewalk with his stick, the stick being his only vision. This old negro was desirous of crossing the street, but because of his infirmity he dared not push into the crowd alone.

Now, the same Being who watches every sparrow fall, made this old negro, and he reached out at an appointed time and withdrew the vision from those eyes, and he must spend the remaining part of his life shut out from the sight of the world.

On the opposite side of the street, I wondered if any one would think to assist the old negro across, when suddenly a school boy dismounted his bicycle and stepped up to the old negro and took him by the hand and carefully and gently led him safely across the street.

I noticed the boy's expression while crossing the street, and it indicated that his entire attention was turned toward safely seeing the old negro across the street, utterly unconscious of what any one might think.

This was indeed a pleasing sight and I was much pleased to note it was one of our boys. Shall we give the name?—"Big Brother."

PURVIS CIRCUIT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The second quarterly conference of the Purvis Circuit, held last Sunday by Rev. W. W. Graves, presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, at Talowah, one of the two rural churches of the circuit, was well attended. The presiding elder's sermon was well received by the congregation that filled the church.

Rev. W. H. Lane, the pastor, whose home is in Purvis, is quite well pleased with his charge. The fact that the second quarterly conference, coming in April, showed "finances up" was especially pleasing to the pastor. Brother Lane takes an active interest in the Sunday school and Epworth League, and is himself a leader in church song services.

The League Anniversary Day was celebrated Sunday night by a splendid body of young people, who gave "a morality play," "To Vision "Heights," so as to please the congregation present.

BEFORE BABIES WERE BORN

Mrs. Oswald Benefited by Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Girardville, Pa.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound before my last two babies came. It keeps me in perfect health and I am on my feet getting meals and doing all my housework until an hour before the baby is born. A friend told me to take it and I have used ten bottles since I heard about it. I recommend the Vegetable Compound whenever I can. Just yesterday a friend was telling me how miserable she felt, and I said, 'If you start taking Lydia E. Pinkham's you will feel fine.' Now she is taking it."—Mrs. P. J. OSWALD, Jr., 406 W. Ogden St., Girardville, Pa.

Mrs. Nicola Paluzzi Says

Mishawaka, Indiana.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weakness before my babies were born. I was weak and tired out all the time and it helped me. When I had inward inflammation the doctor treated me, but it did not help me, so I tried Lydia E. Pinkham's Sanative Wash and it helped me right away. I will always have your medicines."—Mrs. NICOLA PALUZZI, 415 E. Broadway, Mishawaka, Indiana.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

The Seashore District Institute was a most enjoyable and profitable meeting. The discussions were good, and the attendance was the best we have ever had in the Seashore District. The reports from the Sunday schools showed a most unusual amount of progress, and if the present rate is maintained the Seashore District will forge to the front. Brother Roberts gave us two very inspiring and profitable addresses, and we all appreciated his interest and earnestness in the work. Every one was delighted with his brotherly and kindly interest.

There were no changes in the district officers except the election of Miss Laura White as Elementary Superintendent. We are glad to welcome Miss White to our work, and pray she will be a blessing and will receive a blessing in the work.

Saturday, Sunday, and Monday were spent at New Augusta. Brother Westbrook has made a fine impression on these folks, and the work is well in hand. We enjoyed being with them so much. The parsonage has been improved and made a very comfortable home. The Sunday school needs more life and more definite work. They were willing to go forward, and I pray they will.

One of the delights of this trip was the pleasure of being with Rev. J. C. Ellis. I am very thankful that the wheel of fortune has made it possible for him to have a comfortable home and nice things around him. The people like Brother Ellis. He has their love. May many years be to him and his, that he may be a help and blessing.

On Tuesday, April 22, the Newton District Institute was held at Philadelphia. This was the smallest attendance at the District Institute the Newton District has ever had. The heavy rains kept many back and caused them to come on trains in place of through the country, and this made them late and caused others not to come at all.

Brother Alford is making good, and the brethren love him and respect him. This was a real pleasure to me. The Newton District is a great district of possibilities; may the Lord open the way for it to be developed and made as He would have it.

The Philadelphia congregation is proud of its new improvements and organ, and has a right to be proud of them. This is an illustration of team work and willingness. May the same spirit permeate the whole of the district.

The reports were good and indicated progress. Several of the smaller schools had unsually good reports. Mrs. Riley represented the Orphans' Home, and Brother Hawkins represented the Epworth League work. It was a good institute.

Two names are ready for the "Honor Roll for Sunday School Day"—Rev. J. L. Sells and Rev. G. P. McKeown. Let the good work go on.

The cause of missions is still progressing. If the same percentage keeps up we will double our Leadership Training units this year, which will mean a wonderful and remarkable progress for the Mississippi Conference.

Pray earnestly for the work and the workers. Circuit Institutes, Leadership Training, Missions, Sunday School Day—let these four be constantly in your minds, in your prayers, in your faith.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

We are bending every effort to have a hundred per cent observance of Sunday School Day. At this time there are only forty out of the one hundred and sixty-seven charges in the Conference who have not ordered their programs. If you are one of the forty, will you not order to-day? Your children will enjoy taking part in this program; it will serve to bind them a little closer to the school and the church. Several of our churches have already observed the Day and sent in their offerings. We thank them. Grenada has an offering of $50, and we are expecting every church the size of Grenada to do equally as well. Our work is growing and we must have funds with which to carry it on. Our Conference is at the foot of the list—our neighboring Conferences, some of them, get five times as much as we do. Presiding Elder, won't you urge your district to make a much larger contribution than ever before? We thank you.

During the Training School at Clarksdale we had an Elementary Institute one afternoon, and had representatives from seven charges in the district. We are very anxious to arrange at least one of these institutes in every district and hope to have two. Here our Elementary workers can come together, discuss their problems, and find out just how their departments stand. We must have some Standard Departments before the summer is over. We are trying to have an active Elementary Superintendent in every district. If you can not have a Standard School, you can have a Standard Elementary division. Let every school work to make their department reach the Standard; this will aid the district reach the Standard, which will help the Conference. Let's rear a generation of boys and girls with Christian characters who are seeking the greatest happiness, which comes only from working in the Master's vineyard.

VIRGINIA THOMAS,
Elementary Superintendent.

SOME LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

Miss Mary Parham, the representative from the Central Office at our Homer Conference, writes: "I was delighted with the program and thought the meeting was most helpful. I was sorry, however, that we could not have had more time for the separate departmental meetings. I believe these Conference-wide meetings will count for really more than we realize in our work throughout the Conference by way of stimulating and inspiring the workers to greater effort. In looking over the reports for 1923, I noticed that your Conference lacks only a part of point 3 in reaching your Conference standard, that is, you do not have every district with an active elementary superintendent. THE PRINTER'S ERROR

Through an unfortunate error in typesetting, the Cokesbury Hymnal is advertised in the May issue of The Adult Student priced at $30.00 per hundred in cloth binding. The correct price is $40.00 per hundred.

The Cokesbury Hymnal

is the lowest priced hymnal of its class to be found anywhere to-day. The old-fashioned songs; special features, including orchestrated edition, responsive readings, choral arrangements, cross indexes; and well-made cloth and manila bindings make it an expensive book to produce. Yet it is sold at a very low price.

believe, if you will lend your efforts this year along that line, trying to get an active, efficient superintendent for each district, you will be able to bring your Conference up to standard this next year."

Mrs. H. L. Hudson, District Elementary Superintendent of the Shreveport District, writes: "Have just returned from our district conference at Logansport. We are to have our District Sunday School Day, May 20, at Greenwood, and at some time during that meeting we will hold an Elementary Council, and I wish to call attention at that time to Elementary Goals for the year. If you have any suggestions to make, or plan of work you wish presented, please let me know, and I will be happy to bring such to the attention of the workers."

The first Sunday school in the Lake Charles District to report the observance of Sunday School Day was the Sunday school at Crowley, with an offering of $44.00. Mr. Hammond Moore is superintendent, and Rev. Alonzo Early is pastor. The first Sunday school in the Alexandria District to report the observance of Sunday School Day is the school in Lecompte, where the district conference is to be held, beginning May 4 with a Sunday school rally.

Our two Conference Superintendents of young life—Mrs. J. M. Henry, Superintendent of Young People, and Rev. H. L. Johns, Superintendent of Intermediate-Senior Department—will meet some of the Sunday school workers of the Alexandria District at Magnolia Park, near Alexandria, on Saturday, May 3, to discuss the matter of camp conferences for the Young People of our State, beginning with the young people of the Alexandria District.

Our quota of students at the Mount Sequoyah Leadership School, June 25 to August 9, is fifteen, allowing two from each district. Some Conferences will not have their full quota, and some will have more than their quota, and the authorities are writing us about the prospect of our quota being present. We hear that there are four or five from the Lake Charles District who are planning on attending. Let all the district secretaries see that they have at least two delegates from their district.

Conference Superintendent.

TOOK CARDUI TO BUILD UP

GEORGIA LADY SAYS SHE'S SURE OF THE MERIT OF CARDUI, HAVING TAKEN IT FOR 25 YEARS, WHENEVER NEEDED.

Ellijay, Ga.—A quarter of a century's successful use of Cardui, taken on many different occasions when needed, is reported by Mrs. Thomas H. Kell, a near-by resident.

"When I was a girl of 13," said Mrs. Kell, "my mother gave me Cardui as a tonic, with very good results."

Mrs. Kell explained that her second use of Cardui came after her marriage, shortly before she became a mother. "I needed something to build me up," she said, "and I immediately sent and got a bottle of Cardui. I took it regularly before the birth of every one of my children, and I have always gotten along well at that time. ... My last two babies were twins, and before they came I grew very weak...I could scarcely get around to do my work. I got Cardui and took it and kept it up. I never went to bed and am sure the Cardui did it.

"My health is very good now. I recovered my strength quickly after the twins came and this I attributed to the use of Cardui."

Cardui is a safe, purely vegetable, medicinal tonic medicine, proved valuable in helping to relieve thousands cases of womanly weakness, such as Mrs. Kell describes above.

For sale everywhere, by druggists.

SEASHORE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Following an all-day session of the District Sunday School Convention, conducted by J. C. Chambers, Conference Field Secretary, the Seashore District Conference convened at Lumberton, Miss., Wednesday, April 16.

The presiding elder, Rev. L. L. Roberts, presided over the deliberations of the conference in a buisness-like and courteous manner, and impressed all present with his gracious and brotherly spirit and earnest solicitude for every interest of the Kingdom.

Preaching in the mornings at eleven o'clock and each evening at eight o'clock was a feature of the conference that attracted large attendance on the part of the people of the city. Rev. J. A. Moore, of Columbia, preached a helpful sermon on "The Divine-Human Harmony." Rev. W. J. Ferguson, of Gulfport, delivered a stirring message on "Spiritual Stigmata." Rev. O. S. Lewis, of Biloxi, preached a very heartening sermon on "The Dynamics of Repose." Rev. Joseph A. Smith, of Picayune, brought a message on "The Right Angle Vision of the Cross."

The reports of the pastors were uniformly optimistic and furnished encouraging evidences of progress. Over two hundred additions to the church membership were reported by the three churches that had conducted revivals.

Representatives of the connectional work of the church who were present delivered addresses that were encouraging and helpful. B. F. Lewis and W. T. Griffin spoke in behalf of the Orphanage. W. D. Hawkins efficiently represented both the Centenary interests and the Epworth League Assembly. Prof. C. A. Bowen represented Millsaps College, and Prof. J. M. Sullivan laid the claims and responsibilities of the laymen's work before the conference in an earnest and convincing manner.

H. A. Gatlin made an appeal for a substantial payment toward our Representative Church in Washington, D. C., and the amount of $250.00 was apportioned to the charges of the District.

A. S. Oliver proved himself a past master in the art of taking collections, and extracted the sum of $154.00 from members of the Conference after having hypnotized them with his clever but earnest appeal. Brother Oliver was representing the church at the gateway of the State Woman's College in Columbus.

Among the items of business transacted by the conference are to be noted the recommendation of John Weems Moore and W. B. Hollingsworth to the Annual Conference for admission into the traveling connection, and the recommendation of B. F. Crook for re-admission.

The district conference elected, on nomination of the presiding elder, a Licensing Committee composed of the following: W. J. Ferguson, O. S. Lewis, D. C. Vickers and L. F. Alford.

W. E. Barnes was re-elected District Lay Leader; and the following laymen were elected principal delegates to the Annual Conference: H. B. Rush, Horace Hines, L. C. Pigfort, J. M. Alexander, W. E. Barnes, W. N. Waynwright, M. M. Batson and Mrs. J. F. Campbell. The alternate delegates were: Geo. Carley, A. B. Connally, W. R. Gulley, and D. R. Weston.

The Committee on Resolutions expressed the thanks of the conference to Mrs. Joseph A. Smith of Picayune for her presentation of the Gospel in song at each session of the Conference.

The cordinal invitation of Biloxi was accepted by the conference for its next annual meeting place. The members will look forward with great pleasure to their visit to this beautiful and hospitable city on the coast.

JOSEPH A. SMITH, Secretary.

REVIVAL AT MOSELLE.

Dear Brother Carley: We have recently closed a good meeting at Moselle. Rev. J. H. Jolly, our pastor at Poplar Springs, Meridian, did the preaching. His sermons were clear, forceful, and spiritual, and won the hearts of his hearers to a deeper consecration and better life. The services were well attended, nearly fifty people being present at each morning service. Such a meeting renews our faith in the old time gospel, preached with simplicity and power.

The Superannuate Endowment campaign had first place on our program during March and April. We have sent to the Board of Finance nearly one-half of the charge's quota for the year, and have so arranged the remainder for this year that it will be paid in full by the Annual Conference.

I note with sorrow the death of Mrs. Kate Flowers, of the Mars Hill Church, in Wilkinson County. I spent many pleasant hours in her home, and can testify to the sincerity of her faith and the purity of her life.

Sincerely,
J. B. CAIN.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Report of Committee on Social Service.

We, your committee on Social Service, submit the following recommendations:

Realizing that the most effective weapon against the powers of evil in our body politic is the ballot, we urge every woman to qualify for the discharge of her duty at the polls, rather than rob God by indifferent and criminal neglect of this power.

In order to promote public welfare, as active citizens, our women are advised to subscribe to "The Woman Citizen," semi-monthly, $2 a year. (Write Helen Burling, Sec'y., 171 Madison Ave., N. Y., for special rates.)

We desire that our women co-operate with the Publicity Superintendent in disposing of copies of "Save America" (25c each) which material can be used to advantage through the local press. (The sale of this book is the only means of financing the work of the Woman's National Committee for Law Enforcement.)

That we help Americanize the foreigners of our communities through Home Economics Clubs, asking for co-operation of our Parish Demonstrators. (Help can be found in "Better Americans," a study book for Juniors.) Attendance of our women in city courts to protect ignorant or foreign people on trial from unjust treatment seems to be a sacred duty.

We strongly recommend efforts to secure passage of Child Labor law and the Shepard-Towner Maternity Bill. (Immediate attention must be given this matter, before Legislature meets in May.) Where possible, hold union quarterly Social Service meetings, using Year Book programs and quarterly questionnaires. This plan would enable the larger group to secure the services of busy professional men and women, who would not be able to give their time to a small number. It would also foster the connectional spirit of Methodism and encourage the weaker auxiliary. Co-operation of Social Service Superintendents in communities where there are more than one auxiliary, planning a definite, unified program of work for their territory, is advisable. That each auxiliary give attention to the urgent call of our Council Superintendent to project one piece of work of a preventive character during 1924.

We stress the wisdom of the appointment of an inter-racial committee so as to secure definite results in this important field of endeavor.

Observance of National Negro Health Week, holding summer Conferences for Negro Women and Daily Vacation Bible Schools for children, are helpful and far-reaching forms of Christian activity, in connection with Friendship Community Clubs, under supervision of inter-racial committees. In carrying out these ventures, material financial help can often be gotten through such agencies as the Red Cross, charity organizations and school boards.

That our women record their unalterable and vigorous opposition to mob violence and lynching.

By investigating, find out if the State law prohibiting the sale of cigarettes to minors is enforced.

That our women ascertain the legality of slot machines and other gambling devices, use their utmost endeavors to remove same, including those of the State fair.

That our influence be used against the opening of picture shows and State fairs on the Sabbath—race track gambling and all else that tends to lower Christian ideals.

That we ask for the co-operation of pastors and decent people in suppressing the production and sale of indecent literature.

Mrs. R. H. WYNN, Chairman.

Meeting at Mansfield.

The Woman's Missionary Society of the First Methodist Church of Mansfield presented stewardship to the church members Monday evening, March 31, in the church auditorium.

The program opened with the devotional, led by the corresponding secretary, Mrs. R. G. Darrell.

A playlet, "Aunt Tillie Learns to Tithe," was very effectively presented by members of the Society. This little play presents very forcefully the ideas of stewardship and one who sees it must at least stop and think, we believe. After the play the congregation was invited into the Sunday school department where all enjoyed a social hour. Refreshments were served by the society.

The church was very beautifully decorated in our native red bud and yellow jasmine.

NORTH MISSISSIPPI

Sardis District Meeting.

The district conference of the Woman's Missionary Societies of the Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference, will convene in Charleston, June 3, 4. Careful plans are being made for the program. Delegates and visitors will please send in their names to Mrs. Lester Darby, Chairman of Entertainment Committee. Trains will be met at Oakland.

We pray that we shall be able to mark at this time a great forward movement in our work.

MRS. R. M. SHORT,
Secretary Sardis District.

"NOTHING BUT GEOGRAPHY AND HISTORY."

By D. S.

He was a business man hurrying back from lunch. We had left his home in a hilltop residence section and in his comfortable car were threading our way slowly through a busy down-town street. After conversation touching the conventionalities, we mutually left them and as on previous occasions began on the church and religion.

He was not a "big" business man—just the head of a department in a medium-sized store. But he came to the point at once. He had a hungry heart and said so, bluntly, positively.

"Do you know what is wrong with the church to-day?" he said.

"Not exactly," I countered.

"Nothing but geography and history," he replied. "That's all there is to the church to-day and that isn't enough."

"And," he continued, "I know how to get more than that out of it: but I need some one to lead me to it. I need some one who has the fire in his heart to give me a spark and warm me up."

I had reached my corner and must needs leave him and hurry on to meet a committee, dictate letters, hold interviews and after dinner meet a building committee.

But my friend had startled me. He had asked for bread and had received "Nothing but geography and history." He had asked for a fish and had received. "Nothing but geography and history." Did I lead his prayer-meeting last week? Was I the preacher in his church last Sunday? Did he get any radium rays of real religion from my heart to his? Then these words from Tagore struck my eyes: "The religion that only comes to us from external Scriptures never becomes our own; our only tie with it is that of habit. To gain religion within is man's lifelong adventure. In the extremity of suffering must it be born, on his life blood it must live; and then, whether or not it brings him happiness, the man's journey shall end in the joy of fulfillment."—Pittsburgh Christian Advocate.

"The small Christian college is the hope of America. Character is essential to statesmanship, and these colleges are vital factors in the development of sterling character."—James J. Hill.

Neutralizes Uric Acid!

Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood. In order to be cured of rheumatism it is necessary to neutralize this acid. RENWAR is a scientific combination of salts prepared to neutralize the uric acid in the blood. There is nothing in Renwar to injure the stomach or affect the heart. It acts solely upon uric acid, completely eliminating it from the blood and thereby relieving your rheumatism. It is harmless but effective. Positively guaranteed by money-back offer. It is a godsend to sufferers from rheumatism. Renwar also corrects constipation. Mr. J. M. Willis of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "I must say that Renwar far surpassed my expectations, for it gave me almost immediate relief; too much cannot be spoken in behalf of 'Renwar' for rheumatism." GREENVILLE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The fifty-fifth session of the Greenville District Conference was held in the Clarksdale Methodist church, April 7-12. The Sunday School Standard Training School for the district was held at the same date, the forenoon being given to the training school and the afternoon for the conference. The training school was the most successful district school that has ever been held in the North Mississippi Conference, but as a full report of the work done has been given in the Sunday school notes, I will not comment further on it, but will report the work of the district conference.

The attendance at the conference was the best of any conference on record, more than sixty preachers and laymen being in attendance. The absence of Brother A. R. Beasley, who was detained on account of illness, was deeply regretted.

The business of the conference was dispatched with the usual careful consideration, accuracy and virility that characterize our presiding elder, Rev. Jas. H. Felts. All matters of the Kingdom coming before the conference were given due and thoughtful consideration. Contrary to a long-established precedent, the preachers did not make reports on the floor of the conference, but all vital matters were handled through the various disciplinary committees, the committees obtaining the data for their reports from the pastors.

A licensing committee consisting of Revs. E. Nash Broyles, T. E. Gregory, A. R. Beasley and L. A. McKeowan, was elected.

Mr. S. V. Wall, of Cleveland, was elected District Lay Leader.

Dr. T. W. Dye, who for many years was an honored and leading member of the North Mississippi Conference, and who now lives with his son, Dr. T. M. Dye, of Clarksdale, was unanimously recommended for re-admission to the Annual Conference, it being understood that his name would be referred to the Committee on Conference Relations.

A strong and representative lay delegation to the ensuing Annual Conference was elected. The delegation is as follows: Judge Percy Bell, Greenville; J. H. Johnson, Clarksdale; J. H. Sherard, Sherard; J. T. Mathis, Leland; S. V. Wall, Cleveland; Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, Lula; Mrs. M. E. Dakin, Shaw; Mrs. D. M. Shaw, Robinsonville; with Mrs. J. W. Wheeler, Coahoma; Mrs. Ed. Brewer, Clarksdale; H. R. Parks, Merigold; and Waddy West, Greenville, as alternates.

The Conference was greatly blessed and inspired by strong spiritual messages at both preaching hours every day of the conference. This preaching was done by Mr. W. H. French, Revs. W. N. Dodds, E. Nash Broyles and W. W. Woollard. Dr. Clovis G. Chappell, of Memphis, did the preaching from Wednesday evening until the close of the conference, Friday evening. He is indeed a prince of preachers, and a man upon whom abides the Spirit of God. His gospel messages were plain, clear, refreshing and powerful.

Resolutions of appreciation, commendation and brotherly love to Rev. Jas. H. Felts, who is serving his fourth year as presiding elder of this district, were heartily adopted. He has indeed served faithfully and efficiently and the work has greatly prospered under his able leadership.

The finances of the district are well up to date. Provision seems to have been made for all the Conference claims, and, barring some serious reversal, Greenville District will have level columns at the next Annual Conference. There are about eight new church projects on in the district, and a number of new and rebuilt parsonages.

The Conference was a season of spiritual benediction, hours of personal testimony and seasons of grace being enjoyed. Brotherly love and good-fellowship prevailed throughout the conference.

Clarksdale proved herself a very gracious host in the generous hospitality extended and the very delightful manner in which she took care of her guests.

It was the sense of the conference that we are neglecting the old church hymns and using too much so-called religious "jazz" in our Sunday schools and church worship. Resolutions were introduced by Rev. T. H. Mills that at least one hymn be memorized by the Sunday school and church per month, the presiding elder to name the hymn from time to time.

The next conference will go to Merigold, where a handsome new church is rapidly being completed.

"How I Suffered with my Stomach and Catarrh of the Head"

Took our bottle of PE-RU-NA and now cannot praise it enough

Miss Emelie A. Haberkorn, 2251 Gravois Ave., St. Louis, Mo., writes: "For over two years I was troubled with internal catarrh. I read a Pe-ru-na booklet and began taking the treatment. Tongue cannot describe how I suffered with my stomach and the catarrh in my head. I began to feel better as soon as I had used four bottles and now I cannot praise it enough. I now enjoy as good health as ever and would not think of doing without Pe-ru-na."

Dr. Hartman's famous remedy has become the standby in thousands of American homes for the relief of coughs, colds, catarrh and every catarrhal disease.

Insist upon genuine Pe-ru-na and enjoy satisfaction.

The Woman's Own Car

All Chevrolet models are popular with women on account of their beauty of line and finish and ease of handling.

The new four-passenger coupe was designed especially for women. Its stylish, distinguished appearance makes immediate appeal, and closer examination promotes enthusiasm. Best of all—the price is surprisingly low for so high-grade a production, equipped as it is with a Fisher Body, two extra wide doors that make feasible graceful entrance to and exit from the car. Single, comfortable driver's seat, ample room for two in the rear seat, and a fourth folding seat for an extra passenger.

Comfortably, tastefully upholstered and artistically trimmed with good-grade hardware.

Plate-glass windows on all four sides. Cord tires on easily demountable rims, with extra rim.

Although designed with especial consideration of our women friends, we find this model is also favored by many men, for business and family use. Merchandise samples can be carried inside the car instead of in the rear compartment. Evenings and week ends the same car admirably meets the requirements of the small family.

VICKSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The District Conference will open at Hermanville with a sermon by Rev. T. J. O'Neil, Tuesday, May 20, at 7:30 p. m. The delegates and preachers will be met with conveyances at Port Gibson on arrival of the evening train from the north, so that those coming from Vicksburg and points north may reach the seat of the conference for the opening service, Tuesday night. Let those who are interested notify Rev. W. F. Baggett, Hermanville, Miss., in time so that proper arrangements can be made. No other trains will be met at Port Gibson.

It is desired that those who can do so, will attend the conference in their cars, as it will be necessary in order more readily to reach homes of assignment. If you are going in your car, please write the pastor, and it will assist him very much in arranging for the entertainment of the conference.

The pastors will please see that the names of the delegates are sent promptly to the pastor and presiding elder, and also that the quarterly conference records are on hand for examination. Let them also please remember the resolution to have the Conference collections in cash and subscriptions by the conference.

The Field Secretary and his workers will conduct a Sunday School Institute, beginning at 2 o'clock Wednesday. Let all who can do so be present. The laymen, under the direction of Dr. Sullivan, will have their special meeting Thursday afternoon.

The local preachers will please take notice that, under the law now, a district conference is not competent to renew a license to preach unless a request is made for its renewal by the applicant in writing or in person, or in some way by special request. The conference will be obliged to adhere to the law, and it is hoped that all will have their reports in writing, as the law requires.

It is hoped that the conference will adjourn Thursday afternoon in time for the outgoing trains. Please come at the opening and remain to the end. Please pray that the Lord will graciously bless us.

W. B. JONES, Presiding Elder.

SARDIS DISTRICT CONFERENCE, MAY 20, 21, 22.

The Sardis District Conference will be held at Como, Miss., May 20, 21, 22. The conference will convene at 9:30 a. m. Tuesday, May 20. We will begin the conference with the administration of the Holy Sacrament. I trust each preacher and each delegate will be on hand in the beginning and stay throughout the conference.

On Tuesday night, immediately following preaching service, I shall hold a conference with the preachers of the district. We preachers of the Sardis District have not so far had an opportunity to meet together as a body, so I am calling my preachers to meet me on Tuesday night, May 20, immediately following preaching service. I trust that not a single preacher will be absent from this meeting. This service will be worth much both to the success of the conference and to the creation of a district spirit that will help us much in our work of the year.

Tuesday and Wednesday will be given to hearing pastors' reports, hearing our visiting brethren, hearing the report of committees, and in attending to other routine business of the conference.

I shall ask the conference to make Thursday morning, immediately following the devotional exercises, the special order of the day for electing delegates to the Annual Conference. Brother Morelock, the General Secretary of our Laymen's Movement, will be with us to hold a round table discussion and make an address on Thursday from 10 a. m. to 12. I trust that we may have not less than two hundred laymen at this service. I hope that all the pastors will get as many of their people to attend this service as possible. This service is open for all Methodists, whether members of the conference or not. About 1:30 p. m. we will hold a love feast, at which representatives from Clarksdale who were converted at the Gipsy Smith meeting will be present to take part with us. We will close out the conference with a consecration service.

Brethren and friends, no church gathering can avail anything without the power and leadership of the Holy Spirit. Realizing this fact, I urgently request that each preacher and delegate pray for the leadership and power of the Holy Spirit throughout our conference that the good people of Como may be blessed thereby and that they may get additional zeal, power and enthusiasm for the great work that lies out before us during the year.

Please let each preacher notify Brother McCorkle, right away, how many delegates to expect from his charge.

J. TILLERY LEWIS, P. E.

"What a glorious catalogue of fruits we have been beholding on the well-laden tree of a godly life! What an evidence of the * * * power of redeeming love. Epworth League

NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE

Epworth League Policy for North Mississippi.

At the session of the Epworth League Conference, which met in Grenada, at the college, in June, 1923, the policy presented by the special committee appointed to bring in a report on this matter was adopted:

1. That we hold a three or four-day assembly next year.

2. That we hold one or more District Institutes in each district of the Conference, the Conference officers co-operating with the district secretaries and the presiding elders in holding these Institutes.

3. That we set as a goal a net increase of twenty-five chapters in the Conference. In order to bring this about, we urge the strong chapters to organize new chapters and do such follow-up work as needed.

4. That we will organize district teams in each district, to assist the district secretaries in organizing and maintaining the work.

5. That if our finances justify, we ask our Conference president to arrange for a school of methods for our district secretaries at some centrally located place.

6. That each chapter observe Anniversary Day, sending collection to the Conference Treasurer, Rev. H. P. Lewis, Belzoni, immediately thereafter.

7. That we take pledges at this conference for a "Conference Promotion Fund," each chapter being asked to pledge from $2.50 to $10 on this fund; such amount to be paid as soon as possible to the Conference Treasurer.

8. That we recognize the work of Lake Junaluska Assembly toward promoting more efficient methods in all our church work; and, should any of our Leaguers plan for a summer vacation, we urge them to consider attending the session of the Assembly devoted to League work.

Respectfully submitted,
MISS TOMMIE FOSTER,
Chairman.

WHERE ARE THEY?

Where are those races who lifted their voices in the dawn and claimed undisputed supremacy? Where are the Pharaohs? Where the Assyrians, the Babylonians? Where the Rome of Julius Caesar and Octavian? Had they not the power? Had they not the prowess also to guard that power? They had everything—everything but the inner life capable of standing up against the cancers that fed within. Against Egypt there came a force mightier than her pyramids; against Rome there came something mightier than the marbles that rose on her Seven Hills. That force was the moral law. It was the retribution, the moral decay, the falling asunder of political and social life which did not stop until it brought the mightiest of the mighty to the oblivion which buries the ancient world in desert sands.

Let not America forget that there is something stronger than dollars, than over-confidence; stronger than national bluster or self-righteousness. Republican institutions are still on trial. Every election discloses cancer spots. Materialism, the decay of the public conscience, injustice between man and man, between races, classes, all are cancers. They warn against the judgment day that sits with impartial nemesis over all the earth.

The laxity of law enforcement at this time, the malignant growth of rings and gangs in politics, of graft unwhipped, of lawlessness made a jest, are cancerous, pre-eminently they are so in a government of the people. —Central Christian Advocate.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

EDITORIAL COMMENT

REVERENCE IN THE HOUSE OF GOD.

To a great many people a church is evidently nothing more than a building used for public assembly, even though the purpose of assembly is usually worship. We do not believe that people should feel depressed and preternaturally solemn in church; but we do believe that they should realize that they are in a place made sacred by formal dedication and by association, and that they should conduct themselves accordingly. Unrestrained laughter, frivolous conversation, constant whispering, freedom of movement that disturbs others, are certainly unbecoming in a place where the people have come together primarily to commune with God. Parents too often set the example for their children of irreverence in church; it is little wonder, therefore, that the children themselves seem to have no feeling of reverence when they meet with the congregation. "The Lord is in his holy temple—let all the earth keep silence," expresses a sentiment that should be more generally felt and observed than seems to be the case.

STRANGE DOCTRINE.

Dr. Nicholas Murray Butler occupies a position as President of Columbia University that gives him great influence and that compels attention to what he says. It does not follow, however, that his influence is always on the side of right or that his views are to be accepted as correct. The newspapers last week gave prominent space to a statement attributed to Dr. Butler on the occasion of the annual dinner in New York of the Missouri Society, in which he is reported to have said:

"The reason the prohibition law is not enforced is that it cannot be enforced. The reason it cannot be enforced is that it ought not to have been passed. In its attempted forcible interference with the food and drink and medicine of the people, it is a form of oppression to which a free people will never submit in silence. No liberal can possibly defend it."

If these words attributed to Dr. Butler were spoken by him, he evidently is misinformed as to the facts with which he deals, and he gives forth a strange doctrine that is as pernicious as it is indefensible.

He seems to take it for granted that the prohibition law is not being enforced—and from that assumption he draws the conclusion that it cannot be enforced. His premise and his conclusion are both wrong. The prohibition law is being enforced, and with a degree of success, taking everything into consideration, that is highly gratifying. The law against murder is violated every day somewhere in the land—but Dr. Butler does not contend that it is not being enforced and that it ought never to have been enacted. We venture to say that no law of the land is perfectly enforced; shall we, then, repeal them all on the ground that they cannot be enforced and that they ought never to have been adopted?

It is a strange doctrine that the prohibition law is an "attempted forcible interference with the food and drink and medicine of the people." It has been indisputably established that alcohol is neither food nor medicine, and it has likewise been established that its use as a beverage is a breeder of crime, poverty, nad misery beyond computation. How, then, can its prohibition be "a form of oppression to which a free people will never submit?" It would be sounder doctrine to maintain that a free people, having once become thoroughly acquainted with the evils of the liquor traffic, would prevent at any cost its manufacture and sale. And that is precisely the doctrine we hold and that we believe the majority of the right-thinking people of this nation hold. People will endure injustice for a long time; but they will not permanently acquiesce in a situation which tramples upon their rights and makes them the victims of a lawless and vicious group which places its selfish interests above those of the people as a whole. Dr. Butler is absolutely wrong in his position.

PLAN OF EPISCOPAL VISITATION.

Press dispatches, which we take to be correct, give the following as the plan of episcopal visitation for 1924-25:

The fall meeting of the College of Bishop will be held in Jacksonville, Fla., December 12.

"Good for me to draw near to God." Literally—And I, nearness to God to me is good. That is the ultimate good, the sum of all conceivable good, the "summum bonum" of the ancients—a clear declaration of the unselfish and absolute morality of Bible religion. Not a religion of external rewards and honors and of selfish aspirations and longings for paradisaical bliss, but of communion and fellowship with God, whether it be on earth or in heaven.—F. G. Hibbard.

New Orleans Christian Advocate

A DANGEROUS MEASURE DESERVING VIGOROUS OPPOSITION.

By Rev. W. A. [illegible]

[illegible] of one [illegible] of [illegible] known as [illegible] hardly [illegible]

While [illegible] its main [illegible] are [illegible]

1. To [illegible] whose [illegible] under [illegible] and [illegible] States.

2. To [illegible] appointed [illegible] in elementary [illegible] and to [illegible] educational [illegible]

3. The bill provides a total annual appropriation of $100,000,000. For [illegible] this large [illegible] are [illegible] cation of illiteracy and for Americanization of immigrants, $20,000,000 for [illegible] education, $7,000,000 for improvement of teachers in service and for the more [illegible] preparation of prospective teachers and [illegible] most significant of all, $50,000,000 to be used in public elementary and secondary schools for the partial payment of teachers' salaries for providing better instruction and extended school terms, especially in rural schools and schools in sparsely settled localities; for the extension and [illegible] tion of public libraries for educational purposes, and otherwise providing equally good educational opportunities for the children of the several States.'"

It is a most pernicious and dangerous measure. Nevertheless it is being pushed by a powerful lobby at Washington, employing the usual methods of modern propaganda, which may mislead many good people.

Once the American people see clearly what is proposed, they will rise up against this organized raid on the Federal treasury.

[illegible] dent of the [illegible] [illegible] ernment of Pennsylvania against the [illegible] Pennsylvania [illegible]

[illegible] Department [illegible] officers [illegible] [illegible] number of [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Thoughtful and patriotic people should make known to their Senators and Representatives in Congress their opposition to this dangerous bill.

Some members of Congress are in a hesitant state of mind by reason of the energetic influence of the lobbyists who are supporting the bill. Appeals to religious prejudice are being brought to bear upon them, all of which are worse than nonsense.

This bill will hurt all education, denominational and secular. It will hurt religion by injuring all the churches, whether Protestant or Roman Catholic.

Indeed, the Federal Government has no more constitutional right to deal with such a matter than it has authority to set up a Department of Religion, with a Secretary of Churches in the President's Cabinet.

JOIN IN THIS PROTEST.

"The Commission on Temperance of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, representing two and one-half million communicants and many million adherents, protests against the modification of the Volstead Act as proposed in the bills now before the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives.

"Even the most bitter enemies of the Eighteenth Amendment admit that it will not be repealed. The real question before the Judiciary Committee is whether a door can be pried open to aid in nullification of the amendment, or whether the great, commendable purpose of the amendment to destroy the traffic in intoxicants shall be effectively carried out. The proposition to legalize the manufacture and sale of 2.75 per cent beer is openly admitted to be an effort to secure beverages of the highest possible alcoholic content without manifestly violating the law.

"The advocates of this modfication know that it would be disastrous to efficient law enforcement, that indeed it would be almost destructive. The legalization of 2.75 per cent beer would resurrect the breweries throughout the nation; would establish some method of distribution—if not called saloons, some similar places—and would as a result legally throw wide the door for unlimited law evasion through the sale of intoxicants of high alcoholic content under the guise of so-called non-intoxicating beer.

"Before the adoption of the Eighteenth Amendment, the liquor dealers themselves demanded as necessary for their protection from unlicensed dealers—moonshiners this prohibition of the manufacture and sale by said illegal dealers of all liquors containing more than one-half of one per cent of alcohol.

"If this one-half of one per cent restriction was claimed by licensed dealers as necessary for their protection from lawless competition, surely equally strong restriction is necessary now to protect the people from the present-day organized lawlessness of the defiant, even murderous opponents of the Eighteenth Amendment."

The above statement has been sent to the chairman of the Judiciary Committee of the House of Representatives, and the chairman of the Commission will appear in person before the committee to oppose any weakening of the Volstead Act. The Commission on Temperance and Social Service requests that protests against the proposed modification of the Volstead Act be sent promptly by all friends of Liquor Law Enforcement to their representatives and senators in Congress, that the sentiment of law-abiding citizens may be clearly and positively declared.

JAMES CANNON, JR., Chairman.

DR. PAUL H. LINN—AN APPRECIATION.

On the 1st day of February last, just after the final adjournment of the Southern Methodist Educational Association, in the city of Memphis, Dr. Paul H. Linn suddenly passed from time to eternity.

For the past decade he had been the President of Central College, Fayette, Mo., and for more than six yers a member of this Board.

Dr. Linn was interested in all the movements of the church, and was one of the most useful and forceful members of the last several General Conferences. In this position, while he was interested in all the business that came before that body, his chief concern was for the cause of Christian education.

His administration of the affairs of the college of which he was the head was characterized by largeness of vision and the proper conception of what is embraced in the term, "Christian education." To him it meant that the student had a right to have Christian teachers, a thoroughly Christian environment, and an education in all those things that pertained to the Christian religion. But more than that, he believed that a Christian education was not complete unless there was on the part of the student spiritual development parallel with mental growth. He never forgot that he was an ambassador of Jesus Christ, and his effort was to lead every student in his college into a genuine personal experience of redemption through Christ Jesus.

As a member of this Board he was wise in counsel and had the gift of expressing his thought so clearly and convincingly that he generally led others to see the wisdom of his well thought out plans. Even when his brethren did not agree with him, so courteous was he in debate, that no matter how strongly he contended for his opinions, he never left a sting in anybody's heart.

As a man he was scholarly, democratic, companionable, and deeply spiritual. No one ever associated with him without being made better by that association, and the more men knew him, the better they loved him.

We wish to place on record our high appreciation of the service he rendered to the cause of Christian education generally, and to this Board of Education particularly, in helping to solve the many problems that have come before it during his membership.

We mourn his departure from us while apparently he had the best part of mortal life before him—the time of fruitage from a well prepared life. But we do not mourn as those without hope. Going as he did from a meeting in which a number of times he talked earnestly of personal religious experience, we are sure he was in the frame of mind, without other preparation, to come face to face with his Lord and Master.

We desire to express our heartfelt sympathy to his bereaved family, to the college that he had led to such success, to the church in which he worshiped and where he was faithful in attendance not only at the Sunday services, but also at the prayer meetings, and to the town in which he lived, where he came to be recognized as its foremost citizen.

H. N. SNYDER,
GEORGE W. READ,
Committee of the Board of Education.

THE PROBLEM OF SUFFERING.

By Rev. E. N. Evans.

Mr. Arthur Brisbane, the great American editorial writer, says, in the New Orleans Daily States, April 28:

"Mrs. William Jennings Bryan gives an interview expressing great faith in Reymond T. Richey, revivalist and 'healer by faith.' Unable to move from her invalid chair, Mrs. Bryan goes long distances to hear this earnest man preach. And she feels much better already.

"If her faith is strong enough, she will be healed, says Mrs. Bryan. If not, 'I will simply accept it as evidence that I do not believe enough in God's power to cure.'

"The ordinary mind fails to understand why Divine omnipotence, able by mere effort or will to relieve misery and cure disease, should refrain, regardless of intervening revivalists, and of everything except the natural impulse to relieve pain and misery.

"But what can a human insect on this earth understand of Divinity? Nothing."

There are few things more [illegible] or pathetic than [illegible] by faith in the omnipotence of [illegible] But I cannot accept the [illegible] resignation, or the [illegible] torial writer. The one is fatalism, the other is blind and unintelligent faith. It is not the weakness of faith in God's power to cure, but a want of a true understanding of God's [illegible] ing with us, the very things that Mr. Brisbane says we poor human insects can not know. Neither position is tenable in reason or comforting in thought.

We [illegible] all of God's ways, yet to say that we know "nothing" of Divinity, is [illegible] than Mr. Brisbane is willing himself to say. The good Book of Revealed Truth, and especially the school of Jesus, is intended to give us knowledge in these otherwise unsolvable [illegible]. It will not do to seek relief in the [illegible] question "that God does not know or does not care," and certainly not in the belief that he cannot heal the sick. But this does not declare that he does not consent to tell us why he does not answer our prayer. The good book is full of just this kind of information. The redemption of our bodies has not yet come. He has not yet redeemed our bodies. We are to live here in the infirmities of the flesh.

This is not a new proposition. The question is at least more than eighteen centuries old. It had its full and satisfactory answer in the prayer, experience, and revelation made to St. Paul, who, in his rich spiritual experience and heavenly visions even into the third heaven, found himself cumbered and fettered with the infirmities of his physical body—he prayed three times most earnestly for the removal of "the thorn" in his flesh, "a messenger of Satan to buffet him." There was nothing abnormal or unnatural about this matter it is and has been the experience of all the true followers of the "Man of Galilee." As great and joyous as is this new spiritual life with the risen Lord, we must live it on the earth and in these frail tenements of clay. We get sick and die just as other folks do.

Jesus prayed the Father, if it were possible, to spare him the agonies of the Roman cross, but added, "Nevertheless not my will, but thine be done." The whole Book of Job is to teach us that material loss or bodily afflictions are not sent of God, neither are they marks of his displeasure in us. Whatever the purpose of physical miracles, they were not to live by. Jesus fed the multitude by a physical miracle, but sent them away to get their next meal in the way of good, old-time housekeeping. He healed the sick, cleansed the lepers, and raised the dead. But these folks got sick again and all died. The new life in him is no guarantee for release from violations of natural laws. It has for all [illegible] grace and power to endure and suffer and die in hope of immortality. God wants us to be large enough to conquer evil within, and to overcome the world. There is not a proved or reasonably authenticated physical miracle since the aged Apostle John fell on sleep. None are needed. Suffering is not an unmitigated evil, but in the end it will be overcome. This, it seems, is the only way to make of us what God wants us to be. Immortality is the only answer as to the why of all things.

It is grand to feel that the Christian, by the power of prayer, can bring down showers of blessings on an entire race, readily as the few grains needed for his own little plot.—Selected.

Let us make sure of consecrating to God by prayer and a good intention the more considerable duties of the day. Let us strive at all periods, whether of work or refreshment, to realize his presence and the great end for which we are living. We shall find by degrees that the main business of the day, if done with pure intention, will lead the smaller duties in tow, like long boats following in the wake of a man of war.—Edward M. Goulburn.

CORINTH DISTRICT NOTES.

All the Pastors of the District Are at Their Places.

Brother L. B. Wimberly, of Booneville circuit, has been hindered somewhat by the illness of his wife, who has been in the Booneville Hospital for treatment. We are very glad to report her convalescence. At the second quarterly conference recently he reported Superannuate Endowment quotas in full for the year at three of his churches, viz., Blackland, Oak Grove, and Liberty. He expects the other two churches on the charge to do likewise.

One of Brother W. T. Bazzell's children has been sick with pneumonia recently, but is recovering, so that Brother Bazzell is able to meet his appointments and do his pastoral work on Burnsville charge.

Second place on paying Superannuate Endowment quota in full for the year is awarded to Old Bethel Church, on Belmont charge, where Brother C. W. Baley is pastor. They paid on April 5. Next in order of payment is Paine's chapel, on Silver Springs circuit, where Brother B. P. Fullilove is in charge.

District Standard Training School.

The fourth session of the Corinth District Standard Training School will be held at Booneville, Miss., June 2 to 7.

The following constitute the Board of Managers for the School: J. J. Taylor, J. A. Cunningham, Mrs. J. B. Reynolds, Rev. E. G. Mohler, all of Booneville; Mayor J. A. Lowe, Corinth; Rev. J. A. George, Ripley, and Miss Corinne Rogers, New Albany.

The following courses are to be offered: "Organization and Administration of the Sunday School," Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, instructor. "Pupil Study," Mrs. J. B. Randolph, instructor. "Principles of Religious Teaching," Rev. C. A. Bowen, instructor. "Life and Letters of Paul," Rev. W. W. Woollard, instructor. "Primary Lessons, Materials and Teaching," Miss Lynda Ramey, instructor. "Principles of Christian Service for Adults," Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, instructor.

Rev. E. G. Mohler, Booneville, is registrar and host; Rev. R. H. B. Gladney is executive secretary; Rev. Joseph B. Randolph is director of the Training School; Mrs. J. A. Cunningham is chairman of the Entertainment Committee; Mrs. J. B. Reynolds, Booneville, has charge of the text-books. The school will open for work Monday afternoon, June 2, at 3:30 o'clock.

District Conference.

The Corinth District Conference will be held at Booneville June 2-7. The first session will be held Monday afternoon, June 2, at 2:30, for organization.

The following committees are appointed: License to Preach—Revs. E. R. Smoot, W. I. White, J. L. Nabors. Admission on Trial—Revs. J. D. Wroten, J. J. Garner, D. R. McDougal, Deacon's Orders—Revs. W. W. Jones; W. M. Langley, A. L. Davenport; Elder's Orders—Revs. N. G. Augustus, C. W. Baley, J. A. George. Preaching at 11 a.m. each day, and at the evening hour.

JOSEPH B. RANDOLPH, P. E.

JACKSON DISTRICT NOTES.

Rev. G. E. Allen, pastor at Camden, states that they are making great preparations for the coming district conference, and urges that the several pastors who have not sent in names of delegates do so at once.

Those preachers and delegates who expect to go by train are requested to go to Pickens. If they will let Brother Allen know what train they are coming on, he will meet them with conveyance.

W. B. Barrett, at Fannin, is also fixing up his parsonage.

Congregations at Canton are fine. Average attendance at prayer meeting is seventy-two (pulse very good). Accessions by vows, seven; by certificate, twenty-seven. Epworth League and Sunday school fine. Brother Sullivan is held in high esteem and pushes the work with his usual energy and success.

Percy Vaughn, at Madison, says that two Baptists joined his church lately, but warns me against accusing him of "proselyting." Far be it from me!

Dr. H. F. Brooks makes the following report of the results of the meeting conducted by Judge Frank Morris at Capitol Street Church, beginning March 30 and closing April 15:

"There were more than 200 conversions and reclamations and 73 additions to the membership of the church. A number joined other churches in the city. Our meeting was a success in that large crowds attended, sinners were convicted and converted; many indifferent members were brought back to a reconsecration to their Lord and church. And the young life of the church was particularly aroused to a great activity."

An offering was made Judge Morris amounting to more than $1,200.

The present membership of Capitol Street is above 2,000 members. All departments of the church are in good working order, and the future of the church seems auspicious.

Henry Wood, over at Flora, has received in all 84 new members this year. Wood works wonders rapidly.

* * *

The total attendance at Sunday schools in Jackson on Easter Sunday was 2,665. This is the record attendance so far.

Dr. A. F. Watkins sends this from Yazoo City:

"Any man who is appointed to Yazoo City will find himself in the midst of a cultured, and refined, and clever, and appreciative people. The congregations are fine, and the attendance at prayer meeting and the Epworth League is growing ~~week by week~~.

"Yazoo City has recently suffered a great loss in the death of Mr. J. B. Ellis, for many years a prominent druggist and a devoted Methodist. He was a member of the board of stewards and a liberal supporter of the church.

"The church has largely over-subscribed its allotment for the year on the Superannuate Endowment Fund, and the canvass of the membership has not yet been completed. A large part of the subscription is in hand and ready to be forwarded to the fund headquarters."

The results of the meeting at Grace Methodist Church were: Thirty accessions to the church, ten on profession of faith, and the rest by certificate; probably as many as one hundred conversions and reclamations; a large number pledged for tithing and family prayers; fourteen subscribed for the New Orlens Christian Advocate. Brother E. B. Moll and his singer, Prof. Mangum, are a fine evangelistic team. They believe in old-time religion and old-time Methodist altar services. Some of these services were the finest I have ever witnessed.

F. L. APPLEWHITE, Reporter.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT NOTES.

Our efficient and popular presiding elder is improving in health and strength, and is attending all his conferences, preaching throughout the district and looking after all the interests of the church throughout the charges. All the charges, with the exception of a few, have put on the Superannuate campaign with great success—the other charges are planning to put on the campaign soon.

Our honored superannuates within our midst, Brothers R. F. Witt, C. M. Martin, and I. L. Peebles, are happy in the Lord, and their presence in our city and district is a benediction to all.

Brother M. L. White is serving his fifth year on the DeKalb charge, and is doing the greatest year's work of his five on that charge. He is making great preparations for our district conference, which will convene in DeKalb, May 12-14.

Brother W. C. M. Baggett is making progress on the Bucatunna charge. He has built a new church at State Line, which will be dedicated in June.

Brother S. E. Flurry, our new preacher on the Cleveland charge, was considerably interfered with in the beginning of the year, owing to bad roads; he is now able to meet all his appointments, and is in favor with his people.

Brother W. E. Dickens, on the Daleville charge, is in high favor with his people, and is doing a noble work.

Brother R. H. Clegg, our new pastor on the De Soto charge, has captivated his people, and is doing a wonderful work. The board of stewards very kindly raised his salary above what it ever has been before on the charge.

Brother T. M. Ainsworth has held two very successful meetings on his charge—at Enterprise and Stonewall. His salary has been increased for this year.

Brother J. H. Grice has made a good start on the Lauderdale and Electric Mills charge. He is serving a fine people, and they are well pleased with his ministry.

Brother E. W. Hope, our new preacher on the Matherville charge, is doing a splendid work. The board of stewards have raised his salary from what it was on the charge last year.

Our Meridian pastors are kept very busy. Brother Linnfield is in high favor with his people at Fifth Street. His board of stewards gave him a substantial raise in his salary. He is doing a great work. Brother Jolly, at Poplar Springs, is pushing the work forward, and is having good services every Sunday. Brother Castles, at Seventh Avenue, has become adjusted on his new charge, and his church at Seventh Avenue has taken on new life. There has been a remarkable growth in Sunday school attendance and preaching service in the church this year. Brother J. Lloyd Decell, at Central, is one of the most popular pastors that church has ever had. He is doing a great work. His church has recently bought a pipe organ, which will be installed by the 1st of August. He has had an increase in salary for this year. Hawkins Memorial Church and Thirty-fourth Avenue have both had a great revival recently. Rev. J. V. Bennett, Mississippi Conference evangelist, came to us in the beginning of March and remained three weeks. The church was greatly revived, and about thirty members were added to the church. The pastor's salary has ben increased for the year.

Brother R. E. Rutledge has recently had a great revival at Pachuta. Brother J. V. Bennett did the preaching. Brother Rutledge is loved by everybody, and is very popular with his people. His salary has been increased for the year.

Brother D. P. Yeager, our new pastor on the Porterville charge, is bringing his charge to the front. He has organized Epworth Leagues and Sunday schools in nearly all his churches, and is doing a great work. His salary has been increased for the year.

Brother J. D. Ellis is doing a good work at Quitman. He is reaching out into new territory, and preaching at Horton, a place previously unoccupied.

Brother O. B. Matheny is doing well on the Vimville charge. His salary has been increased for this year.

Brother Ulmer, at Scooba, is doing a greater work this year than has been done on the charge in many years. He is now building a new church at Scooba. His salary has been increased for the year.

Brother W. A. Terry has recently had a great revival at Shubuta, Brother Earl Moll, Conference evangelist, doing the preaching. Shubuta Methodism is advancing along all lines.

Brother Hays, our new pastor at Waynesboro, is in great favor with his people, and is doing a good work. His salary has been increased for the year. Brother R. A. Sibley, on the Waynesboro circuit, is moving along steadily with his work.

We have two other previously unoccupied places which have regular services now—Narket, on the Porterville charge, and Shucktown, which is being served by one of our local preachers, Brother E. D. Snellgrove.

Brother F. D. de le Bar, junior preacher at Hawkins Memorial, is doing a most excellent work out at Oak Grove.

The district, as a whole, is moving forward along all lines.

JAMES M. LEWIS, Reporter.

NOTES FROM THE SEASHORE DISTRICT.

Easter Sunday was a great day for our church in Gulfport. We began the day with an early morning service, with the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper from 6 to 7; then the Sunday school at 9:30, with the reception of a class of boys and girls into the church, and the baptism of a number of infants. There were 1,187 present at Sunday school.

Bishop Ainsworth preached a great sermon at 11 o'clock, and an offering was taken to liquidate the church debt, which was wiped out to the tune of $4,000.

In the afternoon at 3 o'clock the Flying Squadron of Gulfport gathered in the Methodist church and had a great service, consisting of a number of addresses, one of which was by Bishop Ainsworth.

At the night services the choir rendered a great program, after which another great class was received into the church.

It was a happy turn of the itinerant wheel that sent W. J. Ferguson to Gulfport.

Rev. J. B. Stringer, of the Escatawpa charge, is doing a great work this year. He has organized a new church within the bounds of his work at Creole, the big Southern paper mill, with a membership of more than 80. This place promises great things for the future.

* * *

Rev. B. W. Lewis is a happy fit on the new charge of Stillmore, and we will have three new churches as a result of his work there. There is talk of one of his points asking for full time next year. I trust not so soon, but surely after one more year we will have to give that mission territory another man.

* * *

H. A. Gatlin says he is not going to build a new church at Lumberton, but that is not recorded. I think, if things keep moving there as they are now, he will repent and go straightway and do it.

* * *

A. C. Johnston is doing the impossible at Carriere. He has fixed up the parsonage, dug a well, increased the salary, organized things in good shape, and they have given him a Ford car.

Joseph Smith has captured Picayune, and not only the women but all the folks are in love with him, and he is doing a great work for the Kingdom there. They increased his salary 33 1-3%, making an assessment of $2,000. The pastor, his wife, and the people are very happy over the situation.

* * *

Jim Williams is in the midst of a great forward movement in the building of a Sunday school annex, which is very necessary to take care of the interest of the Kingdom, made more important by the growth of the high school into a junior college at Poplarville.

* * *

L. F. Alford is building an annex for Sunday school purposes at Pascagoula. You know Alford has to build something, and nothing was more needed than more Sunday school room there.

Brother Sharbrough is digging out the basement of his church at Wiggins for the purpose of a very needed enlargement of the facilities of his growing plant. He, with the other boys, is doing the excavating preparatory to the concreting and carpenters' work.

Brother W. L. Ward, at Coalville, is building a magnificent parsonage, and his work is progressing nicely along other lines as well.

THE NEWTON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Newton District Conference convened in the beautiful Methodist church in the rapidly developing little city of Philadelphia on the morn- of April 23, 1924. Rev. L. E. Alford, the new but efficient presiding elder, called the conference to order, and throughout the entire conference presided over each session with the ease, grace and dignity of an "old-timer." After devotional exercises, conducted by the presiding elder, Rev. John W. Ramsey was elected secretary and Adam Mars was appointed assistant secretary.

While awaiting the arrival of a train on which many of the conference delegates were expected, the presiding elder read a list of preachers who had begun their ministerial careers in the bounds of the Newton District. The reading of this interesting list revealed the fact that, besides a number who are at present members of other Conferences, a surprisingly large proportion of the pastors in the Mississippi Conference were licensed to preach in this district. The fact was also disclosed that several of the pastors now serving charges in the district were licensed to preach here, and some have remained in it since the beginning of their ministry; the latter, at the request of the presiding elder, made brief talks.

When the roll was called, it was found that all the pastors were present except two, Revs. T. A. Ferguson and R. A. Allums. There was also a good representation of lay delegates, who took an active part in the proceedings of the conference.

The presiding elder announced the usual committees; and their reports, when submitted to the conference for consideration and taken in connection with the reports of the pastors, indicated that all the affairs of the district as a whole and all the interests of the church in the various pastoral charges were being advanced.

Rev. A. S. Oliver, from the Church Extension Board; Prof. Harrel, from Millsaps College; Rev. J. M. Morse, Educational Secretary; Rev. H. A. Gatlin, representing the Washington City Church, and Rev. W. T. Griffin, representing the Orphans' Home, were introduced to the conference. Rev. A. S. Oliver addressed the conference in the interest of the church at Columbus, erected for the purpose of taking care of our Methodist girls at the Mississippi State College for Women. The conference responded with a contribution of $150. Rev. H. A. Gatlin spoke concerning the pledges to the Washington City Church, and a committee was appointed to apportion the $250 asked for among the several charges on the basis of the pastors' support for the present year. Prof. G. L. Harrell and Rev. J. M. Morse spoke in behalf of Millsaps College and the cause of Christian Education, respectively.

Rev. J. F. McClellan, president of the Montrose Training School, spoke relative to the work of that institution.

One excellent young man, Edward Rose, by vote of the conference, was unanimously granted a license to preach upon the recommendation of the committee.

The following laymen were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: W. A. Davenport, J. H. Hester, O. S. Hopkins, W. H. Jones, W. C. Mabry, W. D. Donald, O. C. Hull, and R. B. Houtwell. Alternates: W. H. Mars and F. B. Dewees.

Sebastopol and Decatur were nominated as the meeting place for the next session of the conference. By a rising vote Decatur was selected.

The preaching of the conference was done in an excellent manner by Revs. G. G. Yeager, E. H. Cooley, and John R. Jones.

Under the guiding hand and wise leadership of the presiding elder, it must be conceded that this was one of the most pleasant and profitable sessions in the history of the Newton District.

After the adoption of appropriate resolutions, expressing appreciation of the gracious hospitality of the people of Philadelphia, the pastor and committees in their efforts toward securing the comfort of the delegates and preachers, the conference adjourned sine die.

JOHN W. RAMSEY, Secretary.

A HAPPY SUPERANNUATE.

Dear Dr. Carley: This superannuated Methodist preacher had cause for rejoicing last Tuesday evening about 8 o'clock. Brother Cain, our pastor, had requested me to be at home at that hour, as he had some business with us. Shortly after the train pulled in, a car stopped in front of our gate, and when I opened the front door, in came Rev. H. E. Pettus, pastor of the Baptist church; Brother Cain, and several of my friends of the town, and, to my great surprise, Dr. Briscoe Carter. After all were seated, and after a few minutes of pleasant conversation, Dr. Carter arose and said: "Brother Sweeny, I understand there is a mortgage of $1,000 on your home here." I said, "Yes, sir;" and he took from his coat pocket a long envelope and said: "That mortgage, my brother, is lifted. Here is your note—take it down to the clerk's office in the morning and have it canceled; and be careful how you handle the envelope, for there is a check for $50 in it for you for lagniappe."

Doctor, I felt that if I had had wings I would have flown away to my Lord in the glory world and fallen at his feet and thanked and praised his holy name for answering our prayers.

That my many friends who read the Advocate might share with us our joys, and that they may know as well as we who helped to bring this to pass, I am sending their names: W. M. Cady, S. G. Webb, Dr. R. D. Webb, R. T. Moore, F. T. Whited, A. J. Peavy, S. S. Holladay, Jr., T. C. Clanton, Rev. J. B. Peters, Rev. J. B. Williams, A. M. Mayo, O. H. Henderson, T. L. James, J. D. Moore, Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev. H. T. Carley, Rev. W. W. Drake, Rev. W. L. Duren, E. A. Frost, W. B. Reily, S. H. Meyer, Mrs. L. C. McVay, Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt; First Church, Monroe, through Brother Freeman; R. O. Randle, Dr. F. S. Parker, Dr. F. N. Parker, Rev. Thomas Carter, Van Carter, Haynesville, M. E. C., S., through Rev. A. J. Gearheard; Rev. A. S. Lutz, First M. E. Church, South, Shreveport, through Rev. R. E. Goodrich; Rev. C. C. Wier, W. T. Murry, Rev. E. K. Means, T. W. Holloman, J. R. Abels, O. McCan, Rev. E. C. Gunn, W. S. Holmes, Miss Margaret Hutchinson, Mrs. J. M. Robertson, Rev. W. W. Holmes, H. H. White, W. D. Wesley, and Rev. H. N. Brown.

May the blessings of God rest upon all these dear friends for this deed of kindness. We will never cease to thank Dr. Briscoe Carter for his interest in us in undertaking and bringing this thing to pass. With much love and gratitude to all, we are

Yours Faithfully,
F. N. SWEENY.

IT ISN'T YOUR SCHOOL—IT'S YOU.

If you want to have the kind of school
Like the kind of school you like,
You needn't slip your toys in a grip
And start on a long, long hike.
You'll only find what you left behind,
For there's nothing that's really new.

It's a knock at yourself when you knock your school.
It isn't the school—it's you!
Real schools are not made by people afraid
Lest somebody else get ahead.
When every one works and nobody shirks,
You can raise a school from the dead.

And if while you gain your personal aim,
Your neighbor can gain his, too,
Your school will be what you want to see.
It isn't your school—it's you!

A FAMILY AWAKENING.

"These biscuits are certainly good, mother," said Hal Evarts, at home from college for his spring vacation.

"Mother's biscuits are always fine," his sister Clarice reminded him.

"That's right," added Mr. Evarts. "Mother is the champion when it comes to making biscuits."

Mrs. Evarts did not smile back at them as she usually smiled when they praised her cooking. "Biscuits!" she exclaimed with a bitterness that was wholly strange in her. "Biscuits! Always biscuits; Hal comes home from college, and the first thing he says is, 'Mother, please make some biscuits for breakfast.' Not a word about his college doings, although I was counting on hearing. Clare brings her musical friend home; I love music, and Clare knows it, but instead of hoping I would enjoy her friend she says: 'Won't you please make some of your lovely biscuits for lunch?' Your father telephones he is bringing Professor Mellon home for dinner, 'And won't you have some of your famous biscuits?' I think you had better put on my tombstone, 'We miss her because she made good biscuits!'" She pushed back her chair and hurriedly left the room, leaving a startled and almost frightened family behind her.

"It—it isn't just the biscuits," Clarice said, and her eyes filled. "It's because it's been nothing but biscuits."

Her father nodded. "You've put your finger on the trouble. We're all guilty. We must find some way to make her understand that she is far more to us than just a biscuit-maker."

"Would it be all right for me to go up and tell her about college now?" Hal asked contritely.

"That would be as good a way as any to begin," said his father.

Hal's mother sat up and dried her eyes as he entered her room. "I'm ashamed of the way I exploded—like a spoiled child," she said apologetically.

"You should have exploded long ago," Hal replied. "We didn't mean to make you think you were only our biscuit-maker."

And he told her one college happening after another until he had her laughing.

That afternoon Mr. Evarts telephoned, "Come downtown and let's have dinner together and then go to the opera," he said to his wife.

They had an enjoyable evening. Coming home late, Mrs. Evarts found a note from Clarice on her dresser. "I am going to get brekfast," it read. "You are to stay in bed until I call you."

So it went all the week. Clarice insisted on getting breakfast regularly. At first her mother enjoyed it, but after a few days she was aware that something was missing.

The morning before Hal was to go back, Mrs. Evarts overheard him say to his father: "Guess I'll slip out with you and get something to eat. Clare's breakfasts are fluffy—"

"But not filling like mother's biscuits," finished his father.

The next morning Mrs. Evarts was in the kitchen when Clarice appeared. "Mother!" exclaimed the girl reproachfully.

"You're a dear," said her mother, laughing, "but you set the table, and I'll get breakfast. I don't want to forget how."

The family were assembled when she came into the dining room, carrying a plate of fluffy brown biscuits.

"Biscuits!" cried Hal.

"Biscuits!" echoed Mr. Evarts.

And "Oh, biscuits," said Clarice.

Then they all looked guiltily at one another.

"Yes, biscuits," repeated Mrs. Evarts, laughing. "I have concluded that making good biscuits for a good family is a good job. Only—I do get a bit tired of having it all biscuits."

"It's not going to be all biscuits after this!" they assured her tenderly but emphatically.—The Companion.

FLOWER DAY.

By T. Roberts.

A contest was to be held in Cologne Street High School for the prettiest bouquet of flowers. The most beautiful bouquet was to go to Mr. Randolf, the superintendent, on his birthday, and the prize offered was two dollars. All the girls in school looked forward to the day of the contest with great pleasure.

Lucile Anderson ran out to her flower garden every day to see if there wasn't just one bloom, but there never was.

Her mother's birthday came just a little over a week after Mr. Randolf's, and Lucile had especially wanted the money for her mother's present.

The ferns out in front were growing larger every day, but none of her flowers had bloomed.

She watched hopefully for the first bloom—and finally it came! A white Easter lily was beginning to open!

That afternoon she ran over to Elsie Ellis to tell her, but Elsie took her to a large rosebush loaded with pink roses.

"I'm going to fix a dozen of the prettiest and largest ones," Elsie told her.

Lucile's lilies kept on blooming until there were four beautiful white lilies in the round bed.

On the morning of the Flower Day she cut the four flowers, and with artful fingers mixed fern with them and tied a bow of soft pink tulle around their long green stems. All the way to [illegible] smiled down at the upturned lilies, [illegible] touched the petals softly.

[illegible] was to be announced after school, and all [illegible] to discuss the [illegible] bouquets.

The teachers examined each bunch carefully and talked quietly among themselves.

Lucile watched the teachers going through [illegible] bouquets.

"How lovely!" one of them exclaimed.

Lucile's fists clenched tight. "Maybe they have [illegible]," she said softly.

After school all the girls assembled in the auditorium.

Several of the teachers brought in the six prettiest bouquets and held them up, each one, to be seen.

"And this is the winner," said Miss Fox with a smile toward Lucile, and she held up the bouquet of soft white lilies.

When the applause had subsided the money was awarded to Lucile.

On Mr. Randolf's birthday he was given the flowers, and on her mother's she received a lovely red swing stand—all because of Lucile's four Easter lilies.

Mr. Pettis, pastor of the Baptist Church, whose congregation courteously attended, Rev. F. N. Sweeny, a superannuated member of the Louisiana Conference residing in Franklinton, the editor of the Advocate, and, of course, the pastor, Rev. L. W. The editor greatly enjoyed his visit to the beautiful little town of Franklinton, especially the gracious hospitality in the home of Brother and Sister Cain, and the charming courtesies of their children Jerome, Eleanor, and Ralph. It was a benediction to be in the presence of Brother Cain's mother, who is a visitor in the home.

changes since they sent me their subscription. The books ought to be ready within thirty days." Dr. Steel is easily one of the most brilliant writers of the present day, and a rare treat is in store for those who read his book.

We acknowledge the honor of an invitation to attend the commencement exercises of Whitworth College, Tuesday, May 20. The degree of Bachelor of Arts will be awarded twenty-six young ladies, in addition to which department diplomas will be given to several in English, Expression, Home Economics, Piano, and Physical Education. The commencement sermon will be preached by Dr. A. F. Smith of Nashville, and the commencement address will be delivered by President D. M. Key, of Millsaps College.

The First Methodist Church of Columbus, Miss., suffered a great loss recently in the death of W. C. Beard, for more than fifty years a member of that church, and active in all its work. He had reached the advanced age of 75 years. Prominent in the life of the community, he was a great asset to the religious forces of the city. His funeral, which was held from the church, was attended by a great throng as a testimonial of the high esteem in which he was held. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones and friends.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. R. W. Tucker, Homer, La., 45; Rev. Guy Ray, McCool, Miss., 2; Rev. P. O. Lowrey, Calhoun, La., 2; Rev. E. Nash Broyles, Greenville, Miss., 2; Rev. J. L. Frazier, Springfield, La., 2 (less than 1 year).

PLACE OF MEETING OF NEXT GENERAL CONFERENCE.

By Curtis B. Haley, Assistant Book Editor.

From the church press I note that the Committee on Arrangements for the next General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is to hold a meeting in a few days to take up the matter of selecting the place of meeting for the forthcoming Conference. I have checked up the places of meeting by States of all the Conferences, with the following result:

One General Conference has been held in each of the following States: Alabama (Birmingham, 1906); Arkansas (Hot Springs, 1922); Kentucky (Louisville, 1874); Louisiana (New Orleans, 1866); Maryland (Baltimore, 1892); North Carolina (Asheville, 1910); Oklahoma (Oklahoma City, 1914), and Texas (Dallas, 1902).

Two Conferences have been held in each of the following States: Missouri (St. Louis, 1850 and 1890); Virginia (Petersburg, 1846; Richmond, 1886).

Three Conferences have been held in Georgia (Columbus, 1854; Atlanta, 1876 and 1918).

Four Conferences have been held in Tennessee (Nashville, 1858 and 1882; Memphis, 1870 and 1894).

It will be noted from the foregoing that no General Conference has ever been held within the bounds of the States of Florida, Mississippi, or South Carolina. Surely the Methodists, and perhaps others of these great States, would like to have this great body meet at Jacksonville or Tampa, Meridian or Jackson, Charleston or Columbia, or in some other of their enterprising cities.

Since the Conference meets in the balmy month of May, the indications are that the weather conditions would be ideal for a gathering in any of the cities mentioned. In making the suggestion above, I am not unmindful of Colorado, California, West Virginia, and other States, where we have small memberships, but which are also distant from the center of population of our church.

EXTRACTS FROM TWO PAPERS.

Dear Brother Carley: Last Thursday morning, April 24, I took from my post office box here in Jackson, Miss., two papers, the Baptist Record and the New Orleans Christian Advocate, both papers being dated Thursday, April 24.

In the Baptist Record, page one, top of column one, will be found the following note: "In Gulfport there were 924 present in the two Baptist Sunday schools here last Sunday. The First Church had 612, and Grace Memorial 312. On the same day the Methodists, who have only one church, had 666 present."

In the New Orleans Christian Advocate, page eight, bottom of column three, will be found the following: "Easter Sunday was a great day for the First Methodist Church, Gulfport, Miss. There was a sunrise prayer meeting and communion service at which about 100 were present. The Sunday school attendance was 1,193."

The two statements might well be read twice.

SOCIAL SERVICE CONFERENCES.

The Commission on Temperance and Social Service will hold two conferences this summer, one at Lake Junaluska, July 6-13, the other at the Western Assembly at Mount Sequoyah, Fayetteville, Ark., Aug. 1-4. This will be the first Social Service Conference under the Commission at the latter place.

The general topic will be, "The Christian Home as a Vital Factor in Civilization." At Lake Junaluska the conference will give eight days to discussions of the subject under the headings of: "The Church and the Home;" "Founding and Housing the Home;" "The Home and the Child;" "The Home and Labor;" "The Home and Race Relations;" "The Home and Leisure;" "Enemies of the Home;" "The Home and International Peace."

The conference at Lake Junaluska last summer was voted by the many who attended it one of the most significant that had ever been held there. The Commission are laying as careful plans this year, securing speakers of national note in their special subjects, and those who come may be assured of a most interesting and helpful session. The lake and mountains, woods and fields are never more lovely than in early July. One friend from Texas, a woman of wide influence in her church and Conference, said last summer that the meetings, discussions, addresses and the wonderful setting had made this an epoch in her life, that she was returning enriched and uplifted to her year of volunteer work for the Kingdom. And all those around her echoed, "So say we all."

Those who visited Mount Seqoyah have made us eagerly anticipate rest under the shade of the great trees, the far look over smiling valleys. A fine program is assured them, which will be announced later.

BISHOP JAMES CANNON, JR.,
Chairman.

GRENADA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Grenada District Conference will convene in Abbeville, Miss., at 3:30 o'clock p. m., on Monday, May 12, and will adjourn with evening session, May 14. Let every one who comes remain throughout the session. Rev. Carroll Varner will preach at the evening service, May 12.

BOARD OF EDUCATION, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Pursuant to the action of the Board of Education at the Annual Conference session at Gulfport, Mississippi, last November, 1923, I am calling a meeting of the Board for Friday morning at nine o'clock, Jackson, Mississippi, in Galloway Memorial Church, May 23, 1924.

The members of the Board of Education will please to note this call, and be on hand, on time, for this meeting.

It will be well for the schools of the Conference having business with the Board at this time to provide such representation as they see fit. These representatives will please appear at the morning session.

"I LAY ME DOWN TO SLEEP."

"This night I lay me down to sleep;"
For God has fixed it so:
"I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to keep"
As pure as driven snow.

"If I should die before I wake,"
For I am only seven,
"I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to take,"
And bear it home to heaven.

"This night I lay me down to sleep,"
For it is all that I can do:
"I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to keep"
As sweet as morning dew.

"If I should die before I wake,"
I tell the world good-bye:
"I pray Thee, Lord, my soul to take,"
And bear it to the sky.

CHRIST CONFESSES US.

We can and do make it hard for Christ to confess us. For as the devil of old came into the presence of God accusing Job, so now the devil in a sense enters the court of heaven accusing us before the Father. Here is some poor, trembling, faltering sinner who walks unworthy of the vocation whereunto he is called. The devil comes before God, and says, "Ah, yes; that is one of yours, who promised to serve you and be faithful, and yet see how he is living." Christ's reply is, "Well, he has confessed me before men, and I promised to confess him before my Father. Yes; he is one of mine, and I am hoping that this will remove every trace of evil." It is a hard thing for Christ to confess us in the face of our many inconsistencies, but he is faithful to his promise.—A. J. Gordon.

WILLIAM GRAHAM was born May 17, 1854, and departed this life April 2, 1924. He was married to Miss Carrie Lee Jones, daughter of N. R. Jones, of Wayne County, Miss., Dec. 6, 1888. To this union were born twelve children, four of whom preceded him to the haven of rest. He joined the church in early life, and was true to all of its interests. He tried to live in harmony with the teaching of God's word. He was one of the charter members of our church at Hiwannee. His home was always his pastor's home. By kind words and gentle deeds he has erected for himself an imperishable monument to his memory. A loyal citizen, a faithful member of the church, a devoted husband and loving father has slipped away from us for a while, but we know where to find him. He leaves, to mourn his departure, a wife and eight children: Bessie, Lucile, Erma Cay, Mrs. L. M. Holcomb, John, James, Robert and Ernest D. Graham, of Waynesboro, Miss.; one brother, T. R. Graham, of Shubuta, Miss., and six grandchildren whom he loved so much, and a host of friends. After funeral services, conducted by his pastor, assisted by Rev. W. A. Hays, his body was tenderly consigned to the tomb in Hebron cemetery to await the resurrection morning. We will meet him again some day.

His pastor,

R. A. SIBLEY.

On the evening of Feb. 14, 1924, at Wesson, Miss., MRS. J. L. BEAVERS closed her eyes for that last long sleep from which there is no awakening. She was a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. She was married to Dr. J. L. Beavers, and nine children blessed this union. Truly it can be said of her, she planted and cultivated love, peace, and happiness in her home; but how could it be otherwise with one who nourished love and sustained the commandments of her God? Her home life was ideal. Quiet, unassuming, yet true in every relation of life, she added to the sum of human happiness, and were every one for whom she did some loving service to bring a blossom to her grave, she would sleep beneath a wilderness of flowers. A sweet, happy home is broken up. The home where the children have gathered for family reunions is no more. Her going away was very beautiful, much like the setting of a great sun. Surrounded by her children, she talked of her Saviour, and sang in clear, sweet tones, "Oh, how I love Jesus." She grew weaker and weaker, and just before the end came a beautiful mocking bird came and sat in the window and sang as never before, and ere the song was ended her pure spirit had flown to realms of bliss. After her hands were folded across her breast, we looked upon her; so calm, so still, so motionless, with the grateful smile on her lips, with such unutterable peace expressed in every curve of her pleasant face, she lay, we were comforted, knowing her precious feet had found a rest that will never be broken. We remembered what the disciples must have felt when they walked by the Lake of Gennesaret and thought of him who had so often trodden its shores. A cloud had received him out of their sight, yet brighter than the sunshine on the sea was the light that shone upon their tears, and sweeter than the whisper of the waves was the echo of that voice that said, "Where I am there shall ye be also." We have tried to think what a meeting there must have been in heaven when she passed in and was greeted by her bosom companion that she mourned for so long, and other loved ones gone on before. They are waiting—lingering upon the portals for the coming of loved ones left behind. Happy is that person who, when his life work is ended, can lie down to rest in the consciousness of duty well done, and in the last moments say as she did, "I see Jesus." The world is better because of her having lived in it, and her good deeds and elevating influence cannot be lost, but will continue to bear fruit to the glory of God. We bow in submission to his will, and are comforted by the thought that she now shares the splendors of that land where there is neither valley nor shadow of death. Truly no children ever loved a mother more than did hers. May they so live that when the shadows all flee away a family circle, unbroken, may be formed, and when they are sad at the thought of her slipping away from their hearts and home may they be comforted as they say,

"Fold her, O Father, in thine arms,
And may she henceforth be
A messenger of love between
Our human hearts and thee."

A FRIEND.

EDWARD W. RHODES was born in Rankin County, Miss., on Jan. 1, 1844. He died on Nov. 18, 1923, aged 79 years, 10 months and 17 days. When but a youth he enlisted in the Confederate army, and through this memorable conflict he fought bravely for the great principles so dear to the heart of every true Southerner. Here, while away from home and exposed to the many dangers and hardships of army life, his heart turned toward God, and he was brought to know Christ as his Saviour. In the year 1873 he united with the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at Shiloh, near where he lived and died. He ever after remained a loyal member and faithful supporter of this historic church, also an enthusiastic patron of the camp meeting which for so long has been held annually on these sacred grounds. Brother Rhodes was one of those stalwart, dependable men of whom this community has so long been noted. As a citizen, he was the soul of honor and integrity; as a neighbor he was wise in counsel and ever ready to minister to the relief and comfort of those about him. In his Christian life he was quiet and unobtrusive, yet faithful and true, demonstrating in his daily life the spirit of the Master whom he loved and whom he served. On Nov. 13, 1873, Brother Rhodes was married to Miss Lanie Knight, with whom he lived happily until his death. Six children were born to this union, four of whom survive with the devoted companion to mourn the going away of the loving husband and father. The only daughter, Ella, is the wife of Rev. James M. Lewis, of the Mississippi Conference. On Nov. 20, in the Shiloh cemetery, hard by the church of his love, we laid his tired body away to await the resurrection morn, Rev. Paul H. Grice and the writer conducintg the last sad rites.

PAUL D. HARDIN.

We buried on April 22, 1924, at old Providence Camp Ground, near Rockport, MRS. J. N. WARE, the wife of of our deceased Rev. J. N. Ware, of the Mississippi Conference. Sister Ware was nearly 72 years old, and had been a member of the church nearly fifty-four years. She was a devout Christian, and was ripe and ready for heaven. She had been confined to her bed for about four moths, and had suffered intensely from a stroke of paralysis. She frequently told the writer that she was ready, and wanted to go home and be with Jesus. May God bless her memory, and may her faith and courage be an incentive to those of her loved ones to live right.

Her pastor,

W. W. NELSON.

Georgetown, Miss.

On the morning of Feb. 19, 1924, the angel of death came to the beautiful little hamlet of Charlieville, La., and bore away to that city "Whose builder and maker is God," our beloved CHARLES MARK NOBLE. This man of God quietly approached his grave like one who, after the toils of a perfect day, lies down to pleasant dreams.

Mr. Noble was born near Columbia, La., Feb. 1, 1851. He was the devoted son of Fleming and Anne Eliza Grayson Noble. At a very early age he accepted Jesus as a personal Savior and joined the Methodist Church and was a faithful, loyal layman for more than 50 years.

In 1874 Mr. Noble came to Charlieville, where he lived for one year; then he won the heart and hand of Agatha Faulk, and for 47 years they lived amid the flowers and song of birds and ever did they give all honor to God, the giver of all good. To this union were born six children; three were singing in the choir invisible as he entered the heavenly home, and three here are emulating the example of his life; Mrs. F. B. Hatch, of Rayville, Mrs. H. R. Hayes, of Jackson, Miss.; Charles Mark Noble, Jr., of Charlieville, La.

Mr. Noble was a devoted father, a loyal friend, a gracious host, a man without guile; and children, grandchildren, and friends will rise up and call him blessed. He possessed the patience of Job, the faith of Abram and the loving heart of John the Apostle. He had the compassion for lost souls like unto Jesus, so he gave his all to the Sunday school, thus bringing the lambs into the fold. How the Sunday school and church will miss him; yet he will forever be enthroned in the heart of the Methodist Church and his influence will be as a living fountain of waters ever flowing on and on. "Thanks be unto God for such a life." "God gave and God has taken away."

Mr. Noble needs no eulogy, no mausoleum; may we think of these lines: "Sunset and evening star, and after that the dark. May there be no moaning of the bar, when I embark."

WHAT ONE BIBLE CLASS DID FOR THE FRENCH MISSION FIELD.

Dear Co-Workers of the Women's Bible Classes: One of our members recently became deeply interested in the work among the French in Southern Louisiana. An offering was taken, and in a short time $120 was raised.

What we can do, you can do if you try. So we are passing on the word, praying God's blessings upon your efforts and asking you to begin today. The best time to do the Lord's work is now. "The King's business requires haste." All of you, I am sure, are acquainted with the fact that the Southern part of our State is a needy field. Let us do our best to win these people for Christ. A small amount of money invested now will no doubt yield rich returns.

Wishing you success in this worthy undertaking, I am,

Fraternally yours,

DAISY H. PHIPPS,

Corresponding Secretary, Welden-Kimball Class, Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport, La.

FROM SICILY ISLAND, LA.

This is to remind the brethren that the Sicily Island charge is not lagging in the least, but there is a spirit of co-operation existing that is beautiful to behold. The preacher and the people are in the best of spirits because of what has already been accomplished and what we see can be accomplished during the remaining months of the Conference year.

We are progressing nicely with our Superannuate Endowment fund, and we are confident that we will put that over in good shape. We have also put a new roof on our parsonage, and, with just a little more work that we expect to do in the near future, we will have a very comfortable home for our preacher.

Last, but perhaps not the least of our accomplishments for this year, is the fact that we have just bought for our church here at Sicily Island one of the best and prettiest pianos to be found anywhere; of this we are justly proud. This was largely the work of the young people.

The preaching services are well attended and the Sunday school is on the up-grade, all of which shows that we, too, are awake, and by the help of God we expect to continue to go forward doing the work of God.

Fraternally,

CARROLL SHIEL.

FROM BOYCE, LA.

Dear Brother Carley: When you have something worth while for the Advocate, it's all right to send it in. All right, here it goes.

Yesterday was a good day for the church here. In fact, we have had several very helpful days recently. Sunday before Easter we received two members into the church. Easter was a record breaker for the Orphanage. Yesterday, we received five adult members on profession of faith; and there are more to follow. We have a class of twelve children to be received into the church next Sunday.

The Sunday school is growing numerically, and the interest is fine. Two classes have just been added to the Sunday school—a young men's class and a class of young married women. The outlook now is, that we shall have to add more Sunday school rooms. Increased attendance upon all the services is very perceptible; interest is fine; work more thorough.

We give God the praise, and press on for greater achievements in the work of the kingdom of our Lord.

Yours in His service,

E. L. CARGILL, P. C.

April 28, 1924.

"Our learning should be neither a couch on which to rest, nor a cloister in which to promenade alone; nor as a tower from which to look down on others; nor as a fortress where we may resist them; nor as a workshop for gain and merchandise, but as a rich armory and treasury for the glory of the Creator and then ennoblement of life."—Lord Bacon.

"I am in no way untrue to State institutions when I say that in our day a boy might become a bachelor or master in almost any one of the best of them, and as ignorant of the Bible, the moral and spiritual truth which it represents and the fundamental principles of religion, their nature and value to society, as if he had been educated in a non-Christian country. Who is to supply this lack if not the Christian college?"—President Thompson, of the Ohio State University.

He wakens us, if we will, every morning to fresh messages, and we may pour out our hearts before him and be assured of his heed.—W. Robertson Nichol.

FROM PERSONAL EXPERIENCE

Mrs. Bradford Recommends Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Phoebus, Virginia.—"Having this opportunity I just cannot refrain from saying a word of praise for the Lydia E. Pinkham medicines. I have used them as occasion required for twenty years, and my three sisters have also used them, and always with the most gratifying results. During the Change of Life I had the usual distressing symptoms—hot flashes, insomnia, etc.,—and I am pleased to testify to the wonderful results I obtained from the Vegetable Compound. I heartily recommend it to any woman and I will be pleased to answer any inquiries that might be sent to me through the publication of my testimonial."—Mrs. H. L. BRADFORD, 109 Armstead Street, Phoebus, Virginia.

Consider carefully Mrs. Bradford's letter. Her experience ought to help you. She mentions the trials of middle age and the wonderful results she obtained from Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you are suffering from nervous troubles, irritability, or if other annoying symptoms appear and you are blue at times, you should give the Vegetable Compound a fair trial. For sale by druggists everywhere.

To Make Rich Red Blood

Revitalize your worn-out exhausted nerves and increase your strength and endurance

take Organic Iron; not metallic iron which people usually take, but pure organic iron—Nuxated Iron—which is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. One dose of Nuxated Iron is estimated to be approximately equivalent (in organic iron contents) to eating one-half quart of spinach, one quart of green vegetables or half a dozen apples. It is like taking extract of beef instead of eating pounds of meat. Nuxated iron is partially predigested and ready for almost immediate absorption and assimilation by the blood, while metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on small pieces of iron filings.

Over 4,000,000 people annually are using Nuxated Iron. It will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach. A few doses will often commence to enrich your blood. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain satisfactory results.

Beware of substitutes. Always insist on having genuine organic iron—Nuxated Iron. Look for the letters N. I. on every tablet. Sold by all druggists.

EPWORTH LEAGUERS, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The program for the Epworth League Conference, to be held at Grenada College, Grenada, Mississippi, June 18-21, has been about completed and will go to the printer in the next few days. It is hoped that every pastor will see to it that several of the choice young people from his charge, and each of his churches, attend this Conference, whether he has a League or not, as all those who attend, if they are church workers, will be recognized as members and each district will be given credit in the awarding of a "District Banner" on the number from the district and the churches represented.

Weary, I turned to duty's path
And Happiness sought me,

I'll bear thee company."

JUSTICE TO GOD AND MAN.

As the difficulty of discovering what is right arises commonly from the prevalence of self-interest in our minds, and as we commonly behave rightly to any one for whom we feel affection or sympathy, Christ considered that he who could feel sympathy for all would behave rightly to all. But how to give the meager and narrow hearts of men such enlargement? How to make them capable of a universal sympathy? Christ believed it possible to bind men to their kind, but on one condition: that they were first bound fast to himself. . . . As love provokes love, many have found it possible to conceive for Christ an attachment the closeness of which no words can describe, a veneration so possessing and absorbing the man within them that they have said: "I live no more, but Christ lives in me." Now such a feeling carries with it of necessity the feeling of love for all human beings.

Love, wheresoever it appears, is in its measure a law-making power. "Love is dutiful in thought and deed." And, as the lover of his country is free from the temptation to treason, so is he who loves Christ secure from the temptation to injure any human being, whether it be himself or another. —Professor Seeley.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladuey, Sardis, Miss.

If you have not received your Sunday School Day programs do not fail to order again. Miss Virginia Thomas has filled every order that has been sent in, but sometimes packages are lost. We are expecting every charge to observe the day this year. Do not forget that every dollar raised is used in our own Conference. We have enterprised eight or ten Standard Training Schools, but if the Sunday schools fail to observe the day we are helpless in carrying out our program of training.

Only a very few schools observed Training Day, and if the schools fail to observe Sunday School Day, we shall be forced to call off several of our training schools. This is the time to go forward, not backward.

Why is it our leaders have failed to send names of those who ought to attend these training schools to Rev. J. E. Stephens, Greuada, Miss.? The Announcements are ready to mail out, and we need those names. We want two thousand names of teachers and young people. The man in charge knows who can and ought to attend these schools; no one else can know. Get busy and send in the names, and we shall help you in your work.

We have secured the best teachers the church has provided for us. Take advantage of this opportunity of fitting your teachers to help establish the Kingdom of God. A blind man can see that where we have trained teachers all the work of the church prospers; where there are no trained teachers the Kingdom lags, every enterprise of the church halts. Some men hoot at the idea of this being a "new day." But a belated "hoot" does not change the fact that we are meeting a new situation. Look at the splendid modern buildings the State has erected to give our children mental equipment; observe how the State is demanding that the teachers study and prepare themselves for the task of teaching the rudiments of an education. Is it not essential that we equip our teachers in the Sunday school to do better work if we expect to hold the children and young people for the church? Children are not easily humbugged, they have sense.

The prospects are good for a large attendance upon our school to be held at Grenada, June 11-18. If you want one of the rooms in the new dormitory you had better write Rev. J. E. Stephens at once. Brother Mohler writes that he is expecting two hundred to attend the school at Booneville.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE ITEMS.

At the recent meeting of the General Sunday School Board, the Superintendent of the Training Section, Mr. Sensabaugh, reported the total awards of 1923 as 28,536, which is an increase of 52% over the report of 1922. Our Conference record in total awards in Teacher Training is 601, which is an increase of 82% over 1922. From the general interest in Standard Training Schools throughout our Conference, our record for 1924 will no doubt exceed our record for 1923.

Mr. W. C. Owen, of the Central Staff, Nashville, and Superintendent of Adult Work, writes: "I am glad to get the name of Dean Smith as Conference Superintendent of Adult Work. . . . There are three things that I wish to stress at this time regarding the Wesley Bible classes: First, to check up and correct the existence file of classes to the last class; second, to organize and reorganize classes throughout each Conference where it is best to do so; and third, to present our standards and the program of service to them and get them lined up for definite activities."

Several District Bible Class Federations will be held this year in our Conference, at which time the above three things concerning Wesley Bible class work should be stressed.

At the recent New Orleans District Conference, April 27 was set aside for Sunday School Work. Dr. W. W. Drake, the presiding elder, brought a great message at the 11 o'clock hour, his theme being, "Jesus the Master Teacher." Mr. H. P. Wall, the District Secretary, was with us and rendered fine service.

The afternoon conference with the leaders and delegates from the surrounding communities was well attended, and all took part in the discussions and plans for the future. The report of the Committee on Sunday School Work at the New Orleans District Conference will be found elsewhere, and no doubt will be read with much interest. Rev. R. H. Harper acted as chairman of the Sunday School Committee, and Mr. J. H. Carter, Secretary.

The Sunday School Program at the District Conference at West Monroe will be on May 14, from 2 to 4 p. m. The presiding elder and the district officers in that wide-awake Sunday School District, are making every effort to make this program worth while. The news from that section indicates a continued interest in our Sunday School Program. The date of the Monroe Standard Training School is June 16 to 21.

Dr. Wynn, of the Shreveport District, writes as follows: "I shall at once plan with Brother Johns and others for a successful district meeting at Greenwood on May 20."

The Sunday school at Alexandria observed Sunday School Day last Sunday, which was considered one of the best in the whole history of Sunday school work in that great church. The leaders there were more than pleased with the attendance, and the well-rendered program. The goal set for the offering was $100 or more.

REV. C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES

April 27 was spent at Prentiss, in a circuit-wide institute. We had a good meeting, and the circuit institute set its goal and elected officers for this year. They have determined to make the Prentiss circuit a standard circuit. They also desire to be on all three Honor Rolls. They are planning for a leadership circuit-wide training school. If they carry out these plans, it will mean much for each school on the charge. Brother Porter is doing a good work. The outlook is promising.

Four more Sunday schools have sent offerings for Sunday School Day—West End (Laurel), Poplar Springs (Meridian), Brandon, and Wiggins. Let each school observe Sunday School Day as soon as possible and send offering to me.

All who are interested in a non-standard leadership training school, please let me hear from you. Nine Millsaps students have offered their services for help in these schools, and I would like very much to use them.

The Copiah County institute held its second session at Wesson, April 29 and 30. It was well attended, and the Sunday schools reported progress; 75% of the goals set last year were carried out. This was mighty good, I think. Mr. V. D. Younblood was elected president for this year. Miss Badgley, of Wesson, was elected secretary. They set the following goals for the schools of the county for the year:

1. Point No. 7 on "C" Program of Work.

2. A proper type Program of Work placed in each school.

3. Sunday School Day observed by each Sunday school in the county.

4. A membership campaign in each Sunday school in the county.

It was understood that a definite effort would be made to hold a county-wide non-standard training school next year. This is a real forward movement, and one that ought to be a great help to each school in the county.

Pray for the work and the workers.

Yours in Him,

JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

The morning is the gate of the day, and should be well guarded with prayer. It is one end of the thread on which the day's actions are strung and should be well-knotted with devotion. If we felt more the majesty of life, we should be more careful of its mornings.—C. H. Spurgeon.

DEAR CHRISTIAN FRIENDS.

I am a poor boy in misfortuue, and I write this letter to you all to see if you can help me a little by buying a box of beautiful Sea Shells. They are strange and wonderful things, fine for presents, souvenirs, or keep-sakes. Price, $1 a box. I am a crippled boy, permanently bed-ridden, caused by a fall. I can't walk or sit up. Been down in bed 25 years aud I have to earn a living in my helpless condition, and if you can send me an order for a box of Sea Shells I sure will appreciate your kindness, and I believe you will be pleased with these pretty Sea Shells.

Yours in Misfortune,
JOE MORPHEW, Titusville, Florida.

A REQUEST.

Dear sisters of the Missionary Society, will you please send news items, artieles of interest for the Advocate? I am new in this work and need your help.

I would greatly appreciate a eopy of the Minutes of the North Mississippi Missionary Society, also one of the Mississippi Conferenee Society, if some one would please mail me one of eaeh.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Activity at Bossier City, La.

Dear Sisters: I am a reader of the New Orleans Christian Advocate and Superintendent of Publieity of the Bossier City Woman's Missionary Society. I do enjoy reading the news from the different Societies, and read the letter from the Cheneyville Auxiliary to the Society. We think they are a real wide-awake Society, real live wires over there.

We are trying hard to do the things that are ours to do. Our meeting has been changed from Tuesday to Monday, in order that we might fall in line with all the other Auxiliaries in our town. We now have a federated soeiety. All the other churches have come together with us every fifth Monday. All the churches met at the Baptist ehurch to organize this Federated Woman's Missionary Society. The officers are from the different churches, and we expect this federation to mean much for all of us, by bringing us nearer together, as "workers together with Him."

There are opportunities for a great work here in Bossier City. We are making an effort, through our Social Service work, to organize a Bible study elass among the Negro women, for they are ready and willing for us to help them. I have just been elected Superintendent of Publicity in our Soeiety, so being new in the work there is much for me to learn, but we can all learn by doing and making an effort to do, trusting that our help shall come from God, if we go to him for help. I ask your prayers that I may be able to do the work well as Publieity Superintendent of my Society. Love to all the workers of the Missionary Societies of our Conferenee.

MRS. C. G. HOUSE.

New Orleans District Meeting.

In the absenee of our District Secretary, Mrs. J. D. Rumph, the meeting was presided over by Mrs. L. D. Chaffe, of First Chureh.

The meeting was opened by singing, "Hark, the Voice of Jesus Calling, Who Will go and Work To-day?" "The Living Christ" was the theme of the devotional service led by Mrs. D. B. Carre. She used a quotation from Mr. S. D. Gordon, "Does prayer eount?", showing how God reaehed into the heart and life of a seholarly lawyer who was representing his district in the lower House at Washington. While he was attending Congress, listening to a very heated discussion, in answer to the united prayers of two devoted Christian women, the proud-hearted will of the atheist was broken. He surrendered to God and beeame a powerful preacher.

Mrs. J. Cohen led in prayer. Mrs. J. H. Pullen, president of the Houma auxiliary, gave the address of welcome. In her sweet, winsome way she said that it was not necessary to give us the key to their eity, that "you yourselves are the key that will unlock all hearts and homes."

Mrs. C. F. Niebergall, our beloved State president, gave a report of the Council meeting just held in Tampa, Florida. She spoke of the beautiful eity and how the people left nothing undone for the entertainment of their guests.

While the Children's Work, under Miss Alethea Jones, has made great progress during the year, there are still a number of societies where the children's work is sadly neglected. There is great need of more organization among the young people also. This is Young People's year. One of the workers said, "Give us the young and we will ereate a new mind and a new world in a generation." Don't let's have any more orphans; let's organize the young people and train them for serviee in His vineyard.

While Louisiana was not at the top, she was near the top and got honorable mention in Mrs. Lipseomb's report.

Our offering for the Week of Prayer for this year will go to the (Home) coal fields of W. Virginia and (Foreign) to Mexieo.

The Quiet Hour, led by Dr. Alexander, was a souree of spiritual strength and uplift. "What do we put in the center of our lives?" He showed how some people put a book—the Bible—which is good, but not the best. Others put a church—the Roman Catholics—how they worship the church, forgetting the Founder of the Church. Unless Jesus Christ is the center of our lives, our work will be in vain. He must be pre-eminent.

Mrs. Niebergall spoke of the lovely Chinese girls, guests of the Conneil, produets of our mission, who are now in college or in various fields of preparation in America. When the speaker introduced them, she said, "Ladies, these are your jewels," and they are indeed precious to every one of the delegates.

Roll call of delegates showed there were 57 present. Nearly every society in the district had a representative. The reports were very interesting and showed growth and development along all lines.

Miss Elsie Cantrelle sang very swectly, "Doing His Will."

Miss Rogers, from St. Mark's Hall, gave a good talk on Young People's and Children's Work; that, in order for America to become really Christian, we must train the children and young people to take a firm stand for Christ, thereby growing up for Him. She stressed the necessity of having every Junior in every organization doing something. Give them some part, something to be responsible for, so that they will have a more vital interest.

After prayer by the president, the meeting adjourned.

New Orleans, La., April 29, 1924.

Dear Women of the Louisiana Conference:

Three thousand, three hundred and sixty-eight years ago the people of Israel realized an important fact. The Bible tells us in the Book of Joshua: "There failed not aught of any good thing which the Lord had spoken unto the house of Israel, all eame to pass." Are we not of the house of Israel, we missionary women? Then when the Lord promises strength and wisdom to us members, and tells us to tell the message to those who have not heard, whether to the church members or to the Gentiles, will the Lord fail us? Let us all work together in the joy of faith that, as of old, all will come to pass! Would you be slow in joining this wonderful team, with the living Christ as Captain? As your new Corresponding Secretary, my feeling in this work is "The Lord is with us; who can be against us?" "Lift up your heads * * * and the King of Glory shall eome in."

Our goal for 1924 is: 1. "A Young People's Auxiliary or Circle for every Adult Auxiliary in the Louisiana Conference."

2. Double the membership in 1924-25. (a) Every member of the Missionary Society responsible for enlisting and holding one new woman, with a view to enrolling every Methodist woman as a member of the Woman's Missionary Society. (b) Any Auxiliary reaching this goal will be placed on the Honor Roll, and names printed in Louisiana Minutes of 1925.

3. Belle Bennett Memorial Fund.—Love gifts from each auxiliary to equal $5.00 per member by end of 1925. The Pauline Randle cup will be given to the District that organizes and makes the greatest increase in number of Young People's Auxiliaries or Circles by Dec. 31, 1924.

In Young People's Auxiliaries, the small group or eircle idea is strongly recommended, taking all the girls in the church of say fifteen years, using as leader the woman to whom they are most accustomed, and meeting during the week. If the girls and boys of other ages are organized into other groups, we shall have numbers and interest also. This is "Young People's Year," and we need young people, juniors and babies followed up and reported in full—on time!

Houma has had wonderful success with circuit leaders. The Council is urging this, too. A town president, or a woman with a vision, will be president of several rural auxiliaries, organizing them, teaching and inspiring them, until they are strong enough to manage themselves. This is the secret of rural work. Try it, sisters, and report next year at the Woman's Annual Conference. "If I should withhold my hand, I should rob God."

We urge the holding of Interdenominational Study Classes, and give authority to Methodist women to count this on Methodist reports.

Come to New Orleans Nov. 10-14, and hear Miss Mabel Howell, our Oriental Secretary, teacher of Foreign and Home Study books at the Interdenominational School of Missions.

The Council ruling starts at once. No new member shall be counted until three months' dues are paid, and no new auxiliary nor member shall be counted until reported to District Secretary and Conference Treasurer. All reports end Dec. 31.

Concerning boxes of supplies, requests come from Houma for underwear for boys and girls, goods to make underwear, old school books, books for library, and in all places canned goods, jellies, sugar, rice, and such things are appreciated.

One auxiliary asked their delegate, upon her return from the Bogalusa Conference, "What did you do to educate the men in missions?" I pass it on to you.

As your Corresponding Secretary, I shall count it a privilege to try to help any woman in the State who will write me about the reason why she cannot succeed. Perhaps two heads would be better than one.

Most sincerely,
Mrs. D. BEACH CARRE,
Cor. Secty. La. Conf.

NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The New Orleans District Conference was called to order at 10 o'clock a. m., Apr. 25, 1924, at First Church, Houma, by Dr. W. W. Drake, the presiding elder, who conducted the devotional services, in which he characterized the "Acts of the Apostles" as the "Doings of the Missionaries," or the "Acts of the Holy Spirit." His talk struck the keynote of the conference, which emphasized the need of evangelism.

The hospitality of the good people of Houma, our own members, led by the agreeable pastor, Rev. F. J. McCoy (who has evidently done a great work in that section), as well as of the Rev. Mr. Blackburn, Presbyterian minister, and others, was greatly enjoyed by the conference, and a resolution to this effect was unanimously passed at the closing session.

There were sixty-three registered delegates, a few who did not register, and at all the main services the conference was well attended, the church being filled to capacity during the preaching hours. Those who dispensed the Word in strong and much-appreciated messages were Dr. O. S. Welch, Rev. W. L. Doss, Dr. R. H. Harper, Rev. J. A. McCormack, Rev. C. D. Atkinson, and the presiding elder. On Sunday, the Sunday school was given the day, and under Rev. C. D. Atkinson was a profitable occasion, but most of the preachers were compelled to return to their charges on Saturday.

We saw Brother R. W. Vaughan, who had to leave, and the cause of our Orphans' Home at Ruston was ably presented by Dr. Briscoe Carter, who also spoke on education for Dr. A. S. Lutz, Secretary of Education. We missed President Sexton, of Centenary, and President Bratton, of Mansfield, but the cause of education was optimistically represented by Dean Smith of Centenary College, who spoke of the plan of celebrating the one-hundredth birthday of the college in 1925 by a great forward movement.

Resolutions commending the plans and pledging our hearty support and cooperation were read by Dr. R. H. Harper, and passed by the body.

The fact that the conference met in the heart of the French district gave first-hand opportunity for studying that field. It was pointed out that if we are to take the field, our own Protestantism must experience a genuine revival. Rev. Martin Hebert made a telling speech to this end and was backed up by the presiding elder. The Rev. Geo. L. Grange, one of our own French preachers, threw out a challenge to Methodism to produce more preachers in fifteen years from a single pastoral charge, which thing his charge has done!

Rev. Avia M. Martin was licensed to preach and was called to the elder's orders thereto immediately by Dr. Drake.

The following delegates to the Annual Conference were elected: J. H. Cuddy, J. H. Thatcher, Dr. M. F. Wilson, C. O. Chalmers, W. M. Brown, Miss Ella Hooper, Mrs. C. F. Nieberding, and Mrs. W. A. Gable. Alternates: Mrs. J. A. Alford, Mrs. Laura M. White, Rev. J. B. Grambling, and Miss Lida Stock.

Rev. J. G. Snelling spoke in the interest of Memorial Home in New Orleans and asked that an offering be made on Mothers' Day for this laudable work.

An appeal for the Christian Advocate was made by Dr. H. T. Carley, who very thoughtfully gave the conference copies of the issue of the week.

The meeting place of the next Conference will be Louisiana Avenue, New Orleans.

Dr. R. S. Crichlow, New Orleans, La., was elected lay leader, and Dr. F. R. Singletary, Slidell, La., and Mr. L. J. Bass, Morgan City, La., associates.

Over two thousand dollars have been collected since Conference on education pledges, and more than $3000 in cash on the Superannuate Endowment. The Committee's report on Social Service, which was adopted, condemned race track gambling, and called on all to support law enforcement.

The Committee on the General State of the Church reported that over five hundred new members had been received since Conference. Congregations are increasing and 75 to 80 per cent take communion. The report of young people's work was encouraging, and the Leagues are growing. Six young people are pledged to definite Christian service. In addition to the foregoing, we give the Sunday school facts as brought out in report: There is an average attendance of 2313; 17 are planning for Sunday School Day; a Standard Training School in October, First Church, New Orleans, is now being arranged for.

The question of "too frequent and promiscuous attendance by children upon the picture shows, resulting in untold physical, mental and spiritual harm," was discussed in a ringing resolution addressed to the General Sunday School Council, to the end "that steps be taken in every possible way to educate our people as to the dangers of the situation."

The following licensing committee to act in the interim till Annual Conference on nomination of the Chair were elected: W. W. Drake, W. L. Doss, Jr., W. L. Duren, J. W. Lee, and J. C. Rousseaux.

On Friday afternoon, the district meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society was held at MacDonell Wesley House. A large number of ladies was present. It was an inspiring occasion, and first-hand observation of our work was had. In the absence of Mrs. J. D. Rumph, District Secretary, the Conference was presided over by Mrs. L. D. Chaffe. It was a pleasure to meet our workers there—Miss Ella Hooper, Mrs. L. M. White, Miss Panver, and Mr. Tomlin.

J. CUDE ROUSSEAUX.

FROM VERONA, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: We have recently closed a great meeting of eleven days at Verona Methodist Church.

We had with us the Rev. W. A. Wilson, Conference Evangelist, whose sermons were sound, strong, clear, and spiritual, and were heard and received with delight regardless of denomina-

[illegible] great-[illegible] result of the revival. [illegible] were received into the [illegible] Church, while others united with the Baptist and Presbyterian churches. A Wesley Bible Class of [illegible] members was organized and is doing [illegible] the work.

A Ladies' weekly prayer meeting was organized. Indeed, much good every way was accomplished. The churches brought closer together, and [illegible] was clearly manifested. We hope to have Brother Wilson with us again at no distant day.

With love and best wishes for all concerned, including the Advocate family, I am yours for service,

MRS. R. M. EVANS.

THE POWER OF HIS RESURRECTION.

With due deference to any and all other proofs that have been offered for the resurrection of Christ, this experience of fellowship with the risen Christ, the power He has exerted over the lives of believers, is the greatest and the best. Greatest, because it did not cease like other proofs; best, because it could be, has been, and today is shared by later believers as other proofs could not be. This has ever been the great reason why men have believed on Him. He is here. He may be known. This is our one great chance to have personal proof of the resurrection. And this is the one great proof that is hardest of all to refute.—Dr. W. J. Lowsuter.

I also call attention to the fact that I am calling the quarterly couferences on the circuit to meet at 10 a.m. I am doing this because of a special program I shall have for the conferences on my third round. I shall have with me a layman (or other visitor) who will make an address on the value of the church to the community and to the world. I will secure the speaker for this occasion. I desire that the preacher, either before or after the time of the meeting of his quarterly conference, have all-day services in each of his other churches, at which service he shall have some one speak on the value of the church to the community and to the world. I want the preacher to preach a sermon on that same day on "Life Stewardship." Brethren, let's put the same enthusiasm into our work that we would if we knew each day were the last we would have for service upon earth.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

Vol. 71—No. 20. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3562

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, MAY 15, 1924. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

PLAN OF UNIFICATION.

Transmittal.

We, the Commissions on the Unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, holding that these two churches are essentially one church, one in origin, in belief, in spirit, in purpose and in policy, and desiring that this essential unity may be made actual in organization and administration throughout the world, do hereby propose and transmit to our respective General Conferences the following plan of unification and recommend its adoption by the two churches by the processes which they respectively require.

ARTICLE I.

Declaration of Union.

The Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, shall be united in one Church with two Jurisdictions under a constitution, with a General Conference and two Jurisdictional Conferences.

ARTICLE II.

Name.

The name of the Church shall be .....

ARTICLE III.

Jurisdictions.

Section 1. Jurisdiction number One shall comprise all the churches, Annual Conferences, Mission Conferences and Missions, now constituting the Methodist Episcopal Church, and any other such Conferences and Missions as may hereafter be organized by its Jurisdictional Conference with the approval of the General Conference.

Sec. 2. Jurisdiction number Two shall comprise all the churches, Annual Conferences, Mission Conferences and Missions, now constituting the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and any other such Conferences and Missions as may hereafter be organized by its Jurisdictional Conference with the approval of the General Conference.

ARTICLE IV.

Composition of General and Jurisdictional Conferences.

The General Conference and the Jurisdictional Conferences shall be composed of the same delegates. Said delegates shall be elected by and from the Annual Conferences, provided said General and Jurisdictional Conferences shall have not more than one ministerial delegate for every forty-five members of each Annual Conference and not less than one ministerial delegate for every one hundred and twenty members of each Annual Conference and an equal number of lay delegates, chosen according to the regulations of each of the two Jurisdictions; but for a fraction of two-thirds or more, of the number fixed by the General Conference as the ratio of representation, an Annual Conference shall be entitled to an additional ministerial delegate; and provided further that each Annual Conference shall be entitled to at least one ministerial and one lay delegate.

ARTICLE V.

The General Conference.

Section 1. Voting. Every vote in the General Conference shall be by Jurisdictions and shall require the accepted majority vote of each Jurisdiction to be effective.

Section 2. Powers. Subject to the limitations and restrictions of the Constitution, the General Conference shall have full legislative power over all matters distinctively connectional, and in the exercise of said power shall have authority as follows:

1. To define and fix the conditions, privileges, and duties of church membership.

2. To define and fix the qualifications and duties of Elders, Deacons, Local Preachers, Exhorters, and Deaconesses.

3. To make provision for such organization of the work of the united church outside the United States as may promptly consummate the unity of Episcopal Methodism in foreign lands.

4. To define and fix the powers, duties and privileges of the Episcopacy; to fix the number of Bishops to be elected by the respective Jurisdictional Conferences, and to provide, in harmony with the historic practice of Episcopal Methodism, for their consecration as Bishops of the whole Church.

5. To alter and change the Hymnal and Ritual of the Church, and to regulate all matters relating to the Form and Mode of Worship, subject to the limitations of the first Restrictive Rule.

6. To provide for a Judicial System and for a method of Judicial Procedure for the Church, except as herein otherwise provided.

7. To govern any and all enterprises and activities which may be agreed upon as being of a connectional character.

8. To provide for the transfer of members, preachers, churches, pastoral charges, districts, Annual Conferences, Mission Conferences, and Missions in the United States from one Jurisdiction to the other, provided that no transfer shall be made without the consent of the member, preacher, church, pastoral charge, district, Annual Conference, Mission Conference or Mission that it is proposed to transfer.

Section 3. Restrictive Rules. In making rules and regulations for the church, the General Conference shall be under the following limitations and restrictions:

1. The General Conference shall not revoke, alter or change our Articles of Religion or establish any new standards or rules of doctrine contrary to our present existing and established standards of doctrine.

2. The General Conference shall not change or alter any part or rule of our government, so as to do away Episcopacy, or destroy the plan of our itinerant general superintendency.

3. The General Conference shall not revoke or change the general rules of the United Societies.

4. The General Conference shall not do away the privileges of our ministers or preachers of trial by a committee and of an appeal; neither shall they do away the privileges of our members of trial before the church, or by a committee, and of an appeal.

5. The General Conference shall not appropriate the produce of the Publishing House or of the Chartered Fund to any purpose other than for the benefit of the traveling, supernumerary, superannuated, and worn-out preachers, their wives, widows and children.

ARTICLE VI.

Bishops.

The Bishops of the two churches as at present constituted shall be Bishops of the united Church without further action.

Immediately after the union shall have been consummated, the Bishops shall meet and organize as one body and shall arrange for the superintendence of the work of the Church.

A Bishop may be assigned to administer in any part of the Church, provided that when he is assigned to administer within the Jurisdiction other than that by which he was elected, it shall be with the consent of the majority of the Bishops of the Jurisdiction involved.

ARTICLE VII.

Presidency of the General Conference.

The Bishops shall select by a majority vote of the Bishops of each Jurisdiction one or more of their number from each Jurisdiction to preside at the sessions of the General Conference.

ARTICLE VIII.

Jurisdictional Conferences.

Each Jurisdiction shall have a Jurisdictional Conference, possessing the full powers of the General Conference of the Church now constituting said Jurisdiction, except such powers as are herein vested in the General Conference, or which may hereafter from time to time be legally delegated to the General Conference by the Jurisdictional Conferences.

Each Jurisdictional Conference shall meet quadrennially where the General Conference is to assemble and immediately prior to its assembling, and when desirable may meet during the session of the General Conference, and at such other times and places as it may determine.

ARTICLE IX.

The Judicial Council.

1. The General Conference shall, at its first session, provide for a Judicial Council, to be composed of an equal number of members elected by each Jurisdictional Conference, and the Judicial Council shall provide its own methods of procedure.

2. The Judicial Council shall be authorized to review, upon appeal of one-fifth of the members of the General Conference, or of either Jurisdictional Conference, or on the appeal of a majority of the Bishops on constitutional grounds, the acts of the General Conference and of the Jurisdictional Conferences; to hear and to determine all other appeals and matters coming to it in the course of legal procedure.

3. The Judicial Council shall have the right on its own motion, subject to such rules and regulations as shall be be determined by the General Conference, to review the legislative acts of the General Conference or of either Jurisdictional Conference and to pass on the constitutionality of said acts.

4. The Judicial Council shall also have power to arrest an action of a Connectional Board or other Connectional Body when such action is brought before it by appeal by one-fifth of the members of said body, present and voting, or by a majority of the Bishops.

5. All decisions of the Judicial Council shall be made by a majority of the total membership of the Council.

ARTICLE X.

The General Conference shall at its first session provide in harmony with the existing procedure of the two Churches a method of amending the constitution, and until such method shall have been adopted amendments shall be effected through the process now prevailing in the Churches, respectively.

ARTICLE XI.

Schedule.

In all matters not specifically set forth in these

FREEDOM AND ROMANISM.

By Bishop James Cannon, Jr.

On Sunday, afternoon, January 27, a mass meeting was held at Broad Street Methodist Church in the city of Richmond to discuss the subject of Religious Liberty and Education vs. Religious Autocracy.

The meeting was presided over by Dr. R. H. Pitt, the editor of the Religious Herald, the opening prayer was made by Dr. S. C. Mitchell, of the University of Richmond, and the benediction was pronounced by Dr. Beverly Tucker, pastor of St. Paul's Episcopal Church. On the platform were Dr. George W. McDaniel, pastor of the First Baptist Church. Addresses were made by Dr. E. O. Watson, Secretary of the Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America, by Dr. J. G. Benson, of Rome, and by the writer. The house was well filled with an audience representative of the Protestant ministry and laity of Richmond.

The report of the meeting in Monday issues of the Richmond dailies was a striking illustration of "how not to do it"—that is, of how to report a meeting and yet not let the readers know what the meeting was about or what was said.

The writer has been told that the reporter sent by the Times-Dispatch to cover the meeting is a Roman Catholic. If so, it is not surprising that there was not one word to indicate that the purpose of the meeting was to demand freedom of teaching in countries where such teaching is opposed and indeed sometimes suppressed by the influence of the Roman Catholic hierarchy, or to indicate that statements were made giving countries and in some cases the very schools where the Roman Catholic hierarchy is violently and forcibly opposing the right of Protestants to carry on schools and to print and to distribute literature, including the Bible.

Now, this suppression of the protest filed at this mass meeting, attended and approved by leading Protestants of the city, was not attempted in Mexico or in Spain or in Rome or even in foreign-populated New York, but in Richmond, Va., and the citizens of Richmond and of the State of Virginia do not know what that meeting really stood for, because the daily papers did not print the facts presented. Why?

The writer is not a member of the Ku-Klux Klan. He does not believe that the law of the land should be administered by bands of disguised men, no matter how praiseworthy their intentions. But the veiled intimidation which Romanists declare is practiced by the Ku-Klux Klan is no more dangerous to the free activities of the citizens of this country than is the intimidation of officials and the practical muzzling of the press by Roman Catholic influence, and no more clear-cut warning has been given of the determination of the Roman hierarchy in this country for the present at least to suppress the truth concerning the real attitude of that church toward free speech, free press, free schools, and free church than the report in the papers of the city of Richmond, of the State of Virginia, concerning the meeting of protest held at Broad Street Methodist Church on January 27 in the year of our Lord 1924.

For example, the report in the Times-Dispatch, the morning paper, and the News Leader, the evening paper of the city of Richmond, were, respectivcly, as follows:

"Protestantism stands for free speech, free schools, and freedom of religion, according to Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Church, South. He stated that he believed every one has a right to worship according to his own conscience."

"Bishop Cannon explained what Protestantism stands for and stated that he believed every one has a right to worship according to his own conscience."

These few lines were the reporter's summary of the following statement: "I shall emphasize only one thought this afternoon—namely, the fundamental difference in the attitude of Protestantism and Romanism toward the education and the liberty of the people. Protestantism stands for free speech, free press, free schools, and free church. Romanism stands for none of these prime basal factors in the life and growth of the American people. And this difference is not provincial; it is not even national. No! It is definite, deliberate, deep-seated, permanent, age-long, and world-wide. I gladly join with Dr. R. W. Dale, the great English Congregational leader, in his tribute to that which has been best in the history of the Romish Church: to the heroism of her missionaries, the scholarship and learning of her theologians, the eloquence of her great preachers, the spiritual wisdom of her great mystics, the beautiful lives of many saintly souls, and the spiritual uplift of her sweet singers. But I equally agree with him when he said: 'Against the pretensions of this church to be the exclusive minister of God's grace and to stand between even the humblest and obscurest of God's children and their Heavenly Father, against the assumption on which her priests and her bishops rest their claim to control national policy and legislation, and especially against the authority asserted on behalf of her chief ruler to interfere in the name of God with the free development of the intellectual, political, and social life of mankind—against these I must declare my intense and implacable hostility.'"

Mexico, our next-door neighbor on the south, was absolutely controlled by Romanism for over three centuries, and the hierarchy still claims domination over the lives of the great masses of the people. There were no free speech, free press, free schools, nor free church. The Romish Church denied all these to the Mexican people. Illiteracy, ignorance, immorality, poverty, superstition, and abject fear of the power of the church—these were the results of Romish rule in Mexico and the logical, certain results wherever Rome rules. And to-day in Mexico the spirit of the Romish priesthood is the same.

Centenary missionary offerings have made possible the establishment of a Methodist publishing house in the city of Chihuahua. Open Bibles and Scripture texts are displayed in the show windows, and people stop to read and then to purchase, and many Bibles and religious books are being sold. But this circulation of the Word of God has brought no joy to Romanism. The Romish Archbishop of Chihuahua denounced the purchase and ownership of the Bible and issued a public decree that all who owned Bibles should bring them to be burned in the square in front of the cathedral. And this happened just across the Rio Grande in A. D. 1921! Why has not this archbishop been deposed by the pope? Why has he not been rebuked for this shamful attack upon liberty and upon the Word of God? Because he represents the real attitude of Romanism where it dares to declare its intolerance.

In 1922 a Romish priest in the State of Durango led his fanatical followers in an attack upon Miss Elizabeth Streeter, an American lady of culture and piety, who was making an itinerary, holding gospel meetings in the homes of Mexican friends. She and the Mexican workers were driven out of the town, pursued into the country. One of the Mexican workers was killed, and Miss Streeter was knocked from the burro, her hip bone broken, and she is a cripple for life. Up to this time there has been no disavowal by the hierarchy of this murderous attempt by the priest to prevent the preaching of the Word of God.

In the heart of Africa in the year of our Lord 1922 I preached to a large congregation of Otetala negroes. At the close of the sermon Wembo Nyama, the chief of the neighboring village, stood up and asked to speak. He said:

"When Owangi Kabengele (Bishop Lambuth) came here to teach us, there were no schools, there were no buildings, there was nothing, and the place was a wilderness. The Roman Catholics came to me and begged me not to allow Owangi Kabengele to open schools and to teach my people. They asked me not to be friendly with him and offered me gifts if I would not be friendly. I told them that Bula Matadi (name for Belgian officials) was my only chief, that they (the Roman Catholics) had not opened schools for my people, and that I was going to be friendly with Kabengele.

"Now Kabengele is dead. Owangi Ongenongeno (Bishop Cannon) has succeeded to his position and is in charge of the schools. We are glad to have him with us, and he has gladdened our hearts. We are not here to think or talk about 'things'; we are here to listen to the palaver of God. Aren't you all happy?"

The natives shouted, "Yes, we are happy," and clapped their hands, saying to Bishop Cannon, "Lusaka, lusaka, lusaka" ("Thank you, thank you, thank you for teaching us and our children").

The Romanist priests would keep the Congo natives in ignorance as they have kept the natives of the West Indies, of Mexico, and of Central and South America as long as they had the power.

In 1920 I went as the representative of our Board of Missions to Czecho-Slovakia and Poland. I was warmly received by President Mazaryck and President Pilsudski, and thousands of lives were saved by our relief workers. We found a great opportunity to preach the truth as it is in Jesus, and the work of teaching and preaching has been carried on with ever-increasing success. There are now groups of Polish Methodists in Warsaw, Katowice, Czarniar, Lwow, and other centers. Ten day schools have been organized, an English school of over one thousand students is in operation in Warsaw, and a large printing and publishing house is under way.

But free schools and a free press are an abomination to the Romanists, and they have organized to influence the government to put an end to our Protestant enterprises. Local friction has been stirred up. Influence was brought to bear upon the central government to order all foreign humanitarian organizations to wind up their activities by December 31, 1923, on the ground that Poland could look after its own poor. It is true that the Polish constitution declares that "if any religious body complying with the law applies for recognition such recognition may not be refused." But the enabling law has not been adopted, and the Romish hierarchy is endeavoring to stifle the evangelical witness by false propaganda, trumped-up charges, and subterranean influence. The Romish Church is fighting as in the past to retain its hold upon the people by terrorism and keeping them in ignorance.

In the spring of 1919 six Methodist bishops (Anderson, Henderson, Hughes, Atkins, Lambuth, and Cannon), two foreign mission secretaries (North and Pinson), and other Methodist leaders were in the city of Rome. They were tendered a special reception by the king and queen. The American missionaries were given an excursion over the city in a great dirigible machine, were carried at the expense of the government from Rome to the battle front, and under the direction of army officers were shown the battle front from Trent to Trieste. The highest appreciation was shown of the assistance of America in winning Trieste and the Trentino for Italy.

On the Sunday of our stay in Rome a service was held on Monte Mario, the eighth hill of Rome, overlooking St. Peters and the Vatican, inaugurating the beginning of educational work by the Methodist church on that site. Such work for both boys and girls had been carried on by Methodism in Rome for thirty years and was simply a proper development enterprise. But since the war the Vatican has determined to prohibit as far as possible in Rome that toleration and fair play which she demands and which is willingly conceded to her by Protestants in Protestant countries. The pope has called upon the Knights of Columbus to spend a million dollars to oppose the work of the Y. M. C. A. in Italy. The hierarchy has plotted and schemed until it now looks as though it will be necessary to close temporarily at least the splendid educational work which is being done for the youth of Italy on Monte Mario.

What more sweeping indictment can be written against Roman Catholic bigotry and intolerance than the pope and his cardinals are writing to-day in Rome? If the pope desires to prevent free speech, free press, free schools, and a free church in Rome, he desires to prevent it everywhere. He despises the religious toleration and liberty of Protestant countries and has no use for it except that the Romish Church may be established, when straightway the effort is begun to throttle the very freedom which has permitted that church to live and grow. What a tumult and protest there would be if the Protestants of Richmond were to even try to prevent the establishment of a Roman Catholic college in their city or were to demand or to make necessary the closing of such a college which had been successfully operating for thirty years!

Let us make no mistake. The battle for freedom of education on Monte Mario, facing St. Peters and the Vatican, is a battle in the new warfare between Protestantism and Romanism for free speech, free press, free schools, and a free church all over the world, including our own America, where Romanism is already using all its power to destroy freedom of the press. The Ku-Klux Klan is mistaken in the method it has adopted, but it is not mistaken in its position that the Romish hierarchy in America (not all Roman Catholics) is an invisible part of the hierarchy of the whole Romish Church, and that the hierarchy would burn Bibles in this country as it is trying to do in Rome, and would close all Protestant churches in this country as it tries to do in Poland and Spain if it had the power to do so.

THE JOINT COMMISSION ON CHURCH AND SUNDAY SCHOOL ARCHITECTURE.

It may be of interest to the church to sum up briefly the result accomplished to date by the Joint Committee on Church and Sunday School Architecture.

In 1916 the Board of Church Extension and the General Sunday School Board, by agreement, organized a Joint Committee composed of certain members of the two Boards, and constructive work of great value was accomplished. In 1922 the General Conference at Hot Springs, Ark., created a Joint Committee on Church and Sunday School Architecture, to be composed of five members from the Board of Church Extension and five members from the General Sunday School Board, this Joint Committee to carry forward and enlarge the work already begun. Appointees from the General Sunday School Board were M. W. Brabham, L. F. Sensabaugh, Miss Minnie E. Kennedy, W. P. Jones, and Wm. H. Stockham; from the Board of Church Extension, J. A. Baylor, T. D. Ellis, Bishop W. F. McMurry, J. Howard Wells, and J. H. Wilson. Mr. Wm. H. Stockham died recently, and the vacancy thus created has not been filled.

Several meetings of the Committee have been held. In addition to the necessary work of organization and gathering up the results accomplished by the previous organization, definite methods for the functioning of the Committee have been worked out, and a comprehensive outline of building standards or points of guidance for the instruction of architects and building committees has been agreed upon. This will soon appear in printed form, and will mark a distinct advance in the building program of the church.

The work of the Committee is both educational and technical. The educational work is carried on by the publication of pamphlet literature, and articles prepared for the church press, by lectures, addresses and stereopticon views. The technical side of its work is represented by the Architectural Department of the Board of Church Extension. A thoroughly equipped architectural office is maintained by the Board, and suggestive or preliminary sketches and drawings, estimates, and technical information, and all of the service that is usually supplied by a consulting architect, are offered to the church. Complete plans and specifications are also supplied under certain circumstances. Plans prepared by architects elsewhere are sent to this office for constructive criticism or revision. The standards endorsed by the Joint Committee govern in such criticism.

During the past two years most of the building enterprises of importance in the church have sought advice and guidance from the Committee. Among the enterprises of considerable cost may be mentioned church buildings at the following educational centers: Charlottesville, Va., Durham, N. C., Baton Rouge, La., Norman, Okla., Denton, Tex., Canyon, Tex., Goodwell, Okla., Berkeley, Cal. Other large and important church buildings which may be mentioned are at Florence, Ala., El Dorado, Ark., Madisonville, Ky., Norton, Va., Winston-Salem, N. C. Very many smaller church enterprises have sought advice, plans and suggestions.

The work of the Committee has, I think, demonstrated the wisdom of its creation. The aggregate investment represented by the various enterprises affected by its work in the two years past is easily two million five hundred thousand dollars. The work of the Committee has resulted in almost every case in plans making for increased efficiency, and therefore a better investment of church funds. In many instances the influence of the Committee has resulted in actual saving of considerable sums in building cost. In view of the experience gained by the Joint Committee, and the result already achieved, no church building enterprise should be undertaken without ascertaining just what assistance may be had from this source. Such information can be secured by addressing Mr. M. W. Brabham, General Sunday School Board, No. 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn., or Rev. J. A. Baylor, Architectural Secretary, No. 1115 Fourth Avenue, Louisville, Ky.

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

He is one of the many who were raised among the poor hut honest people of the land. With but meager educational advantages he entered that great university, known as the business world. This great school differs from every other, in that many matriculate within its world-wide halls, and few graduate. Competition for its prizes are fierce, and for the most part merciless. Little quarter is asked and less given in the mighty struggling for success or victory. This hero of mine grew, developed—his thought, his character, his life were fashioned after the models of his environment. Six days of the week he planned, struggled, studied, and won money and position in the business world as the final result of his strenuous endeavors.

His early training clung to him. On Sunday he attended Sunday school and church. His energy, push, vigor, soon placed him in a position of leader in the activities of the church. In some ways he was a brilliant success here. The ethics of the counting house, bank, and office did not altogether apply in and to the church of God. There was need of a larger vision in this work, because of a wider field. Those nice distinctions which mark the lines between the material and the spiritual were either unknown to him, or ignored. Remarkably fluent in speech, he was lamentably ignorant in perspicacity. He moved on the surface, and apparently knew little of other dimensions or measurements. Truly the Master has said, "The children of this world are wiser in their generation than children of light," but he applied this to their activities and not to their spiritual insight. Yes, bring all this earnest endeavor into the kingdom, but bear it in golden vessels of faith and love, not in frail earthen vessels of this old earth's molding and shaping. The glory of the terrestial is one, the glory of the celestial another. The church militant can only become the church triumphant by virtue of her spiritual victories won. But we will bear patiently, kindly and considerately with this one, who really represents no small number among us. Nothing really great is the growth of a day.

Dr. Palmer, for years pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of New Orleans, was one of the great preachers of the South, and a faithful shepherd for the Lord of the fold and his flock. As an orator, he ranked facile princeps in an age that counted eloquence one of the highest gifts to men. As a thinker, he made luminous those great doctrines and social questions which, in a sense, made our country a mighty forum, in which these were debated. Possibly no minister of his time was more trusted, more honored and loved than this prince of preachers. By his faith, his zeal, his industry and scholarship, he developed that Christian company which for years was the strongest and most influensial Protestant center in a great city. But he was not content that such an organization as that should be confined to the edifice facing Lafayette Square. His vision swept on and outward to the needy in other portions of the city. So he bade his people on one occasion to "consider the bee," and "swarm." Swarm! that is a wonderful and somewhat startling suggestion to some. But it is a good one, a wise one, and I think one that is vastly superior to some methods now used for establishing new centers for extensive work. Let our crowded churches swarm. Let one hundred, or two hundred members, a nucleus large enough for immediate activity, leave in a body and find a suitable place in our rapidly growing cities for another hive. Then build an enclosed tabernacle of rough boards, if need be, and in a short time there will be the word preached which "is sweeter than honey and the droppings of the honeycomb." Many of our large churches are cramped for room. Plenty on the outside. Swarm! Missionary boards, societies, organizations, are all good in their way, but are not meeting the crying need for gospel work. Many are longing for the bread of life in the unchurched districts. Leave the full hive. Swarm!

HOLD ON.

Hold on to the worth-while things of life—the good, the true, the useful, the beautiful. Hold on to your tongue when it is about to run away. Hold on to your temper when it is about to reverse positions and become your master. Hold on to your heart when it would lead you into evil ways. Hold on to your head when it would cause you to value intelligence above honor. Hold on to your faith in God and man. Let nothing take it from you. Be strong. Be true. Be firm, yet always open to convictlon. Bulldog pertinacity, without reason and good judgment back of it, is one of the most foolish and dangerous things in the world. Every one knows what happens to the man who has "no mind of his own;" yet, equally true is it that he of the "unbending will" may be closely akin to Jake Mule—and you know how we classify him. "Have a reason for the faith that is in you." Holding on is a splendid thing, but only so long as it is done, not merely for the purpose of not letting go, but because it is the thing to do.—E. J. D., in Boy Life.

NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT NOTES.

The entertainment of the district conferenee was a big undertaking for our church in Houma, hut abundant provision was made for the eomfort of all the visitors. Delegates were surprised and pleased with the evident progress and success of our church in Houma, where we have heen workiug only about fifteen years. The beautiful grounds of the Wesley House and its very interesting work attraeted mueh attention from the visitors.

The district meeting of the Woman's Missionary Societies was held at the Wesley House during the conference. Mrs. J. D. Rumph, district secretary, was unable to be present on account of a painful accident, but the program was successfully earried out under the direction of Mrs. L. D. Chaffe, of First Churcli.

The reports of the preachers showed that nearly 300 have been received into the church on profession of faith sinee Conference, and more than 250 by certificate—a hetter report than at the same date last year.

Nearly all of our churches in New Orleans earried out a eampaign of evangelism iu the Sunday schools with excellent results. About 150 from the Sunday schools were added to the church in this way.

* * *

The simultaneous campaign of evangelism in the eity ehurches has resulted, beside the addition of a large number to our churches, in a new spirit of optimism and progress in most of our churches here.

Senior Epworth Leagues have been organized at Berwick and Mary Werlein Mission this year, and Intermediates at Parker Memorial, Algiers, Epworth, and Mary Werlein. Our Leagues are ohserving the Aniversary Day with good results.

First Church, in addition to taking over the support of one of the Freneh preaehers and undertaking the building of a chapel in the Freneh territory, at the close of the meeting held by Brother Hebert in their church, made provision for the purchase of a tent for his evangelistie work. A series of tent meetings will be held in it in Lafourche and Terrebonne Parishes and elsewhere during the summer.

At Lockport, where we have a good church huilding, but have not been actively at work for some time, a beginning has been made again with very promising outlook. Rev. Leon Pieone, cooperating with the pastor and Wesley House workers, has begun regular services, and the field seems to be ripe for the harvest.

* * *

A. M. Martin, of Houma, who was lieensed to preach at the district eonference, will begin shortly to help his brother, Rev. A. J. Martin, in his large field at St. Martinville and the regions round about.

* * *

Rev. J. A. MeCormack has won the confidence and good will of the church and community at Franklin, and is working earefully to build up every interest of the churcli in that city.

* * *

Rev. S. A. Seegers, at the request of the board of stewards, held his own services during the two weeks preceding Easter, preaching to large eongregations and receiving a good elass into the church membership.

* * *

Revs. George LaGrange and C. J. Thibodeaux, both of whom came from our little church at Lahadieville, are doing faithful work, Brother LaGrange at the Bayou Blue eharge, and at the same time going to school at the MacDonell-Wesley House school, and Brother Thibodeaux at Lydia, our oldest French Mission eharge.

In addition to other similar enterprises previously mentioned, Rayne Memorial is working out plans for a suitable Sunday school building to take care of the young life of their ehurch. Dr. Noble, the Superintendeut of the Sunday school, gives a good aecount of the growth and development of the school, one or two new departments having heen reeently organized.

* * *

Rev. H. N. Harrison is preachiug to good congregations at Slidell, aud is developing work at Bayou Lacombe as a side appointment. At last accounts he was planniug a revival meeting at the latter poiut, of which we have not yet heard the results.

* * *

Of the five churehes ou the Covington charge, all hut one were represented at the second quarterly conference at Mandeville. The pastor, Rev. W. C. Waggoner, has been handicapped by the ill-health of his wife, but is meeting his appointments faithfully.

W. WINANS DRAKE, P. E.

OFFICIAL REPORT OF THE SPRING MEETING OF THE COLLEGE OF BISHOPS.

Bishops Hendrix and Murrah, by reason of sickness, were not able to attend the spring meeting, but all the other bishops were present. The session of the College eontinued for three full days.

Barnes Hospital.—Bishop McMurry presented the report of the trustees of the Barnes Hospital, and was instrneted to extract from the report and publish such information as would he of interest to the Church.

Fraternal Delegate to the Methodist Protestant Church.—Rev. Dr. A. C. Millar was elected fraternal delegate to the Methodist Profestant Chureh. The General Conference of this Chureh is to meet this month in Tiffin, Ohlo.

Church Interests.—Officials charged with the several interests of the Church preseuted to the College matters conneeted with the work committed to them. Dr. Sherman spoke on the Christian Education Movement, Dr. Perry on the Pastors' School, Dr. Cram on the Centenary. Committees were appointed to prepare for publication sueh statements as in their judgment should be issued to the Church touching these interests. The following is the report of the progress of the Christian Edneation Movement:

"Resolved: 1. That we express our pleasure at the report of the progress of the Christian Edueation Movement as brought to our attention by the Associate Secretary of the Board of Education, Dr. H. H. Sherman, and we again give assuranee to those who are in charge of this Movement that we will do all in our power to co-operate with them in hringing to a successful consummation this great enterprise.

"2. That we favor and indorse the suggestion that a definite period followiug the round of fall Conferences be set aside for the payment of Christian Edueation pledges.

"3. That to this end we shall be glad to give such time as may be at our disposal during the session of the Annual Conferences to the presentation and consideration of these claims."

It was ordered that the following be incorporated in this report:

"Information has reached us through the Secretary of the Board of Finance, Rev. Luther E. Todd, D.D., that six thousand quarterly conferences have assumed the minimum quota as fixed by the last General Conference for the Superannuate Endowment. The total amount assumed by these Conferences is $9,850,000. Only four hundred and seventy-two quarterly conferences have not acted, and over two hundred of this numbers are in the Baltimore Conference, which, on aecount of the date of its annual meeting, have not had an opportunity to act.

"We are further informed that the remittances from the Chureh on the amount assumed are entirely up to expectations.

"For this hearty response on the part of the Church to this very worthy call we desire to record our appreciation and to give to Almighty God sincere thanks.

"If our people everywhere will eontinue to give this eause the consideration it deserves, we are confident that the Church will respond to the call during the five-year period with the full amount requested hy the General Conference.

"That the worn-out preachers of the Church, the widows of deceased preachers, and the orphan chiidreu of our preachers are eutitled to the benefit from the full amount fixed by the General Conference there can be no controversy.

"We therefore call upon our presiding elders and pastors and official members with whom the responsibility of the raising of this amount of $10,000,000 has been placed by the General Conferenee to continue to give it the attention it deserves, following faithfully the plan outlined by the last General Conference."

Manual of the Discipline.—In order to bring the Manual of the Discipline into conformity with the actions of the last General Conference, to correct typographical and other errors, and to add to clearness and other deficiencies a new revision of the Manual was ordered. The College gave patient and carefnl consideration to this revision and unanimously approved what was adopted. The new Manual will be issued within a short time.

Plan of Visitation.—The committee charged with the consideration of episcopal visitation considered the interests involved, made its report, which was adopted, and the plan has already been published.

Committee of Appeals.—Bishop Mouzon was continued as chairman of the Committee of Appeals.

Course of Study.—One book in the course of study for English-speaking undergraduates is out of print, "Laidlaw's Bible Doctrine of Man," aud one book, "Barrow's Principios de Intepretacion Bihlica," was substituted for "El Domingo, El Verdadero Sadado," which is also out of print. The College concluded not to substitute another work for Laidlaw's hecause that class is full enough without the hook referred to.

Memoir of Bishop Atkins.—The following memoir of Bishop Atkins was adopted and becomes a part of our minutes. By the action of the College this memoir is to be published in the Christian Advocate.

Memoir of Bishop James Atkins.

"With most men, even with those entitled to be ealled great, life is so filled with details, with what are spoken of as the little things, that the men themselves are soon lost to sight. This is particularly the case with preachers of the gospel aud pre-eminently with Methodist preachers. Call the roll of the early Methodist preachers, give the uames of the three mightiest—Pedicord, Tunnel, and Gill—and how many now know aught of their gifts, their services, their sacrifiees, their successes, even of their names? Let it not be forgotten that Whatcoat and Vasey, after hearing Boyer and Pigman preach, said 'they had not heard their equal in the British connection, except Wesley and Fletcher.' Patient continuance in well-doing generally means the well-doing of that of which mankind takes little note. There is good ground for joy in this fact. That life is hlessed which loses itself in worthy work. It may be to some > "'Weary watching wave by wave,

> But still the tide moves onward."

"It is, however, cause for thanksgiving to God that

> "'We build, like corals, grave by grave,
> Yet pave a path that's sunward.
> We're beaten backward in the fray,
> Yet newer strength we borrow;
> And where the vanguard camps to-day
> The rear will camp to-morrow.'

"So strong and so subtle is the temptation to egotism, so easily and imperceptibly do we yield to deadly pride, so naturally does the heart crave human notice and applause that to be lost, completely lost, in the work of God is really to be led by his hand and in the leading to be blessed.

"Much of the work of a bishop of our Church is detail work, the constant daily round of little things not needing and not receiving notiee. This fact goes far to explain how soon a bishop becomes obscure, a mere name quickly vanishing from the knowledge of men. Save during a few crises in the life of Bishop Soule, how very little is known of the episcopal work of that grand man, through from 1824 to 1867 he was a bishop of the Church! What is known of most of our bishops is the work they did prior to their election to the episcopacy.

"In some respects the life of Bishop Atkins was different. Under his direction as Sunday School Editor for ten years there was solid and unusual advancement in that important and fruitful field of church service. After his election to the episcopacy, his relation to that work was continued, and as President of the Sunday School Board he had an important part—indeed, a shaping part—in the great development of our Sunday schools.

"He believed the Church was called to do large things; and when the possibility of such work appeared, his enthusiasm was aroused and his co-operation was given.

"During the presidency of the Texas Conference, Southern Methodist University was projected. He believed in Christian education. He had been for years an educator. The opportunity for a great university under the control of the Church appealed to him. With enthusiasm and energy he threw himself into the movement, became one of its leaders, and in every possible way he helped to accomplish that success.

"He believed in the Junaluska Assembly (was, in fact, one of its originators), gave his thought and his time to the purpose of its founders, and never lost faith in its ultimate success as a factor in the life of the Church.

"From the beginning the Centenary Movement awakened his interest. He was a leader, an influential leader, in that Movement. From the meeting of the Committee of One Hundred held in Memphis in 1918 till the close of his life he stood out prominently and efficiently in making the Centenary a never-to-be-forgotten fact. From its organization he was Chairman of the Centenary Commission.

"The life of Bishop Atkins was unusually varied. After receiving his Master of Arts degree at Emory and Henry College in 1872, he was that year at the age of twenty-two admitted on trial into the Holston Conference. For seven years he was a pastor, for seventeen an educator, for ten Sunday School Editor, and from 1906 till his death, in December, 1923, one of our bishops.

"He was a child of the parsonage, and by unblemished life and love for the Church he exemplified the worth of such a home. He guarded its great ideals, and in his own life their fire did not grow dim.

"As a bishop he served an unusually large field—the far West, the central States on both sides of the Mississippi, Texas, and the Atlantic slope. In all these fields he did his work quietly and faithfully. He was companionable with his brethren, patient in caring for the Churches and the preachers, and blessed with a tact that enabled him to escape serious friction.

"He spoke often, and he spoke well. There were times when he spoke with a pleasing eloquence. He commanded a copious vocabulary and used it with accuracy. He had the rare gift of economizing the attention of his audience.

"He formed his own opinions and held them with courage and tenacity. He had a modest manliness that won the admiration—the affection, indeed—of those who knew him best. He shared the common lot of men in that he was forced to meet slights and slurs, but his Christian character glowed in that he could suffer and be quiet.

"With fervor he loved his home and his family. Of his wife and children, when he had a heart that he could trust, he often spoke with an ardor that was charming. His love shone on his loved ones, and in his eyes they were glorified. What a blessed trait is that! A Christian home is very near to heaven; nothing can be nearer.

"Our friend and brother was not dull to responsibility. He was warned by physician and friend that he went forth on his last journey at the peril of his life; but he saw the beckoning hand of duty, and unafraid he went to his last Conferences and died at his post. Thus lived and thus died one who helped to 'prove a path that's sunward.'

"Let one other fact be mentioned: Nothing unconnected with the Church of God gripped the soul of Bishop Atkins. He believed in her divine character. He thought the Church deserved his life, his whole life, and he gave that life without stint. He did not believe any position on earth surpassed in any respect that of a Methodist preacher, yet he was not narrow; but he loved best the Church of his choice, the Church of his fathers, the Church of his children. He believed in the ultimate complete victory of the Church of God, because he believed in the power and purpose of her divine Head, Jesus Christ, his Redeemer, his Savior, his Lord."

State of the Church.—Consideration was given to the general work of the Church, and progress was reported in all fields by the bishops whose Conferences had been held since the fall meeting and by those bishops who were not able to be present at the last fall meeting. There were no opinions of law brought before the College.

There is cause for gratitude to our Lord that in so many respects he gives prosperity to the work of our Church throughout its borders.

ATTENTION, MISSISSIPPI VOTERS!

The time for holding precinct conventions for electing delegates to the county convention was fixed by the Democratic Executive Committee in its meeting on May 6, 1924, for May 20, 1924. At conventions delegates will be elected to the county conventions. The main business of both county conventions will be to elect precinct and county conventions will be to elect delegates. The precinct convention will elect delegates to the county convention, and the county convention will elect delegates to the State Democratic Convention to convene in the city of Jackson on May 30, 1924. On the same day this Executive Committee also fixed May 22, 1924, as the date of the National Democratic Convention to convene in the city of New York.

It is of first importance that these conventions be held and that they be well attended and composed of the best men and women in the State: First, because the best representatives will not be secured unless the best men and women attend the precinct and county conventions; second, because the only chance voters will have to cast votes for any one for the presidency of the United States will be at these conventions. If we fail to vote for safe men and women as the delegates of these respective conventions, we lose our only opportunity of voting for a safe President. The Anti-Saloon League of Mississippi does not even suggest to any one the names of persons for whom he should vote. It only seeks to furnish reliable information to our people who may not have the opportunity of learning the facts from other sources, leaving every man and woman absolutely free in the exercise of his or her franchise.

Rumor comes from some quarters that there will be an effort made at the State Convention to instruct the Mississippi delegates for a "Wet" as the Democratic nominee. Of course all well informed citizens know that some of the aspirants for the Democratic nomination have official records, both State and national, which are soaking wet. Now, shall Mississippi aid in putting into the presidential chair any man whose official record is wet all the way through and expect him to enforce the policy of a nation whose constitution and laws are dry? Would prohibition be safe in the hands of one who has all along fought it, and who is counting on the wet vote of the nation to see that he is elected?

In view of these conditions, does it not seem that every true-blue prohibitionist and real patriot should throw himself against any man whose record proves him to be an enemy of prohibition, and make every reasonable effort to send prohibition delegates to our Democratic conventions? The Board of Trustees of the Mississippi Anti-Saloon League made the following declarations recently:

"The Anti-Saloon League recognizes the present movement as exceedingly critical for prohibition enforcement in the United States.

"We urge all voters to scrutinize the past record of all candidates as to their attitude toward prohibition, and vote for no man who favors modifications, to slacken enforcement or to allow an increase in the percentage of alcohol.

"We urge that in view of the approaching presidential election, particular care be exercised to prevent the nomination of any man whose record is questionable or whose attitude is dubious or anything short of enthusiastic determination to uphold the prohibition laws and enforce them throughout the nation."

ANTI-SALOON LEAGUE,
Jackson, Miss.
J. M. MORSE, President.
T. J. BAILEY, Superintendent.

EDUCATION DAY.

Sunday, May 18, is designated as Christian Education Day. We very much hope that all the churches of our Conference will observe the day. No regular program has been gotten out as was done last year, but only suggestions as to the purpose of the day and the ends to be attained.

We trust that each pastor and each superintendent will give attention to the day in some way. We do not ask for the Sunday school hour, but only that the opening or the closing time of the hour be given to a short program. It is very much desired that our pastors shall preach on Christian Education at this time. The Discipline directs that a sermon on this subject shall be preached in each congregation. We beg that our people shall rally to our own schools and colleges, and fill them to overflowing. Let every Methodist see that the Educational pledges are paid to date.

TO THE METHODISTS AND FRIENDS OF THE ORPHANAGE IN MISSISSIPPI.

The Building Committee met at Galloway Memorial Church, Friday, at 2 p.m., April 25. The architect was instructed to secure bids for the new Orphanage building. The bids will be opened on May 15, at 2 p.m.

We are far short of the amount necessary to complete the building. The old building will not be habitable for another winter, so the necessity is on us to provide for the children. The Committee appeals to the friends of the orphans to aid us as largely and as quickly as possible. You have never failed us, and we believe your response will be prompt and liberal. We heartily commend and urge your co-operation with our Commissioners, Brother Brown of the North Mississippi Conference, and Brother Griffin of the Mississippi Conference. "The King's business requires haste."

We are your fellow-workers, the Building Committee: V. C. Curtis, W. M. Bule, M. L. Burton, T. H. Dorsey, M. S. Enochs.

COMMITTEE ON GENERAL CONFERENCE ENTERTAINMENT.

The committee on arrangements for the next General Conference met in Louisville, Ky., on the evening of April 30. All members of the committee were present. Dr. S. H. C. Burgin, chairman, presided. Invitations from a number of cities were read. The committee is not ready to make any decision as to what invitation will be accepted. A statement will be prepared at an early date telling what hotel and other accomodations will be required and what will be expected of the city that entertains the Conference. This statement will be sent to all cities from which invitations are received. The committee adjourned subject to the call of the chairman.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

HERE COMES UNCLE SAM WITH ANOTHER BAG OF MAIL.

It would do your heart good to see how the "Forgotten Man" is being remembered these days. If you could be in the office of the Board of Finance when the postman comes around, you would see him deposit on the Secretary's desk a stack of important letters. Practically every one of these letters will contain a check, and in many instances the amount is sufficient to pay one-fifth or more of some charge's total assumed quota. It certainly does make our hearts rejoice to see the thing working so beautifully that we have planned for in our dreams through many years.

Keep it up, boys. Get down real low and put your shoulder under the load. Now is the time to push. We have it going, let us keep it going. Let the treasurer of the Special Effort Committee send the cash at once to the Board of Finance, and keep on doing it as long as there is any cash to send.

ADDITIONAL CHARGES PAYING ONE-FIFTH OR MORE OF TOTAL QUOTA.

Hessick Memorial (Louisville), Louisville, Rev. J. H. Nicholson, pastor; total assumed quota, $2,178; amount remitted, $535.60.

JOHN WESLEY AND THE BIBLE.

John Wesley has told us how he tried to put the Bible into his own life: "Here I am, far away from the busy ways of men, I sit down alone; only God is here. In his presence I open and read his Book for this end—to find the way to heaven. Is there a doubt concerning the meaning of what I read? Does anything appear dark or intricate? I lift up my heart to the Father of lights. Lord, is it not thy Word? If any man lack wisdom, let him ask of God. Thou hast said, if any man be willing to do thy will he shall know. I am willing to do, let me know thy will. I then search out and consider parallel passages of Scripture, comparing spiritual things with spiritual. I meditate thereon with all the confession and earnestness of which my mind is capable. If any doubt still remains, I consult those who are experienced in the things of God, and then the writings whereby, these being dead, yet speak, and what I thus learn, that I teach."

The Home Circle

HATE-TO-HURRY AND PUT-IT-OFF.

Hate-to-Hurry and Put-it-Off
They had to go a mile.
"I'll rest," said one, "now I've begun,"
Said one, "I'll wait awhile."

Resting and waiting, they planned their trip,
And lo! at set of sun,
They rubbed their eyes in great surprise,
For neither mile was done.

And I heard the old clock on the shelf
Set up a merry chime:
The wee hands told the seconds,
And the long hand told the minutes,
And the short hand told the hours,
And they all told Father Time.

Hate-to-Hurry and Put-it-Off,
You didn't mean to shirk,
You just went slow where you had to go,
You just delayed your work.

But he who rests by the busy road,
And he who hates to start—
They take poor place in any race,
And play a sorry part.

So next time let the old clock tick
A merry, cheery rhyme:
When the wee hand tells the seconds,
And the long hand tells the minutes,
And the short had tells the hours,
And they all tell Father Time!

THE TRUE STORY OF A CHINESE GIRL'S LIFE

By Edna Groff Dichl.

Wai Hing Lei was the oldest child in a very big family. She lived in Fat Shan, China.

As a very little girl she played with her dolls. Her cousins and sisters played with her. They had great fun marrying their dolls to each other. Sometimes they grew so much interested in their play that they forgot to go home for their rice.

Sometimes, Wai Hing was disobedient. One day, as her mother walked with the children along a stream on her grandfather's farm, Wai Hing jumped into a little boat that lay along the shore.

"Do not row," said her mother. "It is a danger for you."

But when her mother was out of sight Wai Hing and her brother went quietly out in the stream. Such fun as they had for awhile! They rowed and rowed until the sun was almost set. At last they came to a shallow place in the brook. The boat would not move. It stuck in the mud!

Although they got out and pulled and pulled, it would not budge. Wai Hing cried loud with fear. A farmer came and saved them and sent them home.

Wai Hing was very sorry she had disobeyed her mother. She tried to learn to obey. When she was eight years old she was sent to the Mission school. There she was helped very much.

There were many things in Wai Hing's life which were of great interest. There was the New Year! What a wonderful time it was! Then the older folks gave money to the children to buy fire-crackers and good things to eat.

One New Year Wai Hing had ten cents in her pocket. She walked along the street hunting something good to eat. Many beggars lay along her path. Wai Hing looked at them with pity. She gave each one a "cash" as she passed by. Soon she had no money left for good things for herself. But she was very happy, because she had been kind to the beggars.

More than anything else Wai Hing loved the big New Year parades. Some were on the waters, some on the land. At night the river was lighted, and glowed with all sorts of wonderful colors. The decorations were all of paper. There was paper fruit, so real it seemed growing to the trees. Wai Hing wanted some. But her mother said they could not be bought. They were to make the river and streets pretty. At any rate, she told Wai Hing they were not good. They were only paper.

Then the parade came along! The wagons were made of paper. One wagon was exactly like a boat. It was fifty feet long and ten feet wide. A captain and cook and passengers rodo along with the boat.

"Let me ride on that boat!" Wai Hing cried. But her mother paid no attention. She was watching the ladies who seemed to be sitting on paper chairs. It was all so wonderful!

Suddenly the children drew back in fright! Something was coming down the road. It was "The Big God Head!" It had big eyes, a wide mouth and small ears. The children covered their faces with their hands. They were afraid "The Big God Head" would get them, for it tried to touch the children as it danced to wild music. But although the rest of the children were afraid, Wai Hing was not. Once the "Big God Head" came dancing and touched her.

"Why is your head so big?" asked Wai Hing.

"Your head will soon be as big as mine since I have touched you!" roared "The Big God Head."

But Wai Hing stood bravely. She said, "I know better, Big God Head! You are only a make-up! I study at the Mission school!"

Wai Hing is now a big girl. She has finished at the Mission school, and is now at college. She wants to come to America so she can learn more.

Then she wants to go back to Fat Shan, and her own people. She wants to educate them. Once she said to a friend, "I do not think China can ever be strong unless her women are strong."

Sometimes she grows discouraged. Then she prays to the true God of the Mission school. He shows her how she may serve Him. He tells her that in the service she gives to her countrymen she is serving Him.—Church Advocate.

A "YES-BUT" BOY.

By H. O. Spelman.

"Henry," asked grandpa Wilkins, thoughtfully, "have you noticed the yes-but people? They're everywhere—except at the top. Up where important questions are decided there are no yes-but men. No yes-but boy ever leads.

"I know, because as a lad I wrestled with my yes-but self. I was keen in finding a reason to delay action," confessed grandpa. "It's strange how keen a boy becomes. If his heart wants football when his conscience says study, he finds twenty reasons for football.

"Near the end of my school year I was anxious for a summer's job to earn money for next year's suit. Father had asked Mr. Baine, our leading merchant, to hire me. I had promised to be ready any night after school.

"One night Mr. Baine sent for me. But I had arranged to show my botany class and teacher some pink lady-slippers in the woods, so I shyly buckled on my plant-can.

"Aren't you going to work at the store?" pleaded mother.

"'Yes, but to-night I'm going to the woods. Miss Judson needs me. I can begin at the store to-morrow,' and I hurried away.

"But I never began. Mr. Baine, who would not employ a yes-but boy, hired Herold Judson.

"I did odd jobs all summer, earning just enough for a cheap suit. And when school opened Mr. Baine rewarded Herold with a fine suit, besides his wages.

"That cured me. I never said 'yes-but' again."

When some one suggests a boy can take a reading course in his spare time he objects: "Yes, but I need some rest and play." When asked if he is willing to teach a Sunday school class, it's "Yes, but I haven't prepared the lesson." If warned he is forming an evil habit, it's the same glib answer: "Yes, but I can break it any time."

Don't be a yes-but boy. Cut off the "but" and answer: "Yes." It's the greatest word in the language if you live up to it.—Baptist Boys and Girls.

CORRECT.

The sooner those who control the film studios wake up to the fact that there are other things besides quick monetary returns to be considered in the making of pictures, the better it will be for those engaged in that pursuit and for the public.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

SPECIAL MEETING OF THE PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

The Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate is hereby called to meet in special session on Thursday, May 29, 1924, at 11 o'clock a. m. in the Advocate office, 512 Camp Street, to consider such matters as may come before it.

JOHN F. FOSTER, Chairman.

May 12, 1924.

BISHOP AINSWORTH STILL PRESIDES IN MISSISSIPPI.

The continuance of Bishop William N. Ainsworth in charge of the episcopal district embracing the two Mississippi Conferences was only what was expected, but it is, nevertheless, a cause for rejoicing. The good Bishop has given to his district a leadership that has been both vigorous and inspiring, and the results of that leadership are manifest in all the departments of the church's work. Brotherly in spirit, indefatigable in labors, painstaking in administration, Bishop Ainsworth has the confidence and love of his brethren. They approve his leadership and follow him gladly.

THE UNIFICATION OF METHODISM.

The plan for the unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South given elsewhere, was adopted by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in session at Springfield, Mass., on Wednesday, May 7, by a vote, according to the Associated Press dispatches, of 842 to 13. The total membership of that General Conference is 858—half clerical and half lay—so that the vote in favor of the plan was practically unanimous. If the figures given in the press dispatches are correct, 842 voted for the plan, 13 voted against it, and 3 did not vote. According to the New York Christian Advocate, 207 of the clerical delegates come direct from the pastorate, 119 are district superintendents (presiding elders), and 103 are board secretaries, college and seminary executives or teachers, editors, or occupied in some other recognized field of ministerial service. Of the 429 lay members a few are general officials of the denomination or engaged in its educational work, but most of them are from the rank and file of the local church membership in every American State and in other lands. Forty-four women are members of the General Conference—the largest number in its history. Thus it will be seen that the plan for unification was adopted by a genuinely representative body.

In view of the adoption of the plan by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, a special session of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, becomes necessary to pass upon it. The action of the General Conference at Hot Springs was as follows: "When a plan for unification is endorsed by a two-thirds vote of each Commission and approved by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, then our College of Bishops is empowered and instructed to call the special session of our General Conference." The College of Bishops has called a special meeting for May 20, according to dispatches, to fix the time of the special session of the General Conference.

The matter of unification is now fairly and squarely before the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The editor of the New Orleans Christian Advocate is in favor of the adoption of the plan. Whatever opposition to the adoption of the plan may develop will probably fall into the following general divisions:

1. Those who are opposed to unification upon any terms, believing that the interests of the Kingdom of God will be best served by the maintenance of separate churches.

2. Those who express themselves in favor of unification when the "time is ripe," but who maintain that prejudices still exist that make it inexpedient at the present time.

3. Those who express themselves as in favor of unification, but who feel that the present plan will not bring it about and that its adoption will produce confusion and embarrassment rather than harmonious unity.

Since the plan is now before our church, it should be discussed fully, that it may be clearly understood and that the sentiment of the church as a whole may make itself known. The columns of the Advocate are open to the discussion of the merits and demerits of the plan, offensive personalities only being barred, and we invite an expression of opinion by all those who care to make themselves heard on the subject. We suggest that the limitations of space make it advisable to write as briefly as is consistent with clearness.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Mrs. W. E. Courts, Cary, Miss., has been a subscriber to the Advocate for about forty years.

"Everything here moves along well," writes Rev. W. J. Ferguson, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Gulfport, Miss.

Mrs. A. E. Rogillio, of Tunica, La., is another of the "Old Guard," having been a subscriber to the Advocate for more than fifty years.

The Big Brothers' class had charge of the evening service on Mother's Day at the First Methodist Church, Greenville, Miss.

The Methodists at Brooksville, Miss., under the leadership of Rev. M. E. Scott, are considering the building of a new church.

Mrs. M. E. Gilmore, of Columbus, Miss., writes: "I have been reading the Advocate since 1866, and would feel lost without it."

Rev. Claude H. Mayo, of the Neame and Pickering charge, Louisiana Conference, was engaged in a good meeting at Pickering last week.

Miss Susie G. Harper, of Jackson, Miss., says: "I have been reading the Advocate since childhood, and miss it when it does not come."

Rev. and Mrs. F. B. Hill, of McDonoghville, La., are planning to leave New Orleans on their trip to the World's Sunday School Convention, Edinburgh, Scotland, on Wednesday morning, May 28.

Central Methodist Church, Columbus, Miss., lost a faithful member recently in the death of Mr. F. H. Murphy. The Advocate extends sympathy to the family and friends.

A competent observer remarked to us the other day that Rev. H. N. Brown, the presiding elder of the Baton Rouge District, is "hoeing his patch" in fine style.

General Julian S. Carr, for many years a conspicuous layman in Southern Methodism, died at the home of his daughter in Chicago on the evening of April 29. He was twice Commander-in-Chief of the Confederate Veterans.

"Go Getter" is the name of a class paper issued by the Four Square Bible Class, of Shreveport, La., of which Dean R. E. Smith, of Centenary College, is the teacher. This class has a membership of 650. Its annual budget is about $6,000.

Rev. R. L. Ellis, of Ethel, Miss., writes: "We have just had a rally at every church on this charge. Some fine work has been done. Brothers Jaco, Campbell, McKinnon, and McIlwain were with us."

We understand that Dr. Charles W. Crisler and the fine people of the First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge, La., are making progress in their plans for their great new church building. Rev. W. B. Hogg began a meeting at First Church last Sunday.

Appreciated callers at the Advocate office last week were Rev. C. C. Miller, of Baton Rouge, returning from a meeting at the trustees of the Seashore Camp Ground School, and Rev. George Fox, Oak Grove, La., in the city to attend a Masonic gathering.

Miss Nannie May Forsyth, daughter of Rev. and Mrs. W. G. Forsyth, Sumrall, Miss., was married to Mr. William Addison Montgomery, of Leeds, Ala., at the home of the bride's parents, on May 5, the father of the bride officiating. The Advocate extends all good wishes.

Dr. W. A. Swift, general evangelist, has written a book, "The World's Panacea," which is being widely circulated. It contains 24 chapters, and is well printed, being issued by the Cokesbury Press. The price of the book is $1.25, and it may be had of the Cokesbury Press, Nashville, Tenn.

Mr. J. F. Waltman, Jr., son of Rev. J. F. Waltman, our pastor at Trout, La., has honored us with an invitation to attend the graduating exercises of the Trout-Good Pine High School, Thursday evening, May 15, at 8 o'clock, he being a member of the graduating class.

The work of the church at Grenada, Miss., is moving along splendidly under the leadership of Rev. Melville Johnson. Since Conference, 38 members have been received on profession of faith, and 16 by certificate. The church has raised thus far this year, for all purposes, more than $8000.

Rev. A. Inman Townsley, formerly of the Louisiana Conference but recently pastor at Columbus, Texas, has been transferred by Bishop H. M. DuBose to California and appointed to the First Methodist Church, Hollister, Calif. The best wishes of his Louisiana friends follow Brother Townsley to the Far West.

Rev. Leon I. McCain, of Lafayette, La., has just closed a great meeting at Pineville, La., in which he assisted the pastor, Rev. C. K. Smith. During the last week of the meeting, the congregation averaged 1,000 a night, and on the last Sunday night at least 2,000 were present. About 100 members were added to the churches, 70 of them to our church, and 120 tithers were enrolled.

As a result of the meeting recently held at St. Mark's, in which the pastor, Rev. J. A. Alford, was assisted by Dr. I. T. Cameron, of Kansas

The New Methodist Church at Franklinton, La.,
Rev. L. W. Cain, Pastor.

City, eight members were received by vows, and quite a number by letter. There were some bright conversions. The young people have organized a volunteer band for definite work in connection with the church.

The Board of Trustees of the Seashore Camp Ground School held its annual meeting on Tuesday of last week. Rev. H. W. Van Hook was re-elected president of the school. Rev. L. L. Roberts, presiding elder of the Seashore District, was authorized to make arrangements for the annual camp meeting, the date to be announced later.

Rev. Don E. Duiany, our pastor at Greenwood, La., requests us to announce that the district-wide Sunday school meeting for the Shreveport District will be held at Greenwood, Tuesday, May 20, from 10 o'clock a. m. to 4 o'clock p. m. Luncheon will be served at the church by the good women of the Greenwood and the Bethany Woman's Missionary Societies. Delegates are expected from every Sunday school in the district.

The Francis Asbury Memorial Association announces, through its secretary, Dr. H. K. Carroll, that it has become necessary to postpone the dedication of the Francis Asbury monument in Washington from June 3 to some date in the future. The postponement is caused by a strike in the granite quarry where the pedestal is being cut. It is probable that the new date will be set in October or November.

The Episcopal Address to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, now in session, contains approximately 17,000 words, and took two hours and a half for its delivery. Bishop Joseph F. Berry, the senior effective bishop, began the reading, but called upon Bishop W. F. McDowell to relieve him for awhile. After Bishop McDowell had read for an hour and twenty-five minutes, Bishop Berry resumed and was able to finish the delivery.

The members of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Felicity Methodist Church, this city, tendered its president, Miss Lida Steele, a "surprise luncheon" on Saturday of last week, in recognition of her enthusiastic and efficient leadership of the Society. The luncheon was held in the private dining room of the Young Women's Christian Association, and was largely attended by the members of the Society. A beautiful bouquet of roses was presented to Miss Steele in honor of the occasion.

We take the following from the paper published at Lake Providence, La.: "There were fully 100 Masons in line to attend the special services at the Methodist church last Sunday morning. There were many from the country and several from Tallulah, who were welcomed by their brother Masons. Worshipful Master T. G. Biggs felt proud that so many Masons were present to take part in the beautiful service and listen to the masterly sermon delivered by the pastor, Rev. John F. Foster. If every one would live up to the beautiful thoughts expressed by him, there would be more brotherly love and less hatred in the hearts of men."

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. H. B. Thomason, Colfax, La., 4; Mrs. Alice Casper, Raymond, Miss., 2; Rev. M. B. Sharbrough, Wiggins, Miss., 2; Rev. T. B. Cottrell, Vicksburg, Miss., 3; Rev. J. W. Price, Foxworth, Miss., 2; Rev. F. L. Applewhite, Jackson, Miss., 4; Rev. G. C. Gregory, Nettleton, Miss., 2; Rev. R. S. Walton, Rayne, La., 2.

NOTICE.

The Greenwood District Conference will open at Blaine, Wednesday, June 4, 3:00 p. m.

Committees:

License and Admission: V. C. Curtis, R. O. Brown, W. N. Duncan.

Orders: J. J. Brooks, W. C. Galceran, H. P. Lewis.

Let the brethren notify Rev. F. H. McGee, Sunflower, Miss., as to time of arrival and whom he may expect, that entertainment may be provided.

J. E. CUNNINGHAM, P. E.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Hattiesburg District Conference will open at Purvis on Tuesday, May 27, at 7:30 p.m., with a sermon by Rev. Otto Porter, of Prentiss.

Pastors, please forward the names of your delegates immediately to Rev. W. H. Lane at Purvis, and to me at Hattiesburg. Also see that the Quarterly Conference Records are on hand for examination by the Committee. And don't forget to remind your local preachers that, under the present law of the church, a district conference cannot renew a license to preach unless a request is made for its renewal. The conference will adhere to the law, and it is hoped that all local preachers will have their reports in writing and a request for renewal as the law directs.

The following committees have been announced:

License to Preach—C. M. Crossley, A. J. Davis, M. M. Black.

Admission and Readmission—J. T. Leggett, H. Mellard, J. W. Thompson.

Deacon's and Elder's Orders—W. M. Williams, J. H. Foreman, H. R. McKee.

W. W. GRAVES, P. E.

THE PLAN OF UNIFICATION.

Articles and until the General Conference, by legal process, shall otherwise ordain, the rules of government in the Disciplines of the respective churches shall be of full force and effect and binding upon the Jurisdictions, respectively.

Recomemndation.

We recommend that financial support of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church be continued by the Jurisdiction with which it is historically related and to such an extent as that Jurisdiction may deem wise.

UNIFICATION OF EPISCOPAL METHODISM PROGRESSING.

By Dr. Stonewall Anderson.

The General Conference at Hot Springs appointed a Commission, "composed of five bishops, ten traveling elders, and ten laymen, for the continuance of negotiations looking toward unification in harmony with the basic principles already agreed upon by the Joint Commission as feasible and desirable, or upon such other basis as our Commission may determine." Further action upon the matter was taken by the Hot Springs Conference, as follows: "When a plan for unification is endorsed by a two-thirds vote of each Commission, and approved by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, then our College of Bishops is empowered and instructed to call the special session of our General Conference."

On July 25, 1923, at Cleveland, Ohio, the Joint Commission adopted a plan of unification, with only three dissenting votes. This plan was presented to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, now in session at Springfield, Mass., and adopted with only thirteen dissenting votes out of a total of more than 815.

The responsibility of the next move in the progress of unification is upon our church.

This, in my judgment, is the greatest hour in the history of Episcopal Methodism. The Southern Church has it within her power now to give direction, to a very large extent, to the future history of Methodism in America.

The Hot Springs General Conference "empowered and instructed" our bishops to call a special session of the General Conference to consider and to act upon a plan when agreed upon by the Joint Commission, and approved by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. These conditions have been fully met. By all means, let the bishops call the General Conference at an early date.

Methodism in North Louisiana sustained a signal loss when the spirit of WILLIAM S. KENTON departed its tenement of clay and winged its way to the pearly gates of the city of God, there to receive its reward for a long and faithful Christian service in the Methodist church of Winnsboro, where he had been a leader in the Master's vineyard the last thirteen years of his life. William S. Kenton was a native of Franklin Parish, born there March 19, 1869, and resided there all of his life, which came to a close at the Natchez Sanitarium on the morning of April 5, 1924, after an illness of several years' duration. Mr. Kenton was married to Miss Annie Breuer in 1897, which union was blessed with three children: Dalton, who resides in Oklahoma; Breuer, who resides in Winnsboro, and Mollie (Mrs. G. A. Wiggers), who also resides in Winnsboro. The married life of this splendid couple was ideal in every respect, each clinging to the other, and both happy in a union inseparable save by death itself, and then only for a few brief years. In 1911 Mr. Kenton joined the Methodist Church, and at once became an active, sincere and indefatigable worker in religious circles, taking a deep and lasting interest in all things looking to the betterment of his fellow-man, and at the time of his death was a member of the board of stewards, and one of the leaders of the church. Will Kenton's religion was sincere; he lived it; treating his fellow-man on the square and tempering all his actions with justice and mercy; always willing to speak kindly of his neighbor, and at all times able to find a brighter and better side. He was truly a man, who lived by the side of the road and was a friend to man. As a result of his exemplary life, Will Kenton had the respect of all, and his departure from life leaves a void in the hearts of all who had the pleasure of his acquaintance, and to none of his friends is his loss more sincerely felt than by the friend who pens this humble appreciation. But as we stood beside the open grave and saw all that remained mortal of our friend and associate returned to mother earth, whence it came, consolation came to us in the knowledge that here lay a Christian and servant of God, and that while there, beneath shocks and sheaves of Flora's richest treasure, the cold, inanimate body of our friend would return to the elements from whence it came, his spirit had gone on to a brighter and better land beyond the skies, and we could truly say: "O death, where is thy sting; O grave, where is thy victory?"

A FRIEND.

FANNIE CASTLE BROWN was born Aug. 29, 1881. From early childhood she attended Sunday school and church services, and became a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, at an early age. When she arrived at the age of 20 years she was married to Lester B. Brown. No two people were more devoted to each other in married life than were they. Truly it can be said of her, "she was a helpmeet indeed." She was gentle, kind, loving, and true. She found joy and happiness in bringing joy and happiness to others. She was given to much hospitality, and that, with a tender, gentle spirit, made it a pleasure always to visit in her home. Although she was not physically strong, yet she possessed an unceasing energy which often carried her beyond her strength. During the past three years it was my pleasure to visit in her home frequently, but each visit I was assured that her strength was gradually giving way. Finally, on March 24, 1924, a serious condition set up, and she was rushed to the hospital at Greenville, Miss., there to undergo an operation. The skill of splendid surgeons and effiicient nursing failed to keep back the Angel of Death, and on March 27, her devoted spirit, on the wings of an unshaken faith in Christ, was wafted home to heaven. Just a few hours before she went away I sat by her side and listened while she told me what her faith in him meant to her while passing beneath the shadow. With face aglow she planned with her husband her own interment at the home church cemetery near Yazoo City, at Fletcher's Chapel, where her body now rests to await the resurrection morn. She has left a sad husband, father and mother, one sister, and eight brothers to mourn their loss, but these have the blessed assurance that all is well; they do not weep as one who has no hope.

MRS. SARAH ELIZABETH BLACKWELL (nee Abney) was born Jan. 21, 1862, and was married to J. B. Blackwell March 8, 1876. She joined the Methodist Episicopal Church, South, soon after marriage, and was a devoted member till death. She was the mother of twelve children, three of whom left this world for heaven in their infancy. She fell asleep in Jesus, Nov. 8, 1923, leaving six daughters and three sons, together with a host of other relatives and friends, to mourn their loss. She has one brother in the Mississippi Conference, Rev. J. T. Abney. There are three others: O. M., of Montrose; Paul, of Sylvarena, and Luther, of Bay Springs, Miss. It was not my privilege to know Sister Blackwell till health had begun to fail her. She was very patient, and slipped away quietly to be with Jesus. May God bless the loved ones and help them to be true to Jesus, so that there will be a happy reunion in that Good Land where all of the redeemed meet and God will wipe away all tears, and there will be no more sorrow or crying, the wicked will cease from troubling, and the weary one can rest.

M. R. JONES.

FROM BLACK HAWK, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: Will you allow me a small space in the Advocate for a few words concerning the Black Hawk circuit?

We came to Black Hawk about the 1st of December. The people received us very kindly, and we have been the happy recipients of many good things since then. We found the Black Hawk church in a run-down condition, spiritually, and practically no Sunday school. We went to work, praying, and visiting, and praying in the homes, too, which has not been done here for years.

We are glad to say that our church is practically full every Sunday, and our Sunday school has grown from 7 or 8 to about 50. We have had some three or four conversions since coming here, all strong men, who are now very active in the church. We have organized a prayer meeting. There were 62 present last Wednesday night.

We had Mother's Day yesterday (a little ahead of time), but this was my day here, and a great day it was. The men rendered the program. My, it was fine! You should have been with us. The Holy Spirit is working through us, and leading us on. Thank God, the revival is on! We expect to see great things come to pass here this year. We are praying for victory. Bless God, it is coming. We have traveled nearly 1,600 miles this year, made 126 pastoral visits, prayed in nearly every home, received three by certifiate and one by profession.

Our other churches are moving on very nicely.

My health is better than it has been in years. I am feeling fine and am on my way to glory.

Oh yes, we have several who have established the family altar, and are rejoicing in the hope of the glory of God.

Thank God for the old-time religion. All in all, we are having a "Good year, Bishop."

Pray for us.

Yours in Him,

H. E. CARTER, P. C.

"The object of scholarship, the object of all knowledge is to understand; is to comprehend; is to know what the need of mankind is. This is the reason why scholarship has usually been more fruitful when associated with religion, and scholarship has never, so far as I can at this moment recollect, been associated with any religion, except the religion of Jesus Christ."—Woodrow Wilson.

REPORT OF THE SUNDAY SCHOOL COMMITTEE, NEW ORLEANS DISTRICT CONFERENC.

A summary of the preachers' reports on Sunday schools shows the following:

1. Twenty schools reported.

2. In these schools, an average attendance of 2,343.

3. Reporting definite plans for increasing attendance and enrollment, 13; no plans, 5; no report, 2.

4. Reporting on the plan of evangelism and children joining the church: 3 aswered "yes," 7 answered "no," 1 answered "not yet," 3 no report, 6 answered "yes," with a total of 113 received into the church.

5. Planning for Sunday School Day, 17 answered "yes," and 3 "not yet."

We call attention to and urge the observance of Sunday School Day as required by the Discipline, thus bringing before our people and communities the educational work of the church and providing through the collections for the maintenance and extension of our Conference Sunday school work.

We would also emphasize the missionary program, calling special attention to the request of our leaders in this field that offerings be directed in the form of "Specials," and urge the adoption of at least one special by each Sunday school.

Our Sunday School Board at Annual Conference, regarding enrollment, adopted as its goal for the year an increase of 5,000, or practically 10% of the reported enrollment at that Conference. We earnestly urge that the Sunday schools of this district work for an increase of 10%, and that pastors, superintendents, secretaries give careful attention to the keeping of records, to secure the most accurate reports to Conference possible.

A Standard Training School is being arranged for, to be held in First Church, New Orleans, early in October. This will be the fourth session of this school, but attendance heretofore has been only from the New Orleans Sunday schools. We submit for your consideration that other schools in the district might appoint delegates to this school from those desiring to improve their teaching equipment and take up by correspondence with the Board of Managers matters pertaining to their entertainment while in attendance upon the school. We are informed that the presiding elder and Conference Sunday School Superintendent have plans on foot for a Standard Training School for Houma in the near future.

We call attention to our General Sunday School Board's plans for the observance of Children's Week, and urge that wherever possible arrangements be made to carry out those plans, that the religious needs of children in our communities may be looked after to the limit of our ability.

We urge that promotion of our denominational standards as expressed in our "Program of Work," and that the placing of wall charts in the Sunday schools be given special attention. When the chart has been placed, an authorized "checker" should be requested to visit the school and check up the school, point by point, to determine the standing. The school's effort then should be to obtain the points not yet attained.

Since effective work is promoted by organization, we urge the support of our district and Conference organizations, and call attention to them as sources of information and help for all our Sunday schools. An abundance of leaflet literature is supplied free of charge, which the various superintendents are ready to supply on request, and visits of these officers to the local schools can be arranged for by correspondence with them. For more effective organized work, we recommend the division into sub-districts, each to have its officers corresponding to the district officers, as follows:

1. Franklin, Lydia, Morgan City, Berwick, Patterson, Jeanerette, St. Martinville, and Port Barre.

2. Houma, Bayou Blue, Lafourche, Donner, and Gibson.

3. Covington, and Slidell.

4. New Orleans, and McDonoghville.

Plans of the Elementary Departments of the Sunday schools can be promoted more effectively if in each school there is appointed an elementary key woman. This appointment is made by the pastor and superintendent. She is the point of contact between the Elementary Council and the local school. We recommend the appointment of such a key woman in each school.

We call the attention of pastors to the disciplinary requirements regarding the religious instruction of children, and in this connection also recommend the plan of evangelism of our General Sunday School Board. As shown in this report, in six schools emphasizing evangelism in the Sunday schools 113 have been received into the church.

We offer and recommend for adoption the following:

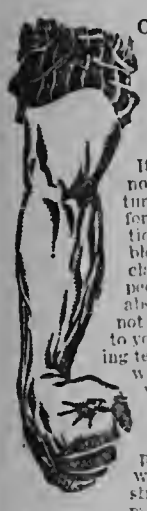
There is Strength in Every Tablet of This Newer Form of Iron



One dose often helps commence to enrich your blood and revitalize your worn out exhausted nerves—it is a newer form of iron, like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach. It is so prepared that it will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach. It is ready for almost immediate absorption and assimilation by the blood while some physicians claim metallic iron which people usually take is not absorbed at all. If you are not strong or well you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of this newer form of iron—three times per day, after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained.

NOTE—The manufacturers of this newer form of iron known as Nuxated Iron are thoroughly reliable: since its introduction it has reached the stupendous sale of over 4,000,000 packages annually, and it has been used and highly recommended by former U.S. Senators, Members of Congress, Judges of U.S. Courts and many physicians. We are able to guarantee that if you do not obtain all and even greater results than you expect from Nuxated Iron the manufacturers will promptly refund your money.

The Woman's Own Car

All Chevrolet models are popular with women on account of their beauty of line and finish and ease of handling.

The new four-passenger coupe was designed especially for women. Its stylish, distinguished appearance makes immediate appeal, and closer examination promotes enthusiasm. Best of all—the price is surprisingly low for so high-grade a production, equipped as it is with a Fisher Body, two extra wide doors that make feasible graceful entrance to and exit from the car. Single, comfortable driver's seat, ample room for two in the rear seat, and a fourth folding seat for an extra passenger.

Comfortably, tastefully upholstered and artistically trimmed with good-grade hardware.

Plate-glass windows on all four sides. Cord tires on easily demountable rims, with extra rim.

Although designed with especial consideration of our women friends, we find this model is also favored by many men, for business and family use. Merchandise samples can be carried inside the car instead of in the rear compartment. Evenings and week ends the same car admirably meets the requirements of the small family.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE NOTES.

Sunday was spent at Petal with Brother B. H. Williams and his people. This was a very fine meeting and we feel that the Sunday school at Petal means to move up. We enjoyed being there very much indeed. They agreed to master the Program of Work and move forward on this Program. They have done much improvement, both to the parsonage and the church. They are really able to do better work than ever before and it seemed to me they were progressing.

On my arrival home I found that Mrs. J. E. J. Ferguson had been operated on. I trust the brethren will remember her and her home in prayer. At this writing she is doing well. May the Lord bless her and hers.

Thursday night we had the pleasure of being with the preachers in their meeting at the Orphanage. It was a good meeting, enjoyed by all.

Lumberton joins the Honor Roll ranks for Sunday School Day funds. We welcome Lumberton to third place.

Brandon has been rechecked on the Program of Work and carries the Gold Seal for 1924. This makes the third 100 per cent Sunday school of the "C" type in the Conference—Harrisville, Prent Brandon. Come on in—the water's fine, and we would be glad to have you.

Don't forget to pray for the work and the workers.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

Rev. J. B. Randolph, presiding elder of the Corinth District, invited me to work with him for ten days. We held services at Marietta, May 3 and 4. The pastor and his wife, the superintendent and his wife, the lay leader and his wife, and three young women signed up for the school to be held in Booneville, June 2-7. The superintendent agreed to observe Sunday School Day. Brother Randolph took an offering for the expense of the training school. He also raised in cash the Superannuate Endowment fund for this year. Every member of the church partook of the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper.

Monday, the 5th, Brother Randolph held quarterly conference at First Church, Corinth. The pastor, Rev. E. R. Smoot, made a glowing report of every phase of church work. Tuesday we visited three teachers of the Sunday school, and these teachers estimated that twenty to thirty young people would attend the training school. I have never seen teachers more thoroughly committed to the teacher-training program of the church than the teachers of First Church.

Tuesday night the presiding elder held quarterly conference at South Side. The church building is being repaired at a cost of one thousand dollars. Brother Boggs, the pastor, and three others signed up for training work.

Wednesday Brother Randolph held quarterly meeting at Hebron, on the Mantachie circuit. Rev. G. B. Love is pastor and Rev. C. A. Porter is superintendent of the Sunday school at Hebron. Brother Randolph raised the Superannuate Endowment fund at this place. The superintendent agreed to observe Sunday School Day. Five enrolled for the training school.

Thursday we called upon Rev. C. C. Alexander, at Tupelo. The church at Tupelo is planning to have a great school the latter part of June. Brothers Randolph and Mohler enrolled in this school for the course, "The Religious Education of Adults." These two and others are planning to take advantage of this specialization course. We had a great day at Oak Grove, on the Moorville circuit. Rev. Wade Heath is pastor and Brother J. A. Barnes is superintendent of the school at Oak Grove. We helped the people to reorganize their school. They promised to observe Sunday School Day. The pastor reported $100 on Conference collections. Brother Randolph raised the Superannuate Endowment fund in full. We enrolled five for the training school. Besides, at odd times, we visited the pastors at Guntown, Kossuth, and Baldwyn, and enrolled them for courses in the training school. From present indications it looks as if the Corinth District is to have 100 per cent of the pastors to take a course in their school.

In all the churches visited Brother Randolph and I preached the gospel, taught the people some of the definite plans of the church in etablishing the Kingdom; we worked, prayed; we believed the promises of God, and witnessed a wonderful victory in every place. The response of the people was great. Brother Randolph is wholeheartedly back of every enterprise of his church, and is meeting with success that is marvelous. He is a true yoke-fellow with his pastors, and is a real leader of men.

We have authority from the General Sunday School Board to hold Standard Training Schools at the following places: Booneville, June 2-7; Grenada, June 11-18; Columbus, June 23-28; Tupelo, June 29-July 4. We request onee more that all who are interested in the training of our leaders for the work of the church please send the names of the persons who ought to attend one or all of these schools to Rev. J. E. Stephens, Grenada, Miss.

SOME LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

Rev. O. W. Bradley, vice chairman of the Sunday School Board of our Conference, said that the recent district Sunday school conference at Lecompte was one of the best Sunday school metings he had ever attended. One of the outstanding features of this Lecompte conference was the good—almost one hundred per cent—attendance of the district officers.

Two of our Conference officers, Mrs. J. M. Henry, Assistant Conference Superintendent, and Rev. H. L. Johns, Superintendent of Intermediate-Senior Work, met with a group of Sunday school workers at Magnolia Park, near Alexandria, including the presiding elder and pastor and Conference superintendent, for a conference concerning camp life for the larger boys of our Confereuce. Mr. Johns, Superintendent of Young People, writes: "I enjoyed the visit last week very much, and believe that something can be done at Magnolia Park this year."

The Ruston District Conference was held this week, Wednesday, May 7, at Dubach. One whole afternoon was given over by the presiding elder to the great Sunday school cause, and among the outstanding leaders that spoke and discussed the Sunday school work were: Mrs. J. M. Henry, Assistant Conference Superintendent; district officers, Mrs. Savory Lewis, of Ruston; Mr. G. A. Rathburn, of Minden. Among the pastors, Rev. N. E. Joyner, Rev. W. C. Childress, Rev. A. J. Gearheard, Rev. R. W. Tueker, Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, Rev. L. W. Smart. Dr. A. S. Lutz, Secretary of the Educational Movement, and Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, presiding elder of the Monroe District, entered into our discussions.

Many of the outstanding superintendents of the district were there, and made reports, and took great interest in the program. Mr. A. P. Raley, of Dubach, led a discussion on the Fifth Sunday Institute. His school was the first school of the "C" type in Louisiana to receive recognition from the General Board during 1923. This school is making steady progress. Rev. K. W. Dodson spoke on the subject, "The Sunday School Outlook in the Ruston District." Many of the leaders in this great district think that they now have the banner Sunday school district in our Conference.

The district voted to have two Standard Training Schools, one in Ruston and the other at Minden. Prof. Fisher, of Arcadia, was elected District Superintendent of Teacher Training. Miss McCasland, of Homer, was elected Elementary Superintendent. Mrs. S. J. Bean, of Haynesville, was elected Missionary Superintendent. All the other Superintendents were re-elected. The district conference voted to accept the invitation to hold its next session in the beautiful new church at Arcadia.

The Sunday school cause at the Monroe District Conference will be discussed on Wednesday, May 14. The district officers of the Monroe District have had one or more district council meetings this year, and no doubt will make the coming conference a great success. The presiding elder of this district announced at the Ruston conference that the Board of Managers of the Monroe Standard Training School had secured for the course on Junior Work one of the outstanding Junior specialist in the South, Miss Nannie Lee Frayser, of Louisville, Ky.

The District Secretary of the Lake Charles District, Mr. A. M. Mayo, has sent out to every superintendent in his district an announcement about the first session of the District Standard Training School, for June 1-6. He says in his announcement: "Our workers here will provide entertainment for those who will attend. We should have more than a hundred enrolled in school, and more than fifty to receive credits."

There seems to be a Conference-wide interest in our two great Leadership Schools, at Lake Junaluska and Mount Sequoyah. Mrs. J. M. Henry, Assistant Conference Superintendent, Ruston, La., will have charge of the delegation to Mount Sequoyah, and any one interested in this Western Assembly, Juue 25-July 9, should write her for further information.

REV. C. D. ATKINSON,
Conference Superintendent.

FROM GLOSTER, MISS.

It has been our privilege to enter Gloster at the psychological time to open the door to great and spiritual pastures, after our godly, consecrated, and efficient brethren have with patience labored in prayer, in service, and in preaching with power the "Word of God," until they had broken the bars to the door which is now open. Soon after arrival here, we heard from many sources of the cross-currents in the churches and denominations. We at once set our hearts to turn these currents into one great flow. The cross-current of our church was soon united by personal work and prayer. Thus we came to the conclusion that if we could build a wall of prayer with few or many high enough, we could turn the currents into one great channel. A prayer meeting was then organized at the Methodist church. It has grown in numbers and interest each month. A short time ago God sent to us Mr. Gus Day, an engineer on the Yazoo and Mississippi Valley Railroad, and Mr. Mahoney, fireman, recently accepting Christ through Mr. Day, and Jeff Thurman, who was not long ago converted while standing on a crtain cross-tie alone as he was performing his duty as flagman, and Brother Jeff's brother. These men started a wave of spiritual fire. Seeing what could be done by prayer, we announced a men's prayer meeting to meet on Monday night, three weeks ago, at the Methodist church, and twenty men came in response to the call, and a men's prayer meeting was organized. On the following Monday night, the news had spread more, and thirty-five were present; last night the news had gone farther, and sixty-odd were present. Many fine prayers and excellent speeches were made, and the dominant spirit is co-operation and Christian fellowship. The lines of separation are fast being wiped out and the body of men seemingly one with the ideal goal, "Gloster and Amite County for Christ," and not church bigotry. Can you imagine it? Pray for us. As Elijah's cloud poured out its water upon a dry earth in answer to repeated prayer, so have the waters of heaven begun to rain on us, and conversions are already taking place. Mr. G. P. McGehee says he has not seen anything like it in Gloster for forty years. Mr. O. P. McPhearson says he has called quite a number of men's meetings in Gloster, but he has never witnessed anything as is now on. Mr. J. G. Anders, our charge lay leader, will soon have help in filling the vacant pulpits. He has been going alone and organizing Sunday schools and expounding the Word acceptably and interestingly, to the delight of the different adjacent communities.

HUSBAND IN WAR OF 1812

Widow of Virginia Militiaman Still Living—Black-Draught "a Household Remedy With Us," She Says.

Kingsport, Tenn.—Mrs. Fannie V. Thompson, who lives just across the State line from here in Scott County, Virginia, is the widow of George Washington Thompson, who fought in the War of 1812. Although that was over 110 years ago, Mrs. Thompson herself is but 75 years old and doesn't look that age. Her life has been, and still is, an active one, and she takes a great interest in the affairs of the day.

"Two years ago," says Mrs. Thompson, "while I was visiting relatves in Russell County, Virginia, . . . I read about Black-Draught. It seemed to be a very remarkable medicine, so I thought I would try it. When I got home, my daughter got a box of this medicine at the store and we began to use it in our family.

"Black-Draught is a good reliable medicine. It is a household remedy with us for . . . trouble, which is caused by the strong lime-stone water we have to drink in this country.

"Occasionally I suffer from headaches caused from constipation and biliousness, and for it I have invariably used Black-Draught for the past two years. My health has always been good."

Black-Draught is used, with satisfaction, by millions. Try it.

Thedford's BLACK-DRAUGHT LIVER MEDICINE

A GOOD MEETING AT LUCEDALE, LA.

One of the greatest meetings that have ever been held in this town closed with the preaching services at the Methodist church Sunday night. No, not closed, for we expect it to go on and on, indefinitely, but Brother Mellard closed his meeting with the Sunday night services.

As a result of the good work that Brother Mellard has done since he came here at the beginning of the year, spiritual interest has been greatly revived, and when he announced that his meeting would begin with services every night and twice on Sunday, interest began to manifest itself, and a men's prayer meeting was organized and held at the mayor's office daily at 6:30 p. m., with a good attendance the first evening and growing in attendance and interest daily. However, the meetings will be only held once a week hereafter and are under the auspices of the Federated Bible Class of Lucedale, composed of the members of the Men's Bible Class of the two Sunday schools.

For two years or more there has been a strong undercurrent here to put this into effect, but needed a little breeze to fan it into a flame, and it seems this has been done through the efforts of the present pastor. When he came here a few months ago, a stranger to all, very few members knew him or even knew of him, but he soon won his way into their hearts, and by his earnest and sincere love for the Master's work has won his way into the hearts of the entire people of all denominations and has instilled a confidence that is being manifested throughout the life of the community.

Brother Mellard is a strong preacher, a good man, a big man, and under his leadership sixteen members have been added to the church since the beginning of the year, and we hope for a great revival in this community that will continue to grow and increase in power until its influence will reach the uttermost parts of the earth, and we ask the prayers of the Christian people for God's blessings that the good work may continue and every heart made to hunger after God's love and saving power.

FROM COFFEEVILLE, MISS.

On Sunday night, 4th inst., the greatest religious uplift was consummated, after two weeks' services, under the auspices of the three Protestant denominations. By mutual arrangement the revival went forward without the least hitch, which so often impairs community interest and success. This feature engendered a passionate flame of inspiration that insured a denominational response. If not expressed in words, it was generously and sincerely enacted. Behold how pleasant for Baptists, Methodists, and Presbyterians to work together in saving souls for whom redemption has been purchased!

In summing up the results of the meeting by reclamation, conversion, etc., over one hundred pledged lifetime service. About half a dozen young women expressed a desire to render service in the foreign missionary field, and two or three young men expressed a desire to enter the ministry. This was the climax of the evangelist's work, which was a thrilling scene in the final round-up.

Much more could be written of the many interesting features employed by the evangelist, his consecrated consort and song leader—of this great spiritual awakening that came to our old town and community. We rejoice to know that in the tidal wave spreading over the old Magnolia commonwealth, Coffeeville has not been overlooked in that which Jehovah has to bestow upon his earthly children. The Christian unity and harmony of the three denominations have enabled them to go over the breaks of Satan of long standing, and they are preparing to clean out what debris may be left, even that which may be hidden away in the dens of vice.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

LAKE CHARLES DISTRICT MEETING.

The annual meeting of the Lake Charles District, north section, of the Woman's Missionary Society convened at 3:30 o'clock, April 15, in the Sunday school rooms of the First Methodist Church, Leesville, La. Mrs. J. N. McDonald, president of the Leesville Society, opened the meeting, and in the absence of the secretary, appointed Mrs. Charles Malzacher secretary pro tem. The opening program was as follows: Song, "Close to Thee," led by Mrs. Jones, accompanied by Miss Evans on the piano; prayer, Mrs. Ped Ferguson; Scripture, Mrs. McDonald, using the fourth chapter of Proverbs.

In a most generous, friendly manner, Mrs. F. P. Jones welcomed all the delegates of other Auxiliaries to our town, our homes, and our church.

Mrs. Joe Winn, taking the chair, as district secretary, after a gracious response to the words of welcome, opened a discussion on sending reports. She urged that each and every report be complete, with answers to all questions given, whether it be "yes" or "no."

She then called for a roll of the delegates from the various curches, which resulted as follows:

Barham, 7; Lake Charles, 2; Leesville, 20; Many, 0; Zwolle, 0; De Ridder, 4; Lake Arthur, 0; Merryville, 1; Neame, 0; Perry, 1.

A reading by Mrs. Buddle, of De Ridder, was given—"My Missionary Society and I."

Mrs. Winn then discussed "Publicity," laying special stress on getting all news items into the newspapers.

Mrs. Salbot, of Barham, gave a reading, "The Master's Questions."

Adjourned for a ten-minute recess, while the ladies were getting acquainted; tea and sandwiches were served.

The meeting was reopened with prayer by Mrs. Winn, "For God to bless the Council meeting at Tampa, now in session."

Mrs. Keys, vice president of the Louisiana Conference, spoke to us about raising funds for the Belle Bennett Memorial Home, assessment to be $5 per member, payable by October, 1926.

Mrs. Raggio, of De Ridder, then presented a review of the possibilities and great good accomplished by Young People's organizations, there being 22 Young People's Societies organized in Louisiana.

Mrs. Winn then reviewed her division of social service work for all societies. Under this heading come: (1) Prohibition; (2) Community service; (3) Local work in church; (4) Citizenship; (5) Inter-racial work.

Reports of the State conference held in Bogalusa last month were given by Mrs. J. N. McDonald, Mrs. F. M. Miller, of Abbeville, and Mrs. Keys, concluded by Mrs. Winn.

The meeting then adjourned.

The next meeting will be held at Lafayette for the southern section of Lake Charles District by the new District Secretary, Mrs. J. N. McDonald, on April 29 and 30, 1924.

YOUR MISSIONARY DOLLARS CHANGED INTO REDEEMED SOULS.

We wish you could have been with us at the Fourteenth Annual Session of the Woman's Missionary Conference at Bogalusa to have heard a little French woman tell in her own simple way the story of her conversion from Catholicism to Protestantism. She is a living example of what is being accomplished at our French Mission. When asked to speak, she came forward timidly and at first falteringly, realizing that she could not speak English fluently, but forgetting self in her enthusiasm and finding inspiration in the responsive faces in the audience, she soon gained confidence and unfolded a story that brought tears to every eye and brought to every heart a sense of gratitude and a feeling that the work is well worth while.

Mrs. LaGrange, whose husband is now preaching in the French District, told of attending a service where she and her husband heard the Bible read—of their fight with the devil over its acceptance—of their decision to join the Protestants, and of how she was driven from home by her father, who could not understand. Tears streamed from her eyes as she told of her love for her "Daddy," of how her mother pleaded for her, how her husband encouraged her to be brave—and then again and again she would approach her father, showing the wisdom of the serpent combined with the harmlessness of the dove, for there was no resentment—just love and respect. She sent him cake which he refused to eat—she sent him loving messages—finally he gave in and let her come home to visit them, and she is praying daily that he may be led to see the light. "He will, he will," she would say confidently, "but I must go slow—God has promised, I believe."

O how she put us to shame when she told of the persecutions so cheerfully endured for righteousness' sake—and how eager and happy her face when she said, "I give up all for Christ—the devil he say—you foolish—dance, play cards—you young! I say NO! I got something in my heart better than cards and dance—I got Jesus and him enough. He make me glad all the time."

Do we whose opportunities and privileges far outweigh those of these Mission Districts find Christ all sufficient so that we do not care for the things of the world?

Recording Secretary.

KITCHEN BEING FURNISHED AT EPWORTH.

The laymen of Epworth, New Orleans, have organized a Methodist Men's Club, and have monthly meetings in the basement of the church. These are supper meetings, the Missionary Society doing the serving. They are equipping their kitchen little by little, and naturally welcome gifts from the members. Hence the following lines, suggested at the Missionary meeting April 1:

When the meeting was over,
'Twas no April fool, I wot,
For we saw Mrs. Herbert uncover
A white porcelain coffee pot.

This is a fine gift for our kitchen,
And who will say it is not?
At our meeting we'll think very often
Of that nice new coffee pot.

So, Mrs. Herbert, we thank you
For this dandy coffee pot!
And when we are tired from talking,
Hot coffee will hit the spot

One gift cheerfully given brings another,
Now give a guess who can;
You can't? Well, I will tell you,
Mrs. Smith gave a frying pan.

When you go into the kitchen
You'll find it there all right,
And when the men have their supper
We'll fry in it that night.

G. CARTY, Secretary.

A PRAYER.

Father, when the day's begun,
Help me to be one
To say
"Thy way
Not mine, be done."

In heat of midday's busy hour,
O, give me power
To go
And do;
Nor dare to cower.

When darkening night shuts out the day
Of life, then may
I trust
The rest.
Thou'lt light my way.

—W. Brandt Hughes.

RENWAR VS. RHEUMATISM.
It is certainly a pity that so many people suffer year after year the intense pains of rheumatism when it can be so easily expelled from the system by the simple treatment of taking Renwar Rheumatic Salts. Rheumatism is caused by uric acid in the blood; and in order to effect a complete cure, it is necessary to entirely eliminate this acid from the blood. Renwar is guaranteed to relieve or your money is refunded. It contains no injurious drugs. It is the one sure remedy, and it does not, in the slightest degree injure the stomach or affect the heart. Mr. Joseph L. Boehmer says, "One 50c bottle has done me more good than all sanatorium treatment, and what it did for me, why should it not do the same for others? Should any one doubt the virtue of Renwar and the certainty of curing this malady, refer them to me." REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON RESOLUTIONS, ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

We, your Committee on Resolutions, beg leave to submit for your consideration the following resolutions:

1. That we commend both our preachers and members for their faith, prayers, and zeal in the revivals held in our charges.

2. That in every church, as pastors, we use our best endeavor to put into actual working order paragraph 547 of the Discipline.

3. That we commend the presiding elder, Rev. C. C. Wier; the Conference Superintendent, Rev. C. D. Atkinson, and the district officers for putting on so helpful a District Sunday School Institute and program.

4. That as churches and pastors of this district we seek to get qualified teachers who could give instruction to our public and high school students at such hours and under such conditions as would adapt themselves to local circumstances for the purpose of religious instruction for our Methodist constituency in the aforesaid week-day public or high schools in the bounds of our respective charges.

5. That as a district conference we express our pleasure in having letters read from Professors H. B. Carre and Thomas C. Carter to our presiding elder. These brethren were former members of our Annual Conference, and their characters and labors of love in the Master's kingdom are highly cherished among us.

Rev. H. W. Riekey, chairman; Walter S. Henry, Secretary; F. P. Moss, committee.

A VARIED EXPERIENCE.

On April 23 I landed at Oakland Miss., to assist Rev. W. J. Wood, pastor of the Methodist church, in a meeting. I was gladly surprised to meet Dr. Joel Donaldson, who was once my school teacher in Pontotoe County, Miss., my old home, at the train. He has been practicing medicine in Oakland about fifteen years. He is a successful practitioner and good Methodist. I was glad to see him. Two superannuate members of the North Mississippi Conference live at Oakland and attended the meeting, viz., Revs. A. W. Langley and James Porter. I thanked Brother Langley for coming so regularly, and he remarked, "I can't stay away." Thank God for the happy old preachers, they are such an inspiration to the younger preachers. Brother B. S. Elliott, a layman from Holcomb, Miss., was with us the latter part of the meeting, and did great good. I want to commend Brother P. S. Bailey and Dr. J. B. Long for the way they handled the finances. Brother Wood already had the revival started before I arrived, but we had some good services, and, as a whole, the meeting was a success. Brother Wood is one of the best loved and most successful pastors I have ever met. God graciously bless him, his family, and flock.

The Baptist and the Presbyterian pastors, Rev. Lee Spencer and Rev. Mr. McCaleb, were with us in the meeting, rendering valuable service. Brother Spencer (the Baptist pastor) did exceptional work, especially in the choir.

On the morning of May 2, I landed at Memphis, sixty-five miles north of Oakland, and was in five services that day—one at Ben Cox's noon prayer meeting, and four at the Billy Sunday tabernacle. Ben Cox is pastor of Central Baptist Church, of Memphis, and has had a noonday prayer meeting every day since Jan. 19, 1924. My, what a service! My main purpose in Memphis was to study Billy Sunday and his methods. I am fully convinced that I saw the causes behind the man that make him the foremost evangelist in the world. I left Memphis Saturday morning, May 3, and landed at McComb that afternoon, ready for the services at Pearl River Avenue Sunday. Two conversions Sunday night, and both joined the church—a man and his wife.

So, all in all, this whole trip was replete with various and sundry experiences, but I'm on the firing line at home now, and so glad of it! After hearing Billy, I am still highly satisfied with the job the Lord gave me.

Forward marching,

J. A. WELLS.

and promiscuous attendance upon moving pictures; and,

Whereas, parents need to be awakened to the dangers;

Therefore, be it resolved, That we ask the General Sunday School Council to take such steps as are necessary to see that each Conference provides a place in its program for giving information on this subject at Sunday school conferences, and that this subject be given sufficient time for proper presentation, and that a series of articles be published on the Sunday school page of the Conference organ, and each Conference be requested to go on record as favoring the general purposes of this resolution.

Respectfully submitted, R. H. Harper, chairman; J. H. Carter, secretary, Sunday School Committee.

FRECKLES

Now is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There is no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine from any druggist and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and give a beautiful, clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double-strength Othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

STAYING HOME FROM WORK MEANS MONEY LOST

Many Women Know This by Experience

Let Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Help You As It Helped These Women

Mrs. McDole's Experience

Ludington, Michigan.—"I suffered every month and was very irregular, had headaches all the time, was thin and pale, with no appetite. I had taken all kinds of medicines, and every doctor told me I would have to face an operation before I would be well again. I was doing factory work, and I had to stay at home so much that I was getting discouraged. My mother advised me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and I did so with good results. I am now feeling fine. I have advised all my girl friends, who have such troubles as I had, to take your wonderful medicine."—Mrs. THERESSA MCDOLE, 426 S. Rath Ave., Ludington, Mich.

Los Angeles, California.—"I was in such a condition that I was scarcely able to walk, even to do my housework. I had no energy, was depressed and often wished to die. I am a chef, but was totally unable to do any cooking. A friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I have taken it with success. After the fourth bottle I felt much better, and after the tenth I never felt better in my life, as it resulted in a complete recovery. I certainly recommend it to all I hear complaining and you can use this letter as a testimonial."—Mrs. MARY SULLIVAN, 923 E. 46th Street, Los Angeles, California.

Greatly Relieved

Jersey City, N. J.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for cramps and fainting spells. I do office work, and have been in this condition four or five years, having to stay at home from work a day or two at a time, quite frequently. I have taken about ten bottles of it, and have been greatly relieved. I recommend it myself and you may print these facts with my full address."—LOUISE SCHOENFELDER, 112 Woodlawn Ave., Jersey City, N. J.

No matter what your work is, a great deal depends upon your health. It is discouraging to be obliged to stay at home frequently on account of sickness.

Your trouble may be caused by some female weakness, and Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has brought relief to many women just as these letters state. For sale by druggists everywhere.

THE ALEXANDRIA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Alexandria District Conference has just closed a very unusual session at Lecompte. The conference met Sunday, May 4, at 11 a. m., and listened to a great message by Dr. A. S. Lutz. At 2:30 in the afternoon, Rev. C. D. Atkinson met the whole district in a Sunday school conference in the high school auditorium. This was one of the best district Sunday school conferences that the writer has ever attended. There was every evidence of a great awakening in the field of religious education in the district.

Monday afternoon, at 2:30 o'clock, the presiding elder, Rev. C. C. Wier, called the conference to order. Rev. F. P. Moss led in the devotional services. Rev. D. B. Boddie was elected secretary. The roll was called, and most of the preachers were present, and a goodly number of lay delegates were on hand.

Our very efficient presiding elder presided with ease throughout the entire session, and led us in one of the most helpful conference sessions that we have ever had. Everybody seemed to be at perfect ease, and each took active part in all the proceedings, and the spirit was far above par. The Holy Spirit thoroughly permeated the membership of the conference.

The reports from pastors showed that there was a general revival spirit all over the district, and that already many churches have had great revivals. This will perhaps be the banner year for the district in the way of an increase in membership.

All the causes and claims were carefully looked after, and no visitor came to us with a message but that he was given plenty of time to represent his cause. Among the visitors were Revs. A. S. Lutz, R. E. Goodrich, and Mrs. J. M. Henry.

The preaching was done by Rev. A. M. Shaw, Rev. A. S. Lutz, and Rev. Louis Hoffpauir. Each sermon was a good message and well received.

The conference closed Tuesday night with a great program by the laymen. This was an excellent program, well rendered. The laymen who spoke were: T. W. Holloman, Dr. H. S. Joseph, W. D. Haas, Jr., Prof. T. G. Pears. Rev. H. W. Rickey also addressed the conference, and so did the presiding elder. The meeting was in charge of T. L. Edwards, District Lay Leader, who also made several talks. The conference elected the following as Lay Leaders for the district: F. D. Richardson, District Lay Leader; Dr. H. F. Joseph, Associate Lay Leader; Prof. T. G. Pears, Associate Lay Leader.

The following were elected as lay delegates to the Annual Conference: T. W. Holloman, Mrs. F. Hollier, F. D. Richardson, Mrs. H. G. Owen, Dr. H. S. Joseph, Mrs. S. L. Riggs, J. D. Sandlin, J. E. Williams. Alternates: Rev. J. H. French, J. H. Walker, S. M. Ahel, Mrs. W. T. Cunningham.

The next session of the conference is to be held in Natchitoches.

D. B. BODDIE, Secretary.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

A visit to the commercial department, 421 Baronne street, New Orleans, will always pay.

FROM TALLULAH, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley: I have just closed a great revival in my little church at Tallulah. It was preceded by two weeks' prayer meeting. Henry T. Young and Brother Martin, of our French mission, were with me. Young did the preaching, and did it well. Brother Martin is great in his song and personal work.

We have had twenty-eight accessions to the church since Conference; fourteen members united with the church during the meeting just closed. Other churches got several members.

Yours very truly,

It is also requested that personal invitation be given neighboring pastors and officials to meet with us. These visiting pastors will be called on to bring the gospel message, and there will be an exchange of methods used, etc., that should be most helpful. To this end let all superintendents and teachers make it a point to be present at these conferences. Marked progress should be registered through the whole district. All finances should be given unusual emphasis on the part of the stewards. It will be noticed that I am to hold three group conferences on my third round, viz.: Byhalia and Olive Branch, at Miller, June 6, at 10 a.m.; Cockrum and Pleasant Hill, at Lewisburg, June 20, at 10 a.m.; Courtland and Shuford, at Chappel Hill, June 27, at 10 a.m. The preachers and officials of these charges will please note and act accordingly.

I also call attention to the fact that I am calling the quarterly conferences on the circuit to meet at 10 a.m. I am doing this because of a special program I shall have for the conferences on my third round. I shall have with me a layman (or other visitor) who will make an address on the value of the church to the community and to the world. I will secure the speaker for this occasion. I desire that the preacher, either before or after the time of the meeting of his quarterly conference, have all-day services in each of his other churches, at which service he shall have some one speak on the value of the church to the community and to the world. I want the preacher to preach a sermon on that same day on "Life Stewardship." Brethren, let's put the same enthusiasm into our work that we would if we knew each day were the last we would have for service upon earth.

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 71—No. 21. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3563.

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, MAY 22, 1924. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

A Symposium on Unification

Last week the editor of the Advocate addressed a letter to all the presiding elders of the three patronizing Annual Conferences and to the delegates, lay and clerical, who represented these Conferences in the Hot Springs General Conference, inviting them, if they cared to do so, to express their opinions on the question of unification in about one hundred words, with the understanding, of course, that such brief expression would not debar them from a more extended discussion at another time should they care to make it. Of those from whom replies have been received in time for this issue, a few, for various reasons, stated that they were unable to comply with the request immediately, but would write later. The following statements are published in the order in which they were received:

Rev. i. W. Cooper, D.D., President, Whitworth College, Delegate to General Conference from Mississippi Conference.

"I thoroughly believe in Unification, for the following reasons:

"We have the same doctrines.

"We have practically the same polity.

"Consolidation of various branches of business, national government, and educational institutions has proven that where consolidation is possible, the work may he more economically administered. Consolidation would give us more preachers. These pastors could better hc used in opening up new fields than in laboring in cities and towns already provided with Methodist worship.

"United Methodism would he moro efficient and impressive on foreign fields, and confusion in the minds of people of other denominations here at home would be avoided.

"The spirit of Christ is union and brotherly love, and if this spirit he not exercised by those of the same faith, we need not expect to find it elsewhere."

Rev. W. Winans Drake, D.D., Presiding Elder, New Orleans District, Louisiana Conference.

"The division of American Methodism, only justified by the impossibility of real unity on account of the conditions of the time, has outlived those conditions, and, for the most part, the asperities and suspicions engendered by the separation. It seems to me that now it is time for a united Methodism to face new problems which can be better met by united action.

"The present plan, adopted so unanimously by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, provides a method of working out the difficulties of a united organization. To my mind the advantages of unification so far outweigh any supposed dangers involved as to justify the adoption of the plan by our General Conference."

Rev. H. N. Brown, Presiding Elder, Baton Rouge District, Louisiana Conference.

"Let us go forward, without panic, on unification.

"I am in favor of unification. I do not believe, however, that anything is to he gained by a General Conference, this summer, on tho subject. We have taken time for considering other plans. There is less in this plan than the others, so we ought to give everybody concerned time for mature deliberation before acting. Some of the Conferences will wish to elect new delegates on this issue. They should have that right. I am willing for our present delegates to represent me. I believe by postponing the General Conference to the summer of 1925 we will save to our church many good people who would leave us if we entered it this time."

Rev. J. H. Felts, Presiding Elder, Greenville District, North Mississippi Conference, and Delegate to General Conference.

"Yes, I am opposed to the present plan, or any other plan that fails to grant a direct vote to every member of our church. The proposed plan is a misnomer. Space is not available, nor have I the time at present, to go into the matter as it is in my heart to do. One of our greatest and sanest leaders recently wrote the following sentences that find an echo in my heart of complete approval: 'The action of the Northern Conference was to be expected, for the pending plan will not only keep them in the South, but will legalize their occupancy of a territory where they are now trespassers. I cannot believe our people will approvo this plan when they understand its import.'

"The delegates composing our General Conference are elected by the Annual Conferences. The Annual Conference delegates are elected by the district conferences. The district conference delegates are elected by the quarterly conferences. The members of the quarterly conferences are elected BY THEMSELVES ON THE NOMINATION OF THE PASTORS. Those who compose the rank and file of the church have no voice whatever in the selection of their representatives.

"When we want money, whether for the Centenary Program, Education, or the Superannuates, we try to reach EVERY MEMBER of our great church. Is it less important that they be given a voice in a matter so grave as confronts us now? We were glad to hear them in 1845, and it were better that we hear them in 1924 if we value the peace and prosperity of our Zion. It is one thing to accept the leadership of certain men in matters of policy; it is quite another to allow them to take from us the church of our choice.. Jonah tried the realities of the belly of a great fish by virtue of his own actions. He didn't seem to enjoy the experience very much. If we are to slowly enter into a somewhat like experience, we should at least have a voice in the matter. Instead of casting lots, we should cast votes.

"When intelligent and liberal members of our church look me in the face and quietly tell me that they will enter no protest but go into some other organization, I am forced to serious consideration of the question. Taxation without representation was fought out in the long ago. To say that those composing the General Conference NOW are representatives of the rank and file of the church is too far afield for serious consideration. Under our laws they may legislate for us, determine our policies and the like, but to destroy the organization of which we are members without so much as 'by your leave' is going a bit too strong for me.

"I hereby register a courteous but vigorous protest against action that carries any measure of finality until we have heard from our membership by a direct and unhampered vote. Further, our bishops would make no mistake if definite action were deferred till the meeting of our next General Conference, thereby allowing Annual Conferences to elect delegations INSTRUCTED as to their vote, if they wish.

"With brotherly consideration for every man who is a part of our great church, and a prayer for the constant overruling HAND and the guiding Spirit," etc.

Hon. H. H. White, Alexandria, La., Member of the Commission on Unification and Lay Delegate to the General Conference.

"I would not have accepted membership on the Unification Commission if I had not believed that unification of the Northern and Southern churches was desirable. During a number of sessions of the Commission I was opposed to many of the plans that were submitted. Finally a plan was agreed on which, in my opinion, will serve the best interests of both churches, and I am in favor of the plan which has been recommended. My view also is that, under the Articles of the Discipline, and the resolution of the Hot Springs General Conference, the bishops have the power to call a special session of the General Conference of tho Southern Church, in order that it may pass upon the plan. In my view, it was always the contemplation that this special session would be called as soon as practicable after the Northern General Conference had acted, if the action of that Conference was favorable to the plan."

Rev. R. H. Wynn, D.D., Presiding Elder, Shreveport District, and Delegate to the General Conference.

"I have been Secretary of the Committee on Church Relations in three successive General Conferences, and have become intensely interested in the successful outcome of tho negotiations for unification of Methodism.

"With present light I strongly favor the plan agreed upon, which protects minority rights and makes no radical change in our polity.

"Its rejection by Southern Methodism after its practically unalmous acceptanco by our sister church would brand us as hopelessly sectional and insincere in our former deliverances, and would render us liable to the righteous censure of the Christian world.

"Its adoption will be a thrilling event in the annals of church history, and will give Methodism opportunity to wield a profound and far-reaching spiritual influence."

Rev. George S. Sexton, D.D., President, Centenary College, Shreveport, La., and Delegate to General Conference.

"It is my belief that the adoption of the present plan by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as it has been adopted by the Methodist Episcopal Church, will be one of the greatest achievements of the past half century. Under tho authority and by the direction of our General Conference, the College of Bishops should call a spe-

THE CHURCH IN RURAL OHIO.

By Albert A. Aby.

Is the church exercising good business sense in her home missionary enterprise? Is she practicing good ethics in her home missionary appeal? Do her home missionary appropriations go into communities in which churches are sarce, or into those which already have so many churches that they cannot all live without help from the outside? One would not think that the church in this day would be willing to let questions so serious as these go unchallenged. When a capable secretary resigns from the home missionary board of a great denomiuation on the ground that he cannot conscientiously continue to promote a system of poor business and poor ethics, when another capable secretary defends both the ethics and the business system with the contention that at least ninety per cent of the enterprise is good business, and when a reputable religious journal comes back with the opinion that less than fifty per cent of the enterprise is good business, let alone the questiou of ethics, it is evident that these are not merely idle questions.

Ohio as a Test.

Now that the church is, in the main, committed to the principle of co-operation and is professedly united in her condemnation of destructive and unchristian competition, she must inform herself on this subject, and adjust her practices to her professions. With this conviction the following facts on the home missionary enterprise in rural Ohio are submitted. As is generally known, the rural church survey in Ohio which was begun by the Interchurch World Movement, was taken over and completed by the Ohio Council of Churches. Consequently during the period between the summer of 1919 and the autumn of 1921 surveys reporting the conditions and activities of every church in Ohio, outside of her cities with populations of 5,000 or more, were secured and tabulated and are on file in the office of the State Council of Churches. Thus there are made available, not merely "sample" or "typical" cases, but reports covering all of the Protestant churches in rural Ohio which were receiving home missionary aid some time between 1919 and 1921.

A study of the home missionary enterprise in rural Ohio, as thus revealed, throws a flood of light upon the questions at the beginning of this article. But before examining the data, shall we first try to determine some standard of judgment? When are churches in "unjustifiable competition?" What constitutes "over-churching?" The answer will differ, of course, with the viewpoint of the individual. It will differ, too, with conditions in communities. No inflexible rule can be given. But a general agreement on a common basis is not unreasonable to hope for. In the early months of 1921, at two different meetings of the comity committee of the Ohio Council of Churches, lasting each a day and a half, in which meetings more than a hundred of the invited officials and prominent clergy of the denominations shared in the deliberations, these problems were studied, and principles expressing the united convictions of the men were formulated. These principles were later adopted by the assembly of the Ohio Council of Churches at its annual meeting, and ordered published in pamphlet form as "Principles of Comity Guiding the Ohio Council of Churches in Solving Interdeuominational Problems in Town and Country Territory."

The Theory.

On the subject in question these principles have this to say: "Every community with a population of 500 or more should have one competent, full-time, well-paid, resident pastor, and the efforts of both the community and the denominational officials should be directed toward bringing about this desired result at the earliest possible moment. In small communities of less than 1,000 populatlon, one well-equipped Protestant church with adequate resident pastoral leadership shall be considered sufficient to meet the needs. If additional workers are needed, as will often be the ease, the pastor might better have assistauts to specialize in religious education, boys' work, girls' work, or some other form of specialized church activities, which will enable the church to reach different groups within the community, than to have competitors, all of whom are appealing to practically the same group. When the population exceeds 1,000, it is open to question as to whether a second pastor should be installed. The decision should be based largely upon the demand within the community."

Without insisting that the above principles should be applied in defining "over-churching" and "unjustifiable church competition," they are suggestive as expressing the growing sentiment of church leadership in Ohio. In contrast with these principles which express the desire of churchmen, witness the testimony of the survey as to the actual conditions in rural Ohio. and as to the actual practices of denominations in the perpetuation of churches by missionary aid.

The Facts.

The surveys show that most of the home missionary appropriations have been going into communities which are already seriously afflicted with an over-supply of churches. There are 403 churches in rural Ohio which reported receiving missionary aid. These 403 churches represent 25 different denominations, large and small. Of the 403 aided churches, all except 16 are in communities in which other Protestant churches are located. The term "community," as here used, included the village or town center and the surrouuding rural area which logically belongs to it as a trading center. Of the 403 aided churches, all except nine are located in communities in which there are fewer than 1,000 inhabitants per church. Thus, if one applies the principles adopted by the Ohio churchmen—one church for every thousand inhabitants or fraction thereof—it must be said that 394, or 97 per cent, of its 403 aided churches in rural Ohio are in communities which are at least not under-churched.

To analyze further, 331, or 82 per cent, of the 403 aided churches are in communities which contain fewer than 500 people within their borders for each church located therein. Again, 189, or 46 per cent, of the subsidized churches, have fewer than 300 people living in their respective communities for each church to work for! Of the 403 aided churches, 159 are in communities where two or more churches are receiving aid in competition with each other, and all but 21 of these are in communities with populations of less than 500 per church. It needs to be said, though, that of these 159, 52 are cases where two or more churches of the same denomination are yoked up for the support of one pastor.

From these facts, taken from life during 1919-1921, it is difficult to avoid the conclusion that in rural Ohio, which is probably not unlike other States, by far the greater number of home missionary appropriations go into communities where churches are already overcrowded and in harmful competition. Look at it again: 331 aided churches, or 82 out of every hundred, are in communities, none of which can show 500 people per church living within its boundaries, and in the case of all but seven of these 331 churches there are two or more churches iu competition. Eighty per cent of the aided churches in competition with sister churches, each trying to serve less than one-half the population which the Ohio churchmen have considered as a full task for an efficient church!

All Denominations Involved.

The competitive nature of the home missionary appropriations is most marked in the small communities, communities in which the Ohio comity committee expressed the conviction that there should be only one church. There are 110 aided churches located in communities which have a total population of 1,000 or less each. In nine of these communities are two churches, each of which is receiving missionary aid. So that there are 101 such small communities into which missionary streams are flowing. Eighty-eight of these subsidized communities have each two or more churches within their borders. There are actually 325 churches in these 88 small communities, an average of over three and one-third churches per community. The total populations of the 88 communities is 58,007, an average population of 178 per church! Without any further presentation of figures let the reader judge for himself whether the rural home missionary enterprise as reported in 1919-21 needs any reorganization.

The conditions described here are common to all of the denominations which are in the home missionary busiuess in rural Ohio. With practically no exception, if the situation is analyzed by denominations, the averages resulting are quite similar to those given above. The best defense which any denomination can offer for its practices is the manifestation of a sincere endeavor to remedy conditions. A testimony of repentance and the fruits thereof are universally in order. There is reason to believe that some men in all denominations and large numbers in some denominations are sincerely trying to grapple with this problem.

What are the remedies? A short-cut method would be for missionary officials of all denominations to serve notice upon all of their aided churches in over-churched communities that such aid would cease. Worse things might happen. But that, independent of other conditions, would not solve the problem. It would indeed reduce the number of churches in over-churched localities, but it would not always close the right church. It would in many cases work rank injustice to the local communities. The solution involves much more than the withdrawal of missionary support. It involves the reconstruction of organized Protestantism in those same communities, and that through the cordial, mutual, considerate give-and-take on the part of all of the denominations.

Dealing With the Problem.

To illustrate the necessity for a radical readjustment to remedy a condition which is becoming a reproach to the cause of Christ, let an imaginary case, which is typical of many situations in real life, be taken. Here is Community X, having 800 people within its bounds and three churches at its center, which, we will agree, is two too many. Church A receives $300 missionary aid for the support of its pastor. Church B and C receive none. Now a simple way to reduce the number of churches in X would be to withdraw aid from church A. It would have to quit. The village would be less over-churched. But look deeper. Church A has a good edifice, constructed for community service and valued at $15,000. It has 150 active members and represents two-thirds of the reliable Christian people of the community. It has been, perhaps from pioneer days, the leading force for righteousness in X. Its pastor, reasonably well-trained for leadership, is giving every ounce of his energy to that community, and to all of it, in so far as local conditions permit. He is a decided community asset. Given a free hand and a united community, he could make his well-equipped church a tremendous force for the general welfare of X.

A Complicated Problem.

Churches B and C have a combined membership of 35 as against 150 in church A. And the adherents of churches B and C do not represent the moral leadership of the community very largely. They are sincere Christian people, scattered throughout the country. The very structure of the work of churches B and C has precluded the cultivation of a deepening community consciousness among them. But they are there as a part of the community. The community is divided. Church A, no matter how strong its interest in community welfare, dares not make an appeal for community support without laying itself open to the charge of an unchristian attitude toward its weaker sisters. Christian courtesy limits it largely to its own membership for support. Hence its appeal to the denomination. It feels that the services of a worthy pastor demand at least a living wage.

Now, church B also has a pastor with a manse in the village, but he serves three other churches, located five, seven and nine miles away, respectively, each of which is likewise situated in communities which are split up by competing churches. A mere fraction, therefore, of his time and thought can be given to his home village of X. He preaches there once in two weeks, but he thinks in terms of four churches, rather than in terms of a community.

The pastor of church C has his residence in a village ten miles distant where he occupies the parsonage beside his other church there. His situation in his village is not unlike that of the pastor of church A in X. His church is not quite able to support him adequately, so he accepts a call from church C in X and comes over there every second Sunday evening for a service, incidentally supplementing his meager salary. That is his "home missionary" support. But instead of helping to build up the church and community life of X, he taps it, not because of the few hundred dollars which he earns and carries away, nor that he shows an unchristian spirit, but because he contributes to the divided and weakening condition of the community.

Thus it will be seen that there are three types of competitive subsidizing at work in X; first, the direct method of systematic financial aid through the denominational board, which keeps church A at work; second, the equally systematic "circuit" form through which three other churches enable church B to stay on the map in X; and third, the hit and miss practice through which church C volunteers to serve as the "home missionary society" for a pastor in a neighboring village, in consideration of which he serves as their supply, thus giving them a prolonged existence in X. Thus all three churches in X are being subsidized directly or indirectly, all three are weakened by the competitive mix-up, all three denominations alike share in the responsibility for the deplorable situation, and Community X "pays the bills." Of all parties involved it is making the main contribution! And Community X is waking up to that fact. It is not objecting to paying the bills, but it is making up its mind that in the future it will contribute to community upbuilding and not to destructive competition in the name of religion, and it is inquiring with growing insistence how this change can be brought about.

There are many Community X's, in Ohio at least, and there are indications that they will not much longer tolerate conditions which they are coming to look upon as unprofitable and as out of harmony with the spirit of Christ.—The Christian Century.

THE GENERAL CONFERENCE AT SPRINGFIELD.

By Dr. A. W. Plyler, Editor, North Carolina Christian Advocate.

The Methodist world—and a big world it is—turns its eyes during the month of May towards Springfield, Mass., where is assembled the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. And it is the biggest church gathering ever assembled on this good Puritan soil.

How can one enter New England without giving an account of his ancestors? If he cannot establish kinship with the Plymouth Rock group, he must stake his claims elsewhere. And these Methodists have been mindful of this New England requirement, and in consequence the badge of each delegate bears in bronze the strong, fine face of Jesse Lee. And this badge, with its face of bronze, not only makes good the spiritual pedigree of the visitors, but serves to remind one of some history that should not be forgotten.

On June 17, 1739, Jesse Lee, the "Apostle of Methodism to New England," entered New England alone, and at Norwell, Connecticut, preached his first sermon, under the shade of an old apple tree, and on Sept. 21 organized the first church, with three members, who were women, at Stratford, Connecticut. The next year at Easton was built the first Methodist chapel, probably called "Lee's Chapel."

It has been 139 years since Jesse Lee, of Virginia, a representative of a little handful of American Methodists who dwelt for the most part in Virginia, entered New England. And the reception he got was as cold as a New England winter. But now Methodist bishops, delegates, and visitors from five continents and the islands of the oceans are encamped by the hundreds, even the thousands, in the very heart of Puritanism, and the welcome is as warm as a summer sea.

With a few people standing by to see what the stranger would do, Jesse Lee began his service, July 11, 1790, on Boston Common by announcing the hymn:

"Come, sinner, to the gospel feast,
Let every soul be Jesus' guest.
There need not one be left behind,
For God hath bidden all mankind."

Jesse Lee sang the hymn alone, and it is said that one old Puritan standing by declared that the last two lines were not true.

On May 1, 1924, Bishop Earl Cranston, a patriarch among the bishops, announced at the opening of Conference the hymn:

"Oh, for a thousand tongue to sing
Our great Redeemer's praise."

Not one voice, nor even one thousand voices, but more than two thousand on the Conference floor and in the spacious balconies of the big Municipal Auditorium, swelled the notes of praise to their Redeemer and told of the triumph of his grace. In addition to Bishops Berry, Cranston, and Warne, a Chinaman, an East Indian, an Italian, and a Negro, all members of the Conference, took part in the opening exercises of the first session of the Conference. In the recital of the Apostles' Creed, the representatives from the different quarters of the earth each repeated the creed in his own tongue; and the impressive opening services closed with the doxology's being sung in many tongues.

When the roll was called, the delegates stood while the names of the deceased were read by Secretary E. M. Mills, of the General Conference of 1920. The names were Bishop Lewis, Bishop Thoburn, Bishop Harris, Bishop J. E. Robinson, and delegates-elect John C. Crabbe, of Colorado, and the Rev. J. A. Richie, of Savannah.

H. J. Wade, of North Indiana, was elected Secretary. Bishops Quayle and Stuntz have, on account of physical affliction, asked for the superannuate relation, which will be granted.

The One Shining Event.

The one shining event of the first ten days of the Conference has been its action upon the subject of the unification of the two great branches of the Episcopal Methodism. The spontaneous expression of enthusiasm began Sunday afternoon, May 4, while Bishop Joseph F. Berry was reading the Address of the Bishops. The call of this address for the adoption of the present plan of unification brought the whole house to its feet, and the cheering was spontaneous, strong, steady and long-continued.

Then on Wednesday morning, May 7, after Bishop McDowell, the chairman of the Commission, had presented his plea for the adoption of the report of the Commission, Dr. David G. Downey moved its adoption, which was seconded by A. G. Hughes and C. A. Tindell, Negro members, and W. M. Blanchard, of Indiana, who had spent twenty years of his life in North Carolina, and N. R. Merrill, of the Florida Conference. Others who spoke before the Conference ordered the previous question were R. S. Moore, of New England; Governor J. D. Black, of Kentucky; E. D. Kohlstedt, of Dakota, and L. B. Bowers, of Northeast Kansas.

When the vote was counted, only thirteen were registered against the proposition, and ten of these were from Oklahoma. These ten voted in the negative because so instructed by their Annual Conference, and not on account of their personal desire in the matter. Since the practically unanimous adoption on Wednesday of the plan of unification, the members of the Conference have repeatedly made reference to the matter and urged that no legislation be enacted which would in any way hinder the work of unification. This was especially true when the question, whether women would be allowed membership in the Annual Conferences as itinerant preachers was under discussion.

On Friday, May 9, the Secretary read the following telegrams:

The Tulsa District Conference of the Southern Church wires: "Rejoice over unification result."

From Tennessee, the Cleveland District Conference, Holston Annual Conference, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, wires: "Felicitate your great body on the splendid action for unification of American Methodism."

A telegram signed by Hon. Josephus Daniels, addressed to Bishop McDowell and the Conference: "Action of your Conference heartening and encouraging. I have this day sent the following telegram to the meeting of Bishops in Nashville: 'I hope you will not feel that I am intruding to express the earnest hope that our branch of Methodism will heartily and cordially and promptly join the Northern brethren in a united Methodism. I have been privileged to visit all parts of the country, and my judgment is that the overwhelming majority of lay delegates and the larger part of the ministers feel that the time has come for unification!'"

The reading of these several messages called out repeated manifestations of rejoicing on the part of the Conference.

A Prolonged Debate.

The longest debate of the entire Conference up to May 10, was upon the question of permitting women to become itinerant preachers. The speeches for the proposition were in a ratio of about 5 to 1, and the vote, when taken, stood about 25 to 1 against it.

Heart and Soul Against Liquor.

The Conference is living up to the best traditions of world-wide Methodism in its opposition to alcoholic liquors. It is out and out on every occasion for the Eighteenth Amendment, opposed to any modification of the Volstead Act and with enthusiasm applauded the following telegram received May 9, from Wayne B. Wheeler, who was in Washington:

"Your delegates rendered conspicuous aid in hearings before the Judiciary Committee at Washington. The fifty-nine beer bills will die. The Constitution will live, and we will finish the fight with your continued help."

THE FEW.

The easy roads are crowded;
And the level roads are jammed;
The pleasant little rivers
With the drifting folks are crammed.
But off yonder where it's rocky,
Where you get a better view,
You will find the ranks are thinning
And the travelers are few.

Where the going's smooth and pleasant
You will always find the throng,
For the many, more's the pity,
Seem to like to drift along.
But the steeps that call for courage
And the task that's hard to do
In the end result in glory
For the never-wavering few.

SHREVEPORT DISTRICT NOTES.

Dr. Robert E. Goodrich is making a series of talks on Methodist doctrine at the mid-week prayer meetings of First Church, using "Methodist Armour," as text. The studies are very popular. First Church has had 371 accessions to date. The building, which was thought at one time to be ample for future needs, must soon be enlarged, both in auditorium space and in Sunday school facilities.

Noel Memorial Church also grows steadily, 150 members having been received the present year. The church has fine, active Epworth Leagues. A very artistic monthly bulletin is issued—"The Noelian."

* * *

Mangum Memorial Church has had 85 additions. The General Church Extension Board has granted aid to this church, which makes it possible for the church to enter upon a new era of development.

* * *

Texas Avenue Church has had 85 additions. The pastor hopes soon to secure a satisfactory location for a new building.

* * *

The construction of the new church in Plain Dealing has been temporarily halted, but has progressed sufficiently to be occupied by the congregation, and the work of building will soon be resumed.

The new church at Benton is now ready for dedication.

The beautiful new parsonage at Belcher has been completed and furnished, and the pastor, Brother Hicks, is comfortably settled. Both Belcher and Gilliam have sent in the entire annual quota for Superannuate Endowment.

* * *

Reports at Mooringsport quarterly conference showed annual Superannuate quota subscribed, building indebtedness reduced, and commendable progress on the regular budget.

The Sunday school annex in Cedar Grove is being rapidly pushed to completion. The parsonage has also been recently renovated by the Missionary Society.

The Longstreet Sunday school, E. L. Moncrief, superintendent, is making commendable progress in developing the Standard "C" program of work.

The Ida church has been painted on the interior, and the addition of Sunday school rooms is being planned. The Superannuate quota for the present year was subscribed at quarterly conference.

* * *

A special quarterly conference, with dinner on the ground, was held at William's Chapel, Pleasant Hill charge, on May 1. Talks were made by the presiding elder, preacher in charge, associate district lay leader, and Rev. W. F. Henderson, Sr.

* * *

Good reports were made at the quarterly conference of Pelican charge. The Superannuate quota for Benson Church was subscribed.

* * *

Rev. Henry T. Young will assist Rev. R. A. Bozeman in a revival service at Oil City, beginning the second Sunday in June.

* * *

Rev. J. R. Roy will begin a revival meeting at Bossier City in June. He will do his own preaching, and Rev. Otis Spinks will lead the singing.

The Mansfield Sunday school has been thoroughly organized according to Program of Work of "B" Standard. Some of the departments will meet in college class rooms. The church has raised $1,742 the present year for the Missionary Centenary, besides liberal subscriptions to Mansfield College, Superannuate fund, and all current obligations in full to date. The pastor, Rev. J. B. Peters, is in high favor with the community.

* * *

Reports at Vivian conference showed annual Superannuate quota subscribed, large congregations, and general interest. Rev. Dan Kelly has been engaged for a revival meeting there.

Grand Cane, Stonewall and Keithville Missionary Societies co-operated in royal entertainment of the district conference of the Woman's Missionary Society on Friday, May 9. More than one hundred women were present, and also a number of preachers.

* * *

The Four Square Men's Bible Class of the First Church, Shreveport, taught by Dr. R. E. Smith, in the City Hall, is in all probability the largest of any denomination in the State by a good margin.

The Police Jury of Natchitoches Parish have appropriated $1,000 toward the rebuilding of old Beulah Church, which was burned as the result of its use on primary election day.

* * *

Greenwood and Bethany churches will entertain the district Sunday school meeting on May 20 at Greenwood.

R. H. WYNN, P. E.

VICKSBURG DISTRICT NOTES.

Salaries in this district have been increased to the amount of about two thousand dollars, despite the several bad crop years.

It is the universal hope and belief that this will be a good crop year. That is needed in this section. Prospects are now promising. No danger of an overflow in the delta now. The farmers rejoice.

* * *

Rev. H. G. Hawkins, of Woodville, and his people are looking forward with pleasure to their centenary celebration, June 27-29. Bishop Ainsworth will be with them, and that guarantees a great time. What history has been written during these one hundred years! Yet Methodism is still in her youth.

* * *

Rev. J. L. Smith, the pastor at Fayette, had the misfortune to sprain his ankle some time ago, and was confined to his home for some time. And he did not catch the fish, either. His two extra legs furnished him comfort and support.

* * *

A church building is nearing completion at Valley Park, and when finished will be used by several denominations; but the Methodists will assume their share of the responsibility of giving the gospel to the people. There are but few of any one church, but when all come together there will be a good congregation. This is a prosperous farming and milling section.

* * *

The vacancy at Mayersville, left unsupplied at Conference, was filled with the appointment of Rev. S. W. Bryant, of Greenwood, as pastor. Both preacher and people are happy and well pleased, and the work moves along with fine prospects.

* * *

This has been a season of parsonage repairing, remodeling, and furnishing. Special mention must be made of Rolling Fork and Cary, Louise and Holly Bluff, Fayette, Centerville and Stephenson, Gloster and Liberty. Thousands of dollars have been spent on them. Pastors and people are to be congratulated. Of course, the ladies of the churches had much to do with it. A number of other parsonages have had additional furnishings put in. Let the good work go on.

* * *

The Superannuate Endowment Fund went over the top in the Vicksburg Ditsrict with a margin of nearly two thousand dollars. Each charge readily assumed its quota, and a number added some. The preachers and their churches are interested, and are busy looking after its collection. To Jefferson Street, Natchez, C. C. Evans, pastor, comes the honor of being the first to remit the present year's amount in full, $700. Crawford Street, Vicksburg, Robert Selby, pastor, is following closely behind with the prospect of paying considerably more than the amount due the first year; $400 has already gone forward, and more will be forthcoming. Some of the churches are undertaking to pay quarterly.

The revival season has opened up auspiciously. Gibson Memorial, Vicksburg, T. B. Cottrell, pastor, started off with a great meeting under the direction of Evangelist E. B. Moll, and his singer, Brother Mangum. About sixty members were received.

Evangelist D. E. Kelly has recently closed a fine meeting at Delta City, on the Anguilla charge, C. A. Schultz, pastor. More than fifty made application for membership the first opportunity given. Others followed.

A good meeting was recently held at Cary, T. J. O'Neil, pastor, and twenty-seven were added to the church called Methodist, and some to other churches. Brothers Cottrell, Schultz, and O'Neil are rejoicing over the outpouring of such blessings upon them and their people.

THE LOUISIANA COUNCIL OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

By Van Carter.

At the recent State Convention of the Louisiana Sunday School Association, held in Lake Charles, 520 persons were registered and three days were given to the discussion of Religious Education. Among the many fine presentations, none was more far-reaching than the recognition of the principle that in addition to the denominational responsibility to its own constituency there is a further responsibility resting on all Christian organizations, which is best discharged through an official interdenominational agency, preparing and promoting a co-operative program.

To help meet this responsibility, the Louisiana Sunday School Association officially, by agreement with the denominations desiring to co-operate, becomes the Louisiana Council of Religious Education, and as reorganized is the accredited agency of the co-operating denominational bodies for the preparation and promotion of the co-operative program, and is under the joint direction of the denominations and the Council.

Thus, we now have in our midst an official interdenominatonal agency authorized to prepare and promote an interdenominational Program of Religious Education, which will determine those things which we can build best together. Certainly, in Louisiana where 1,223,755 persons out of a total population of 1,856,954 are nominally Protestant, there is much the evangelical churches can build together for the Kingdom of God.

The purpose of the Council is: First, to prepare and promote a co-operative interdenominational Program of Religious Education; second, to assist, when requested, the denominations in their denominational programs; third, to serve the commonwealth of Louisiana in developing a Christian citizenship.

The program of the Council provides for: (1) Denominational and Council Reciprocity; (2) Co-operation with Extra-church Agencies; (3) State, Parish and District Conventions; (4) Conferences for Employed Workers, College Students, Parish Officers, Parish Young People, Camp Lassa Young People, and State-wide Efficiency; (5) Institutes for Division Leaders, High School Four Square Life, and Young People's Council; (6) Standard and Community Training Schools, Vacation Church Schools and Week-Day Schools of Religion; (7) Campaigns for "Go to Church Sunday," "Sunday School Council Day," "Children's Week," "Father and Son Week," "Mother and Daughter Week," and "Young People's Christian Service; (8) Extension avenues through Fair Exhibits, State Press Publicity, State Circulating Library, Reading Course, Depository for Denominational Literature.

Of course, some time will be necessary before adjustments to the new order will be entirely blended, but that a great forward step has been inaugurated, those who visualize the Kingdom's coming are agreed. Let us enter into the new day with a willing heart and a determined spirit, for our God "is able to do exceeding abundantly above all that we ask or think, according to the power that worketh in us."

SAFETY SIGNALS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

Why the Bible? The Bible is the leading book in the world to-day. More Bibles are printed, read, studied, taught, than any other book or ten books known to man. It is found in more homes, in more places on land or sea, in the courts of justice, in cities vast, or in forest depths where the pioneer builds his house of logs; in the traveler's scrip, in the hurrying mail, in the students' quiet retreat, in the haversack of the soldier on the field, the one universal book. In one sense, more is known of the Bible, and in another sense less is known than of any other book. It reaches further, contains more, for it bridges the chasm between two worlds and projects its marvelous teachings beyond the mists of future years into the mystic land where only faith can lead, and deathless hope assure. It is the Book of all books—and infinitely more. It is a library in itself, a compendium of history, genealogy, biography, profound philosophy, pithy proverbs, solemn warnings and wise counsels, parables of surpassing beauty, poetry of masterful range of thought and figure, gems of rhetoric that shine like midnight stars over the vast field of life and its mystery. Men and women have died by hundreds to uphold its teachings, and the martyr fires that gleam along the ages are but beacon lights by which succeeding generations may read its holy truths, and vindicate their power to a doubting world.

Back of our civilization, back of our laws and the ethical principles by which their sanctions and penalties are approved and executed, stands the Bible. Its promises greet us on every hand, its monitions warn men of the danger of sin, and the sure reward of right thinking, right being, right living. This Book flings its light over all ages, all professions and callings of the human race. It is a guide to the statesman, a last court of appeal to the lawyer, a comfort and cheer to the patient of the physician, the source of the preacher's inspiration and message, a solace to the suffering, a light to doubting ones, and a sunburst of glory to the trusting saint.

The teachings of this wonderful Book have permeated all literature of modern times that is worth the naming. The writings of such masters as Shakespeare, Tennyson, Browning, Longfellow and hosts of others who graced the ages of Elizabeth and Victoria with their genius, are shot through with precepts taken from this Book. Around it have raged the storms of ages; above its hoary head, as it stood like some impregnable rock, these tempests of human thought, human opposition, human hate and human love have spent their force and fury; and yet it stands today secure upon its foundation, while above it the sun of God's benediction shines serene and clear.

APPEAL FOR WORLD COURT

To Hon. Claude A. Swanson, Foreign Relations Committee, United States Senate, Washington, D. C.

Social Service Commission of Methodist Episcopal Church, South, representing third largest Protestant denomination of the United States, with two and one-half million members and many million more adherents, expresses its exceedingly regretful amazement that messages of Presidents Harding and Coolidge urging prompt active participation in World Court should apparantly have been relegated to innocuous desuetude of a Senate Committee pigeonhole. Our Commission would most respectfully emphasize the rightfully world-wide call and confident expectation that the United States as a great Christian nation lead the world in genuine practical endeavor to substitute for war with destruction, death and misery, brotherly bloodless settlement of international disputes. The unescapable responsibility for the next step rests upon your Committee. We respectfully urge prompt affirmative action.

OVER 7,000,000 VOLUMES OF SCRIPTURE CIRCULATED IN 1923.

For the second time in the history of the American Bible Society, the issues have exceeded seven million copies in one year. The total, as reported by the Board of Managers at the 108th Annual Meeting on May 8, is 7,101,289 volumes, an increase of 2,538,222 over the 4,536,067 sent out the preceding year.

From the Bible House at Astor Place, New York, 3,856,100 volumes were issued, 934,361 having been sent out for use in foreign lands, 2,901,937 being issued for use in the United States, and 18,331 for use in the island possessions of the United States. The total issue in foreign lands was 3,245,090 volumes.

The nine established Home Agencies of the Society, each and all, report a decided increase in circulation. The Agency Secretary in his area directs the work under the supervision and direction of the Home Office in the Bible House. Each Secretary reports an ever-increasing demand for the Scriptures, always far in excess of his ability to supply with the appropriation at hand.

The five State Bible Societies in active co-operation with the American Bible Society—Massachusetts, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Maryland—distributed 300,000 volumes. Bibles and portions in 42 languages were required to make the distribution in Massachusetts. A band of student workers canvassed 24 towns and cities in Maine and supplied over 20,000 homes with copies of the Scriptures.

Several auxiliary societies form a part of the Home Agencies—the Pennsylvania Bible Society, the Virginia Bible Society, the Cincinnati Young Men's Bible Society, the Chicago Bible Society, and the California Bible Society; 123 smaller auxiliary Societies have been busy in their respective communities, seeking out those who were not supplied with the Bible and providing them when desired.

In Mexico, they are having the unusual experience of "waiting list" (ten to twenty all the time) of colporteurs ready to serve the Society when sufficient funds are provided to supply the Bible for distribution.

Mexico Christians in twenty-five States and the Federal District sent over 1000 Pesos ($1000.) as a Bible Sunday gift for the losses in the earthquake in Japan.

The President of Guatemala, in accepting a Bible presented by the Caribbean Agency Secretary, said: "I highly appreciate the gift you bring me and the work your evangelical missions and churches are doing in our country. You are a powerful element in moralizing and elevating our people."

The completion of the Quecha-Spanish diglot, which arrived on the field during the year, furnishes the Andean Indians for the first time with the New Testament in any language other than Spanish. What this means will be realized when it is recalled that Quecha is the language spoken by all Indians except the Aymaras (the only race allowed by the Incas to retain their own language) in the central Andean region from Quito in Ecuador to Bolivia and the borders of Argentine and Chile.

The outstanding event of the year in the Near East has been the signing of the treaty of peace by Turkey and the Allied Powers at Lausanne in Switzerland. This has given Turkey a sense of freedom she has not possessed for many years. The result for Bible work in the new Turkish Republic is yet in the balance.

Among the refugees in Greece a considerable work has been done, especially through the Near East Relief Orphanages, to which approximately 17,000 New Testaments and Scripture portions were given for distribution among the orphans and other people.

The whole world has sympathized with the sufferings of Japan. The first day of September, 1923, will never be forgotten. Not only were the offices of the Society in Tokyo totally destroyed, but a far more serious and overwhelming disaster was the entire destruction, and in a moment, of the plant of the Fukuin Printing Company at Yokohama and the death of Mr. Muraoka, the manager and son of the founder, and a very large number of his employees. In this plant were kept the plates of the versions of the Scriptures in use in Japan, China, Siam and the Philippines. The loss was not only financial, but involved a cessation of work, as there were no resources for reproducing immediately the large editions needed.

Strangely enough, in the midst of all this confusion, in spite of these difficulties, the circulation in Japan for the year amounted to 343,588 volumes, an increase of 100,000 over 1922.

In the Philippines, the Japan earthquake had perhaps its most terrific effect, as all the plates of all the Scriptures used in the islands were totally destroyed.

As a result of this disaster, plans have been completed for the printing of Bibles for the Philippines in Manilla, and work has begun on the first order, which is for 21,000 Bibles in seven Filipino dialects.

Siam was more fortunate, as just before the earthquake a very large shipment of Scriptures had left Yokohama for that country. The problems in Siam, therefore, have been those of distribution, and they call for the highest heroism and patience.

The China Agency suffered with all the Far East in the Yokohama earthquake, but not as seriously as its neighbors. Fortunately many of the plates destroyed were of Scriptures no longer in current use, and for most of them duplicate shells were held in Shanghai.

Writing of the unprecedented increase in Bible circulation in China, more than a million copies in excess of last year, the Secretary says: "China, in the midst of anarchy and distress, yet pursues an orderly course for her hundreds of millions of people, and in this sadly disordered year has turned with interest and enthusiasm to the Gospel message."

The full report of the work of the Society is one continued message of appreciation and inspiration. As one Secretary writes: "The increased demand for the whole Bible is a fact that ought to encourage the various foreign mission boards, and is a fairly good thermometer for registering the growth of the native churches and missionary work as a whole."—Issued by the American Bible Society, Bible House, Astor Place, New York City, May 8, 1924.

MY WISH FOR MY FRIEND.

By Rev. M. B. Sharbrough.

I do not wish, my friend, for thee,
That thou from care or pain be free;
For this no mortal here can be,
Who lives and loves and thinks.
But this I wish for thee and me,
That we may live so trustingly,
That we may not unwilling be
To drink the cup He drinks.

There is no cup of grief or pain,
Or sacrifice of worldly gain
From which He did his lips refrain
That comes to you or me.
There is no path of earthly woe,
Or darkened way that we can know,
In which he would refuse to go
With us in sympathy.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

ENDOWMENT DOLLARS NOT REMITTED TO THE BOARD OF FINANCE HAVE NO LIFT.

You would not permit a fresh cut rose to wilt in your hands for lack of energy to put its stem in a vase of water, would you? Then how can you allow endowment dollars which you have collected to become slacker dollars by your failure to send them to the Board of Finance? Endowment money has but one mission in the world—to earn income for a definite purpose. If such money is not invested it is dead money and useless to the cause for which it was raised so long as it remains in the uninvested state.

The eagles perched on Superannuate Endowment dollars that have not been remitted to the Board of Finance are screaming at you for your failure to give them their chance to lift the "Forgotten Man" out of his deprivations. Send the cash already collected to the Board of Finance, St. Louis, Mo., and please do it right now, this very minute, and the next minute after these dollars reach the Board, they will be put to work to do the thing for which they were paid.

ANVIL FLASHES FROM THE ANNUAL MEETING WORKSHOP.

We met in St. Louis April 28, with the following members present:

Bishop W. F. McMurry, Senator X. P. Wilfley, Luther E. Todd, Rev. C. W. Tadlock, Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, Bishop S. R. Hay, Rev. W. W. Armstrong, Rev. M. L. Burton, Rev. J. W. Johnson, Rev. H. E. Draper, Rev. T. S. Hamilton, Rev. J. A. Smith, Rev. S. P. Cresap, Mr. J. Taylor Stratton, Mr. J. T. Catlin, Mr. W. Stackhouse, Governor G. W. Donaghey, Mr. J. Harry Bryan.

The morning session was occupied almost entirely by the reading of the Secretary's report. The Board was greatly pleased with the progress made during the fiscal year, and very happy and enthusiastic in plans laid for the ensuing year.

The Secretary reported that from March 16, 1924, to April 28, 1924, $225,000 had been received from the charges in cash, the same being payments on their quotas in the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment.

A number of bequests were reported, among them one being for $50,000 and another for $100,000. It was also stated that many persons were making substantial contributions to Superannuate Endowment on the annuity plan.

It was revealed that the Annual Conferences own 146 superannuate homes valued at $419,950; that the Annual Conferences have Superannuate Endowment (not counting additions from the Special Effort) in the amount of $885,160.35; and that the value of superannuate homes, plus the Endowment in other form, makes the total Conference Superannuate Endowment $1,305,110.35.

On its General Conference annual assessment of $200,000 for the year 1922-23 the Board collected $136,301, the highest amount being paid by the Western North Carolina Conference with a check for $8,206. The Virginia Conference was second with the amount being paid $7,792.

It was reported that the total assessed for the support of the active ministry year 1922-23 was $10,656,075. Under the plan of the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment the amount stated is the minimum asking of the General Conference for the whole church to pay in five years for this worthy purpose.

The Secretary's report revealed that the Board had $64,843.01 available for appropriation in the 1924 distribution to the Conference claimants. This is nearly $23,000 in excess of the amount distributed to the claimants a year ago. The Executive Committee was instructed to distribute to the claimants practically all of the amount available on July 1, 1924.

The amount paid on annuities for the year 1923-24 was $9,777.79, and for the expenses of the Board (outside of the work of the Special Effort), $20,042.89. The report on the condition of investments, both as to principal and interest, was practically perfect. The members of the Board were highly elated on account of this showing, and all were convinced that no first-class financial institution in the country could do better.

Rev. J. C. Wooten, of the North Carolina Conference, was elected to membership on the Board in place of Rev. T. N. Ivey, deceased. It will be recalled that Dr. Ivey was a member of this Conference.

The report concerning the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment was entirely satisfactory to the Board. It was shown that the Pink Leaf Reports concerning quotas assumed by the charges, reveal that the whole church has already officially undertaken to raise approximately $10,000,000, with the Baltimore Conference yet to be heard from.

Many suggestions were made concerning the best ways and means of carrying forward this great work, all of which was referred to the Directing Committee with power to act.

The Board was convinced that the church is at last faced with a real opportunity to do something worth while for her superannuated preachers and the widows of her deceased preachers. The Directing Committee was urged to carry on with confidence and with great energy, having the assurance that every member of the Board would do his utmost to assist in the program wherever there should be an opportunity to apply himself.

The Board instructed the Secretary to give to the church press an extract from a report which it adopted, as follows:

"REPORT OF COMMITTEE ON REPORTS OF OFFICERS AND COMMITTEES.

"We, your committee on the Secretary's report, the minutes of the Executive Committee, the Treasurer's report, beg leave to report as follows:

"We have had before us the minutes of the Executive Committee, the Secretary's, Treasurer's, and Auditor's reports, and desire to commend the Executive Committee for the diligence and painstaking care with which they have transacted the business coming before them from time to time, and especially the care with which they have invested the funds.

"We wish to commend Dr. Todd, the Secretary, and his office force for their painstaking effort to keep the affairs of the office in a systematic and thoroughly business-like form.

"We desire to express our appreciation for Mr. Fristoe's labors as Treasurer, and we feel that the church at large is under special obligation to this committee and these officers for the splendid showing that is made in the annual report."

The Home Circle

DON'T PROCRASTINATE.

A naughty little weed one day
Poked up its tiny head.
"To-morrow I will pull you up,
Old Mr. Weed," I said.
But I put off the doing till,
When next I passed that way,
The hateful thing had spread abroad,
And laughed at my dismay.

A naughty little thought one day
Popped right into my mind.
"Oho," I cried, "I'll pull you out
To-morrow you will find!"
But once again I put it off,
Till, like the little weed,
The ugly thing sprang up apace
And grew into a deed!

So, boys and girls, heed what I say
And learn it with your sums:
Don't put off till to-morrow, for
To-morrow never comes.
To-day pull up the little weeds,
The naughty thoughts subdue
Or they may take the reins themselves,
And some day master you!

BUSY BETTY.

There was once a little girl named "Betty." One morning her mother said to her: "Betty, I am going to the grocery, and I'll be gone about an hour. Will you wash the dishes, sweep up the crumbs from the dining-room, and make the beds?"

Betty said: "Y-e-s, mother."

Then her mother went away and left her, and Betty went into the kitchen, where she found the sink full of dishes. "O, dear," she said, "I don't like to wash dishes!"

On a small shelf just above the sink stood a little clock, and it had been ticking: "Tick-tock tick-tock, tick-tock, tick-tock!" All of a sudden, however, it began to say: "Lazy Betty, lazy Betty, lazy Betty, lazy Betty!"

Betty didn't like to hear the clock say that; so she ran into the dining-room, and there were all the crumbs to sweep up from the floor. "O, dear," she said, "I don't like to sweep up crumbs, and I'm not going to sweep up crumbs."

Out in the hall stood a great big grandfather's clock, and it had been ticking: "Tick-tock, tick-tock, tick-tock, tick-tock!" All of a sudden it began to say: "Lazy Betty, lazy Betty, lazy Betty, lazy Betty!"

Betty didn't like to hear the big grandfather's clock say that; so she ran upstairs, and there were all the beds to be made. "O, dear," she said, "I don't like to make beds, and I'm not going to make beds!"

Up on top of mother's dresser stood a little alarm clock, and it had been ticking: "Tick-tock, tick-tock, tick-tock, tick-tock!" All of a sudden it began to say: "Lazy Betty, lazy Betty, lazy Betty, lazy Betty!"

This was too much for Betty; so downstairs she ran, and into the kitchen and washed and dried the dishes so carefully that the little kitchen clock on the shelf above the sink began to sing: "Busy Betty, busy Betty, busy Betty, busy Betty!"

Then she ran into the dining-room and swept up all the crumbs from the floor, and the great big grandfather's clock in the hall began to sing: "Busy Betty, busy Betty, busy Betty, busy Betty!"

Betty laughed to herself and threw a kiss to the old grandfather's clock as she ran up the stairs. She made all the beds and smoothed out every wrinkle until the beds looked as if they had been ironed, and the little alarm clock on mother's dresser fairly danced as it sang: "Busy Betty, busy Betty, busy Betty, busy Betty!"

Betty laughed right out loud and ran downstairs just in time to open the door for mother when she came back from the grocery store. The first words mother said were: "Betty, did you wash the dishes, and did you sweep up the crumbs, and did you make the beds?"

And Betty said: "Yes, mother." Then her mother gave her a big hug and a kiss, and I suppose that was the best thing she could give her.—The Woman's Forum.

THE TONGUES OF ANIMALS.

If you have thought, as most people do, that tongues are always small as compared with other anatomical parts, it will surprise you when I say that the chameleon (a lizard found principally in Africa) has a tongue that, when extended, is from one to three inches longer that its body! And it is matter for further surprise that the action of this tongue in securing the chameleon's food is so swift that only the camera's eye can follow it. It is because of this that the ancients believed that chameleons lived without food. With such lightning-like methods, a dinner could be devoured right before the eyes of an observer, while all the time the lizards appeared to be merely "resting" on a log.

The chameleon's tongue literally shoots at its targets—grasshoppers, spiders, worms and bugs. And such accuracy! Very, very seldom indeed is there a miss, and the second the tip of the tongue, prepared with a sticky substance like mucilage, touches the bug, it flies just as an elastic does when drawn taut and then released. Thus the bug is snapped into the lizard's mouth, without even having seen the attack.

The butterfly has a peculiar tongue; it has well been likened to a watch-spring. Like the chameleon's, the butterfly's tongue is of surprising relative length. It is kept coiled in a flat spiral close to the head, and when the butterfly wishes to get down into the depths of a tube-like flower to sip the nectar, it unfurls this convenient spiral and inserts it deep into the treasure vaults of sweetness.

The tongues of wasps and bees are shaped like those of humans, but they are hairy. Professor Will, a German scientist, proved that these insects taste with the tongue. He fed them sugar for a while, then substituted alum. At the first contact, they turned from the alum, displaying disgust and trying to clean their tongues by rubbing them with their forefeet.

The snake's tongue is its best organ of hearing. It serves all the ordinary purposes of a tongue, and it is of great value as a feeler when the reptile is wriggling through grass or underbrush; but its most remarkable virtue is that it takes the place of ears—which in the snake are but very imperfect and inefficient organs. The tongue is double-ended, and the nerves at the extremities are so wonderfully sensitive to sound that it is well nigh impossible to approach and surprise a snake.

The lion has a tongue that is just as dangerous as it is interesting—nearly as terrible a weapon as the claws. This tongue is armed with little spikes—reminding us of the armor used by knights of the Middle Ages. From one end to the other these spines, a quarter of an inch long near the tongue's tip, stand up as stiff and strong as metal needles.—L. E. Eubanks, in Our Dumb Animals.

HOW TO TAKE A VACATION TRIP AT HOME.

Go over next door. Sit there wishing you were at home. Remarkably like being on vacation.

Rub poison ivy on hands and think you have been to the country.

Hire some reliable robber to chase you home every night. Results same as if you visited Chicago.

Examine ruts in roads around your home through magnifying glass. Look exactly like Grand Canyon.

Poke eyes full of cinders and sleep on pantry shelf. Wonderful substitute for an upper berth.

Fill your grip with lead and run for the car every morning. Same thing as touring Europe.

Fill bath tub with water and broken glass. Ah, just like the old swimming hole!

Let faucet run in kitchen sink. Sounds as if you were summering at Niagara.—Tom Sims, in Life.

Each high achievement is a sign and token of the whole nature's possibility. What a piece of the man was for that shining moment. It is the duty of the whole man to be always.—Phillips Brooks.

The hope of the world lies not in the laws of nations, but in the cradles of nations; not in the parliaments, but in the high schools.—Ida Clyde Clarke.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

A SYMPOSIUM ON UNIFICATION.

eial meeting to consider the plan of union. Evasions and technicalities of the law should not be used in order to defeat what I believe to be the will and wish of a large majority of the members of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South."

Mr. A. M. Mayo, Lake Charles, La., Lay Delegate to the General Conference.

"My attitude on Methodist unification is favorable. The result of the fifty godly men is worthy of very earnest consideration. The plan seems to contain the essential elements, and now, if we will have utter confidence and trust with faith in God and in the future, I believe great things will come to pass.

"Even the fifty men who were in counsel, prayer and meditation for days at a time, do not claim that it is final or perfect.

"This plan is a venture of faith worthy the sons and daughters of Wesley—faith in ourselves, faith in the uniting churches and in the united church, and, above all, faith in God.

"The members and ministers of our churches are Christian men and women.

"I believe it is worth while."

Mr. Wm. Shields Holmes, Baton Rouge, La., Delegate to the General Conference.

"I am in favor of unification for many reasons, but can barely touch the subject in such a limited space.

"The present divided state of the Methodist Church is useless and serves no good purpose. Slavery, the cause of the division in 1844, has long since ended, and, the cause having been removed, a cure ought to follow.

"Most arguments against unification turn upon the injustices of the past, and upon the fact or the fear of their continuance. If the two churches should become one, these injustices would disappear. Neither church is unjust to itself now, and if we become one, injustice would necessarily cease."

SPECIAL SESSION OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

With reference to the calling of a special session of the General Conference to consider the matter of unification, it would seem that the College of Bishops has no option. The action of the General Conference at Hot Springs was very definite, as follows:

"When a plan for unification is endorsed by a two-thirds vote of each Commission and approved by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, then our College of Bishops is empowered and instructed to call the special session of our General Conference." (Journal of the Nineteenth General Conference, p. 222.)

The conditions specified have been met—the plan now before the church was adopted by more than the two-thirds vote of each Commission, and by an overwhelming majority the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, now in session. The conditions having been met, the instructions of our General Conference become mandatory.

The time of the special session is not specified, but it would seem, on the face of the report, that it was the evident intention of the General Conference to have the special session soon after the conditions laid down were complied with. An undue delay in calling it would, we believe, be out of keeping with the evident purpose of the General Conference itself.

The date fixed, however, should allow ample time for the study of the plan by all our people and for the expression of their opinion concerning it through the church press. Pending action upon it by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, propriety suggested that general discussion in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, be held somewhat in abeyance; now that the matter is fully before us, there should be opportunity for full discussion. It is our opinion that a date in August would meet all the requirements of the situation.

We do not attach much weight to the suggestion that the special session should not be called until after the next round of Annual Conferences in order that delegates to the special session may be elected on the issue of unification. We take it that the views of most of those who were elected delegates to the Hot Springs General Conference were known, and that those views were taken at least somewhat into consideration in the elections. Be that as it may, the fact that the plan, if adopted by the special session of the General Conference, will have to be submitted to the Annual Conferences for their vote, destroys any fear that the Annual Conferences themselves will not have an opportunity to register their will. There is no possible way to stampede the church into an acceptance of the plan, since the Annual Conferences, in any event, will have ample time within which to express their matured convictions.

BISHOP CHARLES B. GALLOWAY.

Bishop Charles B. Galloway passed away on May 12, 1909. On the Sunday nearest the fifteenth anniversary of that sad event, May 11, the Galloway Memorial Methodist Church, of Jackson, Miss., held appropriate memorial services. Of the address delivered by Rev. E. K. Means on that occasion, the Jackson Daily News says editorially:

"It has been the privilege of the editor of the Daily News to hear many of America's greatest orators who have been on the stage of human action during the past thirty years, but he does not expect to live long enough to hear many greater orations than that delivered at the Galloway Memorial Methodist Church Sunday morning. The occasion was the observance of the fifteenth anniversary of the death of Bishop Charles B. Galloway, Mississippi's best-beloved divine, orator, scholar, statesman, publicist, philanthropist, and friend of humanity. It was a great subject, and Dr. Means measured fully up to the occasion. His address was a gem of eloquence, a masterpiece of scholarly thought, wonderfully conceived, and delivered in a manner that held the splendid audience entranced from the opening sentence to the closing prayer."

The editor of the Advocate can never forget the feeling of sadness and loneliness that came over him when the news flashed over the wires that Bishop Galloway was dead—and that feeling is stirred again whenever he hears that name pronounced. It was his rare privilege as a college student to be often in the home of Bishop Galloway and, so far as a mere youth could hope to be, intimately acquainted with the great leader and his devoted family. In his opinion, then—and his opinion has not changed with the passing years—Bishop Galloway was the princeliest man upon whom his eyes had ever rested. He was princely in bearing, princely in voice, and princely in all the attributes that go to make a real man. He was as simple and unassuming as a child; as friendly and approachable as the great Christian he was should be; as courteous as the most gallant knight "when knighthood was in flower;" as gentle as an angel of mercy; as pure as a Bruce; as courageous as any hero that ever led a desperate charge; as devoted to his country and his church as any patriot that ever laid his life upon his country's altar or died a martyr's death. When shall we see his like again?

Having his own heart stirred by the recollection of the virtues of that great and good man, and knowing that others are paying loving tribute to his memory, the editor of the Advocate could not refrain from laying a simple flower upon Bishop Galloway's grave. He loved "Bonnie Prince Charlie" in life, and he reveres his memory now, though fifteen years have passed since he entered upon his reward. Time does not erase the marks made upon a human heart by a great personality.

DEATH OF REV. R. I. COLLINS.

The following sad news comes from Rev. R A. Tucker, presiding elder of the Grenada District, North Mississippi Conference, as the Advocate goes to press:

"Dear Dr. Carley: Rev. R. I. Collins, pastor of the Vaiden and West charge, North Mississippi Conference, passed away, after a few hours' illness, at 10 o'clock p. m., May 16, at Valden. Funeral services will be held at the Methodist church, Abbeville, Miss., on Sunday afternoon, after which burial will take place in the cemetery at Abbeville. Brother Collins was in the midst of a very successful pastorate at Vaiden and West, and the people there are heartbroken. A faithful, good man, a useful, consecrated pastor has gone to his reward. His devoted wife and aged father and mother, and other relatives and a host of friends mourn the passing of this faithful man."

The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones and friends. We trust a suitable memoir will be furnished for publication in due time.

STANDARD CONFERENCE TRAINING SCHOOL, NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

The Standard Conference Training School of the North Mississippi Conference will be held at Grenada College, Grenada, Miss., June 11-18. Held at such a suitable place and at such a delightful time of the year, with a course of study that ought to appeal to all those interested in Sunday school work, this gathering ought to attract an attendance that would tax the capacity of the college dormitories. It has been demonstrated beyond question that the Sunday schools that today measure up to their opportunities and responsibilities are those that equip themselves with trained teachers and other workers. We shall never, as a church, do what we ought to do in the religious development of our young people until we prepare ourselves to lead them intelligently and efficiently. These schools furnish the means of acquiring such knowledge and skill as are needed, and they are to be commended to both pastors and people. We hope to hear that the Grenada school has had the largest attendance in its history.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE ASSEMBLY AND CONFERENCE.

The third annual Assembly and the twenty-second annual conference of the Mississippi Conference Epworth League will convene at Whitworth College, Brookhaven, Miss., on June 9, and continue through June 15. The Conference League President, Mr. W. D. Hawkins, assisted by a splendid corps of Conference and district officers, has prepared a program, which lack of space prevents our giving, that fills the days of the gathering with features that cannot fail to be of great benefit to all those who attend. From 6:30 o'clock in the morning, when the rising bell sounds, till 10 o'clock at night, when taps will be heard, every hour will be occupied by activities that will both inspire and entertain those in attendance. It would be a fine thing if every pastor in the Conference, with a large delegation of his young people, could attend this gathering. Out-of-Conference visitors have been announced as follows: Dr. Clovis Chappell, Memphis, Tenn.; Mr. E. O. Harbin, Nashville, Tenn.; Dr. F. M. Stites, Nashville, Tenn.; Miss Mary Sue Tynes, Madisonville, Tenn. The Millsaps College Quartet will also be in attendance.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Ninety members have been received into the First Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss., since Conference. Rev. J. R. Jones is the pastor.

The Four Square Class of the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., in its official organ, the "Go-Getter," is agitating the matter of a strict observance of the Sunday laws. Success to them!

The second quarterly bulletin of the Corinth District, North Mississippi Conference, is full of interesting items concerning the work in that district. Rev. J. B. Randolph is the energetic presiding elder.

The many friends of Mrs. George S. Sexton, the wife of Dr. George S. Sexton, President of Centenary College, Shreveport, La., are rejoiced to learn that she is convalescent after an illness of several months.

Rev. W. B. Jones, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, recently assisted Rev. T. J. O'Neil in a meeting at Cary, Miss., in which twenty-seven members were added to the Methodist church and several to other churches.

The vote in the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church on the matter of unification was given in press dispatches as 842 for, and 13 against. This was evidently an error, the official figures being 802 for, and 13 against.

Rev. Claude P. Jones, our pastor at Magnolia, Miss., who has been in bad health for some months, is at Marlin, Tex., for the benefit of the mineral waters of that place. We are sure Brother Jones will be remembered in the prayers of the brethren.

Rev. Ellis Smith, pastor of the Mangum Memorial Church, Shreveport, La., honored the Advocate office with a call on Monday of this week. He was formerly pastor of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, this city, where he had a very successful pastorate.

We acknowledge the honor of an invitation to attend the commencement exercises of the Natchitoches (La.) High School on Friday evening, May 21, at eight o'clock. Mr. Henry Rickey, son of Rev. and Mrs. H. W. Rickey, is the valedictorian of the graduating class.

Rev. Frank C. Collins, formerly of Louisiana, now a teacher in the Lydia Patterson Institute, El Paso, Texas, will have charge of the Mexican work of our church in Nogalez, Arizona, and Nogalez, Mexico, during the months of June and July, during the absence of the pastor.

Dr. W. L. Duren, pastor of the Rayne Memorial Methodist Church, New Orleans, will make a tour of Palestine and Europe this summer, leaving on June 10 to join the party to be conducted by Dr. J. M. Rowland, editor of the Richmond Christian Advocate. He will be gone about two months. Dr. Forney Hutchinson, of Oklahoma, will be a member of the same party.

Rev. John W. Robertson delivered his lecture, "The Baseball Game of Life," at the Central Methodist Church, Columbus, Miss., on the evening of May 16. Rev. J. H. Felts is scheduled to deliver a lecture, "Seeing Things," in the same church on Friday evening of this week.

Mrs. L. P. Meador, widow of the late Rev. L. P. Meador, and mother of Rev. W. P. Meador, local preacher, passed to her reward on March 3 of this year, aged 84 years and 3 months. She had made her home with her son at Hattiesburg, Miss., since the death of her husband. We trust we shall receive a memoir of this sainted woman for publication.

The Epworth League of the Carrollton Avenue Methodist Church, this city, undertook recently to increase the attendance at the mid-week prayer meeting. As a result of its efforts, "a surprise" crowd of about fifty greeted the pastor, Rev. W. L. Doss., Jr., at the next service. This is a fine illustration of what can be done by a loyal group of young people.

Dr. J. T. Sawyer, in the absence of the pastor, preached to the congregation of the Felicity Methodist Church, this city, at the 11 o'clock service last Sunday morning, to the pleasure and profit of the people. Dr. Sawyer, an honored superannuate member of the Louisiana Conference, is vigorous, physically and mentally, and he finds great joy in preaching.

Our church at Baldwyn, Miss., Rev. J. J. Garner, pastor, is active in all good works. The quota for the Superannuate Endowment fund for this year has been paid, and the Woman's Missionary Society has recently bought a new piano for the church. A revival meeting will begin on the fifth Sunday in June, in which Rev. S. L. Pope, of Tunica, will do the preaching.

The work goes well on the Walnut Grove charge, Mississippi Conference. A new church has been organized, and on Sunday before last the attendance at Sunday school was 256, the regular collection amounting to more than $20. The pastor's salary has been increased $300 over last year, and it is just about paid in full to date. Rev. Van R. Landrum serves this fine charge.

The Corinth District Conference and Standard Training School will be held at Booneville, Miss., June 2-7. The following faculty will teach in the school: Rev. R. H. B. Gladney; Mrs. J. B. Randolph; Rev. C. A. Bowen, of Millsaps College; Rev. W. W. Woolard; Miss Lynda Ramey; Mrs. J. M. Wyatt. Rev. J. B. Randolph is the presiding elder of the district, and Rev. E. G. Mohler is the pastor-host.

The Lake Charles District Standard Training School will be held in the Broad Street Methodist Church, Lake Charles, La., June 1-6. Prof. Ward Anderson is the educational director of the school, and Rev. A. W. Waddill is chairman of the board of managers. The instructors will be Dr. Alonzo Early, of Crowley; Mrs. J. M. Henry, of Ruston; Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr., of New Orleans; Miss Cora Perkins, formerly of New Orleans, but now connected with the General Sunday School Board, Nashville.

Mrs. E. L. Whiddon, wife of Rev. E. L. Whiddon, died at Silsbee, Tex., on May 11, and was buried at Brookhaven, Miss., on Tuesday, May 13. Rev. H. M. Ellis and Rev. A. M. Broadfoot officiating. Brother Whiddon, formerly of the Mississippi Conference, is now pastor at Silsbee. The whole town was warm in its expression of sympathy, that sympathy being shown in a very substantial way. Six children survive the mother. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to Brother Whiddon and his family in their great sorrow.

Rev. C. K. Smith, of Pineville, La., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Tuesday of last week. He was returning from Hattiesburg, Miss., where he had been called on account of the serious illness of a relative, whose condition, we were glad to learn, was greatly improved. Brother Smith stated that there had been forty-three additions to the membership of the church at Pineville from the Government Hospital at that place. Brother Smith was scheduled to assist Rev. C. W. Lahey in a meeting at Melville, La., beginning on Monday of this week.

On the 8th inst., Rev. M. M. Black, pastor of the Richton charge, Mississippi Conference, closed a very successful meeting at Blodgett, in which he was ably assisted by Rev. W. M. Sullivan, of Canton. There were thirteen additions to our church by vows and baptism—eight adults and five young people—and an auxiliary of the Woman's Missionary Society was organized. Three have united with the Presbyterian church as a result of the meeting, one young man has applied for membership in the Baptist church, and almost the entire town was blessed.

It was the privilege of the editor of the Advocate to preach the commencement sermon for the Picayune (Miss.) High School last Sunday morning. The service was held in the beautiful new Baptist church, of which Rev. O. P. Estes is the popular pastor. A large congregation gave respectful attention to the message of the speaker. The graduating class was composed of 14 members, one of whom, Miss Maxine Jenkins, has made the remarkable record of not having missed a day from school for four years and not having even been tardy for the past two years. Under the direction of Prof. S. L. Stringer, superintendent of the city schools, the educational system of Picayune has reached a high degree of efficiency. Twenty-three teachers are employed, and nearly 900 students are in attendance. While in Picayune the editor was a guest in the lovely home of Mr. and Mrs. C. McDonald. Mr. McDonald is a son of the late Rev. C. McDonald, of the Mississippi Conference, a prominent business man and leading citizen of Picayune, being president of the school board. The editor greatly missed seeing Rev. J. A. Smith, pastor of the Methodist church at Picayune, who preached the commencement sermon for the Magnolia (Miss.) High School on that day.

MRS. MATILDA BUSH was born May 25, 1838, and died April 21, 1924. She joined the Methodist Church at 15 years of age. She married Luke Lee in 1856. God gave them twelve children, eleven of whom are still living. Brother Lee died in 1876; seven years later she was married to Allen Bush, and God blessed them with one child. She has one sister and three brothers living. Sister Bush had made her home with her children since Brother Bush's death, and was a benediction where she went. It was the privilege of this writer to pray with her many times in the past two years. She was a devout Christian and had absolute faith in God. The writer, assisted by her pastor, Rev. A. Joe Beasley, laid her to rest in Mount Zion cemetery April 22, 1924, in the presence of her twelve children and a host of friends, there to await the resurrection; but they mourn not as those who have no hope. Children, follow your mother's Christ and dwell with him through eternity.

A. S. OLIVER.

ROBERT LOVICK BINFORD, son of D. B. and Mary Noel Binford, was born in Mooringsport, La., June 4, 1904, and died at 9:30 in the morning of March 14, 1924, in the city of Shreveport. In early childhood, he gave his heart to God and joined the Noel Memorial Methodist Church, of which he continued, through childhood and youth, a faithful member until the end of his life. As a boy, he was faithful to the Sunday school and the Junior League, and, as he grew older, maintained his interest in all the activities of the church. His regular attendance at the weekly prayer meeting was notable, and he seemed to take great pleasure in it, never missing its sessions when possible to attend. His life among his schoolmates and friends made upon them the impression of genuine sincerity in his religious life. Nothing was more beautiful in his life than his devoted thoughtfulness and helpfulness to his mother in the home. For several years before his death his health was delicate, and he knew that his condition was serious, but patiently and cheerfully he bore his burden, and gave evidence of a steadfast faith in the Lord whom he had trusted. Just as he was approaching manhood, and while taking a place of leadership in his classes, and nearing the coveted hour of graduation from the high school, the disease which had undermined his health became acute, and after a few days of illness, he passed away. He was buried from the church which he had loved, with appropriate services conducted by the pastor, Rev. W. W. Holmes, assisted by Rev. J. S. Sanders, and Dr. R. H. Wynn. It is strange to us that a young life, giving every promise of unusual devotion and usefulness, should be suddenly cut off before the promise can be realized. Only He who knows all the secrets of human life can solve this mystery; but to the sorrowing loved ones who are left behind, there is radiant comfort in the memory of that promise, and in the hope of a blessed immortality in which it will be richly fulfilled. We can only bow in patient submission in the presence of him "who doeth all things well."

W. WINANS DRAKE.

On Jan. 2, 1924, the spirit of MRS. E. L. SANDERS winged its way to "that house not made with hands, eternal in the skies." She was born in North Carolina, Jan. 27, 1843; moved with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jackson Trull, to Mississippi, when nine years of age, and, with the exception of one year spent in Alahama, she resided in Monroe County, Miss., the rest of her life. She was married to G. W. Sanders, July 9, 1861, he leaving immediately to serve through the Civil War. To this union seven children were born. Her husband died, May 7, 1873, leaving her with five little children, whom she reared to be grown; three survive her. She, with her daughter, Miss Lillie, cared very tenderly for her father in his last years, who lived to be 94 years old. Her life was one with many hardships, but she was a strong advocate of the view that if one always lives honestly and uprightly, fearing the Lord, his grace will be sufficient. She loved the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Though unable to attend much, yet she ever trusted God and was fully prepared for the journey. In her last illness, of nine weeks, she suffered greatly, and toward the end prayed often to God to take her home, where there would be no more pain and suffering. Interment was made in Cunningham cemetery, Rev. Mr. Murff, of the Smithville circuit, conducting the funeral services.

A FRIEND.

A MEMORIAL.

What is death? Oh! what is death?
'Tis slumber to the weary,
'Tis rest to the forlorn,
'Tis shelter to the dreary,
'Tis peace amid the storm,
'Tis the entrance to our home,
'Tis the passage to that God
Who bids his children come
When their weary course is trod.
Such is death! Yes, such is death.

On March 11, 1924, MR. A. BASCOM CHAPMAN was called to rest, after a short illness of pneumonia. He was born March 19, 1847, the second son of the late D. S. Chapman. In November, 1898, he was married to Miss Odell Gee, of Sumpterville, Ala., and is survived by his wife, three sons, and one daughter. Having been reared in a Christian home, he united with the Methodist Church in childhood, and had lived a consistent Christian life, for many years being a steward of the Little Creek Church, as his father was before him. The prayer of a great poet, "God, give us men," was answered in this man. He was a devoted husband, an affectionate father, a staunch friend, and a man who eschewed evil. One of his most beautiful characteristics was his humility; he thought almost any one could do a thing better than he; still, he went calmly along, accomplished great things, and was a power in the church, Sunday school, and stood for all that was best and highest in the community. Truly, a prince of Israel has fallen this day.

"Blessed are the dead which die in the Lord from henceforth; yea, sayeth the Spirit, that they may rest from their labors, and their works do follow them."

May God bless and bring peace to his sorrowing family.

A lifelong friend.

FROM GREENWOOD AND BETHANY.

At the beginning of this Conference year, we added another church to our circuit charge—Bethany, a romantic and faithful little church in a town on the Louisiana and Texas line, only seven miles from Greenwood, La. The good people have manifested a splendid Christian spirit at Bethany. We have been holding good weekly prayer meetings there each Thursday, and well attended preaching services on the fourth and fifth Sundays. A Woman's Missionary Society was organized by the pastor and his good wife, and the Society has renovated the church, repapering and cleaning throughout.

The Superannuate Endowment for the year has been paid in full. Other finances are in good condition. The Sunday school is growing. The Workers' Council meets monthly, and we are planning the work according to the directions of the General Sunday School Board, i. e., plan of work for Sunday school of "C" type.

Brother O. E. Sanden, evangelist, will begin a revival meeting in Bethany in the near future. We are praying for an outpouring of the Holy Spirit and a lasting blessing.

DON E. DULANY, P. C.

FROM THE NEW AUGUSTA CHARGE.

Dear Brother Carley: The Rev. W. W. Graves, the efficient presiding elder of the Hattiesburg District, preached two splendid sermons on the second Sunday, May 11, at the McCallum Church, McCallum, Miss., and after preaching in the afternoon he held the second quarterly conference for the New Augusta charge. The reports were all very good at that conference.

The spiritual condition of the church seems to be moderately good. We haven't held any of our revivals yet, but they are being planned for, and earnest prayer is being made for a great spiritual awakening at each church, and we pray that this will be the best year, spiritually, that the charge has ever known. If we will give ourselves in prayer and service to the work, God will send his Spirit in wonderful transforming power. We believe that a well prepared and comprehensive evangelistic program, wisely worked, not only contributes to the spiritual strength of the church, but provokes a lively interest in all the activities of the church of Christ. All in all, I think that we are moving along auspiciously in our work here for the Kingdom.

The Rev. J. C. Ellis, of New Augusta, Miss., lost his barn by fire on the morning of May 3. The fire was well under way before it was discovered. The stock was all saved, but there was some feedstuff destroyed by the fire. This comes as a heavy loss to Brother Ellis, one of our honored superannuates.

Permit me to say that you are giving us a splendid paper. It is one of the best on the market to-day.

HILLARY S. WESTBROOK,
Pastor in Charge.
New Augusta, Miss.

USES OF GREAT MEN.

It is natural to believe in great men. If the companions of our childhood should turn out to be heroes, and their condition regal, it would not surprise us. All mythology opens with demigods, and the circumstance is high and poetic; that is, their genius is paramount. In the legends of the Gautama, the first men ate the earth, and found it delicously sweet.

Nature seems to exist for the excellent. The world is upheld by the veracity of good men: they make the earth wholesome. They who lived with them found life glad and nutritious. Life is sweet and tolerable only in our belief in such society; and actually, or ideally, we manage to live with superiors. We call our children and lands by their names. Their names are wrought into the verbs of language, their works and effigies are in our houses, and every circumstance of the day recalls an anecdote of them.

A MONTH'S ACTIVITIES AT THE LOUISIANA AVENUE METHODIST CHURCH,

New Orleans, La., from April 15 to May 15.

(As reported to the stewards' meeting and the second quarterly conference, May 15.)

Our revival closed on April 20, after some weeks of organized preparation, the pastor doing the preaching. The attendance and interest were fine. The fifty cottage prayer meetings did much good. The orchestra and choir rendered very attractive and effective service. A program arranged by the choir was broadcasted. Many of the nurses from the Touro, Charity and Presbyterian Hospitals came several nights. For the 16 services an average of 117 were present each night. Forty members were added to the church; nineteen on profession of faith; but the greatest blessing was the quickening of the church membership. Now a larger number of our members are enthusiastic about the work and are ready for service. A liberal offering was made at the close of the service for the purchase of a motor for the organ. On "Church Night," April 23, a praise service was held, many taking part; April 30 was "good-fellowship night," when our new members were welcomed and introduced to the former members of the church. All departments and organizations of the church were well represented. The Woman's Missionary Society is responsible for the fourth Wednesday night in the month. Delightful refreshments and entertainment added to the enjoyment of the evening. One hundred and forty were present. Rev. Leon Picone, Italian minister, holds a service at 5:30 every Sunday evening. We are hoping to build up an Italian congregation. The choir practices each Friday night.

Sunday School.

An Easter egg hunt for the Primary Department was given on April 19, and one for the Junior class, April 17. An Easter program was given in the Sunday school, April 20. The average attendance at the Sunday school for the last four Sundays was 132, an increase of about 60% over last year. May 15 was "Church Night" for the Sunday school. After the devotional hour, the Junior Missionary Society entertained with a missionary playlet. One hundred and eighty-five were present. On May 11, Mother's Day services were held in the Sunday school and at church, with special music at both morning and evening services. A generous offering was taken for the Louisiana Orphanage.

Woman's Missionary Society.

On April 15 the Woman's Missionary Society enjoyed a cultural and social program with Mrs. R. N. Conway. On April 30, they assisted with the "Church Night" program. On May 4, they gave a Silver Tea. The ladies of the Society are interested in the Social Service movements of the city. The Junior Missionary Society meets twice a month, with a membership of twenty-five.

Community Hall.

The old chapel has been so arranged that it not only serves us as a Sunday school room, but also is well planned for all athletics and other week-day activities. Thursday night has been set apart for the Young People's Athletic Association. All other organizations, such as the Boy Scouts, Girl Reserves, meet regularly according to appointed times. Miss Virgie Holm has two groups of Girl Reserves, who meet at the Seventh Street Home on Thursday afternoons, and on Friday afternoons at the Community Hall. On April 17 there was a match volley ball game between the two groups of Girl Reserves. The Sunday school group gave the Seventh Street Home group an Easter party and egg hunt Friday, the 18th. On April 26, there was a hike for the Sunday school Girl Reserves. The Boy Scouts has a membership of 16, with Murph Snelling scoutmaster. They meet regularly on Friday night. The Eagle Club (the smaller scouts), with a membership of 6, meet on Monday night. The Scouts went on a two-day hike during the Easter holidays.

HEARING RESTORED OFTEN IN 24 HOURS

Amazing Results Secured in One Day by Use of K-17, Formerly Known as Rattle Snake Oil.

Deafness and Head Noises need not be dreaded any longer since the discovery of a widely known physician. Now it is possible for some of the most obstinate cases of deafness to be relieved in a day's time by the application of a prescription formerly known as Rattle Snake Oil. This treatment is meeting with wide success all over the country.

Mr. D. Dey, a Nebraska resident, 67 years old, says, "I have used the treatment for only two weeks and my hearing is restored perfectly. The relief was almost instantaneous and now the head noises have disappeared. My catarrh, a case of many years' standing, is improving wonderfully."

Fred McIntyre, a Kansas resident, says: "I have used K-17 for two weeks and can hear a watch tick. It has also nearly removed all evidences of my catarrh."

Head Noises Stopped.

Henry Vertein, a Wisconsin resident, says: "I have used K-17 for only ten days and my head noises have stopped entirely and my hearing has shown a wonderful improvement."

Hears Clock Tick.

Frank Quinn, of Mississippi, says: "Before I used K-17 I had not heard the clock tick in a long time. And after I had taken the treatment two days I could lay in bed and hear the clock tick plainly."

D. E. Bryant, of Georgia, says: "I began using K-17 on Monday and on Saturday of the same week I was hearing and have been hearing ever since. Thank you once, twice, thrice."

Head Noises Stopped in 5 Days.

Mrs. D. C. Wilkins, of Mississippi, says: "K-17 has helped me wonderfully. In five days it has stopped that awful noise in my ears. I think it is a grand medicine."

Mrs. C. Roberts, of Florida, says: "I was entirely deaf in my left ear for two years and then in both. When I got your treatment I could hear in twenty-four hours."

Such amazing reports come from all over this country and foreign countries. The prescription, which is known as K-17, is easily used at home and seems to work like magic in its rapidity on people of all ages.

So confident are we that K-17 will restore your hearing quickly, and to introduce this remarkable treatmentt to a million more sufferers, we will send a large $2 treatment for only $1 on ten days' free trial. If the results are not satisfactory the treatment costs nothing.

Send no money—just your name and address to the Greene Laboratories, 247 Greene Bldg., Kansas City, Kan., and the treatment will be mailed at once. Use it according to the simple directions. If at the end of 10 days your hearing is not relieved, your head noises gone entirely, just send it back and your money will be refunded without question. This offer is fully guaranteed, so write today and give this wonderful compound a trial.—Adv.

BASKET SUPPER AT EPWORTH.

"Let your aim be a fellowship with one another; a co-operation with each other; a fellowship with one another, and a fellowship and co-operation with God."

These were the words propounded to us as we gathered about the festive table at Epworth Church on Wednesday night, May 14. Every apartment of the church, the annex, the enclosed "social park," was radiant with electric lights, seconded by the smiling faces of the assembly.

There were about 160 on the ground—not only members of the church, but those from the community adjacent, hand in hand, enjoying the social evening.

What pen could write of the good things on the table? There was every edible, from the Methodist dish (fried chicken), down to the epicurean French dish, to say nothing of the pies; and then, on the side, lemonade and ice cream, and, last but not least, the "touch-the-spot" hot coffee.

Did you ever read of such a large assembly in a small enclosure that "one round" had to fill their plates, step back, and make room for a "second round" to ditto? Well, that was the way we did at Epworth.

There was an orchestra entertaining in the church, the young people were enjoying games in the basement, and the more sedate were still lingering in the "social park."

We had as our honored guest Mr. "Bud" Grambling and estimable wife, from Chicago, a counterpart of his brother, our pastor. He has the same friendly, cheerful attitude which says without words, "I am glad that I came."

Now, what shall I say about the instigator and promulgator of every effort that tends to the establishment of his kingdom on earth, our beloved pastor, Rev. J. B. Grambling? He is like the winds from heaven, now north, now east, south and west, and I think every one will agree with me when I say we just could not do without him.

RESOLUTIONS OF APPRECIATION.

Resolved: 1. That we, the members of the Grenada District Conference, with the pastors, laymen and represented organizations, do hereby express to Rev. R. A. Tucker, the presiding elder, our sincere appreciation of his earnest efforts, genial presence, and efficient service during the four years of his incumbency as our leader; and,

2. That, as his term of office will be completed with the Annual Conference, we wish to assure the Bishop and Cabinet that Brother Tucker has been diligent during the four years of his service among us, and we wish to thank them for permitting him to be associated with us; and,

3. That we pledge him our earnest prayers wherever he may go, and wish him God's richest blessings; and,

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate with request that they be published.

Signed: J. W. Raper, R. P. Neblett, F. A. Howell.

A MAN OF INTEGRITY

A physician who reaches out to benefit humanity leaves a record behind him that is worth while. Such a man was Dr. R. V. Pierce, founder of the Invalids Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y. He was an eminent physician, a leading and honored citizen, known for his honesty and executive ability. His study along medical lines, and his knowledge of the remedial qualities of herbs and plants led to the discovery of his wonderful herbal remedy, Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription, the woman's tonic which has had the greatest number of supporters for the past fifty years. It is just the herbal tonic required if a woman is borne down by pain and sufferings at regular or irregular intervals, by nervousness or dizzy spells, headache or backache. Favorite Prescription can now be had in tablet form as well as liquid at most drug stores.

Send 10c for trial sample to Dr. Pierce's Invalids Hotel in Buffalo, N. Y.

Where two hours are indicated, instance Litton, June 2, 11 a.m., 2 p.m., it is earnestly requested that lunch be served at the church after preaching. the business session following the lunch. This will give opportunity for vital personal contact, a better acquaintance among the officials, consultation, and conference. It is also requested that personal invitation be given neighboring pastors and officials to meet with us. These visiting pastors will he called on to hring the gospel message, and there will be an exchange of methods used, etc., that should he most helpful. To this end let all superintendents and teachers make it a point to be present at these conferences. Marked progress should be registered through the whole district. All finances should he given unusual emphasis on the part of the stewards. Thanking all parties concerned in advance for the hearty cooperation that obtains in this district, and praying that the round may make a new achievement record,

Cordially and fraternally,

It will be noticed that I am to hold three group conferences on my third round, viz., Byhalia and Olive Branch, at Miller, June 6, at 10 a.m.; Cockrum and Pleasant Hill, at Lewisburg, June 20, at 10 a.m.; Courtland and Shuford, at Chappel Hill, June 27, at 10 a.m. The preachers and officials of these charges will please note and act accordingly.

I also call attention to the fact that I am calling the quarterly conferences on the circuit to meet at 10 a.m. I am doing this because of a special program I shall have for the conferences on my third round. I shall have with me a layman (or other visitor) who will make an address on the value of the church to the community and to the world. I will secure the speaker for this occasion. I desire that the preacher, either before or after the time of the meeting of his quarterly conference, have all-day services in each of his other churches, at which service he shall have some one speak on the value of the church to the community and to the world. I want the preacher to preach a sermon on that same day on "Life Stewardship." Brethren, let's put the same enthusiasm into our work that we would if we knew each day were the last we would have for service upon earth.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

It should be borne in mind that the specialization courses offered in the Conference Training School to be held in Grenada, June 11-18, will not be given again in four years. They are all important, but permit me to call attention to the Intermediate-Senior course to be given by Dr. C. O. Shugart, of Ennis, Tex. This is the weakest department in the Sunday school. Boys and girls from 12 to 17 years of age are the least understood by teachers and parents and need the most patient and intelligent guidance. Enroll for this course if you want to learn what to do for this group of young people. The course in Recreational Leadership to be given by Dr. Norman E. Richardson should be taken by every teacher. It has not been given before, and we cannot tell when it will be given again. The individual who can direct the play life of boys and girls can direct their religious life. The most effective way to keep young people from indulging in objectionable amusements is to give them recreation that is helpful, something that will contribute to their happiness and well-being. Repression, criticism, condemnation cannot build Christian character. We must recognize the native impulse to play and guide this impulse in the right way. If you mean to take this course, be kind enough to say so, that proper books may be ordered for you.

Mrs. M. E. Dakin and Rev. J. D. Simpson recently helped Mr. and Mrs. Wayne Thompson organize a school eight miles west of Shaw, on the large plantation owned by Mr. Thompson. They enrolled thirty-three, and expect to double that number in a short time. "Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ," is a safe guide for the strong churches that want to lend a helping hand to the children in the country. It is a great thing to hold services and testify to the saving grace of our Lord, but let the testimony meeting be followed up by giving instruction to the children.

The "all day singing" is an amusement engaged in by a number of good people in some sections of our Conference. These "singing bees" break up preaching services, Sunday schools and most anything else that happens to be on the day appointed for these gatherings. No good can be accomplished by condemning these singing schools, but we must offer them something better through which they can express their religious emotions. The sad thing about it is we have failed to teach them the highest and best way of giving expression to their pent-up emotions.

Would that it were possible to impress the dear men in the districts where training schools are to be held during the month of June the necessity of sending in the offering they were due to take in January for these district schools. Four schools in the Aberdeen District have sent in $13.95; twelve schools in the Columbus District have sent in $62.46; sixteen schools in the Corinth District have sent in $98.37. The Conference Board agreed to furnish half the money needed for these schools. Simply tell the people what you want to do with the money and they will give it cheerfully. Some of the most backward schools in the Conference have done well.

It is a good thing to announce these schools; it is a better thing to ask the teachers to attend, but the best thing is to enroll them and send the card to the presiding elder of the district where the school is to be held.

SOME LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

The writer had the privilege of being in Ruston on Mother's Day. One of the outstanding features of the Sunday school at Ruston is the Young People's Bible classes, one made up of college students, and the other made up of young people in Ruston. The teachers of these two classes are Mrs. J. M. Henry and Mrs. Savory Lewis. We had the privilege of speaking to these two classes at the opening exercises.

The third session of the Ruston Standard Training School will be held this year the first week in August. The school will offer three general units, and two special units.

* * *

The Sunday school session in the Monroe District Conference was held Wednesday, May 14, from 2 to 4 p. m. The attendance of pastors and Sunday school workers was fine. Unusual interest was shown by the district officers, most of whom were present and made reports. Mr. C. W. Scates was elected district secretary in place of Mr. E. E. Williamson. The other district officers elected were as follows: Elementary Superintendent, Mrs. W. F. Prickett, Winnsboro; Intermediate-Senior Superintendent, Mrs. F. B. Neeley, Monroe; Young People's Superintendent, Mr. Albert Trotter, Monroe; Adult Superintendent, Mr. S. W. B. Colvin, Rayville; Missionary Superintendent, Mrs. McDolyhide, Oak Grove; Teacher Training Superintendent, Rev. Porter Caraway, Ferriday. The date of the Monroe Standard Training School is May 15-20.

The third session of the Baton Rouge Standard Training School will be held the last week in July. The board of managers elected Rev. Larry Armstrong Educational Director of this school. The school will offer three general units, and two special units. The attendance and interest at the recent set-up meetings of this school showed a great deal of interest. Mr. O. H. Kline was elected chairman of the board of managers.

* * *

I have just received a program of the Sunday school district conference in the Shreveport District. This program was gotten up by Dr. Wynn, the presiding elder of the district, and Rev. H. L. Johns, Conference Superintendent of Intermediate-Senior work. This program is a model in many respects. This district had such a conference as this last year at Stonewall. Many of the outstanding pastors and Sunday school workers in the district are expected to be present, and take part in discussion of the Sunday school problems.

The program of the first Standard Training School for 1924 in the Louisiana Conference is before me. This School will be held at Lake Charles, June 2-6. The first four general units will be offered: "The Sunday School," "Pupil Study," "Principles of Teaching," and "Bible." The instructors are Rev. Alonzo Early, Miss Cora Perkins, Mrs. J. M. Henry, and Rev. W. L. Doss, Jr. There seems to be a great deal of interest all over the Lake Charles District in this school. District secretary, Brother Mayo, in his appeal to his Sunday school workers, says: "If possible, send to me by the 26th instant the names of your workers who are coming! We will be glad to furnish entertainment."

* * *

The pastor at De Ridder, Brother Young, writes: "I have been talking for the Training School, and hope to have a number from my school to take the work."

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Sunday, May 11, was spent on the Bayou Pierre work. We had the pleasure of preaching at Pleasant Valley and at Center Point. Brother Beasley is sick, and perhaps will be for some time. Brother J. Frank Decell asked the Pleasant Valley folks if they would support him as if he were well, and they stood and voted to support him and take him for their pastor if the presiding elder thought fit to let him stay. That afternoon I presented the matter to the Center Point folks, under the direction of Brother Decell, and they voted the same way. To me it was a very touching sight. They have arranged for the family to have eggs and ice and fresh vegetables and to be cared for. I trust the way will be open for Brother Beasley to recover soon. Pray for him and his.

Tuesday and Wednesday were spent at the district conference at Camden. We had a good conference. Dr. H. F. Brooks, of Capitol Street Church, preached both nights, to the delight and profit of all. The Sunday School Institute was held Wednesday morning. We had a good program, and the discussion seemed to get us along. The district conference requested the district stewards to make an assessment for a District Training School for next year. I trust they may see their way to do so.

Brother Hull reports a good district conference at Ruston. He was delighted with the conference and

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

STEWARDSHIP PRAYER.

Teach me that 60 minutes make an hour, 16 ounces one pound, and 100 cents one dollar. Help me so to live that I can lie down at night with a clear conscience, without a gun under my pillow and unhaunted by the faces of those to whom I have brought pain.

Grant that I may earn my meal ticket on the square and that in earning it I may do unto others as I would have them do unto me. Deafen me to the jingle of tainted money, and the rustle of unholy skirts. Blind me to the faults of the other fellow, but reveal to me my own.

Guide me so that each night when I look across the table at my wife, who has been a blessing to me, I shall have nothing to conceal. Keep me young enough to laugh with little children and sympathetic enough to be considerate of old age. And when comes the day of darkened shades and the smell of flowers, the tread of footsteps and crunching of wheels in the yard—make the ceremony short and the epitaph short—"Here lies a man."—From the New York Central Magazine.

JOY IN GIVING.

By Charles E. Jefferson, in Men and Money.

The reason many people take no joy in giving is because they give only spasmodically and from impulse. Any one who gives only under inspiration of the moment is almost sure to give far less than he ought to give and not nearly as much as he thinks he is giving. It is only when we carry on our benevolences with system and on principle that we become stewards of whom our Lord need not be ashamed.

Products of St. Mark's

I wish that the entire group of missionary women could have been present at St. Mark's Hall at the regular monthly business meeing of the Board of City Missions last Monday night to have seen right before their eyes some of "our jewels." Before the regular business was taken up, Brother Alford introduced a group of young people—one young man and four young women, products of St. Mark's. I wish you could have looked into their faces as they told what St. Mark's had meant to them—what the social occasions had contributed, how the games and sports had contributed to make strong, clean bodies, how the association with the consecrated workers had helped them to find the Christ who gave all for them. These five splendid young people and ten others, Miss Ellison says, are volunteers for life service. They are helping in a way down there, but each is planning to get special preparation for their life work. One young woman is expecting to enter Scarritt in the fall.

Our hearts swelled with gratitude and praise as we looked into these bright faces and thought of the possibilities of these consecrated young lives so full of enthusiasm, ambition, interest. So, as we rose to sing the Doxology, at the suggestion of Mrs. John Parker, our hearts breathed a prayer for these young people, and that their number would be greatly multiplied.

GETTING OUT IN LIFE.

By Garfield Evans.

"Will we never get through?" Four years of work in college after high school; then perhaps three or four more years to specialize. You may talk to us about our college days being worth $10 a day to us. It sounds good, but what assurance have we that it is worth that much to us? Just a good way to pacify us and keep us satisfied."

Did we ever talk that way? Of course we did, and felt more than that. We have heard others since talk the same way. We simply smiled and thought it was natural and that after a while they would see and understand. But back in our minds and unexpressed we have sometimes wondered if it wasn't possible to lift the veil and let the other fellow see the thing in education that really counts after all; that beyond Latin and Trig there was something to be achieved, and that he is achieving now.

How often the young fellow remarks, "When I get out in life"....: thinking that somewhere in the unrelated future there is an elysium that will mean success to him if he can only get there, and be freed from the entanglements of Greek verbs and formulas of chemistry. We do well to keep the prospects bright; life is stern and its realties will press with unrelenting demands soon enough. But the fellow is "living now" and is now a part of all that he will ever be.

They used to tell us, "School days are the best days," but we didn't believe it then, and know it isn't true now. What alumnus wants to be in school again? If he accidentally says so, it was a forced bit of politeness, for lack of something else to say. The "best is yet to be," is the charm of the student and the hope of the alumnus; it is also his savor of youth in age.

Some months ago I visited in the home of two aged companions who had made a success from every ordinary standpoint. They had fourteen living children, thirteen of whom had received a college degree. Their sons were succeeding in the various professions and businesses, and their daughters had married men companionable in spirit. One son is in the ministry, a daughter is a missionary on the foreign field, another is a deaconess, while every member of the family is active in Christian work and faith. Significant about their education was the fact that a godly father and mother had ever kept before them the principle that an education was not the goal nor any of its so-called accomplishments; but that an education and all that it might imply was a means to an end by which the student might discover the majesty of the Divine, the dignity of a human being, and the relation of his life to both.

Nashville, Tenn.

WHAT WOULD YOU DO?

By Mrs. W. W. Higgins.

Before me is a picture of one of our native Christian women in the mission village here at Lusambo with her seven children. Practically every morning this woman may be seen in the sunrise prayer service. Three or four days out of the week it is necessary for her to go to market, which may be from three to nine miles away. Every day water must be carried from the river or perhaps from the spring a mile and a half away. Every day firewood must be supplied: The children must be cared for day by day. Every day the food must be prepared and cooked for the entire family.

If you and I had this routine of duties to perform, daily, I wonder how many of us would find time for two hours of class work in the school room, every day, nine months out of the year? This native woman is one of our most faithful students in one of the women's classes. She seldom misses and is making steady progress in her school work.

The women of this section of Africa have not made the same mental or educational progress as the men. Is it not of vital importance that the women should keep pace with the men in their spiritual and mental growth? The young girls and women of this continent need your prayers and your help. Pray also for those who have this particular work as a part of their duties, that they may be led of God in reaching the girls and women of this land with His Word.

Lusambo, Congo Belge, Africa.

MAJESTY OF JUSTICE.

There is no better test of the excellence of a government than the efficiency of its judicial system, for nothing more nearly touches the welfare and security of the average citizen than his sense that he can rely on the certain and prompt administration of justice. Law holds the community together. Law is respected and supported when it is trusted as the shield of innocence and the impartial guardian of every privite civil right. Law sets for all a moral standard which helps to maintain a like standard in the breast of each individual. But if the law be dishonestly administered, the salt has lost its savor; if it be weakly or fitfully enforced, the guarantees of order fail, for it is more by the certainty than by the severity of punishment that offenses are repressed. If the lamp of justice goes out in darkness, how great is that darkness!—Viscount Bryce's Modern Democracies.

"It is a mistake to train young people in all lines of knowledge and give them full college equipment for undertaking the big tasks of life without making sure also that fundamental principles of right and wrong as taught in the Bible have become a part of their equipment. There is a control of forces and motives essential to the management of vast affairs which comes only through an educated conscience."—J. J. Hill.

Epworth League

GREENVILLE DISTRICT LEAGUE INSTITUTE.

The District Institute of the Greenville District, North Mississippi Conference, was held in the Methodist church at Leland on April 15. About fifty delegates were present, representing seven Leagues of the district. Very instructive and helpful addresses concerning the different phases of Epworth League work were made by Rev. R. P. Neblett, chairman of the Epworth League Board, and Rev. J. S. Duncan, President of the North Mississippi Epworth League Conference, who came to conduct the Institute for us. All who attended received valuable information, and were inspired to greater efforts to make League work in the Greenville District a success.

This was the first Institute ever held in this district. Interest in Epworth League work is increasing, and by the time the summer conference meets next year we hope to have several 100% chapters.

This was the first of a "Chain of Institutes" held in North Mississippi. Mr. Neblett and Mr. Duncan went from here to the Grenada, the Sardis, and the Corinth Districts to hold Institutes.

A LITTLE SONG OF LIFE.

Glad that I live am I;
That the sky is blue;
Glad for the country lanes,
And the fall of dew.

After the sun the rain,
After the rain the sun;
This is the way of life,
Till the work be done.

All that we need to do,
Be it low or high,
Is to see that we grow
Nearer the sky.

THE JACKSON DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Jackson District Conference, Mississippi Annual Conference, met for the eighty-second session, Monday evening, May 12, 1924, in the Methodist church at Camden, Miss.

After a strong sermon on evangelism by Dr. Henry Felgar Brooks, pastor of the Capitol Street Methodist Church in Jackson, the conference was called to order by the presiding elder, Rev. M. L. Burton.

After the roll was called, Rev. W. J. Dawson was elected secretary, and Rev. B. F. Lewis was elected assistant secretary.

Previous to the meeting of the district conference, the presiding elder had sent to every pastor a questionnaire covering all matters that the pastors were expected to report on. These were distributed to appropriate committees, who tabulated the reports handed in by the pastors, and made their report to the conference. By this method the work of the conference was very much simplified and greatly expedited. Every item of business that comes under the purview of a dictrict conference was given proper and careful attention, without undue haste or crowding. The spirit of the conference was fine from the opening to the closing session.

Evangelism was emphasized and given prominence, not only in the two night messages brought us by Dr. Brooks, but in the reports made and in the half-hour morning prayer service each morning before the convening of the conference in regular session. There was a total attendance of 112 during the sessions of the conference. Every pastor in the district was present at some time during the conference, including the two young men of the district, Rev. C. H. Ellis and Dr. H. Walter Featherstun, who are now on the Roll of Honor.

One of the outstanding events of the conference was the address of Dr. L. D. Patterson on the constructive work of missions with reference to China, in which he showed how the missionaries had created a Christian church, destroyed the opium traffic, unbound the feet of the girls, created a national system of education, and greatly improved sanitary conditions in China.

Two splendid young men were licensed to preach: Horace Walter Featherstun Vaughn, grandson of Dr. H. Walter Featherstun, long a member of the Mississippi Conference, and Frank Harris Ingraham.

Four were recommended for admission on trial into the traveling connection: Horace Walter Featherstun Vaughn, Harry Alexander Seymour, Frank Harris Ingraham, and Isaac Hunter Hollingsworth.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: J. A. Lindsey, W. H. Bradley, H. O. Middleton, Bura Hilbun, I. O. Brown, Mrs. W. A. Maxwell, John P. Bennett, and C. L. Ray. Mrs. J. B. Williamson and Mrs. J. C. Wood were elected alternate delegates.

A report worthy of mention and insertion in the report of the district conference was the report of Rev. Charles Assaf, our Syrian missionary employed in the two Mississippi Conferences to his own people, and to other foreigners, and incidentally to Americans, both white and black, as he is given the opportunity. His report to the district conference was: 4 meetings held; preached 132 times; 187 joined the church; 11 children baptized; one church built and one Sunday school organized. Of those joining the church 58 were Syrian, 12 Greek, 9 Italian, 8 Chinese, 2 Mohammedan, and 98 American; 7 Syrian women joined missionary societies and 909 people responded to the call for reconsecration. Truly this is a splendid work.

A letter from Bishop Ainsworth was received too late to be read to the conference. The Bishop sent congratulations and encouragement to all the brethren, ministerial and lay, on the marked progress the church is making within the bounds of the Jackson District.

The reports of the various committees indicated that the church was advancing along all lines.

Resolutions commendatory of the ministry and official administration of Brother Burton as presiding elder of the Jackson District through the past four years were adopted. The district regrets the necessity of having to give him up at the close of this Conference year. The resolutions express "our Christian sympathy and our love to him as our brother and fellow-laborer in Christ, and assure him of our prayers for his complete restoration to health and for continued success in the ministry to which God has called him."

The hospitality of Camden was generous and bountiful. Rev. G. E. Allen made a delightful and careful conference host. We all left Camden with the highest sense of appreciation of the generous entertainment so graciously given us. The next session of the district conference goes to Yazoo City.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED By GRENADA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

Whereas, the General Board of Missions of our church has requested that one of our members be used in Brazil; and,

Whereas, arrangements have been completed for one of our pastors to take up his work as pastor of the English-speaking congregation in Rio de Janeiro, in July of this year; therefore, be it resolved,

1. That we assure our brother, Rev. Julian S. Duncan, of our prayers and deepest interest, and that we wish for him abundant success in his new field.

2. That a copy of these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of this district conference, and a copy sent to the New Orleans Christian Advocate and the Missionary Voice with request that they be publiished.

FROM HAZLEHURST, MISS.

Thus far the third year has been the best of the three on this charge.

We put on a pageant in the interest of the Superannuate Endowment, by the League, that gave great satisfaction and did much to create sentiment in favor of that move, and we will have a good report to make at the end of the year.

Our plans for a revival, beginning the fifth Sunday in August, have been settled.

On the 11th of this month we put on a Mother's Day program at the morning service, and the Sunday school gave one at the evening hour. Both services resulted in gratifying returns and gave the young people a large place in the life of our church.

The League and the Sunday school are both making advances that they have not done heretofore.

ONE AND ONE-HALF RAILROAD FARE

To the Sunday School Training School and Epworth League Conference at Grenada, Miss., June 11-21.

Instructions have been issued to the railroads in the North Mississippi Conference territory and their agents to issue receipts to every one buying full fare tickets to the Sunday school or Epworth League meetings, at Grenada, June 11 to 21, selling dates, June 7-13 and June 17-18, with final limit for return June 25.

"Reduced fares will be authorized on the Certificate Plan under the following conditions: For delegates and members attending meetings and dependent members of their families, who have paid normal one-way fares of 67 cents or more on going trip via routes over which one-way tickets are regularly sold, will be ticketed to their starting points by the route traversed in going to the meeting, at one-half of the normal one-way fare from place of meeting to original starting point, provided there have been in attendance not less than 250 persons holding certificates of the standard form. Children of 5 and under 12 years of age will, under like conditions, be charged one-half of return fares authorized for adults."

Be sure to ask your selling agent for a receipt for your ticket, which will cost you nothing. Present this receipt at the office at the college, and if we can get a sufficient number to secure this rate, it will save much to those coming from distant points. There will be no addtional cost, however, to you or the railroad if we do not get the 250. Last year we had more than 300 at both of these conferences. Help us in this matter, if you are coming to Grenada, please.

R. P. NEBLETT.

BRINGING OUT THE BEST.

"Marian is a funny little girl," said her big sister. "If you give her a hug and a kiss once in a while she'll go off singing as happy as a bird, and she'll be as helpful and good as she can."

There are many people like Marian; a little loving appreciation brings out the best that is in them. A word of appreciation for the teacher who is sometimes tired and irritable may make her more sympathetic. A little kindly courtesy to the girl behind the counter may make her more considerate of those she serves, a little sympathetic understanding of the small brother, of the tired father or mother, will bring to the surface the happier and better self in each one.

We may not be able to give money and flowers to those in need, but we always can give kindness and love.—Exchange.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

his reception.

Sunday School Day offerings are coming in slowly. I trust they may come in faster. Our board needs the money, and I trust there will be nothing in the way of each Sunday school sending in the offering.

On June 10 the block of Specials assigned to the Sunday schools of the Mississippi Conference will be withdrawn. There are 110 Sunday schools that have not paid their Centenary pledges who are eligible to take a share in these Specials. Please let us hear from you.

Above all, we need your prayers for the work. Pray for each worker, those who are holding office in the district and those who are paid. May God bring a great blessing to all.

METHODIST UNIFICATION.

The Southern Methodist Handbook for 1924 gives twelve pages to UNIFICATION—the plan of 1920, the action of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church of that year, the action of the General Conference of our own Church, 1922, the plan approved by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church on May 7 and now before our own Church. Whatever your views on Unification, you ought to have this information. The Handbook gives it, and in addition much other valuable information concerning the activities of our Church. "After God had carried us safe to New England and we had builded our houses, provided necessaries for our livelihood, reared convenient places for God's worship, and settled the Civil Government; one of the next things we longed for and looked after was to advance learning and perpetuate it to posterity, dreading to leave an illiterate ministry to the churches when our present ministers shall be in the dust."—Inscribed on a gateway at Harvard.

SPECIAL SESSION OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

By order of a majority of the Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, a special session of the General Conference is hereby called to meet July 2, 1924, at 9:30 a.m., to consider the plan of unification recommended by the Joint Commission on Unification and approved by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

The place of meeting of this special session will be selected and announced by the committee appointed and authorized by the General Conference which was held at Hot Springs, Ark., May, 1922, to choose the place and arrange for the entertainment of the next session of the General Conference.

FOUR BISHOPS OPPOSE THE CALL FOR THE SPECIAL SESSION OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

We, the undersigned superintendents of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, did not and do not agree to the calling of an extra session of the General Conference on July 2, and we feel that it is due the church as well as ourselves to give the reasons for our dissent from the conclusion reached by the majority of the bishops.

Grave doubts have been raised about the legal adoption of paragraphs 37 and 38 of the Discipline of 1922, which are as follows:

37. The bishops, or a majority of the Annual Conferences, shall have authority to call a General Conference at any time, if they judge it necessary.

38. When a General Conference is called, it shall be constituted of the delegates elected to the preceding General Conference, except when an Annual Conference shall prefer to have a new election.

These paragraphs, 37 ad 38, which alone of all the contents of our book of Discipline refer to the authority of the bishops to call an extra session of the General Conference, are a part of the constitution of the General Conference.

They were passed by the General Conference of 1866, but they were not referred to the Annual Conferences for approval, nor does the record show that they were passed by a two-thirds vote of the General Conference, by which vote amendments to the constitution must be adopted.

These facts were laid before the General Conference in 1914 in a report prepared by a committee on the constitution of which Bishop Alpheus W. Wilson was the chairman, which report was approved unanimously by the College of Bishops before it was submitted to the General Conference.

The report recommended that the General Conference consider the matter and make the amendments in a constitutional manner; but no action was taken upon this portion or any other part of the report. Hence the doubts which have been raised concerning the constitutional validity of these paragraphs.

However, if their constitutionality were conceded, in our judgment supported by concurring opinions of many of the ablest lawyers in the church, these paragraphs do not authorize the bishops to call a special session of the General Conference at any time which would deprive the Annual Conferences of their right to be represented by the delegates elected to the preceding General Conference, or "to have a new election" if they should so "prefer."

In a matter of so great importance as the proposed plan of unification, the rights of the Annual Conferences cannot be too scrupulously regarded and carefully protected.

Moreover, we could not and do not see any reason for such a hasty assembling of the General Conference, July 2, 1924. Our preachers and people have a right to more time for examination and consideration of the plan. The resolution of the General Conference of 1922, undertaking "to authorize and instruct the bishops" to call an extra session in a certain contingency as its terms show, does not require such haste. It is as follows:

"Instead of the joint consideration proposed, we recommend a special session of the General Conference of our church. When a plan for unification is endorsed by a two-thirds vote of each Commission and approved by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, then our College of Bishops is empowered and instructed to call the special session of our General Conference."

We have not had any disposition to defeat or needlessly delay the purpose of this resolution. Accordingly, a motion was made in the College of Bishops by two of our number that the special session be set for the first Wednesday in May, 1925. We believe this date, if it had been adopted, would have escaped all legal difficulties, would have accorded the Annual Conferences their rights, and would have done simple justice to them. It would also have given proper time for deliberate consideration of the proposed plan of unification by all our preachers and people.

We must assume that the General Conference of 1922, by the resolution which has been quoted, did not intend to instruct the bishops to do an illegal or unjust act.

We believe that the calling of the extra session of the General Conference on the first Wednesday in May, 1925, would have more truly carried out the resolution of the General Conference of 1922 than will the date fixed by a majority of the bishops—namely, July 2, 1924 which date is but a little more than forty days from this time.

We are sure it would have been in keeping with the law of the church and in harmony with the rights of the Annual Conferences.

We cannot in good conscience approve a call the date of which, as we believe, violates law and does the Anunal Conferences grave injustice by depriving them of their rights under paragraph 38.

THE SPECIAL SESSION OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The College of Bishops, at its meeting in Nashville, Tenn., on May 20, called a special session of the General Conference to meet on July 2 to consider the plan of unification recently adopted by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church. The place for holding the special session will be chosen by the General Conference committee on entertainment.

We had hoped that the time of the special session would be deferred at least a month longer, in order that there might be ample time for the full discussion of the plan of unification through the church press. While the plan has been before us for a considerable period of time, it was felt that it would be in keeping with propriety to defer the widespread discussion of it in our church until the Methodist Episcopal Church had taken action; then, with the plan fully before us, the fullest discussion would be in order. It may be that the date fixed will allow all the time needed, but, as stated above, we should have been glad to have at least another month.

In connection with the call for the special session, Bishops Candler, Denny, Darlington, and Dickey have issued a statement (which we publish in this issue) in which they express the opinion that the special session is not called in keeping with the law of the church. They base that opinion, first, upon the claim that the articles in the Discipline providing for a special session were never constitutionally adopted, and, second, admitting the legality of those articles, the Annual Conferences are deprived of their right to elect new delegates to the special session if they so desire by fixing the date before the meeting of those Conferences.

The opinions of these distinguished leaders are not to be taken lightly, and the question of legal-

CURRENT CRIME AND COMMERCIALIZED CULTURE.

By Bishop Warren A. Candler.

Wave after wave of crime continues to sweep over the country.

Robberies and homicides seem to predominate, espeeially homicides inspired by the love of money and characterized hy the purpose to get it by all means.

Judges of the criminal courts are reported as remarking that an increasing number of the criminals appearing before them are young and intelligent. This fact is most significant. Youths but recently out of school are falling into crime.

The scandals and investigations at Washington point in the same direction. Men of the highest intelligence are accused of the most enormous and shameless theft. If they are guilty, they are a disgrace to the nation. If they are not guilty, their accusers are brazen perjurers. Whether, therefore, it be theft or perjury that is so prevalent at the national capital, the revelations of abounding criminality there are alarming.

The matter which should arrest most serious attention is not any particular case of crime, or number of cases, but it is the fact that so many criminals have grown up under our elaborate and expensive system of education. Evidently mere education alone does not prevent crime or promote good citizenship. The educated classes are as much disposed to crime as are the illiterate.

The States which compose the American Union expend annually above a billion dollars on their public school systems, in addition to the vast sums expended for the private schools and the colleges and universities in the land. Nevertheless the waves of crime roll on and mount higher day hy day.

Manifestly we cannot depend upon mere education to arrest moral evil. This we might have known by a little study of history. Nations have risen despite ignorance and poverty, and they have perished when most enlightened and wealthy. The Greeks and Romans, when most cultured and opulent, were subjugated by uncouth and savage forces sprung from a fresher and nobler race. While they were gazing daily on the most impressive forms of architecture, walking amid the noblest statues, boasting of their unparalleled refinement, and prating of their progress, their morals were becoming more and more corrupt and their characters more foul and feeble. All their culture did not enable them to resist the attaeks of the unlettered barbarians under Alaric and Attila. All their literature and art and education did not eradicate one evil passion from their souls or extinguish one polluting propensity from their natures.

Such has been the case in all subsequent times among modern nations. Remarking upon this fact, Sir Archibald Alison said nearly a hundred years ago, "With the spread of knowledge and the growth of every species of social improvement, geuine depravity has gone on increasing with an accelerated pace, and every increase of knowledge seems but an addition to the length of the lever hy which vice dissolves the fahric of society."

This able and famous historian went on to give the philosophical explanation of the fact as follows: "It is not simple knowledge, it is knowledge detached from religion that produces this fatal result, and unhappily that is preeisely the speeies of knowledge which is the present object of fervent popular desire. The reason of its corrupting tendency on morals is evident—where so detached, it multiplies the desires and passions of the heart, without any increase to its regulating principles; it augments the attacking without strengthening the resisting powers, and, thence, the disorder and license it spreads through soeiety. The invariable characteristic of a declining and corrupt state of society is a progressive increase in the force of passion, and a progressive decline in the influence of duty, and this tendency is increased by nothing so much as that spread of education without religion, which is the manifest tendency of the present times."

Since these wise words were written by the great Scotchman, the tendency to which he referred has grown stronger, and the results of it have been such as he foretold would be its consequences. Culture and crime have increased together. Eating the fruit of the tree of knowledge has not nourished moral life, but has resulted in despoiled Edens and lost Paradises.

Education has not curbed a corrupting commercialism, but it has often been corrupted by it. Educational courses and methods are too frequently bent toward the making of monetary profits rather than to the enrichment of the mind and the purification of the heart. Elevating and ennobling knowledge is subordinated, if not set aside entirely, to make room for that which is considered more gainful, and which can he more immediately turned into money. Observation of the heginning of these conditions in his day gave Sir Archihald Alison occasion to express the fears concerning edueation which he entertained. Speaking of tendencies then, which were as rivulets when compared with what has in our times become a flood, he said: "The philosopher's stone is alone sought after by the alehemists of modern days; nothing is studied but what will render the human mind prolific of dollars. To purify the heart and humanize the affections; to elevate the understanding and dignify the manners; to provide not the means of elevation in life, but the power of hearing elevation with propriety; to confer not the power of suhduing others, but the means of conquering one's self; to impress love to God and good will towards men, are deemed the useless and antiquated pursuits of the monks of former days. Practieal chemistry and sulphuric acid; decrepitating salts and hydraulic engines; algehraie equations and commercial academics; mercantile navigation and double and single bookkeeping, have fairly driven Cicero and Virgil off the field."

The final outcome of sueh edueation, he predicted, would be to exclude from study even the science whieh did not serve commercial ends, saying: "Amidst the shock of so many contending interests, the calm pursuits of science, which lead not to wealth, will be abandoned; the institutions whieh as yet maintain it will be sacrificed to the increasing clamor of democratic jealousy; literature will become a mere stimulant to the passions, or amusement of the hour; religion, separated from its property, will becomc a trade in which the prejudices and passions of the congregations of each minister will hc influenced instead of being subdued; every generous and ennobling study will be discarded for the mere pursuits of sordid wealth, or animal enjoyment; excitement in all its forms will become the universal object; and in the highest statc of manufacturing skill, and in the latest stages of soeial regeneration, our desccndents may slnk irrevocably into the degeneraey of Roman or Italian manners."

That forecast of the fruit of materialistic education in Great Britain was published in 1835, and the history which has followed it has fulfilled it in a most striking degree.

In our country the commercialization of eduеation has run to even worse lengths. It has put material things ahove the moral law, and made expedients for achieving monetary ends more controlling than the Ten Commandments.

Even the games and sports of high schools and colleges have been commercialized. Gate receipts and gambling gettings occupy the most influential places in these academic programs. The players play for money and the "rooters" root for hcts.

And faculties permit what they do not approve because they regard the games as good advertising for the institutions from which they receive their salaries.

Thus the high ideals of Christian scholarship are pulled down and physical and materialistic conceptions of life set up in their room.

It is not strange, therefore, that we have waves of crime and immorality sweeping over the nation and floods of wrongdoing submerging the national capital. A different result could hardly be expected.

Crime and culture (that is such culture as it is) move with about equal pace over the land.

The Christian religion alone can cleanse culture from commercialism and purge the country of crime.

UNIFICATION OF EPISCOPAL METHODISM.

By Rev. Henry G. Hawkins.

Dear Dr. Carley: Observing that you ask for short articles on the question of Unification, which is now very alive, I write, not to enlighten, but to suggest that those who are fully posted let the rank and file of the church, clerical and lay, know through the columns of the Advocate a few of the new situations that are anticipated from the plan that is pending adoption.

1. The bishops are to be elected by the Jurisdictional Conferences, but are to be bishops of the united Methodism, with probability of being assigned to have charge of the work in Conferenees other than those of the Jurisdiction by which elected. To what extent will they probably be assigned work outside of the Jurisdiction by which elected? How long will it probably require for us to reach a situation in which it will not be necessary to elect by Jurisdictions? There seems a little inconsistency in having a situation that requires those who are to be servants of the whole church to be elected by only a certain part of it. However, I cannot see that this is wrong; it simply looks a little queer.

2. It is to be presumed that the pastors of one Jurisdiction may be transferred to charges of another Jurisdiction with the same ease with which transfers are made inside the same Jurisdiction. Is this correet? I should think that the advantages in such case would be fully as great as the disadvantages, the possible good greater than the possible evil.

3. The Judicial Council is to be composed of an equal number from both Jurisdictions. This looks fair; and in this matter the stronger is giving the weaker equal power. The plan does not give what is to be the length of tenure of office of those elected to this Council. What is proposed in this regard? Of course, that question can be decided later. But one can see that this Judicial Council might become a body of much importance and power.

4. What changes will result in the ownership, uses, and direction of sueh property as publishing houses, sehools, hospitals?

5. Let some one who is familiar with the subject (say, some member of the Commission from one of the Advoeate's patronizing Conferences) give us a clear statement as to the present relation of the Methodist Episcopal Church to the work among the Negroes, North and South, and to the branches of Methodism among the Negroes, telling the points of difficulty, if any, real or imaginary, that would arise from the adoption of the proposed Plan of Unification, in view of a sincere desire to see the gospel make its advance among white and black.

THE VIRTUE OF SINCERITY.

By Miss Ruby Burgess.

It is commonly believed that if one is but sincere in his belief, the thing believed is not so important. How strange that in religion we use a line of reasoning wholly at variance with that which is exercised in our daily living! If a Mohammedan is just as good a Christian as we are, provided he is as sincere in his beliefs, the virtue of a Christian becomes merely the virtue of sincerity and not essentially different from Mohammedanism or Buddhism.

If the test of sincerity be applied to all the errors and mistakes of life, and they are justified and excused on those grounds, I fear we would have a well-nigh blameless world, but not a better one. There must be uniqueness in Christianity that compels the recognition of even Mohammedans and Buddhists, else it becomes but one of the many phases of an ethical system which the world has ever known. Christians affirm with Peter, "Neither is there salvation in any other; for there is none other Name given among men whereby we must be saved" (Acts 4:12); they assert with Paul, "For other Foundation can no man lay than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ" (1 Cor. 3:11); they agree with the prophet, "That at the name of Jesus every knee shall bow, of things in heaven, and things in earth, and things under the earth, and that every tongue confess that Jesus Christ is Lord to the glory of God the Father" (Phil. 2:10, 11). But not all such confession is unto salvation (Rom. 10:9), but such a confession as even devils make (Jas. 2:19, Acts 19:15, Matt. 8:29).

"There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the ends thereof are the ways of death" (Prov. 14:12, 16:25). Blindfolded I may think I am walking into a garden and be headed toward a precipice. In daily life—business and social—we learn that sincerity does not insure us against mistakes, pain, injury, and even death. Why should it suddenly acquire such saving virtue in the matter of religion?

The Bible does stress faith—in Him who only is faith-worthy. Faith, in itself, has no virtue. It is the object of faith which determines the worth of faith. I may have faith in a friend who may do me a willful injury. Does faith, in that case, prevent the injury? Credulity is not commendable. Again, I may wish to take a car to Pike Street and by mistake take the one going to Clark Street. Will my sincere conviction that I am on the right car land me at Pike instead of Clark? I may wish to cross a stream by means of a plank which I believe will support me, but in the attempt the plank breaks and I tumble into the stream below. My conviction did not hold me up.

It is vain to give credit to sincerity in religion which would be laughed at if attempted as a creditable excuse in society. Christian faith is reasonable, sensible, logical. The same psychological laws are involved as those which order the intellectual, emotional and volitional life in the everyday world. We may not talk of one kind of faith on the street and another kind in the church. Jesus asks only the same kind of faith that one would place in his business partner.

How would mother feel if she heard her child say, "I am 'trying' to have faith in mother"? True, the child can see mother, can touch her and know that she is. But the child cannot see the wind, yet has evidence that it is blowing. There are things of knowledge which transcend the senses. We cannot see God, yet have every evidence that HE IS.

There is but one kind of faith, though divers faiths; one kind of faith, but many objects of faith. Faith has one characteristic—utter dependence upon a power or person outside of self. So the same faith that is exercised in business and in social life is to be placed also in God.

Paul expressed faith very definitely when he said to the sailors in shipwreck, "Sirs, be of good cheer, for I believe God that it shall be as it was told me." The Nobleman exercised the same simple faith when it was said of him, "And the man believed the word that Jesus had spoken unto him." (Jno. 4:50). Christian faith is believing in what God has promised. God said it—I believe it. That is faith. Does a child give up his "individuality" when he trusts his father? Does he "crucify his intelligence" to place his trust in mother? From past experience he has learned that mother knows, that mother will give, and that mother will protect—so he simply trusts. We would question his intelligence or the mother's "motherliness" if he did not trust her. Our God is trustworthy. There is no reason for making faith a more complex action of the will than just the faith of a child in its parents. Mother may not always know, she may not be always able to give, or to protect—in which case the child's faith, however sincere and commendable, does not meet his need. But God in whom he trusts knows, and is abundantly able to fulfill every need.

An abstract faith is worthless, because it anchors in nothing. Indeed, it may be questioned whether there be such a thing as abstract faith. All faith is concretely objective. Faith is, rather, intellectual, because it takes into consideration the experiences of the past. The things which God has performed make reasonable the faith that he does and will perform his promises. Man trusts his business partner, not for emotional reasons, but for intellectual reasons. He has known him as trustworthy in the past. Emotion follows only because the man has been tested and found worthy of faith. Thus the element of emotion is involved in faith, but logically succeeding the intellectual element. Volitional faith occurs each time one trusts his partner with a new deal which makes a demand on faith. "Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that he loved us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sin." (1 Jno. 4:10).

Misplaced trusts end disastrously, however sincere the trust. It is possible to have misplaced religious trust. So did the prophets of Baal on Mount Carmel. The Bible clearly recognizes a false trust and that sincerity will not save us from its consequences. Honesty is meritorious, but one can honestly believe a lie to his own destruction.

The word "sincere" comes from the Greek, meaning literally "without wax". The origin of the word has to do with faithless architects who used a kind of cement or wax to weld together broken stones that they might appear to be solid blocks or columns. But when, after a few years, the weather and intense heat melted the wax, the building would prove faulty and insecure. The material which went into the making of the building was not as represented.

However, the very word "faith" presupposes sincerity, else it could not be called faith. In this paper we are not discussing the possibility of being insincere, but the fact that one may be devoutly sincere and yet be far from truth or safety. The virtue of sincerity depends altogether upon the merit of the thing or person in which or in whom one sincerely trusts. To speak of dishonest faith or an insincere trust is to speak in contradiction of terms, for one is then dealing with appearances and not with beliefs.

When a person talks about the saving sincerity of the Christless heathen, instantly we know "his rock is not our Rock," his Christ is not our Christ. His rock is merely an ethical Example classed with Mohammed and Buddha. In the Bible saving faith is everywhere focused upon Christ. "According to your faith be it unto you," does not refer to degree of faith—a more or less faith. It refers to faith's object. The blind man was not partially healed because of a partial faith; but in answer to the query, "Believe ye that I am able?" he replied, "Yea, Lord," and thus faith was directed in the right channel for healing—the recognition of Christ as Healer. Christ healed wholly or not at all. He forgives freely or not at all. The condition imposed is not the quantity of faith or even the quality of faith, but the Object of faith.

Naaman's was not a progressive healing. After dipping the sixth time he was still a rank leper. It was when he dipped the seventh time that his flesh became as a little child's. God wanted to see, not how much faith Naaman had, but if he had faith at all. Naaman gave credit to Whom credit was due. He was not so foolish as to think the water healed him, neither was he so credulous as to think it was Elisha's power which wrought the change. When he asked for the dirt to carry with him into Syria it was that he might give glory to the God of Israel Who had healed him.

The walls of Jericho remained intact until the seventh round of the seventh day. A senseless thing to do, apparently, but it tested the faith of Israel, whether or not her faith was placed in the word of Jehovah. By the "foolishness" of preaching it has pleased God to save all that believe on the Christ who is preached (1 Cor. 1.21)

The lessons of faith listed in the eleventh chapter of Hebrews were based on the records of faith in the Old Testament. Abraham never would have had his name in God's Hall of Fame had he continued to worship the pagan gods of Ur. Had Moses sincerely trusted in the Egyptian deities rather than in the God of his mother, the world of law, art and letters would have been set back several centuries, not to mention the terrible gap that would have been left in the list of heroes of faith. Had Daniel worshipped at Babylonian shrines instead of praying with his face toward Jerusalem, his name would have rotted in Babylonian luxury and lust, and earth and heaven been much poorer.

The right Object of faith is the prime essential in right faith. Sincerity may have a moral power, but has no saving power either for business life, social life, or religious life. Christian faith is only in the Person and power of Christ. If directed elsewhere, even to the ethics of Christ, whatever the name by which such faith is called, it is not Christian faith. Christian ethics follow as a logical fruit of the Spirit, Whom the believer has received through faith in Christ. That spirit which apes Christian ethics without receiving Christ through faith, does so mechanically and artificially through the energy of the human will alone, and can never produce the spontaneous morality that is due to a life in Christ. Christianity is not a system of ethics. Christianity is CHRIST. Sincerity outside of Jesus Christ can never make a Christian. Christ only makes a Christian.

A MOTHER-MADE MAN.

Dr. Lorimer tells this story of one of our most distinguished men, who was introduced at a great public meeting as a "self-made man." Instead of appearing gratified at the tribute, it seemed to, for a moment, throw him into a "brown study." Afterwards they asked him the reason for the way in which he received the announcement.

"Well," said the great man, "it set me to thinking that I am not really a self-made man."

"Why," they replied, "did you not begin work in a store when you were only ten or twelve?"

"Yes," said he, "but it was because my mother thought I ought to."

"But, then," they urged again, "your integrity was your own."

"Well, I don't know about that. One day a barrel of apples had come to me to sell out by the peck, and, after the manner of some storekeepers, I put the specked ones at the bottom and the best ones at the top. My mother called me and asked what I was doing. I told her, and she said: 'Tom, if you do that, you will be a cheat.' I think my mother had something to do with my integrity; and, on the whole, I doubt whether I am a self-made man. I think my mother had something to do with making me anything I am of any character of usefulness."—Sunday School Visitor.

GRENADA DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The district conference for the Grenada District convened at Abbeville, May 12, with the presiding elder, Rev. R. A. Tucker, in the chair. Following the administration of the Lord's Supper by J. W. Dorman, the body began active work. Julian S. Duncan was elected secretary. Committees were appointed to look after all the work of the church, including Sunday Schools and Epworth Leagues, Hospitals and Orphanages, Education, Christian Literature, Temperance and Social Service, Superannuate Endowment, the Spiritual State of the Church, Missions, and Finance. Attendance was good, considering the long distances that many of the delegates had to travel. The pastor-host, Rev. W. O. Hunt, had the details for entertainment well in hand, and the guests were easily and readily taken care of.

Rev. Carrol Varner set a high standard for the conference in his opening sermon. This standard was maintained by the other speakers, Rev. R. P. Neblett and Rev. Claud A Parks. A storm came up while the latter was speaking. It is not known whether his preaching had anything to do with it. While the lightning was flashing he told about a Negro who was instantly killed during an electrical storm!

Special emphasis was laid upon the Superannuate Endowment Campaign fund. The presiding elder strongly urged the brethren to lay this matter on the hearts of the people. The station charges of the district have done well in this matter. Brother A. J. Henry, the pastor of the Ebenezer circuit, made a stirring appeal to the conference in behalf of this movement. He already has in hand two-thirds of this year's apportionment in cash, and the rest in good subscriptions. It was shown that if the country churches do their part the fund will be readily raised.

Rev. J. E. Stephens, Rev. Melville Johnson, and Miss Virginia Thomas, a former student, represented Grenada College. It was brought out that unless the amount for the endowment, $150,000, was raised by North Mississippi Methodists the college would be classed as "junior." Every requirement except endowment would be met in curriculum and faculty for the coming session.

Brother Ben P. Jaco, conference missionary secretary, spoke in the interest of the collection of Centenary subscriptions. Rev. J. H. Holder represented the Christian Education movement. Rev. S. A. Brown presented the matter of the raising of the fund for the new building needed for the Orphans' Home at Jackson, for which he is field agent. Prof. L. W. Summers, of Millsaps College, called the attention of the body to the good work of that institution. Rev. R. G. Lord, a former pastor of the Abbeville charge, and his wife were visitors at the session of the conference.

Following a resolution making it the special order of the day, balloting was begun for the election of lay delegates to the Annual Conference. The following were chosen: R. W. Sharp, L. G. Fant, R. E. Wilburn, F. A. Howell, T. E. Dunn, Mrs. R. A. Tucker, Mrs. R. P. Neblett, W. H. Goodwin. Dr. A. W. Milden, Mrs. A. W. Stokes, Mrs. W. A. Steinbeck, R. R. Ramey were elected alternate delegates.

The conference adopted strong resolutions with reference to our church papers. They were presented by Rev. J. W. Dorman, who is a member of the Publishing Committee for the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The resolutions were in part as follows: "That we declare our faith in the safety and spirit of fairness in the management, and in the doctrines promulgated in both the Nashville and New Orleans Christian Advocates, and that without hesitation we commend them as periodicals well suited to the needs of all our people."

The presiding elder, Brother R. A. Tucker, is finishing his fourth year on the district. His fairness, his unfailing cheerfulness, his real interest in all the work of the church, his genuine concern for the welfare of the preachers under his charge, has made him a universal favorite. Resolutions were adopted by a rising vote, expressing to him "our sincere appreciation of his earnest efforts, genial presence and efficient service during the four years of his incumbency as our leader," and pledging to him "our earnest prayers wherever he may go, and wish him God's richest blessing."

One of our number has passed to his reward since the session of the conference, Brother R. I. Collins, pastor at Vaiden and West. He appeared in good health at the conference and made an interesting and optimistic report of the work of his charge. He was a man of sincere and devout Christian life, a preacher of earnestness and power, a friend beloved by all who knew him.

The secretary of the conference has accepted appointment under the Board of Missions as pastor of the Union English speaking Church in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil. He will sail some time in July.

A fine spirit obtained during the entire session. The entire body faced the future with confidence, and, all in all, it was a pleasant conference. The people of Abbeville left nothing undone for the comfort and convenience of the delegates. The next session goes to North Main Street Church, Water Valley.

JULIAN S. DUNCAN, Secretary.

THE MONROE DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Monroe District Conference was held in West Monroe Methodist Church, May 13 to 15. The pastor, Rev. J. L. Evans, was away on account of ill-health. He was missed, but we do not know what more any pastor could have done in the interest of the guests' comfort and pleasure than was done by our good people of West Monroe.

We have an efficient executive in the person of our presiding elder. The many things pertaining to the well being of our District, and of the church in general, were looked after "decently and in order." All the pastors, with the one exception named above, attended the conference, and there was a good representation of lay members present. Encouraging reports were heard from all departments of the church. It seemed to be the prevailing opinion that our Epworth Leagues, Sunday schools, Woman's Missionary Societies, people, pastors, presiding elder, and superannautes are second to none in Methodism.

The following representatives of the connectional interests of the church were present and addressed the Conference: R. W. Vaughan, A. S. Lutz, O. S. Welch, C. D. Atkinson, and Mrs. J. M. Henry. F. M. Freeman spoke in the interest of the Board of Church Extension, and L. R. Sparks discussed the Golden Cross movement. Mrs. R. F. Harrell, District Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society, gave an encouraging report concerning her good work over the district. The second afternoon of the conference was given to the Sunday school interests, Rev. C. D. Atkinson presiding. An evening session was devoted to "Southern Methodism's Forgotten Man." Revs. W. J. Porter and Robert Randle were present, and by their happy remarks made us glad that we are Methodist preachers.

F. M. Nuegent was granted license to preach.

The conference elected, on nomination of the presiding elder, a Licensing Committee, composed of the following: F. M. Freeman, J. L. Evans, H. W. Cudd, D. C. Barr.

S. W. B. Colvin was re-elected District Lay Leader. The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: R. O. Randle, C. M. Ritchie, W. M. Calhoun, S. M. Collins, J. R. Henry, Mrs. J. L. Cummings, Mrs. J. W. White, and S. W. B. Colvin. The following were declared alternates: Louis Hullum, O. McLendon, H. C. Murphy, and T. I. Watson.

Revs. K. W. Dodson and C. C. Wier were welcome visitors.

The last session of the conference concluded with an experience meeting and consecration service. Rev. J. F. Foster conducted the latter.

By vote of the conference, the district conference and standard training school will be combined for 1925, and will meet in the city of Monroe.

P. M. CARAWAY, Secretary.

STATEMENT OF BISHOP JAMES CANON, JR., TO THE GENERAL CONFERENCE OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH.

Bishop James Cannon, Jr., of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and a member of the Commission on Unification from that church, was introduced to the Conference and upon invitation of the presiding bishop, said:

"Mr. Chairman and Brethren: I was sitting in the Board of Missions of our church about this time last week when a telegram was read to that Board announcing the vote which had been taken here approving with such practical unanimity the plan for the unification of the two Methodisms. Turning to a friend who was sitting near me, I said: 'Through many dangers, toils and snares, we have already come; 'tis grace has brought us safe thus far, and grace will lead us home.' He said to me in a semi-jocular way, 'You had better not say that to some people or they will want to know what you mean by "Home."' I said, 'Well, I have no disposition to elaborate on that subject; I have been in my Father's House all these years, and our Methodist Episcopal brethren have also been in the Father's House all these years: but I am hoping that perhaps, by the grace of God, we will finally sit down at the same table in the same dining room.'

"I may illustrate how this matter appears to me by reference to the political situation. I have always been a States' Rights, Free Trade Democrat. I do not know or see how I could ever be a Republican, and yet the brand of 'Democrat' and 'Republican' is not so firmly fixed that there may not be circumstances when that brand temporarily fades away. For example, should the Democratic Party, of which I am a member, nominate a man for President of the United States who does not favor the effective enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment and of the Volstead Act, or of something even stronger than the Volstead Act for the enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment, while I am a Democrat, I am not a law-breaker; and should the Republican Party nominate a man who stands squarely for the genuine, better enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment than we have up to this time, I think I know my people in the South well enough to say that in that event the issue with them would not be Democracy versus Republicanism; it would be Law versus Lawlessness, and if there should then be a 'Solid South,' I am satisfied that it would be a Solid South against Liquor Lawlessness; and I have enough confidence in you brethren sitting before me that you would take exactly that same action if the position should be reversed.

"Now, that is what I meant in a way, if I may use that political illustration. Our two churches do not agree in some things; we do not have the same angle of vision in reference to some things; our training, our antecedents have been different, and perhaps in view of all the circumstances, this plan of unification goes as far as we can safely go now. It furnishes points of contact, an opportunity for us to get closer together, to learn to know each other, and thus to find out how far and how closely we can work together. But when it comes to the great fundamental questions which pertain to the welfare of humanity and the glorious program of the church of God, we are to-day already one in spirit, as is witnessed by the action which we take in our separate General and Annual Conferences on all the great issues which pertain to life and to the interests of humanity—the humanity in the midst of which God has placed us that we may go out to seek and to save that which is lost. And in that confidence I have myself, as a member of the Commission, voted for this plan, and I shall use all proper means to secure in my own General Conference—and you know bishops do not have much power in the General Conference—that I shall use all proper means in my own General Conference and in my own church, to secure a great vote for this plan so that as a united church we may work together in every way possible for the glory of God."

Bishop Cannon's remarks were received with great manifestations of approval by the General Conference. When he was asked whether in his political illustration he was referring to Governor Smith, Bishop Cannon said that his statement included Governor Smith or any other man, Democrat or Republican, who might be nominated by either party whose record had been such that it was thought that he would be an acceptable candidate to those who are opposed to the genuinely effective enforcement of the Eighteenth Amendment. Bishop Cannon said that it was an insult to the Southern people to assert or to imagine that they would vote blindly in mass formation for any man who might be nominated by the Democratic Party regardless of his attitude on great moral issues. Party loyalty holds only where great party principles are at stake, and not when candidates are generally understood to be opposed to the moral convictions of great masses of the voters of the political party to which they belong.

HOLDING CHARGE INSTITUTES IN THE COLUMBUS DISTRICT.

By Ben. P. Jaco.

A few years ago, in consultation with Rev. E. G. Mohler, on the need of cultural and constructive work in the churches on Mission charges, we agreed on certain things and the way to do them. He drew up the plan and presented it to our Conference Board of Missions. It was adopted and offered to each presiding elder in the Conference. The plan offered by the Board contained the propositions to hold an institute in each church and to pay the traveling expenses of outside helpers. Brother Mohler tried out the plan in the Sardis District and I assisted the pastor in such work on a charge on the Columbus District. Our work proved successful, and Brother McIlwain, the presiding elder, seeing the benefits, determined upon an effort to hold institutes all over his district in rural churches.

His plan covered a period of about seven weeks' time, took in a large number of churches, unlimited stretches of muddy roads, some snow, many rains, intense cold, numerous and exciting experiences of being stuck in mudholes and digging out, riding on trucks, in wagons, and walking. In my fifteen years' travels on districts and in other general work, I have not found so many difficulties and hard conditions in the same length of time. But the young elder seemed to see none of them, pushed on, and came out unhurt, although he has since admitted that he did get tired and sometimes nearly balked.

But what was done for the churches? Well, here is the way we did. He made a schedule, naming the day and place for each all-day program, and secured at least two other men besides himself and the pastor for each occasion. He pledged the district lay leader, Mr. J. H. McKinnon, Rev. J. H. Holder, Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Rev. W. M. Campbell, and me for certain days and places. He made no cut-and-dried program, but we took each church and its needs for our program and called all the people together for an all-day service. Then in constant prayer, careful study, and heart-to-heart work we did what seemed best to do. We usually had two sermons on such subjects as under God appeared to be suited to the occasion. There were then talks and consultation on the various institutions and work in our church, with special reference to the local conditions. The day's work was crystalized in reorganization of Sunday schools, or in organization where none existed. In this work, teachers were selected for all departments, and they were instructed in each particular grade. Leaders were selected for starting Epworth Leagues, and instructions given them. The women were instructed in the Woman's Missionary Society, and plans made for organization. Plans were made and instruction given for organization of the stewards, for systematic financial work, for careful evangelistic surveys and revival work. Stewardship and tithing were presented, family altars and home Bible study were always emphasized. Brother Campbell made the most systematic and direct effort on behalf of religious literature, distributing church papers and tracts most judiciously. In some cases the church leaders became so interested that they went from church to church with us, and often said that this work meant a new day for their churches. In one case where the work dragged and a well-to-do people paid less than $100 a year to their pastor, the officials called me into consultation and were shocked when I told them that the Board of Missions was helping to support their pastor. They admitted that they could pay $1,000 with proper cultivation, better organization, and more service.

My experience on this round led me to some definite conclusions from evident facts. More than half of our mission churches are able to support their pastor and conduct efficiently the several institutions of our church. As I see them, I believe not less than this number, if well handled in organization and cultural processes, may be made into dynamic forces of accumulated influence which would become attractive and dominate community institutions. I am satisfied that we can and should dissolve churches, consolidate others, and then give these the benefit of the best administrative service. This program should originate in the administration of the bishop, the presiding elder, and the Board of Missions, and become a policy of definite aim until the goal is reached. But let delicate, timid, or fearful souls forbear! I take off my hat to the courage, persistence, and consecration, of men like McIlwain, Gladney, and Campbell for opening up this line of needed work.

PROHIBITION.

America was visited in 1922-23 by seventy-six persons from many countries, whose sole mission was to study the working of prohibition. Some bore government commissions, others represented reform bodies or political or religious groups. Some came with hostile intent, to gather ammunition with which to oppose "dry" legislation. More were in quest of help for "dry" campaigns. But a large number were actuated by a desire to learn the truth and to be guided by it in their efforts to serve the public. On the other hand, a number of representatives of the World League against Alcoholism have gone out from America to every continent and held conference with temperance reformers in fifty countries. Among them are Bishop Cannon, John G. Woolley, W. E. Johnson, and John C. Cranbery. In Mexico the League has an able representative in Andres Osuna, formerly Minister of Education. Prof. Villem Fruits, a member of the Parliament of Esthonia, is representing the League in the Baltic republics. Dr. Ernest H. Cherrington, a Methodist layman of Westerville, Ohio, who is at the head of this education system, reports that he has a vast foreign mail which shows the earnest interest which is being taken throughout the world in the success of the American method of dealing with an evil from which every country is confessedly suffering.—New York Christian Advocate.

ON TRUSTING ONE ANOTHER.

We heard a sad story the other day of a serious and almost tragic financial loss that had come to a friend because he had too easily and carelessly trusted in the integrity and business honor of an associate. It was all true, and we were moved in heartfelt sympathy for our friend, and yet when he went on to say, with some bitterness, that for the future he would not be nearly so confiding, we found it difficult to feel that he had come to a just and wise and satisfactory conclusion. It is true that men sometimes have lost seriously by trusting one another, but it is much more true that they have lost, in vastly greater and more terrible ways, by failing to trust one another. When a man, for any reason at all, has lost that feeling of trust and confidence in his fellow-man he has lost one of his very finest spiritual possessions, and all he will gain and save by being somewhat suspicious will be as nothing at all compared with that which he will lose. And when all is reckoned up, and the long story of human perfidy is all told, it is still true that confidence has much more to justify itself than has mistrust. And the man who goes through life carrying with him into the various relations of every day a suspicious soul, is not a wise or shrewd man at all, but the most stupid and irrational one. And no tragic experience of life quite justifies our joining his company.—Christian Guardian.

THINGS NEEDED.

It has been quite the fashion for each generation to look upon the one behind it as a generation of "old fogies," with the result that the world has gone on about the same. The day is finally dawning, however, when the ship will have to be caulked with some of those old-fogy notions or founder in the seas of materialism. The old-fashioned faith that expressed itself in church life, family prayers, and everyday integrity has given place to a sort of universal jazz. The old-fashioned Golden Rule has been modified into the motto: "Do others, or they will do you." The old-fashioned ideals of statesmanship have been displaced by a cheap, scandal-mongering brand of politics. The old-fashioned belief in the sacredness of marriage has been pushed aside by the notion that marriage is an uncivil contract issued by the Secretary of War. We are saved from pessimism by the fact that here and there we meet a young man or a young woman whose intelligence refuses to be stamped by the hoof beats of the jazz-dizzy crowd. But of one thing we may be absolutely certain: unless the faith of the fathers is restored in our home life, and unless the home itself is restored to its normal place as a moral and spiritual stabilizer of society, the few sane young people who have ideals must wage a losing fight for want of backing. The newest thing nowadays would be an old-fashioned conception of moral and religious progress.—Christian Standard.

SAY IT SOME MORE.

There are too many men in this country for the public good who are foolishly depending on what they call Providence for what they should do for themselves. We have conditions which we charge up to Providence which are really the result of ignorance, shiftlessness, and trillingness. This country is infested with and almost on the verge of financial ruin, by reason of the boll weevil and anthrax. The only way to meet this menace is by the use of means that have been approved by science and tested by experience—there is no perfect or absolutely sure remedy—but it is the duty of every citizen who cares for his own interest and has a regard for his neighbor to follow the plan approved by those who are the best informed. But there are a lot of people who are saying that Providence has supplied the remedy in the cold weather we have had this winter—that it has killed the weevil and destroyed the anthrax germs. It has helped some, but if everybody depended on that alone we would be on the road to ruin. The thing to do is to re-enforce what the elements have done by the use of mind and body and work day in and day out to try to exterminate these evils, to wage a relentless war on them, and not depend on nature to do it all. The plan won't work—never has, never will, and ought not to.—Lonoke County (Ark.) News.

To get, we must give; to accumulate, we must scatter; to make ourselves happy, we must make others. Prayer girds human weakness with divine vigor, we must seek the spiritual good of others. Prayer girds human weakness with divine strength, turns human folly into heavenly wisdom, and gives to troubled mortals the peace of God.—Rev. C. H. Spurgeon.

All silencing of discussion is an assumption of infallibility.—J. S. Mills.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

IF YOU WANT THE SPECIAL EFFORT TO SUCCEED, DON'T FOOZLE THE PLAN.

All money raised in the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment must be sent direct to the Board of Finance, Security Building, St. Louis, Mo. If it is sent anywhere else, it will be contrary to the plan which was approved by the General Conference.

I have repeatedly emphasized this fact in speeches and various publications. But, notwithstanding, it seems that an occasional preacher has failed to understand. Please, brother pastor, get the thing in your head right and do not let your Forgotten Man money go astray. Instruct the Treasurer of your Special Effort Committee to make every payment on your charge's quota direct to the Board of Finance, Security Building, St. Louis, Mo., using the Book of Treasurer's Remittance Forms, which was sent to you.

A letter came recently from one of our most successful preachers, stating that he had sent his charge's first year's quota (nearly $600) to the Treasurer of his Annual Conference. The money has not yet come to the Board, though the Treasurer of the Conference was advised of the mistake and urged to send it. Therefore, this wide-awake pastor's charge appears on the books of the Board as not having paid a penny. Don't you see how unfair it is not only to the charge, but also to the pastor who was so energetic and faithful in securing the money?

When Special Effort money comes direct to the Board of Finance it is invested just as soon as it is received, and it begins at once to earn income for the superannuates. Your Board of Finance is eager to do its utmost to make the money raised for Superannuate Endowment do the thing for which the people pay it, but this is impossible if the money is sent off on a long detour. Work the plan, boys, and don't foozle it. Make all remittances direct to the Board of Finance, Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

SPECIAL EFFORT DOLLARS THAT DO NOT THRILL.

They are the dollars that have not been remitted to the Board of Finance in St. Louis. They are like a lifeline lying useless on the bank of a river wherein some one is drowning for lack of assistance. They are like the fresh baked bread which the poorly clad and starving man sees through the plate-glass window. They are dollars without a lift, useless dollars, dead dollars—aye, dollars that add to our shame!

If I were a Special Effort dollar just paid for Superannuate Endowment, I would go to St. Louis and to the Board of Finance by the first mail. I would insist on having my chance to take my place with other Special Effort dollars in their thrilling work of providing a decent support for the Church's worn-out and aged preachers. If any Special Effort Treasurer should be slow to send me on my holy mission, I would pull at him, scream at him, and pester him until he could not rest. I would keep on saying: "Send me to St. Louis," "Remit me to the Board of Finance," "I belong to the Forgotten Man," "I want to earn income for the old preachers," "Let me go, for I hear other Special Effort dollars calling me to come and help."

To date (May 10, 1924) the Board of Finance has received on quotas from the charges a total of $265,000. These are dollars that thrill. And the charges that sent them have had a wonderful blessing in doing it. This money is alive and making itself felt in the great struggle to drive the deprivations from the lives of the superannuated preachers. Has your charge paid any cash on its quota? If so, has the Treasurer of your Special Effort Committee sent it to the Board of Finance in St. Louis? You are not faithful to the Forgotten Man when you fail to remit his money to the Board promptly.

PAY ONE-FIFTH OR MORE AND JOIN THIS BAND OF PACE-SETTERS.

For several weeks past I have been publishing a list of those charges that have remitted to the Board of Finance enough to pay one-fifth or more of the total assumed quota. It is a pleasure this week to add to this Honor Roll other charges that have accomplished this feat. Next week I trust that your charge will have paid one-fifth or more so it, too, can be recorded with the others in this class. The following is the list for the week ending May 10, 1924:

Moody Heights (Tampa), Florida, Tampa, Rev. M. R. Meyer, pastor; total assumed quota, $565; amount remitted, $113.

Central Church (Mount Airy), Western North Carolina, Mount Airy, Rev. H. K. Boyer, pastor; total assumed quota, $4,000; amount remitted, $1,007.

Bellefontaine (St. Louis), St. Louis, St. Louis, Rev. John McCarthy, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,300; amount remitted, $520.

Tuckerman station, North Arkansas, Batesville, Rev. J. T. Wilcoxon, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,552.50; amount remitted, $339.50.

First Church (Waco), Central Texas, Waco, Rev. E. E. White, pastor; total assumed quota, $4,250; amount remitted, $850.

Woodbine (Nashville), Tennessee, Nashville, Rev. J. F. Baggett, pastor; total assumed quota, $2,625; amount remitted, $589.

Minden, Louisiana, Ruston, Rev. W. G. Childress, pastor; total assumed quota, $4,200; amount remitted, $1,134.

Fourth Avenue (Louisville), Rev. J. W. Johnson, pastor; total assumed quota, $6,650; amount remitted, $2,500.

Littleton, North Caholina, Weldon, Rev. G. F. Smith, pastor; total assumed quota, $2,663; amount remitted, $520.40.

Harrisburg, Texas, Houston, Rev. I. E. Thomas, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,300; amount remitted, $260.

Leitchfield, Louisville, Elizabethtown, Rev. W. C. Christie, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,700; amount remitted, $1,275.70.

Crichton, Alabama, Mobile, Rev. D. F. Ellisor, pastor; total assumed quota, $2,264; amount remitted, $500.

St. Paul's (Parkersburg), Western Virginia, Parkersburg, Rev. Paul S. Powell, pastor; total assumed quota, $3,304; amount remitted, $1,800.

Salinas, Pacific, San Francisco, Rev. J. W. Cadwell, pastor; total assumed quota, $366; amount remitted, $73.50.

Tupelo, North Mississippi, Aberdeen, Rev. C. C. Alexander, pastor; total assumed quota, $3,500; amount remitted, $1,800.

First Church (Orlando), Florida, Orlando, Rev. I. C. Jenkins, pastor; total assumed quota, $7,500; amount remitted, $1,750.

Bayou La Chute, Louisiana, Shreveport, Rev. W. F. Roberts, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,250; amount remitted, $530.75.

Monumental (Portsmouth), Virginia, Portsmouth and Newport News, Rev. T. R. Reeves, pastor; total assumed quota, $4,000; amount remitted, $800.

Belcher-Gilliam, Louisiana, Shreveport, Rev. Guy M. Hicks, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,680; amount remitted, $336.

BROTHER PRESIDING ELDER, DON'T BE PALE, BE PINK.

The strenuous exercise in the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment is bringing fine color into the faces of the presiding elders. The majority of them have a perfect pink countenance. Some of them need only another touch or two in order to be perfect. A few of them still have the tendency to be pale. Come on, men, and let us have a hundred per cent roll of presiding elders in Special Effort "cosmetics!" The following names are now added to the list previously published, numbered in the order that they became wholly pink:

180. Central Texas, Waxahachie, Rev. Eugene B. Hawk, P. E.

181. North Georgia, South Atlanta, Rev. W. T. Hunnicutt, P. E.

182. Florida, Palatka, Rev. J. F. Bell, P. E.

183. Texas, Marlin, Rev. W. F. Bryan, P. E.

184. East Oklahoma, Tulsa, Rev. New Harris, P. E.

185. North Alabama, Sylacuse, Rev. D. C. McNutt, P. E.

186. North Texas, Wichita Falls, Rev. Frank M. Richardson, P. E.

187. Central Texas, Cisco, Rev. Sam G. Thompson, P. E.

188. Central Texas, Weatherford, Rev. S. J. Rucker, P. E.

189. Alabama, Selma, Rev. J. S. Frazer, P. E.

190. South Carolina, Florence, Rev. L. L. Bedenbaugh, P. E.

191. Central Texas, Fort Worth, Rev. F. P. Culver, P. E.

I nearly forgot to tell you this: Make all remittances on Special Effort quotas direct to the Board of Finance, Security Building, St. Louis, Mo. Don't let the cash in hand lie around doing nothing, but send it to the Board promptly and thus save lost motion. In making remittances to the Board, be sure to use the Treasurer's Book of Remittance Forms which was sent to every pastor in the church. If you have not yet put on the Special Effort in your charge, do it now!

The Home Circle

MOTHER.

O mother, dear, the years are past
When we were in your care,
But now your love is just as vast
As when it held us there;
For mother love holds to the last,
And follows everywhere.

We know we have a mother's prayers,
Tho' we are far apart,
And that our burdens and our cares
Are carried in your heart;
And at the thought, all unawares,
The deep emotions start.

Our ways that oft have troubled you,
We painfully regret;
Our words of praise have been too few,
And sometimes we forget;
But still you know our hearts are true
And that we love you yet.

—A. L. Crawley.

A BLACK BOY'S HEART.

They were the prettiest pair of ponies at the fair, and their groom was a negro boy, who ran by their side as they went round and round the ring, obeying every word or motion of his. When they stopped before the grand stand, the ponies rubbed up to Cato as though they loved him.

"What is the price?" asked a horse dealer.

"Five hundred dollars," said Cato.

"Stuff and nonsense," said the horse dealer. "I'll give you three hundred dollars cash for them."

Cato shook his head; but though every one admired them, no one wanted to buy.

"There," said the horse dealer, "you see no one wants them. Tell me who owns them. He will be glad to take my offer."

"Dey belong to my young missus, an' she ain't goin' to sell 'cept she gets five hundred dollars for 'em," said Cato.

"Humph!" said the horse dealer. "A young girl owns them, does she? Well, if you'll swear that one of them went lame I'll give you fifty dollars for yourself and will buy the ponies at three hundred dollars. You never had fifty dollars in your life, did you now?"

Cato gave such a start that the ponies started, too. Then, looking up, he said: "Reck'n ye think dat 'cause de Lord give Cato a black skin he give him a black heart, too. 'Tain't so; he ain't goin' to blacken it dat way, nuther."

"Cato," said a gentleman standing by who had overheard the conversation, "why does your young mistress want to sell her ponies?"

"De plantation, it bound to be sold nex' week," he said, "if me and Miss Helen can't raise de money. Master, he got all but five hundred dollars, an' he took sick, an' de barn burn down. Dat how come Miss Helen sell de ponies."

"Well," said the gentleman, "you take them back and tell her they are sold for five hundred dollars. My man will go with you and take the money. Tell her I am going to Europe for a year and would consider it a favor if she would use them while I am away. If she can buy them back when I return, I shall be very glad to sell them to her."

"If Cato ever kin serve you, sir, he jes' boun' to do dat thing."

"You have done it already, Cato."

"What sah? I ain't never seen yo' befo'."

"True, but you have given me an opportunity to help another in trouble. You gave it to me just now when I overheard you refuse to blacken your heart for that man's money."—Herald and Presbyter.

WHY NOT TELL THE TRUTH.

The story is told that a certain young man who had been employed in a store only a short time was discussing with the other clerks the possibility of getting off for the afternoon to attend a football game, as he and the coach of the visiting team had played on the same team at college.

"Tell the manager you have to go to the dentist," said one. "Tell him your grandmother is sick," suggested another. Then the bookkeeper said: "Why not tell the truth?" They all laughed, but the young man said: "I will."

A half hour later he approached the manager and made his request. "Certainly you may go," was the answer; "you have not asked for any holidays, before." Then, with a twinkle is his eye, the manager added: "Why didn't you say your grandmother was sick, like the other boys?"

The boy who tells the truth all the time may not have everything his way, but he is sure to hold the confidence of his fellow-men. The real man or woman is known in the small details of life. It seems a little thing to tamper with the truth, but the way we meet such a temptation is a moral thermometer that shows whether our enthusiasm for the right is growing warmer or cooling off. We cannot develop a frank, straightforward character unless we diligently cultivate the habit of being open and above board. It is far better for a boy to "swear to his own hurt" than to dull his sense of honor for any temporary gain. It takes courage to be true to the ideal when others sneer at our scruples or even become offended because we "hew to the line." It takes old-fashioned grit to stand for the truth when our material interests seem to demand that we do otherwise. But these are tests that come to every one. Some people go so far as to say that strict truthfulness does not pay. It all depends upon one's viewpoint. The young man who is striving earnestly to make a life is not seeking any pay that must be gained at the expense of manhood, but the one who lives for self-indulgence is very likely to turn from the path of right when it gets a little rough. Life means more than "getting by." The boy whose word is never discounted has an asset that will repay him many times for any inconvenience he may suffer in telling the truth.—Edith Slaten.

BRINGING YOUR SON UP OR DOWN.

How to Bring Down a Son.

1. Let him have plenty of spending money.
2. Permit him to choose his own companions without restraint or direction.
3. Give him a latchkey and allow him to return home late at night.
4. Make no inquiry as to where and with whom he spends his leisure moments.
5. Give him to undertsand that manners make a good substitute for morals.
6. Teach him to expect pay for every act of helpfulness to others.
7. Let him spend Sunday hours between services on the street.
8. Be careful never to let him hear your voice in prayer for his salvation and spiritual growth.

How to Bring Up a Son.

1. Make home the brightest and most attractive place on earth.
2. Make him responsible for the performance of a limited number of daily duties.
3. Never punish him in anger.
4. Do not ridicule his conceits, but rather talk frankly on matters in which he is interested.
5. Let him feel free to invite his friends to your home and table.
6. Be careful to impress upon his mind that making character is more important than making money.
7. Live Christ before him all the time; then you will be able to talk Christ to him with power.
8. Be much in prayer for his salvation and spiritual growth.—William D. Lammaster.

THE BOYS WE LIKE.

The boy who never makes fun of old age, no matter how decrepit or unfortunate or evil it may be. God's hand rests lovingly on the aged head.

The boy who never calls anybody names, no matter what anybody calls him.

The boy who is never cruel.

The boy who never lies. Even white lies leave black spots on the character.

The boy who never makes fun of a companion because of a misfortune he could not help.

The boy who never hesitates to say "No," when asked to do a wrong thing.

The boy who never quarrels.

The boy who never forgets that God made him to be a joyous, loving, helpful being.—The Philadelphia Public Ledger.

"Spring in the air" says a heading. Owing to the increased number of motor cars on the street, many pedestrians have to.—London Opinion.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

THE SPECIAL SESSION OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

ity raised by them should be given the most serious consideration. If there is a probability that the action of the special session of the General Conference will be thrown into the civil courts for review, it would, in our opinion, be far better to postpone the meeting to a date that would prevent such intervention.

As has been previously stated, the editor of the Advocate is personally in favor of the adoption of the plan of unification, believing that its provisions are fair to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and believing that its adoption would greatly advance the interests of the Kingdom of God upon earth; but he is not in favor of any action about which there can be the slightest question of legality or fairness.

THE SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

The sixteenth session of the Seashore Divinity School will begin its work at the Seashore Camp Ground, Biloxi, Miss., on Tuesday, June 17, and close on Thursday, June 26. All courses for undergraduates in the Conference course of study, including the course for Admission on Trial, will be given under competent instructors. The credits of the school will be accepted by the examining committees of the patronizing Conferences.

The attention of all those who expect to take work for credit is called to the fact that previous study of the entire course is required. Let them be sure that they have read all the books before they enroll in the school.

Attention is also called to the fact that class work will begin on Tuesday this year, instead of Wednesday, as heretofore. This is necessary in order that the school may comply with the requirements of the General Board of Education.

Ample boarding facilities at reasonable rates have been provided for all in attendance. The rates in Keller Lodge will be as follows: Meals only, $1 a day; room and meals (two in a room), $1.75 a day each; three in a room, $1.50 a day each. The White House, one of the finest hotels on the coast, in easy walking distance of the Camp Ground, has very kindly made a special rate of $2.50 a day for room and meals. The families of those in attendance may also have the benefit of this special rate, children under twelve years of age being taken for $1.25 a day. Those who desire to rent a cottage for the session should communicate at once with Rev. H. W. Van Hook, Seashore Camp Ground, Biloxi, Miss., for information concerning same.

The platform speakers for this year will be Dr. George R. Stuart, the famous pastor of the First Methodist Church, Birmingham, Ala., and Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, of Macon, Ga. The addresses of these distinguished men will be worth all the cost of attendance upon the school. In addition, there will be addresses by selected representatives of the three patronizing Conferences.

Requests for further information should be addressed to the undersigned, or to Rev. R. H. Harper, D.D., Publicity Agent, 5030 Prytania Street, New Orleans, La.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES

Rev. Henry T. Young, our pastor at De Ridder, La., is assisting Dr. W. H. Coleman in a meeting at Fort Worth, Texas.

Announcement has been made that the Publishing House will be able to appropriate $60,000 to the superannuated preachers' fund this year.

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in session at Springfield, Mass., has given women the right to be ordained as local preachers.

The attendance of the Big Brothers' Class, Greenville, Miss., on Mother's Day, was 165. Judge Percy Bell delivered a great address on that occasion.

Rev. and Mrs. Geo. H. Thompson, of Crystal Springs, Miss., spent a day in New Orleans last week. It was the editor's pleasure to run across them at the hotel.

Rev. R. Alonzo Morris, of Pittsburgh, Texas, has given $100,000 in cash and securities for the permanent endowment of Southwestern University, at Georgetown, Texas.

Rev. and Mrs. A. Brulet, of Gonzales, La., are happy over the arrival in their home of a baby boy, who has been named Hoffman Gregory Brulet. Blessings upon him.

The class of 1899 of Millsaps College, of which the editor of the Advocate was a member, observed its twenty-fifth anniversary during the commencement exercises of the college this week.

Rev. C. C. Wier, presiding elder of the Alexandria District, Louisiana Conference, began a two-weeks' meeting at Melville, La., on May 20. Miss Ella Harvell has charge of the music during the meeting.

The address of Dr. W. A. Shelton, of Emory University, fraternal delegate from our church to the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, has received high praise in the church press.

Miss Sophie Kuntz, of New Orleans, a member of the graduating class of the Scarritt Bible and Training School this year, has been appointed to work as a home missionary along the Gulf Coast. There are 27 graduates this year.

Dr. Mark N. Terrell, general evangelist, requests us to say that he has a few open dates in the summer and fall which he would be glad to give to the brethren of the Mississippi Conferences. His address is 703 North Crockett St., Sherman, Texas.

Rev. L. P. Wasson, Presiding Elder, Aberdeen district, North Mississippi Conference, sending his appointments for the third round, encloses a personal note to the Editor, saying: "We had a great District Conference, and things are going fine in the district." A full report of the Conference will be furnished later.

The graduating class of Millsaps College this year has 45 members, 25 of whom will receive the degree of Bachelor of Arts, and 20 the degree of Bachelor of Science. In addition, three candidates will receive the degree of Master of Arts, and two the degree of Master of Science.

The commencement sermon for Grenada College was preached last Sunday by Bishop W. N. Ainsworth. The sermon before the Young Women's Christian Association was preached by Rev. T. M. Brownlee, and the commencement address was delivered on Tuesday by Hon. A. G. Gainey.

Rev. W. S. Henry, our pastor at Elizabeth, La., accompanied by his wife and two daughters, Claree and Mary, is making an automobile trip to South Carolina, to visit friends and relatives. Another daughter, Miss Nellie, who has been a student at Leander College during the past session, will join them on the return trip.

Mr. Roger D. Gearheard, a member of the graduating class of the Haynesville (La.) High School, has honored the editor and his family with an invitation to attend the graduating exercises on Friday evening, May 30, at 8 o'clock. Mr. Gearheard is the son of Rev. and Mrs. A. J. Gearheard, Brother Gearheard being pastor of the Methodist church at Haynesville.

Plans have been prepared for the Sunday school annex to the First Methodist Church, Greenville, Miss., and funds are being raised to begin the building as soon as possible. The plans call for as complete Sunday school plant as can be found in the South, and great interest is being taken in its erection. Greenville Methodists are forward-looking folk.

Rev. F. R. Power, pastor of the De Siard charge, Louisiana Conference, writes that he can give a date in July and one in August to any brother who might desire his services in a meeting. His address is Fairbanks, La. The work on the De Siard charge goes well, everything considered. The population is more or less transient, but there are three union Sunday schools and a Ladies' Aid Society which are doing good work.

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church sitting at Springfield, Mass., elected five new bishops—one pastor, one university president, two mission secretaries, and one superintendent of missions. They are Rev. Wallace Elias Brown, Syracuse, N. Y.; Rev. Dr. George Richmond Grose, Green Castle, Ind.; Rev. Titus Lowe, New York City; Rev. Dr. Brenton T. Badley, Calcutta, India; and Rev. Dr. George Amos Miller, Panama City.

Rev. Chas. W. Crisler, pastor of First Church, Baton Rouge, under date of May 24, writes: "We are having a great meeting with Rev. W. B. Hogg, of Trinity Methodist Church, El Paso, Texas, doing the preaching, and Mr. B. G. Grenfell, of Dawson Springs, Ky., leading the singing. The congregations are overflowing the church at each service. The meeting will continue through Monday night. More than forty have united with the church. Brother Hogg has completely captured our city with his great gospel messages. His lecture before the Louisiana State University at chapel hour captivated the 1500 students."

Rev. L. D. Patterson, general evangelist, Menlo, Ga., requests us to say that Rev. Albert Branscomb of Birmingham, Ala., will graduate from the Candler School of Theology at Emory University at the approaching commencement, and expects to join the North Alabama Conference at its next session. In the interim, he will be available to help in revivals, either as preacher or singer, and he does both well. He is a local preacher authorized by the North Alabama Conference as an approved evangelist. Address him at Emory University, Georgia, or in care of the First Methodist Church, Birmingham, Ala., after June 1.

We received from the author, Mrs. Delia Morrison, the booklet, "Sketch of Rev. W. M. Patterson, D. D., Pioneer Missionary to Mexico, 1873-83." Mrs. Patterson, as the young wife of Dr. Patterson, was with him through all the dangers and hardships of his pioneer work in Mexico, and she has written most interestingly of those experiences. As is well known, Bishop John C. Keener was the promoter and organizer of our work in Mexico, and the booklet has many references to him and to those in New Orleans who aided in this work. Mrs. Patterson has been confined to an invalid's chair for the past two years, and the proceeds of the sale of the booklet will assist her in meeting the heavy expenses of her illness. The Woman's Missionary Society at Frankfort, Ky., where Mrs. Patterson lives, has had the book published. It is a beautiful piece of work mechanically, and its contents are of great interest. The price is fifty cents. We hope it will have a large sale.

A SYMPOSIUM ON UNIFICATION.

Since last week, additional replies have been received to our request for statements concerning the matter of unification. We give them below.

Mr. J. B. Holland, Meridian, Miss., Delegate to General Conference.

"With the information and the light before me, I hold with the Commission that our two churches are essentially one, in origin, in belief, in spirit, in purpose and in policy; therefore, I am for the plan as outlined by the Commission, believing that the troublesome conditions that arose in the early stages of the movement have been well and thoroughly removed and that we can enter into this unification without loss, but with infinite gain to the Kingdom of God."

Rev. H. M. Ellis, Presiding Elder, Brookhaven District, Mississippi Conference.

"It offers no unity. It screams out the distrust in which each church holds the other.

"It corrects no wrongs. Instead, it confers titles to usurped territory, legalizes violated agreements, and removes the fence from between the two fighting cocks.

"It is a sort of public handshake of gladiators, unrelenting and unyielding—an invitation to disfigurement, acceptable only to the rash sentimentalist and to him grimly determined not to share the disfigurement.

"It is unconscious Pharisaism, pretending before the world to do what is determined shall not be done."

Dr. Rolfe Hunt, Lorman, Miss., Delegate to General Conference.

"By reference to records of our Conference at Hot Springs it will be seen that the authors and defenders of the minority report, as well as those who championed the majority report, avowed themselves in favor of unification. The only difference was as to kind. If we cannot agree on the present plan, what is the hope for us, and what do our pretensions mean? With safeguards proposed, we can co-operate safely and gradually remove minor differences. It is the beginning of a long-sought and happy consummation."

Rev. M. L. Burton Presiding Elder of the Jackson District, Mississippi Conference.

"Your request to hand. The General Conference that met at Hot Springs was unanimous for unification. The majority and minority reports of the Committee on Church Relations and Bible cause both favored unification. The minority wanted to instruct the Commission. The majority was adopted. The Commission was appointed. The conditions laid down have been met.

"The General Conference of the Northern Church has adopted the report by an overwhelming majority. The question now is, what shall we do? Adopt or reject?

"I have never been a "bitter ender" on either side. I voted for the majority report at Hot Springs. That a plan can be found that will suit everybody is humanly impossible. The story of the old king who tried to make the clocks run alike is applicable in this case. If he could not make clocks agree as to time, how could he make his subjects have the same opinion? That seven million Methodists will ever come to a unit on any one plan is not to be looked for. I think the present plan is feasible."

Rev. Franklin N. Parker, D.D., of Emory University, Delegate to the General Conference.

"The question of unification in the two great Methodist Churches has filled a large place in the deliberations of these sister Churches during several quadrenniums. Our Church has renewed its commands to its commissioners to seek if possible a plan by which the two Churches could be reunited. By every token the General Conference has expressed its belief in the desirability and feasibility of such a union.

"A plan has been adopted by the Joint Commission and it has received an overwhelming majority vote of the Northern General Conference. Our own plan has been accepted, a plan written by a Southern man, and a plan particularly safeguarding the rights of both branches of the Church.

"I believe our General Conference ought to adopt the plan and send it down to the Annual Conferences, where the final decision rests. The matter needs to be carefully, and, above all, prayerfully, considered by the larger representation of the Church in the Conferences at large.

"We must now face the actual meaning of all these tentative deliberations on the subject which have been presented to the two churches from time to time. The supreme question is not mere policy, but can we best further the influence of Methodism in helping to bring in the Kingdom of God. Surely, if we seek with all our hearts we may find divine guidance in this most momentous contact of the two Churches since the great separation."

Rev. W. W. Holmes, Pastor of Noel Memorial Church, Shreveport, La., and a Delegate to the General Conference.

"If Official Methodism has been honest in the resolutions of its many Conferences, in the messages of its fraternal delegates, and in the creation and continued support of a Commission whose sole purpose was to find a way and devise a plan whereby Methodism might become one church, then there can be no doubt that Official Methodism, at least, favors unification. If Official Methodism properly represents the Church at large, there is but one conclusion, viz: the Church, too, favors unification.

"At large expense, and through several years, our Commissioners on Unification have been working on plans; and now they come with the best plan they have been able to devise, a plan on which they have agreed, and a plan which has been overwhelmingly endorsed by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

"The question before our Church now, as I see it, is: 'Do we favor the present plan of unification?'

"The editor of the Advocate has asked for an expression on the subject. Personally, I have heartily favored the unification of Methodism for a long time. The more I study the present plan the better I like it. However, I am going to the General Conference on July 2, and to our Annual Conference on Nov. 19, with an open mind on the subject. While the question of unification has been before the Church for many years, and the present plan long enough for all to be familiar with it, we want all the information we can get. That's the way I feel about it."

HOME.

The community that has neat, well-kept, attractive homes may be counted upon to be a community of progressive, contented people. This is true of every community, large or small. The city slums have no homes in them in the real meaning of the term. They merely have rooms in which people are forced to live, and they are not attractive, pleasant rooms. The country community where most of the homes need repair and repainting, and some of them are almost at the tumble-down stage, is not a progressive community. Its people are not measuring up to their duty in home making. Home should be the pleasantest place to be found. In the home families are kept together, much of life is spent, and happiness is possible. If it is a pleasant, well-kept home, there is more likelihood that it will be the abode of happy people, and happy people must of necessity be good people, moral, right-living people. The other kind do not know real happiness. Better homes, therefore, really do mean better people. This is why it is important to make the home the chief place, the pleasantest place, and the most attractive place that we can.—Anniston (Ala.) Star.

The morning inspires to resolution and action, but we must have plan. "I will—but how? We must plan to give definite direction to our energies. Powder and shot without the gun barrel would be wasted. Put them in the gun barrel, and this will direct them to the mark. Plan is the gun barrel to direct our resolutions.—H. W. Knickerbocker.

Our beloved brother and prayerful friend, Rev. L. P. Morehead, of Pelahatchie, Miss., in the midst of their happy and busy life, WALTER LAMPKIN, on May 1, 1924. He was about two years of age. Funeral services were conducted by Rev. W. H. Jordan of Winchester, and interment made in Mud Creek cemetery, after which on the 2d inst. While so far as this life is concerned, home is darkened to father and mother and little sister, heaven is richer and their interests there are greater than ever before "Of such is the kingdom of heaven."

MRS. LAURA E. COX, beloved wife of Robt. L. Cox, was born Aug. 11, 1847, and departed this life to be with Christ, Oct. 11, 1923. She was converted and joined the Methodist church when a young girl. Her life was one of constant faith and loyalty to her Lord. She died in the hope of the triumph of a living faith in the risen Christ. Her children rise to call her blessed. Her constant aim and prayer for them was that they might experience the divine completion and encouragement of real Christ and become partakers in a future kingdom of other days. In these days of uncertainty and uncertainty she meet the One who loved her so that He gave his life for her redemption. Waiting and watching in the safe are her devoted husband, three sons, five daughters, numerous grandchildren and a large company of friends who, though sad at her departure, nevertheless look forward to a great reunion around the great white throne. The funeral was held at the Methodist church. The sermon was preached by her pastor J. W. Faulk, assisted by Rev. C. C. Young, the pastor of the Baptist Church. Her son-in-law Rev. Lee Cottle, led in prayer. Grandsons were the pallbearers, while granddaughters carried the flowers and decorated the grave. "She sleeps, but not forever. There will be a glorious dawn," and at that dawning all her faithful loved ones will with her be crowned with life.

J. W. FAULK, Pastor.

RESOLUTIONS.

Inasmuch as it has pleased our Heavenly Father to take from our midst one of our class in the person of RICHARD A. ROBERTSON, who, for the past twenty years, has been a faithful and regular attendant with our Bible class, at Sibley Church; be it

Resolved, That we accept the Divine will and work of him for whom we have to do, and that we extend our sympathy and love to the family, and pray the blessings of the Heavenly Father upon them in their deep sorrow.

Resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Webster Signal and the New Orleans Christian Advocate, also that a copy be sent to the family.

Signed: Mrs. H. C. Boyett, O. T. Slater, J. F. Dring, Committee.

THE COUNTRY SUNDAY SCHOOL.

By Rev. J. F. Dring.

It has been my pleasure to work in the country Sunday school all of my life, and the experience that I have had there has not made me believe that the work done there is a failure, but an overwhelming success. I am sure that all our readers can testify to the same experience. The simple story of Jesus and his love, as told to me while in the one-room school, has stayed with me. I went to the church in a lumber wagon, or on foot, and had time to stay and hear all that was to be heard. It was my good fortune to be rocked in a Methodist Sunday school cradle. Thank God to-day for a mother who loved the church and Sunday school! I am ready to say that if we centralize the Sunday schools, and carry them to the city, we destroy the foundation of our Christian civilization; then it follows that we should find out how to make the school in the country church what it should be as an educational institution.

1. What do we need in the country town to make it equal to the city in imparting religious knowledge?

To my mind, this problem can be solved by a closer relation of city and country. A boy will leave the country and go to live in a city with a lofty conception of church life. He sees there the great teaching force that is able to impart knowledge and before the mind and open heart he sees him on the whole program. He studies to make himself a workman approved of God and ashamed. Now, what shall be done with that boy? Ought he to keep right away in his life true knowledge? No, let him be sent out to the country Sunday school to meet the Teachers' Council in regular session and sit with them and help them to formulate plans to use in the one-room church. He can do it; he has a vision of the need of that church; he remembers how much he desired help when he was there. I am convinced that in the council with teachers is the place to begin with the evolution of the country Sunday school. They are the leaders, the head above all. When the man of the city feels the need, and the country desires the help, and they come together on a common level, great good will come of this fellowship.

I am not so much taken up with the idea of sending men out from the organized Bible classes. I have been called an ignoramus by some of these fellows; that I do not appreciate. The country Sunday school will not stand for them to come out and dictate to them; they are a people who think, and read, and pray, and in years past sent out many great men who have blessed the world, but they are willing to be led. Brother Bible class man, if you don't intend to go but once, you had better stay at home; if you are going out there to make a speech, you had better not go; but if you will go out and get down, or climb up, to where these country folk are, and be one of them, and show them that you are still a countryman, then you will be able to help.

My desire is to see the foremost teachers of the graded schools go out and be in council with the teachers and officers of the country school, and then be brotherly enough, and have love enough to urge the poor and helpless country teacher, with no equipment, no library, no Sunday school rooms, just in a little one-room church, that is the pride of his or her heart, to come to your council meeting in the city church. By this kind of fellowship it will be possible to put the machinery of the city and the power of its educational program into the country church.

And in all of this program, let us remember that it is not possible to build fully equipped churches in every community. Then let us by this small beginning of council meetings build a program of work for the one-room country school.

Sibley, La.

The only way to solve the traffic problem of this country is to pass a law that only paid-for cars are allowed to use the highways. That would make traffic so scarce that we could use our boulevards for children's playgrounds.—Will Rodgers.

FROM BENOIT AND GLEN ALLAN, MISS.

Dear Dr. Tarkey: We closed our meeting at Benoit Sunday night, April 13. This meeting was perhaps the greatest ever held in the community. The preaching was done by our own evangelist, the Rev. John W. Robertson. Congregations increased at each service until the house would not accommodate the people. Robertson is an able and effective preacher. All of his sermons were good, but a few of them were masterpieces. He is one of the most effective evangelists that we have in our church. Men and women, old and young, were convicted of their sins and came to the altar and asked God to forgive them. Some of the leaders of the community who had not spoken to each other for years, were reconciled to each other and to God. Quite a few joined the different churches, a weekly prayer meeting was organized, and the Sunday school interest was greatly increased. At the close of the meeting an offering of $325 was made to Brother Robertson. May the Lord continue to bless him in his work.

Just a few items that should be reported from Glen Allan. We will soon have completed a beautiful Methodist church at Glen Allan. It will be adequate in every way for the community and will cost about $17,000. We have our meeting set to begin Aug. 3, with Rev. W. J. Miller, one of the general evangelists, to do the preaching. Our Sunday school here is good, and we have one of the best prayer meetings anywhere, that meets twice a week. We have had as many as 100 people at prayer meeting. The parsonage here has recently been repaired and repainted. Our parsonage at Benoit has also been repaired and repainted. You see, we have one of those charges that have two parsonages and one preacher.

Yours in the work,

A. R. BEASLEY.

DICKS' MUL-EN-OL

Is a most efficient antiseptic in a convenient form. Keep it in the house for instant use in case of burns, scalds, cuts or accidents.

Then you'll not be sorry.

No remedy can cure all ailments of the human body, but an immense number of people suffer from aches, pains and disease symptoms when their real trouble is lack of iron in the blood. It is the iron in your blood that enables you to get the nourishment out of your food. Without iron your food merely passes through you without doing you any good; you don't get the strength out of it. There is one universally known tonic that has helped thousands because it contains iron like the iron in fresh vegetables and like the iron in your blood.

NUXATED IRON

is an eminent physician's best blood prescription, standardized. It is recommended for all anaemic and run-down conditions. It has helped thousands of others. It should help you. Ask for it at any drug store.

Gives Credit to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. Hopes Other Women Will Benefit by Her Experience

Skowhegan, Me.—"I was sick most of the time and could not get around to do my work without being all tired out so I would have to lie down. One day when I was reading the paper I saw the Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertisement and saw what it did for other women, so I thought I would try it. I have taken three bottles, and cannot begin to tell you what it has already done for me. I do all my work now and keep up the whole day long without lying down. I have no more headaches nor tired feelings. I hope every woman who takes the Vegetable Compound will get as much benefit out of it as I have." —Mrs. PERCY W. RICHARDSON, R. F. D. No. 2, Skowhegan, Maine.

You have just read how Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound helped Mrs. Richardson. She gave it a trial after she saw what it had done for other women. For nearly fifty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been thus praised by women. For sale by druggists everywhere.

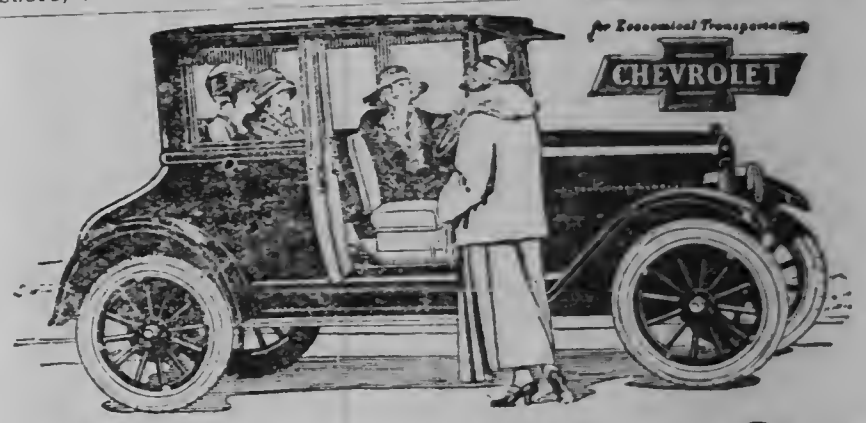
Don't Hide Them With a Veil; Remove Them With Othine—Double Strength

This preparation for the treatment of freckles is so successful in removing freckles and giving a clear, beautiful complexion that it is sold under guarantee to refund the money if it fails.

Don't hide your freckles under a veil; get an ounce of Othine and remove them. Even the first few applications should show a wonderful improvement, some of the lighter freckles vanishing entirely.

Be sure to ask the druggist for the double-strength Othine; it is this that is sold on the money-back guarantee.



The Woman's Own Car

All Chevrolet models are popular with women on account of their beauty of line and finish and ease of handling.

The new four-passenger coupe was designed especially for women. Its stylish, distinguished appearance makes immediate appeal, and closer examination promotes enthusiasm. Best of all—the price is surprisingly low for so high-grade a production, equipped as it is with a Fisher Body, two extra wide doors that make feasible graceful entrance to and exit from the car. Single, comfortable driver's seat, ample room for two in the rear seat, and a fourth folding seat for an extra passenger.

Comfortably, tastefully upholstered and artistically trimmed with good-grade hardware.

Plate-glass windows on all four sides. Cord tires on easily demountable rims, with extra rim.

Although designed with especial consideration of our women friends, we find this model is also favored by many men, for business and family use. Merchandise samples can be carried inside the car instead of in the rear compartment. Evenings and week ends the same car admirably meets the requirements of the small family.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Grenville, the Grenada, and the Aberdeen Districts have passed resolutions making provision for training schools to be held next year. Who will say we are not making progress?

Rev. L. P. Wasson, presiding elder of the Aberdeen District, requested me to present some phase of religious education to the members of the district conference each day of the conference. The response upon the part of the members of this conference was hearty.

The Aherdeen District Conference passed a resolution accepting the programs of work furnished hy the General Sunday School Board. When these programs are put into effect, there will he a wonderful increase in the enrollment of the schools and a general toning up of every department of church work.

Pastors, teachers, and young people are enrolling for the Conference and district standard training schools to be held during the month of June—not only enrolling, hut buying hooks so as to he prepared for the work of these schools. This is a step in advance of any previous year.

We all have an endless fight against ignorance, laziness, and egotism. On with the fight until they are conquered! Sir Rohert Hall says: "Sound religious instruction is a perpetual counterpoise to the forces of depravity." We have a task worthy of the leadership and co-operation of an all-wise and omnipotent God, a task that challenges every memher of every church in the land.

Do you not think such a task is of sufficient importance to bring us facc to face with God in prayer? Is it not worthy of sacrifice and self-denial? Is it not worthy of the first place in our plans?

Have you forgotten your missionary pledge? Are you giving missionary instruction? Is there a missionary spirit in the church? How many men and women really have a passion for the kingdom of God? Study the processes that hring such a condition to pass, then put those processes to work.

SOME LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

The Shreveport District Sunday school conference had 170 delegates present at its recent session at Greenwood, with the following district officers present: Mrs. N. L. Hudson, Elementary Superintendent; Rev. G. M. Hicks, Intermediate-Senior Superintendent; Dr. A. S. Lutz, Teacher Training Superintendent.

Dr. R. H. Wynn presided in the absence of the district secretary, Mr. H. E. Gump. The conference authorized the presiding elder to appoint a Board of Managers for the District Standard Training School, the date of which will be Oct. 12 to 17.

The conference made the following changes in district officers: Rev. Guy M. Hicks, Belcher, District Secretary; Mrs. John Satterly, Shreveport, Superintendent of Young People, in place of Mrs. R. E. Bozeman; Mr. W. J. Sharp, Mansfield, Adult Superintendent, in place of Mr. L. T. Sylvest.

The Monroe District Conference went on record in favor of sub-district Sunday school organization, and authorized the Executive Committee to do this work and appoint sub-district officers.

Mr. C. W. Scates, of Wisner, is the new district secretary for the Monroe District, and we prophesy that under his administration this great Sunday school district will make some great advances during the coming year.

The writer had the pleasure of spending Sunday, May 18, in Columbia, La. The superintendent of Sunday school there is Mr. I. A. Hearne, who has a fine group of Sunday school workers. This school has had its superintendent present during the last two Annual Sunday School Conferences, Alexandria, and the Homer Conference. Last year they sent two delegates to the District Standard Training School, and are planning on sending at least five this year to Monroe.

Mrs. J. M. Henry, Assistant Conference Superintendent, will make an itinerary in the Lake Charles District, beginning at Lafayette, May 28, in the interest of the District Standard Training School. The pastor at Lafayette writes: "Yours in regard to Mrs. Henry's coming here on the 28th inst., in the interest of the Sunday school work, reached me. I will be glad to arrange for a conference with our Sunday school workers, as you suggest, following our prayer meeting service on the night of the 28th."

The Wisner Sunday school of the "C" type was recently checked up, and the following report from the central office was received: "Points 2, 3, 4, 9, and 10 seem to he complete; point No. 1 is lacking in the matter of organized classes and the observation of Promotion Day; point No. 5 indicates inadequate class separation; point No. 6 does not give enough information concerning types of Christian Scrvice done by the classes; point No. 7 is incomplete as to the reading of the approved books, and the taking of training courses; point No. 8 indicates that Decision Day will be observed in July. I have granted credit on point No. 3 with the understanding that the pastor will attend the workers' council meeting. The meetings must be held at a time when the pastor can attend. It is especially important that the pastor of a circuit should be with the workers in a meeting of this kind."

At the district conference the Alexandria school of the "B" type was checked up, and the following report from the central office was received: "Points Nos. 1, 5, 8, 9, seem to be in full operation, and four seals seem to be due. Point No. 2 indicates that the classes are not organized and the departments are not meeting seperately in addition to the Sunday school hour. Point No. 3 indicates that only a small percentage of the officers and teachers attend the workers' council. Point No. 4 seems to be complete, except with regard to the numher of books in the workers' library. There are eighty officers and teachers and only forty-seven books available. Point No. 6 is complete except one of the song books. 'World-wide Revival Songs,' is not approved. Point No. 7 indicates the training requirement. Point No. 10 indicates that no reports are made to the homes."

We are giving full reports from the above schools that our readers may somewhat check up on their own Sunday school, and get a better understanding, point by point, of what we mean by the Programs of Work "C" and "B."

VICKSBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE

The Vicksburg District Conference met at Hermanville, Miss., May 20-22. Rev. W. F. Baggett and his fine people extended every possible courtesy. Only one preacher was absent. He was kept away on account of sickness. There was also a good representation of lay delegates. Rev. W. B. Jones proved that he is a splendid "presiding" elder.

The afternoon of May 21 was devoted to the work of the Sunday school. At this time Rev. J. C. Chambers held the Vicksburg District Sunday School Institute.

Two fine young men were licensed to preach—Roy Tillman Scott and Marlin Howard McCormick.

The following were chosen lay delegates to the Annual Conference: J. M. Sessions, Mrs. Z. D. Clarke, H. H. Crisler, S. W. Sharbrough, Mrs. W. H. Huntley, J. M. Miller, Mrs. T. B. Cottrell, Mrs. Rovella Saxon. Alternates: I. Z. McKay, Mrs. Flora Dawkins.

The preaching was well done by Revs. T. J. O'Neil, W. T. Griffin, W. H. Huntley, Rolfe Hunt.

The reports of the pastors showed that the Vicksburg District is making progress. There have been an unusual number of accessions up to date. Especially large ingatherings followed revivals at Delta City, Cary, and Gibson Memorial.

The laymen are busy. Several squadrons are at work. May the good work go on. S. W. Sharbrough was re-elected district lay leader and H. H. Crisler and W. S. Ford were chosen associate district lay leaders.

The following visitors were present and brought helpful messages: Rev. J. M. Morse, Mississippi Conference Secretary of Education; Rev. J. C. Chambers, Mississippi Conference Sunday School Secretary; J. Reese Lin, of Millsaps College; Rev. W. T. Griffin, Mississippi Conference Commissioner for Orphanage; Chas. Assaaf, Syrian evangelist; Rev. H. A. Gatlin, of the Mississippi Conference Board of Church Extension; Rev. B. F. Lewis, Superintendent of the Methodist Orphanage; Rev. J. F. McClellan, of the Mississippi Conference Training School; Dr. J. M. Sullivan, lay leader of the Mississippi Conference; W. D. Hawkins, Mississippi Conference Secretary of Missions.

Woodville was selected as the seat of the next district conference.

This round of quarterly conferences is to be more than the regular conference and preaching service. It will be a series of institutes, especially on the circuits, an all-day program of great interest. There will be a team of workers and speakers, and it is hoped that great crowds of people will come to all these meetings. Rev. W. M. Campbell, the district evangelist, will be in the party from May 28 to June 6, and perhaps at other times also. Rev. R. H. B. Gladney will be in the party from July 10 to 20.

Let the pastors take advantage of this opportunity by getting all the officials and as many of the membership as possible to these meetings that the work may receive the stimulus and inspiration that they are sure to bring to the people.

Where two hours are indicated, instance Litton, June 2, 11 a.m., 2 p.m., it is earnestly requested that lunch be served at the church after preaching, the business session following the lunch. This will give opportunity for vital personal contact, a better acquaintance among the officials, consultation, and conference. It is also requested that personal invitation be given neighboring pastors and officials to meet with us. These visiting pastors will be called on to bring the gospel message, and there will be an exchange of methods used, etc., that should be most helpful. To this end let all superintendents and teachers make it a point to be present at these conferences. Marked progress should be registered through the whole district. All finances should be given unusual emphasis on the part of the stewards. Thanking all parties concerned in advance for the hearty cooperation that obtains in this district, and praying that the round may make a new achievement record.

Cordially and fraternally,

Tyro, at Loxahoma, July 19, 10 a.m.
Crowder, at Brook's Chapel, July 20, 10 a.m.

It will be noticed that I am to hold three group conferences on my third round, viz., Byhalia and Olive Branch, at Miller, June 6, at 10 a.m.; Cockrum and Pleasant Hill, at Lewisburg, June 20, at 10 a.m.; Courtland and Shuford, at Chappel Hill, June 27, at 10 a.m. The preachers and officials of these charges will please note and act accordingly.

I also call attention to the fact that I am calling the quarterly conferences on the circuit to meet at 10 a.m. I am doing this because of a special program I shall have for the conferences on my third round. I shall have with me a layman (or other visitor) who will make an address on the value of the church to the community and to the world. I will secure the speaker for this occasion. I desire that the preacher, either before or after the time of the meeting of his quarterly conference, have all-day services in each of his other churches, at which service he shall have some one speak on the value of the church to the community and to the world. I want the preacher to preach a sermon on that same day on "Life Stewardship." Brethren, let's put the same enthusiasm into our work that we would if we knew each day were the last we would have for service upon earth.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

Age 31 Has Tragic Meaning for Average Man or Woman

U. S. Life Tables show health span extends only from 18 to 31—Earnings fall off rapidly after 40

Physical freedom and full vigor—what are they worth to you? This is a question the average American can answer from his own bitter experience—for at age 31 the average American begins to slip. After 40 his earning power drops off rapidly. These appalling facts are shown by the United States Life Tables, 1920.

Age 31! The age at which men and women should be entering their period of greatest usefulness and happiness! The beginning of the supposed "prime of life."

Not the prime of life. The age of decay! What causes contributo the fearful condition?

Unwise eating. Sleeplessness. The [illegible] of the body with drug stimulants which appear to give added [illegible] but actually borrow this [illegible] from the body's own reserve.

Every school child is taught to [illegible] Most mothers enforce [illegible] rule for children. [illegible] maturity—and the squandering of the reserve strength which [illegible] built up. Figures show [illegible] average American is able to [illegible] just 13 years. Then, [illegible] of his life yet before him, he [illegible] grade.

Medical literature classifies caffein [illegible]. Like strychnin, it is [illegible] given by doctors in cases of [illegible]. The average cup of coffee [illegible] the usual dose of caffein [illegible] used in these cases.

[illegible] contributes no nourishment to [illegible]. Its only virtues, as a beverage, are its warmth and flavor. A hot, [illegible] drinkless drink is a benefit with every meal.

People in 2,000,000 American homes enjoy such a drink in Postum. A drink with the rich, mellow, full flavor and fragrance of roasted whole wheat and bran—flavor which people in 2,000,000 homes like better than any other.

Try Postum for thirty days—you can't expect to rid yourself of the effect of a habit of years in a day or two. Know that you are enjoying a drink which contributes, rather than robs, reserve strength. We will give you—free—a full week's supply of Postum to start you on your thirty-day test.

Ask for either Postum Cereal (the kind you boil) or Instant Postum, the easiest drink in the world to prepare. Either kind costs less than most other hot drinks. With your week's free supply, we will have Carrie Blanchard—nationally famous for the goodness of her Postum—send you her own directions.

After 31, what? Take one easy step in the right direction, by sending for your first week's supply of Postum—now!

N. O. Christian Advocate—

REV. DAN KELLY AT CATCHINGS, MISS.

On Sunday evening, May 4, Rev. C. A. Schultz, our devout, consecrated and enthusiastic pastor, met with his large congregation at the Methodist church. He delivered a soul-stirring sermon that verged into a most wonderful testimony and prayer service, which was the beginning of a series of revival services by Brother Dan E. Kelly, who preached his first sermon on Monday evening. Not only Catchings, but surrounding towns and communities fully realized that a man of God was in our midst, and came to hear the old-time gospel message of repentance and regeneration through a risen Christ. Though comparatively a stranger to so many of his hearers, by his eloquence, wit, and humor, ceaseless flow of language and forceful illustrations, the glow and sunshine of love in his soul, Brother Kelly impresses one and all as a man imbued with a high and holy purpose.

Brother Kelly won for himself a warm place in the hearts of these people, and our meeting soon developed into a real devotional interest by the entire membership of the church.

His earnest plea to those who profess religion is to give more attention to non-law-abiding citizens, namely, gamblers, drunkards, bootleggers, liars and thieves, who are whittling away their lives at a terrific rate, which results in a wrecked career, doing their part in obstructing the progress of the government.

The services held at 8 o'clock in the morning in the school auditorium reached the school children, who come from widely spread communities. On Saturday some of the planters, with Brothers Schultz and Kelly, held a service for the colored people, which proved to be a very helpful service to them.

On Sunday, the last day of the meeting, four services were held. The first was at 11 o'clock, after which a most bountiful dinner was served by the ladies of the community. At 2:30 o'clock, another great service "for men only" was held. Herein he did not fail to emphasize the dangers of social evils. He holds up the cross of Christ as a remedy for the world's ills; he pleads most earnestly that men accept God's way and seek a home in Heaven, prepared for his followers. At 4 o'clock was held the Mother's Day and flower service, the method of which is wholly original and doubly impressive. It is only when the bud opens up its petals and begins to give itself out to others that its beauty and fragrance are developed. The moment you fling open the door of your heart and allow the rose of your sympathy and helpfulness to send out, without stint, its fragrance and beauty upon every passer-by, whether pauper or millionaire, you begin to develop power. So let us not postpone doing, as Brother Kelly says, good deeds and giving flowers to the living instead of the dead. At 8 o'clock, again, a great crowd gathered to hear the last message, which proved to be possibly the strongest which he had delivered.

There is no way to tell just what has been accomplished for the church. The visible results are: One hundred and fifty-four members added to the Methodist and the Baptist churches, many of whom came by families.

Brother Kelly, fifteen years an evangelist, holds that a revival is absolutely a spirit rather than a method.

It was my privilege to be a member of the church at Bogue Chitto while Brother Kelly was our pastor, and his preaching has meant much to my life, and many times since it has been my pleasure to hear him preach. We needed him in this town, and we shall always rejoice for the wonderful results of his labor here, and our prayer is that God may continue to bless his work at other places as he is doing here.

Contracted Cold at a Billy Sunday Revival

Developed Into Systemic Catarrh Recommends PE-RU-NA

Mr. A. R. Wilson LaFollette, Tenn.

The letter written a short time ago by Mr. A. R. Wilson of LaFollette, Tenn., brings some more direct evidence of the value of Pe-ru-na in the treatment of catarrhal diseases.

It reads as follows:—"While attending Billy Sunday's great revival at Knoxville, Tenn., last February I contracted a cold which weakened my entire system. I have taken only three bottles of Pe-ru-na and feel like a new man. It is a great system builder as well as a great catarrh remedy."

To attempt to even estimate the thousands who, in the last half century, have come to know and appreciate the merits of Pe-ru-na would be worse than useless. The number is astonishing and increasing daily.

Your nearest dealer has Pe-ru-na in both tablet and liquid form. Insist upon having Pe-ru-na, the original treatment for catarrh.

JASPER COUNTY SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTITUTE.

On the morning of May 10, 1924, convened at Montrose, Miss., a county-wide Sunday school institute. To say it was a success would not give expression to the thought I wish to convey. It was a decided success from start to finish—a feast of great things. It seemed that the workers were filled and thrilled to overflowing, really anxious to impart some of the hidden truths to their fellow-workers so as to strengthen them. It seemed that every one had the same ideal, the one objective, that of leading some one to Christ.

One peculiar feature—the attendance was splendid, representatives from the different schools all over the county, especially those asked to take part on the program, being present. It was indeed a great privilege and an inspiration to listen to those splendid addresses given by men of God. To be abreast with and to keep in touch with the Sunday school movement, we must be up and doing—there is no room for idlers.

The best service we can render is but a small factor in establishing the great truths and principles in the young life. When I was but a young man, I made a speech on the subject, "Old things have passed and new ones are taking their place." I have lived long enough to see this statement verified, especially is this true in the Sunday school work. I mean no criticism, no discredit to the work, nor to the workers of other days, God bless them; but the old Sunday school will not do to-day; the old superintendent will not bring things to pass to-day; the old teacher will not stand the test to-day. The old music (oh, how sweet!) will do to-day. Old things are passing away; new inventions, new revelations, are taking place in a Sunday school way. Picture for yourself the Sunday school of to-morrow—a beautiful church, with all necessary equipments for Sunday school work, a well organized school in all its departments, a loving, loyal pastor, a wide-awake superintendent, well trained teachers, and a devoted student body. Will we adopt this as our ideal, from the smallest to the largest schools? Our great church is pressing toward that goal; many are engaged in the fight. Love for God and salvation of souls are the imperative need.

The influence of the work of the institute is far-reaching and will have a telling effect in years to come. You could but predict the result of the institute had you the privilege of listening to our Assistant Field Secretary, O. C. Hull, deliver some of his heart-searching messages. It is a great privilege to hear him; always be glad when you know he is coming your way.

The institute was properly organized and will meet annually. If the beginning is any indication of the future, great will be the future.

We earnestly believe that the Sunday school work in our county (Jasper) will grow and continue to develop until almost every one will have some knowledge of the Word of God. Let me admonish every one to get a greater vision of the many things that lie before us, see the necessity of service, then serve as God directs.

OUSTS RHEUMATISM.

Here it is. Those awful pains of rheumatism so common during the cold rainy weather are completely forgotten, and the rheumatism is expelled from your system by the very simple treatment of taking Renwar Salts which neutralizes the uric acid in the blood, and Renwar attacks the very cause of this malady and expells the uric acid from the system. Renwar is entirely dependable. It does not in any way injure the stomach or affect the heart. It is prescribed by the best physicians, and your money is refunded if Renwar fails to relieve you of rheumatism. Give Renwar a trial and you will never regret it. Mr. Benagh of the Nashville Railway and Light Company says, "Within two or three days after using Renwar my rheumatism disappeared." Price 50c. Ask your druggist for it, or write Warner Drug Company, Nashville, Tenn.—Adv.

OPPOSED TO UNIFICATION.

Dear Brother Carley: You have opened the columns of your paper for any one to express himself in favor of or against uniting the Northern and Southern churches. What I have to say will have no bearing one way or another, but my heart is full and I must speak. There are no terms upon which I would be willing to have our dear old Southern Methodist Church united to that great Northern body. If the Northern people wanted to come South, why did they not join our churches? Why erect Northern churches in the South? Now they are not satisfied with that, they want to wipe us out—change the name. There has been an unrest in our church ever since this question of unification has been going on; fewer genuine conversions. Our God is not a God of confusion. I know our churches are filling up with members, but how few whose lives tally with the Bible standard! Do "all things in Christ Jesus become new?" "Old things pass away?" God wants the quality, not the quantity.

This is from the very heart of a 75-year-old Southern Methodist.

MRS. J. E. WIMBERLY.

Port Arthur, Tex.

We cannot all achieve renown;
Some will ascend and some stay down.
Though many win the world's acclaim,
A host will work unknown to fame.
Do, then, thy duty as it comes;
March without blare of brass or drums.
Greater than conquerors or kings
Is he who's great in little things.

SO WEAK, WAS LIKE A SHADOW

Oklahoma Woman, After Much Suffering, Began to Take Cardui—Says She Was Strengthened and Built Up.

Fort Towson, Okla.—"I used Cardui for years," says Mrs. M. C. Ragsdale, of this place, "and know it did me more good than any medicine I ever used.

"I used to suffer with womanly trouble that weakened me until I was a mere shadow, nervous, and could not eat or sleep. I did not feel that I could live.

"It seemed that nothing I took helped me till I heard of Cardui and began to use it. It strengthened me as it was recommended to do. It regulated and built me up till I was like another woman."

Cardui is a safe, mild-acting extract of medicinal herbs and contains no harmful or deleterious ingredients. One of its chief ingredients has been in use for hundreds of years for the treatment of certain female troubles. It is a scientific medicine, made in a scientific way.

Thousands of women have written to describe how Cardui has relieved them of pain and suffering, and helped them to build up their health and strength.

Why not try it for your case?

Take CARDUI The Woman's Tonic

FROM REV. T. H. MILLS.

When we arrived in Duncan, following the Annual Conference, there was not a stick of furniture in the parsonage, for it was new, and had just been completed, but as quick work was done as the writer has ever seen done, and in just a few days the parsonage was ready for occupancy, and it stands to-day a monument to the pride of the people of this charge. Things have moved onward since the work of the year was begun, and we can truly be thankful for good Sunday schools, good Missionary Societies, and the majority of the membership interested at least in some way in the activities of the church.

The Missionary Society at Bobo boasts of having every lady in the town as a member. The same thing is true at Alligator, with the exception of one or two. At Duncan a Society was organized in February, and is now about ready to be placed upon the Honor Roll. Our Sunday schools are doing good work, and we can show a Men's Bible Class at Alligator, that was organized in March, no better than which is to be found in any town or church of the same size, I am sure. We have received forty-two into the church since Conference, and our presiding elder was much pleased with the fine spirit manifest at both the quarterly confereuces this year, and especially the second, and we are planning for the best in the history of the charge, when our third one is held June 4. A wonderful uplift has come to our communities through the Gipsy Smith meeting at Clarksdale and the Dan Kelly meeting at Duncan and Alligator.

Our finances are in good shape, and are looked after as systematically as any other business enterprise.

The Lord is blessing us with health, a good home, friends, a place to serve, and pleuty of work to do. Now, who would not be thankful to live to serve?

CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 71—No. 23. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3565.

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, JUNE 5, 1924. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

EDITORIAL NOTE.

The editor of the Advocate is desirous that the fullest possible discussion of the subject of Unification be had before the meeting of the special session of the General Conference to be held in Chattanooga, Tenn., July 2. All available space in the paper during June will, therefore, be devoted to this subject. All who wish to do so are invited to express their opinions. The limitations of space make it desirable that these expressions be as brief as possible. A considerable supply of material is already in hand. The usual rules as to acceptability apply to all articles submitted.

METHODIST UNION—WHICH WAY?

By Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, D.D., LL.D.

The Methodist Episcopal Church in America was divided in 1844, the two resulting churches being familiarly known as the Northern Methodist and the Southern Methodist churches. It is not necessary now to review the circumstances which led to this division. The plan of separation was agreed to by the delegates from the North and South in the General Conference of the undivided church, less than a score of votes being cast against it. For eighty years these two independent churches have prosecuted their work with such success that both are now among the largest Protestant bodies in the world, the Northern Church having 4,500,000 members and the Southern 2,500,000.

For fifty years fraternal exchanges have taken place between the churches at regular intervals, and for twenty years negotiations have been going on more or less constantly looking to their reunion. Joint commissions have labored long and earnestly to devise some acceptable plan of union. A plan was finished and submitted to the General Conference of the Northern Church four years ago, but was promptly rejected by it, or rather was received with such scant favor that it was never brought to a vote for adoption or rejection. A new commission was appointed two years ago, under a wider grant of authority, with the result that a new plan has now been recommended to the two churches. This new plan has lately received the approval of the General Conference of the Northern Church, and is now awaiting the action of the Southern General Conference, which will soon convene to consider it. If the plan should be approved by the Southern General Conference (by a two-thirds vote), it would then be submitted to all the Annual Conferences of both churches. Its adoption would require two-thirds of all the votes cast in the Northern Annual Conferences and three-fourths of all the votes in the Southern Annual Conferences, this being the constitutional process in the two churches. The plan now being before our church for official action, I wish to submit some views concerning it. Action must now be taken, not on the abstract question of Christian union, but on the particular contract for union that is now proposed.

After long and careful study of the terms proposed, I am convinced that it will not be wise for our church to go into a union on this basis and for the following reasons:

1. The plan does not unite, and gives no assurance that it ever will. Its heartiest advocates do not claim that it is any more than a step toward union and without any guarantles of what sort of compact may finally result. It fails to meet the primary demand out of which all desire for unification comes, i. e., that these two churches, identical in doctrine and substantially the same in polity, should not build altar against altar and waste their men and money in competitive enterprises. It does not stop this. It ordains in the very beginning that the loose union, under a name yet to be selected, shall have two jurisdictions and identical with the two churches as they now exist. The Northern jurisdiction will cover the entire United States, and the Southern jurisdiction will be confined to the South and West, where it now is. It must needs be remembered that the Northern Church is not confined to the North, but has penetrated the South with its work, until it has Annual Conferences in every Southern State and, of course, with congregations in many cities and towns throughout the South. The Northern Church has 400,000 white members in the South besides a large work among the Negroes. The plan does not do away with a single Conference, church, or mission that the Northern Church has in the South, but specifically ordains that all such shall be in the Northern jurisdiction, which will penetrate the heart and almost every part of the Southern jurisdiction. After the adoption of this plan there will be in Florida a St. John's River Conference of the Northern jurisdiction and a Florida Conference of the Southern jurisdiction, with competing churches in many Florida towns. The situation in Florida will obtain in Tennessee, Kentucky, Oklahoma, California and many other States. How such a preposterous arrangement could ever be assented to by Southern Methodism I cannot see.

The plan does provide "for the transfer of members, preachers, churches, pastoral charges, districts, Annual Conferences, mission conferences and Missions in the United States from one jurisdiction to the other," but "no transfer shall be made without the consent" of those "that it is proposed to transfer." It is claimed by the advocates of the plan that there will be a voluntary merger of competing churches and Conferences after the two churches are united under one name and declared to be one church. Let us examine this. What inspired the original organization of Northern churches in Dallas and Houston, and New Orleans and Louisville and Nashville and Atlanta and Jacksonville and Miami and Tampa? It was the desire for Northern fellowship and Northern views in administration and Northern money to aid their enterprises, and the very same things that controlled in the original organization will induce these congregations to maintain the same relation in the new church. Similar reasons will control many Southern Methodists in border territory, and where outside pressure to unite becomes insistent many Methodists will quietly withdraw and unite with other churches.

2. The plan will perpetuate the Northern Church in the South and legalize their occupancy of territory where they are now trespassers. Somebody says at once, "don't bring up ancient history; let the dead past bury its dead." People who ignore their history, if it be honorable (and ours is), will be unworthy of a future. The Northern Church has penetrated the heart of the South with its work in direct violation of "The Plan of Separation." That plan, adopted by all but a unanimous vote, declared, "All the societies, stations and Conferences adhering to the Church in the South by a vote of a majority of the members of said societies, stations and Conferences shall remain under the unmolested pastoral care of the Southern Church, and the ministers of the Methodist Episcopal Church (North) shall in no wise attempt to organize churches or societies in the limits of the Church South, nor shall they attempt to exercise any pastoral oversight therein: . . . interior charges shall in all case be left to the care of that church within whose territory they are situated." The Conferences south of the Ohio and Potomac Rivers adhered to the Southern Church under this division and a few other churches along the border line, and it needs no argument after this explicit statement from the record, to prove that every Conference and church that has been set up by Northern Methodism in the South is here in violation of a plain compact. They are here and are still being organized—a new one was organized in Tampa last month, where we already have twelve—and they may be here forever, but I cannot consent to any action that will change their status from that of illegal intruders and validate their occupancy of what is our rightful ground.

It never has been clear to me why the Northern Church is willing to divide territory with us in the mission fields of the world, allocating work and responsibility, but is unwilling to leave the care of any part of the United States to the ministry of Southern Methodism. Northern and Southern Baptists strictly observe their dividing line. There have been multiplied millions of missionary money spent in trying to establish Northern Methodism in the South, and much of it in cities and sections where Methodism (our church) was already as dominant and effective as anywhere in the world. I cannot favor a plan of union that justifies this sort of occupation of territory that ought to be under the undisputed administration of the Southern Methodist Church or of the Southern jurisdiction of the united church.

The Southern Church has not invaded Northern territory, or attempted any missionary propaganda in the heart of the Northern Church. Both churches have pushed their way into the widening West, which was not occupied by either at the time of separation, and was not involved in any of the agreements of that day. The two churches are in competition at many points in the West, creating problems that need solution, and which this plan might solve, but they are wholly unlike the problems of the South. The problem of competition in the mission fields is nowhere serious and unification will not vitally affect them, since already territory and responsibility have been divided between us.

3. The General Conference of the United Church is an anomaly among deliberative bodies. It is to be composed of the delegates to the two jnrisdictional conferences, which will meet at the same time and place, and will come together at stated times to make a General Conference. It is expressly provided that "every vote in the General Conference shall be by jurisdictions and shall require the accepted majority vote of each jurisdiction to be effective." That is to say the General Conference cannot pass anything, not even a motion to adjourn, without a majority from both sides. Either side can defeat anything the other desires to do for fifty years or forever. No; this will not be, for nobody expects this to last. This provision is made much of as a gracious concession to our minority, but it ties both bodies and as Bishop Neely, of the Northern Church, aptly says, "In that strangle-hold relation the two bodies are to fight out their desires and demands with the probability of repeating the experiences of the historic Kilkenny cats." The delegates on the two sides will be about in the proportion of 800 to 400. Nobody expects these 800, supported by 199 from the other side, to submit long to the dictation of 201. It is unreasonable that they should. When the break in this provision comes, where will our church be? It is not right to either side to bind these two great churches "like two men tied together with a rope around their throats, so that in their struggles they are likely to choke each other." There is absolutely no provision in the plan for getting apart, if the experiment should not work. It can scarcely be doubted that the large Northern majority, supported by a sympathetic minority on the Southern side, will constantly press, like the weight of an avalanche, upon the Southern jurisdiction, until it will be overcome. At least this condition will create a psychology that will make it easy to get their programs done.

4. The plan admits Negroes into various councils of the church in a way that will not be approved in the South. Nearly a hundred Negroes are now in the Northern General Conference, and will remain in a similar proportion under the new arrangement. Two Negro bishops now sit in exact parity with the rest in the Northern group and preside over the body in turn, and have presided over the General Conference. They will continue in the same relation to the united groups and will preside in both the College of Bishops and the General Conference, so far as any guaranties of the law are concerned. Their names will be attached to all addresses of the College of Bishops to the church and they will in every sense be bishops of the whole church, except that they cannot preside over conferences in the Southern jurisdiction. Such an arrangement will not promote our Methodist work in the

THE CALLED SESSION OF OUR GENERAL CONFERENCE AND THE OBJECTIONS OF THE FOUR BISHOPS.

By Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, Chairman, Commission On Unification.

Along with the announcement of the official call for a special session of the General Conference to consider the question of the unification of American Methodism, there is being printed in the church press a protest against the action of the College of Bishops in issuing this call. This protest was prepared by Bishops Candler and Denny and is signed by them, and also by Bishops Darlington and Dickey.

This is the first time in the history of our church that an important paper has been given to the church by the College of Bishops which did not carry the names of all the bishops. Indeed, it has been the tradition and rule of action that where the majority of the bishops speak, all speak; and more than once since I have been a member of the Episcopal College have I heard it urged that the entire College must speak with one voice. It is rather interesting to observe that the two bishops who have been most insistent in urging this "unit rule" are the first to break away from it.

It is not surprising that Bishops Candler and Denny do not want the General Conference to meet in special session to consider the question of Unification. In this they are perfectly consisitent. They do not wish to see Unification accomplished. They are opposed to it. During all these years that Unification has been the one great question before American Methodism, Bishops Candler and Denny have objected to every plan that has been suggested, and have labored day and night to block every effort looking in the direction of Unification. It is not to be wondered at, therefore, that at this time they should have endeavored in every possible way to prevent the College of Bishops from carrying out the will of the General Conference as expressed in the action taken at Hot Springs by which the College of Bishops was "empowered and instructed to call the special session of our General Conference," "when a plan of unification is endorsed by a two-thirds vote of each Commission and approved by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church."

In the statement signed by the "four bishops," three objections are urged against the calling of a General Conference in the summer of 1924. They are as follows:

1. The law as set forth in Paragraphs 37 and 38 of the Discipline, which has been in the Discipline for fifty-eight years—the law which authorizes the bishops to call a special session of the General Conference—is null and void, because unconstitutional. The bishops are, therefore, without any authority to call a special session.

2. Even if the constitutionality of Paragraphs 37 and 38 were conceded, still they do not authorize the bishops to call a General Conference until every Annual Conference shall have had opportunity to elect new delegates.

3. The calling of a General Conference in the spring of 1925 would have more truly carried out the resolution of the General Conference of 1922 than will the date fixed by the majority of the bishops, namely, July 2, 1924.

Now, the above are the reasons which were offered by Bishops Candler and Denny in the discussion which took place in the College of Bishops. But these objections were not presented in the order here given. As a matter of fact, they were presented in the inverse order. And in this inverse order they show the line of the retreat of Bishops Candler and Denny as their colleagues made it plain that there was no good ground for the objections offered by them. I shall take up the objections they offer in the order in which they presented them in the meeting of the College of Bishops.

1. That a General Conference meeting in the spring of 1925 would more truly carry out the resolution of the General Conference of 1922.

The resolution referred to is as follows:

"When a plan for unification is endorsed by a two-thirds vote of each Commission and approved by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, then our College of Bishops is empowered and instructed to call the special session of our General Conference."

Let it be observed that this resolution does not say, "one year after the plan is approved by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church;" but rather "when a plan is approved, then our College of Bishops is empowered and instructed to call the special session." The English language can hardly make anything plainer than that.

But in order to make surety double sure, as chairman of our Commission on Unification, I addressed a letter to the chairman of each Annual Conference delegation to the last General Conference, asking his understanding of the intent and purpose of the resolution instructing the bishops to call the special session of the General Conference. These replies were overwhelmingly on one side of this question. Some of the brethren took time to write to their entire delegation. I presented these replies to the College of Bishops. I confess that I am at a complete loss to understand how, after having heard these letters read, the "four bishops" can, in the face of the statements therein made, still affirm that a General Conference meeting in May, 1925, "would more truly carry out the resolution of the General Conference of 1922." The fact is, the most representative men who composed the 1922 General Conference, with rare exceptions, say that a General Conference called to meet one year from now would not satisfy the requirements of the resolution referred to.

2. The next objection offered by the bishops who are opposed to Unification, was that Paragraphs 37 and 38 of the Discipline would NOT allow the calling of a General Conference until all the Annual Conferences had had opportunity to elect new delegates.

To support them in this view, Bishops Candler and Denny interviewed a few lawyers and got hasty opinions from them that Paragraph 37, which says that "the bishops shall have authority to call a General Conference at any time," does not mean what it plainly says, but must be interpreted as meaning "at any time after all the Annual Conferences shall have had opportunity to elect new delegates." They were reminded that the bishops themselves were the proper interpreters of Methodist law, and not men unfamiliar wih church law, no matter how distinguished and able they might be in the civil law. But since they had "appealed to Caesar," we also brought in opinions from a large number of the ablest lawyers in America, completely setting at naught the opinions which they had solicited. After the reading of a mass of opinions from able lawyers as presented by Bishops Moore, McMurry, and myself, we heard little more in our discussions of the legal aspects of this matter.

3. The next position taken by Bishops Candler and Denny was that Paragraphs 37 and 38, which give the bishops authority to call a session of the General Conference "at any time" are null and void, AND THAT THE bishops are entirely without authority to call a special session of the General Conference at any time at all.

This last argument—this reductio ad absurdum—was not thought of until the last day of our discussion. If it made any impression on anybody except the two bishops who presented it, I saw no evidence of it in the process of our deliberations. Just think of such a thing: Here is a law which has been in the Discipline since 1866; and now we are told that it is of no authority, but that we must go back and be governed by a law which has not been in the Discipline in fifty-eight years, but which was in the Discipline one hundred and sixteen years ago. I cannot believe that this argument, of men who were evidently in distress for the want of sound reasons for their opposition to the action of the College of Bishops, will have any influence upon the church at large.

Meantime, while all this discussion was going on, there stood written plainly in the record of the General Conference, which met in Hot Springs in 1922, the following historic resolutions:

"When a plan for unification is endorsed by a two-thirds vote of each Commission and approved by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, then our College of Bishops is empowered and instructed to call the special session of our General Conference."

The majority of the College of Bishops feel themselves bound by that action. They cannnot undertake to thwart the will of the General Conference of the church. They are not masters, but servants. In obedience, therefore, to "instructions," we have issued the call for the special session.

Concerning the force and validity of the 1922 General Conference resolution just quoted, I append the opinion of a distinguished firm of Methodist lawyers:

"We had occasion to consider the matter of the action of our last General Conference in 'empowering and instructing' the bishops to call a special session of the Conference.

"The action of the General Conference in question appears in Report No. 1 of the Committee on Church Relations and Bible Cause, on page 222 of the Journal of the 1922 Conference, and is as follows: 'When a plan for unification is endorsed by a two-thirds vote of each Commission and approved by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, then our College of Bishops is empowered and instructed to call the special session of our General Conference.'

"This report appears to have been duly adopted by the General Conference, and thus it became the action of that body.

"The Discipline at paragraph 42 provides: 'The General Conference shall have full power to make rules and regulations for our church, under the following limitations and restrictions, viz:' (and then follow the six restrictive rules, no one of which covers the subject-matter of this inquiry).

"Discipline paragraph 43 lodges a veto power in the bishops, and this paragraph, together with the decision of the bishops at paragraph 632, provides for the exercise of this power. The Journal above referred to being silent, we conclude that no step was taken by the bishops to veto this action of the Conference.

"Therefore, this action of the General Conference, in our opinion, became one of the 'rules and (or) regulations for our church,' and is mandatory upon our College of Bishops. From this it would follow that our bishops have no option, but must, within a reasonable time, issue a call for a special session of the General Conference."

SOME OBJECTIONS TO THE PROPOSED "PLAN OF UNIFICATION."

By Bishop W. A. Candler.

In my judgment, the proposed "Plan of Unification" is unwise and dangerous; and I believe it would harm all branches of American Methodism if it were adopted, hurting most the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

It is not strange that the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church (North) adopted it with such haste and unanimity. The "Plan" gives them so much advantage over our church that most naturally they leaped to seize the prize which they thought they saw in sight, apparently forgetting any other consideration.

It is not untrue or unkind to say that the "Plan" furthers the policy of that church with reference to "the disintegration and absorption" of our church, which a number of their leaders have openly avowed and persistently followed for over fifty years.

I copy parts of the "Plan," and call attention to a few of its obvious defects.

1. The letter of "Transmittal" in which the Joint Commission lays it before the respective General Conferences does not accord with the history of the past nor with the facts of the present. It is as follows:

"We, the Commissioners on the Unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, holding that these two Churches are essentially one Church, one in origin, in belief, in spirit, in purpose, and in polity, and desiring that this essential unity may be made actual in organization and administration throughout the world, do hereby propose and transmit to our respective General Conferences the following plan of unification and recommend its adoption by the two Churches, by the processes which they respectively require."

The two churches are not "essentially one church," as is thus affirmed.

After living together, with much strife and contention, from 1781 to 1844 60 years they have lived as separate churches from 1811 to 1924—80 years. They have lived apart twenty years longer than they lived together, and during these eighty years of separation they have constantly diverged in both polity and spirit, more and more every year.

In the very paragraph quoted from the letter of "Transmittal" it is shown that the two churches have different "processes" for amending their constitutions and enacting other legislation.

They separated in 1844 on a sharp and irreconcilable difference concerning the polity of the church with reference to the episcopacy.

Even the terms by which members are admitted to the church are different in these two churches. Our church asks of a candidate for membership nothing more than belief of the doctrines contained in the Apostles' Creed, while the Northern church asks, "Do you believe in the doctrines of the Holy Scriptures as set forth in the Articles of Religion of the Methodist Church?"

Now, I heartily believe in the Articles of Religion, but I do not believe any such condition of membership should be imposed upon candidates for membership, including little children and uneducated people, who cannot truly say they understand all the Articles of Religion, much less believe them. I believe the imposition of such a condition upon candidates for membership is unscriptural, being more than Christ himself requires.

The Northern Church has licensed women to preach for a number of years, and the General Conference of 1924 has enacted a law which provides for the ordination of women to the orders of deacons and elders. It is true that this General Conference refused to pass a resolution admitting women to the itinerant ministry; but in this refusal they were inconsistent with their action in providing for the ordination of women; for a local preacher can be used as a supply in charge of a pastorate. In fact, there have been already some women assigned to pastoral work in the Methodist Episcopal Church (North). This is contrary to the polity of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

A most notable difference in polity is found in the paragraphs of their respective constitutions by which extra sessions of their Conferences are called.

Long after their separation in 1844, both churches had on this point the same constitutional provision, made by the constitution-making Conference of 1808, and which was as follows:

"The General Superintendents, with or by the advice of all the Annual Conferences, or, if there be no General Superintendents, all the Annual Conferences respectively, shall have power to call a General Conference, if they judge it necessary."

In 1856 the Northern General Conference attempted to amend their constitution at this point; but it failed by inadvertence to submit the amendment to the Annual Conferences, as is required alike in both churches for the adoption of constitutional amendments. Having no occasion to call a General Conference, this fact was overlooked until the year 1900, when the amendment was found to be null and void. In that year, after it had been approved by the Annual Conferences, it was legally adopted as follows:

"The General Superintendents, or a majority of them by and with the advice of two-thirds of all the Annual Conferences, shall have the power to call an extra session of the General Conference at any time."

In 1866 the Southern General Conference also undertook to amend the same constitutional provision of 1808, and it, too, failed by inadvertence to submit the proposed amendment to the Annual Conferences. And now it is discovered that the amendment has never been legally adopted, and that the law of 1808 therefore remains unchanged. It differs very widely from the amendment adopted by the Northern General Conference in 1900.

Both the Northern and the Southern General Conference, for many years, by inadvertence, printed in their books of Discipline these constitutional provisions which had never been legally enacted. The Northern Church lived from 1856 to 1900—forty-four years—before the error of its General Conference was brought to notice and corrected.

Acting on the same subject in the same unlawful way in 1866, the Southern Church has never had the error corrected, although more than fifty years have elapsed. It has not until now had any occasion for calling an extra session of the General Conference, and so it has overlooked the blundering action of the General Conference of 1866. But if the amendment which was passed by the General Conference of that year had been submitted to the Annual Conferences, and lawfully adopted, it also, like the original act of 1808, differs widely from the amendment made in the lawful way by the Northern General Conference in 1900. The amendment proposed by the Southern General Conference of 1866, but never submitted to the Annual Conferences, is found in paragraph 37 of the Book of Discipline of 1922, and reads as follows:

"The Bishops, or a majority of the Annual Conferences shall have authority to call a General Conference at any time, if they judge it necessary."

This is null and void because never approved by the Annual Conferences from which it proposed to take away the power given them by the constitution of 1808.

Many other points of difference besides these essential points will be discovered by an examination and comparison of the books of Discipline of the two churches.

Again, the two churches are not "one in spirit." The Northern Church constantly meddles with political matters, as the Southern Church does not, and ought not to do.

During their General Conference of this year, 1924, at least three committees have been sent to Washington on political missions, and all sorts of resolutions concerning political matters have been brought forward, including one about what is called the "Dyer Anti-Lynching Bill," which is an unjust and unconstitutional bill, aimed particularly at the South.

2. In Article II of the "Plan of Unification" the name of the church is left undetermined. That paragraph reads as follows:

"The name of the Church shall be ————. (Name to be selected by the first General Conference of the United Church)."

Whatever might be the name determined by the first General Conference of the United Church, if the "Plan of Unification" were adopted, we know it would not be the name of our own church, and it would probably be the name of the Northern Church. Such a name would tend to promote the policy of "disintegration and absorption" of our church, which has been persistently pursued since 1848, when the Northern General Conference formally and utterly repudiated "the Plan of Separation" which was adopted in 1844.

3. Consideration of Article III of the "Plan" will show a most serious defect in that it fails to meet the real purpose of genuine unification by failing to eliminate overlapping of work and to remove irritating friction. It leaves the two churches just as they are, and have been, with respect to their territory and membership, and, thereby, it legalizes and legitimatizes the invasion of our territory by the Northern Church, and nullifies all agreements of fraternity which have been adopted from 1811 until the present time.

The Article is as follows:

"Section 1. Jurisdiction number one shall comprise all the Churches, Annual Conferences, Mission Conferences, and Missions now constituting the Methodist Episcopal Church and any other such Conferences and Missions as may hereafter be organized by its Jurisdictional Conference with the approval of the General Conference."

"Section 2. Jurisdiction number two shall comprise all the Churches, Annual Conferences, Mission Conferences, and Missions now constituting the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and any other such Conferences and Missions as may hereafter be organized by its Jurisdictional Conferences with the approval of the General Conferences."

4. Article IV and VIII of the "Plan" provide for a large and unwieldy Super-General Conference, overshadowing the Jurisdictional Conferences, which Conferences are required to meet at the same time and place as the Super-General Conference. These Articles are as follows:

Article IV. "The General Conference and the Jurisdictional Conferences shall be composed of the same delegates. Said delegates shall be elected by and from the Annual Conferences provided said General and Jurisdictional Conferences shall have not more than one ministerial delegate for every forty-five members of each Annual Conference and not less than one ministerial delegate for every one hundred and twenty members of each Annual Conference and an equal number of lay delegates, chosen according to the regulations of each of the jurisdictions; but for a fraction of two-thirds or more of the number fixed by the General Conference as the ratio of representation an Annual Conference shall be entitled to an additional ministerial and an additional lay delegate, and provided further that each Annual Conference shall be entitled to at least one ministerial and one lay delegate."

Article VIII. "Each jurisdiction shall have a Jurisdictional Conference, possessing the full powers of the General Conference of the Church now constituting said jurisdiction, except such powers as are herein vested in the General Conference or which may hereafter from time to time be legally delegated to the General Conference by the Jurisdictional Conferences.

"Each Jurisdictional Conference shall meet quadrennially where the General Conference is to assemble and immediately prior to its assembling and when desirable may meet during the session of the General Conference and may meet at such other times and places as it may determine.

5. Article V is as follows:

"Every vote in the General Conference shall be by jurisdictions and shall require the accepted majority vote of each jurisdiction to be effective."

This Article will lead to irritating deadlocks, or dangerous domination of the delegates from the South by the larger delegation from the North—most probably bringing on at different stages of the proceedings both deadlocks and domination by the Northern majority.

It will be observed also that in counting the vote in the General Conference, each side of the house must be counted according to "the accepted majority vote of each Jurisdiction in order to be effective." This is a most awkward device, and it also shows the difference in polity of the two churches that are erroneously said to be "essentially one." This brief paragraph is charged with irritating and inflammatory proceedings and dangerous consequences.

6. Section 2 of Article V, which defines somewhat the power and authority of the Geueral Conference, contains these two items with regard to what it may do:

1. "Define and fix the conditions, privileges, and duties of Church membership.
2. "Define and fix the qualifications and duties of elders, deacons, local preachers, exhorters, and deaconesses."

These two matters are of supreme importance, the first touching the conditions, privileges, and duties of church members, and the second the qualifications and duties of the ministry.

Can any one doubt that the delegates from the North would urge that their present conditions of membership should remain unchanged and that their ordinations of women should not he revoked? And would not men of radical mind in our own church join hands with the Northern delegates to impose these things on the churches of the Southern Jurisdiction?

7. Section 4 of Article V reads as follows:

"To define and fix the powers, duties, and privileges of the episcopacy; to fix the number of bishops to be elected by the respective Jurisdictional Conferences and to provide in harmouy with the historic practice of Episcopal Methodism for their consecration as bishops of the whole Church."

It will he noted that to the super-General Conferenee is given the power to define and fix the powers, duties and privileges of the episcopaey, which was the very subject about which the division of 1844 came to pass.

Again, the super-General Conferenee, if the "Plan" is adopted, is authorized " to fix the number of bishops to be elected by the respective Jurisdictional Conferenees," aud to "provide, in harmony with the historic practice of Episcopal Methodism, for their consecration as bishops of the whole Church."

It might he possible for either Jurisdiction to want more, or less, bishops for itself than the other would approve. In that case the Southern Jurisdiction could do nothing in the matter of its wishes and needs without the eonsent of the Northern Jurisdiction, and vice versa.

8. Moreover, it will he observed that the Negro bishops now in the Chureh North, and auy who may he elected in the future, are to be made "bishops of the whole Church."

This is made further manifest by Article VI, which is as follows:

"The bishops of the two Churehes as at present eonstituted shall be the hishops of the United Church without further action.

"Immediately after the union shall have heen consummated the bishops shall meet and organize as one body and shall arrange for the superintendency of the work of the Church.

"A bishop may he assigned to administer in any part of the Church, provided that wheu he is assigued to administer within the jurisdiction other than that hy which he was eleeted it shall be with the consent of the majority of the hishops of the jurisdietion involved."

I am not saying anything against the eleetion of Negroes to the office of bishop in the Chureh North; for that may be desirable in that branch of Methodism since it has several hundred thousands of Negro members. But the Negro members of the Methodist Episcopal Chureh, South, were, at their request, set up as an independent church in 1870, our hishops ordaining bishops for that church, which is now known as the "Colored Methodist Episeopal Church." I may remark in passing that though this church, set up by us, has not had a great deal of financial help from us, and has had many obstaeles to overcome, its membership has grown rapidly, and now is nearly as large as the colored membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church (North).

9. Article IX of the "Plan" proposes to erect a most extraordinary "Judicial Council," whose composition may be of both white members and colored members, and doubtless would be composed of both; and whose unreversible deeisions would he made by a majority of the members of the council. It is not necessary to remark upon the possible evils which would arise from the proceedings of such a Council.

10. The "Plan" as a whole is quite dangerous in that it leaves so many essential things to he determined after it is adopted. It seeks to get our church into the loosely-constructed ecclesiasticism which it proposes, and leaves for future discussion and adoption many things which, if brought forward now, would meet instant aud energetie rejectiou. For one, I do not wish to engage in this "dealing in futures." It is fraught with danger to hoth brauches of American Methodism, and would hardly he aeceptable to the Northern brauch unless it had been conceived as a plan for a temporary existenee, which would ultimately lead to "organic union."

Indeed, Northern leaders have been reported as saying repeatedly that they aceept the proposed "Plan," not heeause they approve it, but because it is a step toward "organic union."

And what does "organic union" mean? It means the swallowing of our church by the Northern Church.

And that means more strife than ever, and most probably another separation more sharp and bitter thau that of 1844.

It means also the eertain impairment of Methodism in the Southern States, and very probably its impairment in all the other States. The degree of injury would vary with the States affected, but it would be hurtful iu all the States of the Union.

At least one bishop of the Northern Church eonsiders the "Plan" defective and dangerous. In Zion's Herald of May 7—(the very day on which the Northern General Conference adopted the "Plan" with such apparent unanimity)—Bishop Thomas B. Neely printed an article which he elosed thus:

"The separation continues from bottom to top, and at the top they are not united as one, hut are bound together like two men tied together with a rope around their throats, so that iu their struggles they are likely to choke each other, and neither will have freedom, except to cry: 'Who shall deliver me from the body of this death?'

"In that strangle-hold relation the two bodies are to fight out their desires and demands with the prohability of repeating the experienees of the historie Kilkenny eats. Already there are serious injuries proposed to the organic laws of our own church. It is the worst seheme ever invented. It is not a unifieatiou and is something to be shunned as one would a viper."

I would not express myself with the words used by Bishop Neely. But he is right when he says this plan "is not a unification." Most certainly it is not a plan of uuilicatiou; hut is a seheme of bifureation.

It may be said that since the Northern General Conference has adopted "the Plan" with such unanimity, our chureh must do likewise, or its sineerity will he douhted aud it will incur just eensure for an uuworthy sectionalism.

If this be so, why was the Northern Church not so diseredited when one of its General Conferences ignored one plan and auother of its General Conferenee side-stepped another plan? They have rejected what they did not waut and approved what they ilked.

But if our ehureh must adopt a defective "Plan" because the Northern Church has approved it, why not let the votes of our Northern brethren settle the matter, and our chureh "rubber-stamp" whatever may be the judgment rendered hy them?

If with that view we enter the loose scheme of unification, now pending, how surely and quickly will what is commonly ealled "the Southern Jurisdietion" promptly submit to the dictation of the larger "Northern Jurisdiction."

Again, it may be affirmed that if our church declines to accept the "Plan" proposed, it will "put us in a bad light." But why so? Even the repudiation of "the Plan of Separation" in 1844 by the Northern Church, which our church was compelled to enforce by an appeal to the civil courts, did not seem to put the Northern Church in "a bad light" in the North.

Let us not fear the phantom of "a bad light." It is better to he put in "a bad light" for a season, than to put ourselves in a bad plight forever.

SYMPOSIUM ON UNIFICATION.

Hon. Herbert Holmes, Senatobia, Miss., Delegate to General Conference.

"Since the Hot Springs meeting, I have tried to ascertain the attitude of the membership of our Conference, especially the laymen, and it is my judgment that a very large majority are opposed to Unification, and especially the plan as proposed. It will be my purpose to respect the wishes of those we represent and vote against Unification as proposed.

"No doubt you have observed that forced marriages are seldom ever happy ones, and most frequently end in divorce courts. If it is forced upon our church, I fear the same result eventually.

"It is not a union, but absorption, or, a better term would be, adoption of the smaller by the larger, upon its own terms without any apparent necessity therefor."

Rev. J. R. Countiss, D.D., President, Grenada College, Delegate to General Conference.

Eighty years ago it became expedient for American Methodism to carry on its work in two sections. I doubt not that the highest interests of the Kingdom were thereby conserved and promoted. Yet, in the good providence of God, the two divisions have in doctrine and polity remained practically as one. To my mind, they should now be united in name as they are in Christian fellowship and purpose. Southern Methodism is different in Mississippi and Montana, yet we are one without jealousy or strife. Democrats, North and South, differ, but it is not advisable that we have two Republics. I see as little reason for having two Methodisms.

I would not force union on any great number of our people, nor would I wait for consent of the last man. We should move in our usual way, according to the Constitution and the law. It must carry by a large majority or fail. To my mind, the proposed plan affords the best conditions we shall ever see for the two branches to grow together. The movement was started by our own church at Oklahoma City in 1911. We shall be the chief sufferers if it fails of consummation. Believing that it will promote the interests of the Kingdom of our Lord and Savior Jesus Christ, I shall vote for the plan.

THE PROPOSED PLAN OF UNIFICATION.

By Rev. V. C. Curtis.

As a pastor from the ranks, I desire to register my protest against the adoption of the proposed plan of unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, now pending, for the following reasons:

1. The plan does not provide for unification, but for the organization of a new ecclesiastical body, under a new name, and with a new constitution, and having entirely new departments of government.

2. The name is yet to be found and the constitution is yet to be written. The proposed plan says that "the two churches shall be united in one church with two jurisdictions under a constitution." The claim is nowhere expressed in the plan that the plan itself is to be the constitution. The manner of forming and adopting that constitution is not given, but since the General Conference is to be clothed with power of providing a method of amending it, we can reach but one conclusion, and that is the General Conference shall make this constitution and provide for the manner of its adoption. Just how many provisions of the proposed plan shall be embodied in that constitution is yet to be seen. Whether or not the Annual Conferences shall have the privilege of voting on the adoption of this constitution after it has been written, is a matter yet to be determined by the Super-General Conference. The proposed plan, including its restrictive clauses, will be binding until the constitution shall have been adopted, then the plan itself may go into discard, as the Articles of Confederation did when the Constitution of the United States was adopted.

3. No way is provided by the plan for the removal of the cause of much friction—altar being set up against altar. Yet, this has been given as one of the most important reasons for unification.

4. It makes legal what has been done illegally by the Methodist Episcopal Church in invading the territory of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

5. It provides for the transfer of property; yet, not more than four of every hundred members in whom the title rightly belongs will have any voice, either directly or indirectly, in disposing of it. The private members have no opportunity of voting for delegates to either a quarterly, district, Annual or General Conference. For instance, we have in the North Mississippi Conference sixty-seven thousand members, and less than three thousand of that number will have the remotest opportunity to vote for delegates to represent them in either forming the plan of union or making the transfer of property.

6. The race question is a too delicate and sensitive issue to be disturbed by trying to bring the white people of the South into organic union with the Negroes where the Negroes have not only the vote and voice, but where some of their number hold the highest office of authority. Northern Negroes are among the leaders who are urging the adoption of this plan. Our Northern brethren may tell us that we are wicked because of this attitude, but we are not discussing theories, but conditions as they exist. We are "assured" that the Negro bishops will not preside over white conferences; but if they preside over meetings of the College of Bishops (which has been done), why, not over a white Annual Conference? We suppose there will be an immediate exchange of territory after the union is effected. We probably will have a bishop from the far North with preconceived notions of the race question, and since he will have full authority he will be more than human if he does not make some effort to put those notions into practice. He could not be expected to do less than to invite the Negro bishop of this Episcopal area, who is on an equal footing with himself and clothed with the same authority from the church, to assist him in directing the affairs of the Conference. We sincerely believe that it will take more than the edicts of the General Conference or the mandates of episcopal authority to hold thousands of our loyal and conscientious members in this new organization into which they are to be arbitrarily transferred. To our mind it will be nothing less than a calamity for anything to be done that will further excite race prejudice, for such activities will do great injury to both white and black.

7. No agreement, whether oral or written, can keep water from seeking its level, and no constitutional provision can prevent that which is just as natural—a two-thirds majority coming into its own.

8. There is a wide divergence of opinion between the two churches as to the relation of the church to politics. The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, now in session, has sent several delegations to Washington in the interest of certain legislation. One of these committees has been sent to urge the passage of an anti-lynching bill which provides for the county in which a lynching occurs to pay, not to the innocent victim of an outrage, but to the family of the perpetrator of the deed, in the event that he is lynched, several thousand dollars.

Because of the foregoing reasons and many others which might be given, I earnestly protest against the adoption of the proposed plan.

METHODIST UNIFICATION.

By Rev. J. Loyd Decell.

This is a momentous hour! The two great Methodisms of America are about to pass from that which has been plastic into fixed and final forms. Let no man think lightly nor act hastily.

For fifty years efforts toward unification have been made. To many it has been "desirable, practicable, inevitable." Indecision must no longer obtain, conclusions must now be reached, not upon the "desirability and inevitability" of unification, but upon the "practicability" of this plan, as proposed by the Commissions and all but unanimously adopted by the Northern General Conference.

However many reasons one may have for desiring unification upon the best basis—and the "Oklahoma plan" is the best yet presented—after passing through the thrill of first impressions that came when the Springfield result was announced, it is concluded that "this plan" of unification will not prove to be the largest blessing to either church, for the following two major reasons:

I.

An Unknown Quantity—The Constitution.

Even though each jurisdiction should have equal voice in adopting a constitution, why should the rank and file of two great churches be called upon to take "a leap in the dark?" But say we can afford to have confidence in our leaders; why could not the leaders have confidence in the rank and file and submit a whole plan, before having every bridge burned? A tentative constitution presented, with orderly methods of amending or changing, could not have prejudiced the chances. Bishop T. B. Neely, of the Northern Church, says: "Rushing in and trusting to luck is simply bold gambling, even if it is done by a church. It is the worst scheme ever invented; it is not unification, and is something to be shunned as one would a viper."

II.

The Jurisdictional Misnomer.

"Every vote in the General Conference shall be by jurisdictions and shall require the accepted majority vote of each jurisdiction to be effective." This plan of having two jurisdictions, one a majority and the other a minority, with each having equal voice in the final determination of every act before the General Conference is unusual, and cannot hope to obtain longer than a few quadrenniums. It is neither democratic nor American!

If the "unity of Episcopal Methodism outside the United States is to be consummated at the earliest possible time," what jurisdiction will this united foreign work come under? Or will they be admitted under jurisdiction number 3? Should the Colored Methodist Church desire jurisdictional admission, which of the original two would she join, or would she become number 4? A few days ago Mr. McCutcheon, fraternal delegate from Australia to the Springfield Conference, said: "I plead for organic union with British Wesleyanism, and vision the day when the stars of the Australian flag, the stripes of the Union Jack, and the stars and stripes of Old Glory will be found flying together." Will Wesleyanism be admitted as jurisdiction number five, or shall the whole world be divided into two originals? If more than two jurisdictions are ever admitted and a majority of each is necessary to make anything effective, how long will a majority vote within a minority be allowed to thwart the will of a vast majority? While it may not be agreed that "it is the worst scheme ever invented," yet we must acknowledge it is a "trusting to luck" and more or less a "gamble."

WHY SUCH HASTE?

By Rev. E. Nash Broyles.

I hope those who so much favor Unification will not seek to force it over the conscientious opposition of others who have such thoroughly good reasons for being against it. If the matter is forced at this time, there will be many thousands and hundreds of thousands who will be so deeply hurt in soul they cannot in their lifetime recover from the injury.

Why the General Conference before a round of Annual Conferences? Why should gentlemen desiring Unification wish such hasty action? There are many delegates in this General Conference who would not be there had Unification been an imminent issue when they were elected. The Annual Conferences should have been permitted to rectify their alignment. There is no sort of doubt about this being just and right. Why should preachers and people be driven so hastily into this matter of life and death? There is wisdom in deliberation. This called session of the General Conference at so early a date, or even at any date preceding a round of Annual Conferences, is unwise and unfair. And, gentlemen, all within me rebels against what is manifestly unfair and unjust.

The spirit of our Discipline provides that when a General Conference is called any Annual Conference that "shall prefer to have a new election" may have ample opportunity to secure a delegation representative of the dominant Conference opinion with reference to the pending issues that shall be up for General Conference consideration.

Gentlemen involved in this Unification issue will do well to consider the interest and feelings and wishes of the preachers and people of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and some of us do not feel that these considerations have been given the prominence to which they are due.

Why should Unification be forced at this time if hundreds of thousands of our people are to be so severely hurt by it? These people who will feel themselves all but cast out of their church home are people who have been most loyal and self sacrificing. Why be in such haste to hurt them? God help us!

The hasty call of the General Conference may possibly accomplish the two-thirds majority in that body, but there must also be had a majority of "three-fourths of the members of all the Annual Conferences." A three-fourths majority is difficult to obtain. I do not believe the matter will pass.

Yes, I am opposed to Unification at this time. The country is not ready for it. I am not willing to hurt people in order to bring it about. The proposed plan is a very weak and cumbersome affair. Many questions which we have not been able to settle while apart, the proposed united church will have to dispose of according to the will of the majority. Well, the M. E. Church, South, will not constitute the majority. These questions on which the two churches are now so vitally divided would, after the proposed union, become matters of internal dissension

Of course the majority would rule—with an iron hand. This is amply provided for in the proposed plan.

The minority would have practically no protection—and we of the M. E. Church, South, would be the minority.

Brethren, the preachers and people of the two churches are not ready for this proposed plan of Unification. To drive it through by the bare necessary majority would be a calamity from which we could not recover for many generations.

Let us be patient. One day a union, real and entire, will come about as the growing of the corn, naturally and normally, when all shall be happy, and welcome it with joy.

May there be faith and zeal, but "let brotherly love continue."

METHODIST UNIFICATION.

By Rev. W. L. Duren, D.D.

There is no doubt that the unification proposition brings before the Methodist church, both North and South, the greatest issue since 1844. It is difficult for any of us to discuss it dispassionately. On the one hand, are the feelings which have been transmitted to us from the days of separation, and on the other are the enthusiasms for a day of better religious understandings. Strive as we may to maintain our equilibrium of judgment, passions easily become obsessions. However desirable it might be for the church to have a single issue to decide, we have in reality a battery of issues.

First of all, we face up before the call of the General Conference in special session. There is the matter of expediency of such a session. For myself, I am heartily in favor of the special session because I think that it involves a matter of keeping faith with our sister church. I am in favor of it because I think that we are as well prepared to express a judgment now as we will ever be, and I do not think that it is contemplated in law or required by morals that this matter must be submitted to the Annual Conferences before the General Conference may speak, and again after it has spoken.

The question of the legality of calling a General Conference is quite another matter. It is not a matter, however, which I would submit to the judgment of civil lawyers as such. I think that it is the first question before which the special session of the General Conference should face up, not for the sake of placating opposers of unification, but in obedience to that well established maxim of civil law, that you cannot do a "vain thing." It is foolish waste of time and useless to engender strife if nothing can be accomplished.

It is argued that the churches, North and South, are incompatibles. It is said among other things that the Church North is political, that it would not be loyal to its covenants, and that it would be a source of doctrinal infection. I am perfectly willing to grant the sincerity of those who profess such feelings, but I cannot think that it is fair to make such a sweeping and uncomplimentary forecast of the honor of those who are inheritors with us of a common spiritual and ecclesiastical foundation. And I cannot think that sensible people would wish to yield to the monastic impulse and build an ecclesiastical Chinese wall along the Mason and Dixon line to keep out "modernistic" invaders. I had almost said that jingoism never reached more ridiculous heights.

It is argued that the plan is unfair to the Southern Church in that it would legalize usurpations, and that it would make possible undesirable arrangements with reference to exchange of episcopal supervision which the Southern Church might be brought to approve. This seems to me to be a way of saying that the Northern Church is at heart untrue, and that the Southern Church is weak and so injudicious as to be capable of infidelity to itself. I am not willing to admit either to be a fact.

While I would be unwilling to say that I am absolutely and unqualifiedly for the plan submitted, I will say that I have failed so far to hear a reason which satisfies me that it ought to be rejected.

I am for unification because I believe that we are unqualifiedly committed to it. At the organization of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, Dr. Benjamin M. Drake, of Mississippi, introduced a resolution, which was adopted, to the effect, "That the Committee on Organization be, and are hereby instructed to inquire into the propriety of reporting resolutions in case a division should take place, leaving the way open for reunion on terms which shall not compromise," etc. (History of Organization of Methodist Episcopal Church, South, p. 179.) The Organization Committee reported, ". . . . cherishing a sincere desire to maintain Christian union and fraternal intercourse with the Church North, we shall always be ready, kindly and respectfully to enter-

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

OVER $300,000 PAID ON QUOTAS TO DATE.

The Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment is steadily moving toward success. Every day brings us nearer to the goal, as evidenced by the many payments on quotas. As fast as the money is received it is invested, and soon the income from these investments will be available for the support of the Forgotten Man. Whenever the flow of this income begins it will continue forever. This fact should appeal with great force to those who have contributed to the cause.

The pastors of those charges which have paid something on Special Effort quotas are happy as larks. It gives them a very "cumfy" feeling to know that their charges have actually begun to pay. Some of them are writing to tell us of the enthusiasm of the treasurers of their Special Effort Committees. They report that these treasurers having once started to remit to the Board of Finance in St. Louis, are eager to keep on remitting. They enjoy the thrill of the thing!

There are some pastors in the church who feel "un-cumfy." These are they who have not yet done a thing toward raising their quotas. They postponed doing it until everything could be just right, but that time never comes. But I am sure these men will not wait longer, for they now see the Annual Conferences pressing upon them, and they have no cash in hand to prove their labors in behalf of the cause. Somehow I have faith to believe that every preacher in the church will be faithful to this great movement, even though some preachers are slow in getting at it.

THE KNACK OF HANDLING THE MONEY.

When treasurers of Special Effort Committees have money in hand for Superannuate Endowment, it should be sent to the Board of Finance, St. Louis, Mo. Yes, I know this has been stated before. It is likely to be stated many times more, for the reason that so many fail to understand. Let the pastors take the time to explain the urgency of this matter to their treasurers. It will mean much to the worn-out men and women who are eagerly waiting for the income from endowment money to give them relief.

And please use the book of Treasurer's Remittance Forms when making payments on quotas. The pastor of every charge should have one of these books in his possession, for it was sent to him many weeks ago. If he has misplaced it, he should write the Board for another. If the treasurer of the committee will use this book, he will always have the status of the account very clearly before him. Also it will greatly facilitate keeping the records in the offices of the Board.

We are all working at this task with a will to have it succeed. Therefore, let us follow the plan that has been arranged for the carry-on. If every individual turns to his own way, regardless of the given method for doing the thing, it will develop a jumble of confusion. Study the plan until it is thoroughly understood, and then work it with all your might. Half the fun of doing a difficult thing is having a system by which to do it. We have the system, then let us also claim the joy by working it.

A SERENADE TO THE FORGOTTEN MAN.

Listen to the tune the band is playing. The players are those who have already remitted one-fifth or more of their total quotas to the Board of Finance, St. Louis, Mo.:

Main Street (Columbia), Upper South Carolina, Columbia, Rev. W. B. Garrett, pastor; total assumed quota, $4.421; amount remitted, $1,800.

Pratt City, North Alabama, Bessemer, Rev. W. M. Buttram, pastor; total assumed quota, $2,700; amount remitted, $540.

San Marcos, West Texas, San Marcos, Rev. C. M. Raby, pastor; total assumed quota, $3,450; amount remitted, $1,143.44.

Centenary (Richmond), Virginia, Richmond, Rev. J. N. Latham, pastor; total assumed quota, $5,350; amount remitted, $1,070.

Hopkinsville, Louisville, Hopkinsville, Rev. A. R. Kasey, pastor; total assumed quota, $5,000; amount remitted, $1,000.

Earlington, Louisville, Henderson, Rev. D. L. Vance, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,620; amount remitted, $459.

McKendree (Nashville), Tennessee, Nashville, Rev. H. B. Trimble, pastor; total assumed quota, $5,034; amount remitted, $2,031.79.

Wesley, North Texas, Greenville, Rev. Ira C. Kiker, pastor; total assumed quota, $3,500; amount remitted, $700.

Flemingsburg, Kentucky, Maysville, Rev. E. K. Arnold, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,950; amount remitted, $390.

Tigert Memorial (Cairo), Illinois, Murphysboro, Rev. W. B. Garriott, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,650; amount remitted, $330.

Bonita, Louisiana, Monroe, Rev. P. H. Fontaine, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,808; amount remitted, $361.60.

Mount Tabor, Kentucky, Maysville, Rev. E. K. Kidwell, pastor; total assumed quota, $338; amount remitted, $68.

Lafayette Park (St. Louis), St. Louis, St. Louis, Rev. G. E. Cameron, pastor; total assumed quota, $3,260; amount remitted, $652.

Grace Church (Union) Upper South Carolina, Spartanburg, Rev. J. W. Kilgo, pastor; total assumed quota, $2,741; amount remitted, $611.

Anutt, St. Louis, West Plains, Rev. W. V. Gaston, pastor; total assumed quota, $600; amount remitted, $160.

Vernon Station charge, North Alabama, Jasper, Rev. R. B. Lavender, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,371; amount remitted, $274.20.

Eddyville, Louisville, Hopkinsville, Rev. R. L. Talley, pastor; total assumed quota, $2,000; amount remitted, $525.

Flat Rock Station charge, North Alabama, Gadsden, Rev. J. R. Duncan, pastor; total assumed quota, $475; amount remitted, $96.

Tallahassee, Florida, Tallahassee, Rev. J. O. Grogan, pastor; total assumed quota, $5,000; amount remitted, $1,273.25.

Joshua, Central Texas, Cleburne, Rev. C. E. Wilkins, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,143; amount remitted, $241.32.

ALL DRESSED UP AND SOMEWHERE TO GO

Keep your eye on the presiding elders, for they must be using a lot of paint or something to have faces so Pink. I guess it is because they all have spunk enough to work hard and have their respective districts 100% on the Pink Leaf Report. Here are a few more of them who have a right to their places on the Honor Roll, as numbered:

192. Central Texas, Brownwood, Rev. A. D. Porter, P. E.

193. Louisiana, New Orleans, Rev. W. W. Drake, P. E.

194. North Georgia, Oxford, Rev. W. G. Crawley, P. E.

195. Kentucky, Lexington, Rev. G. W. Banks, P. E.

196. North Alabama, Decatur, Rev. W. P. McGlawn, P. E.

197. Northwest Texas, Sweetwater, Rev. R. A. Stewart, P. E.

198. Alabama, Montana, Rev. J. A. Seale, P. E.

199. North Carolina, Raleigh, Rev. M. T. Plyler, P. E.

200. Texas, Marshall, Rev. C. B. Garrett, P. E.

A WORD FROM THE PRESIDENT.

Bishop W. F. McMurry, President of the Board, is greatly pleased with the progress of the Special Effort. Note the following message to the Church by him:

"I am in the office of the Board of Finance today, the first time since the annual meeting, and with Dr. Todd and other members of the Directing Committee have been looking carefully into the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment. I am happy to be able to report to the Church that the response to the call made is measuring up to our expectations. The quarterly conference reports—the Pinks—continue to come in and there is good prospect of having a satisfactory report from every quarterly conference in the Church. Just a little effort here and there on the part of the presiding elder, the pastor, or a good layman will accomplish this end.

"Payments on quotas are coming in daily, and $300,000 or more has already been received. There is one thing in this connection that needs to be emphasized, namely, payments on quotas for Superannuate Endowment must be made direct to the Board of Finance, St. Louis, Mo. Checks should be made payable to Luther E. Todd, Secretary, or to the Board of Finance of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and sent to the Security Building, St. Louis, Mo. This plan of sending the money direct to the Board of Finance without delay has the approval and endorsement of the General Conference. Provision has been made to place in the hands of every pastor a duplicate receipt for every remittance made, so he can make his report at the Annual Conference without embarrassment with the treasurer of his Annual Conference. Under no circumstances should the money go to the treasurer of the Conference Board of Finance or to the treasurer of the Annual Conference. This will mean endless confusion and make it impossible to give a correct statement in the Annual Conference minutes of what the charges has done.

"Another matter: The sooner you get the money in, the earlier it begins to work in the interest of the Forgotten Man. Do not hold funds; remit even small amounts without delay. 'Use the Treasurer's Remittance Forms when making payments.'"

The Home Circle

BE THE BEST OF WHAT YOU ARE.

If you can't be a pine on top of a hill,
Be a scrub in the valley; but be
The best little scrub by the side of a hill—
Be a bush if you can't be a tree.

If you can't be a bush, be a bit of grass,
And some highway some happier make;
If you can't be a muskie, just be a bass,
But be the livest bass in the lake.

We all can't be captains, we've got to be crew,
There is something for all of us here;
There's big work to do and lesser to do,
And the task we must do is the near.

If you can't be a highway, just be a trail;
If you can't be the sun, be a star.
'Tis not by the size that you win or fail,
But by being the best of what you are.

—Douglas Malloch.

THE HOOP RACE.

Doris was sitting on the garden fence, looking at her doll carriage where Rosalinds' head was peeping from the covers.

"It's too bad; it's too bad!" and Doris shook her head. "I don't see how you can go to the garden party without a party dress."

Suddenly she heard three "hoo-hoos," and looking down the road, she saw three playmates. They were laughing gayly and rolling their hoops.

"All ready for the party this afternoon?" they asked.

Doris shook her head. "No," she said.

"What is the matter?"

"Something very funny has happened. I was sewing some little blue ribbons on Rosalind's party dress here in the yard when mother called me. I put down my sewing and ran into the house. When I came back the dress had disappeared."

"Oh!" they exclaimed.

"My Linda doll has two party dresses," said Elsie. "Rosalind may have her choice."

Doris looked at her doll carriage and thought how disappointed Rosalind would be if she didn't go to the party. "Thank you," she said at last, but she had to choke back a sob, for she had counted on Rosalind's wearing the new dress.

"Now, come," pleaded Elsie. "Get your hoop, for we are to have a race. And to make it more exciting we are going to take different paths from the starting point back to the finish at my house. Mother has some new cookies and cold milk waiting for us. Don't you think that that will be fun?"

"But you forgot the best part of it," said Barbara. "Each of us is to take something back that has attracted her on the way. It may be an apple or a flower or anything."

"Yes, and the one that brings back the best thing gets a gingerman," added Elsie.

Doris ran for her hoop. "There's no use sulking about Rosalind's dress," she said to herself, and when she joined her little friends her face was as pleasant and smiling as it could be.

"Now, all get in line," ordered Elsie. "You take the path that leads over the brook, Janie. You, Barbara, go down the mill road; and you, Doris, go in the direction of the saw-mill. I shall go this way," and she pointed. "Now—ready—go!"

Laughing and waving at one other, they separated.

It was pleasant to Doris to hear her hoop humming over the path. There were many pretty things to notice—the trees, with branches bent so low that she could easily have picked their leaves; pretty flowers that nodded gayly, and sparkling stones. Doris couldn't decide just what she wanted to take back.

Whir-r-r, whir-r-r went the hoop; tap, tap went the hoopstick. Oh, what fun, and how fast Doris went! Up a hill, down a hill; then she came to the road that led near the sawmill. She slowed down a little because there was a cart ahead filled with brush and small trees.

The cart came to a standstill; so did Doris.

She had found nothing to take back from the race. Then she glanced at the cart; she stared, for there on one of the little trees was her prize. She picked it up and started on her way again.

Whir-r-r, whir-r-r, tap, tap, the hoop and Doris hurried on to Elsie's house

The three other little girls had arrived and were waiting for her. "Hurry, hurry!" they said. "We are going to have cookies now and then show our prizes," said Elsie.

Doris threw down her hoop and danced about. She hugged each little girl in turn. "Oh, oh, I can't wait. I must show you mine right now," and she held up a little white dress with blue ribbons.

"Why, Doris!" they exclaimed.

"It is Rosalind's party dress," and Doris told the others where she had found it. "I remember now that the cart turned in at the gate just as my mother called me, and some of the branches must have picked up the dress."

How they all laughed! Then they agreed that Doris had rightfully won the gingerbread man. It was the best prize found in the hoop race because it made everybody happy.—Mary A. Bowers, in The Youth's Companion.

IF.

If you can keep your head when all about you
Are losing theirs, and blaming it on you;
If you can trust yourself when all men doubt you,
And make allowance for their doubting, too;
If you can wait and not be tired by waiting,
Or, lied about, don't deal in lies;
Or, being hated, don't give way to hating,
And yet don't look too good nor talk too wise;
If you can dream and not make dreams your master;
If you can think, and not make thoughts your aim;
If you can meet with trimmphs and disaster,
And treat both these imposters just the same;
If you can bear to hear the truth you've spoken
Twisted by knaves to make a trap for fools,
Or watch the things you gave your life to, broken,
And stoop, and build them up with worn-out tools;
If you can talk with crowds and keep your virtue,
Or walk with kings—nor lose the common touch;
If neither foes nor loving friends can hurt you;
If all men count with you—but none too much;
If you can fill the unforgiving minute
With sixty seconds' worth of distance run,
Yours is the earth and everything that's in it
And, what is more, you'll be a man, my son.

—Rudyard Kipling.

READINESS IN SERVICE.

When Queen Victoria was a middle-aged woman, she took great pleasure in going unknown through the streets of the village of Windsor.

On one such occasion, during a shower, she stepped into a peasant's cottage and asked the loan of an umbrella.

The peasant woman looked at the queen doubtfully. At last she said: "I have two umbrellas—one an old, shabby one, and my Sunday umbrella. I shall give you my shabby one, for I never expect to see it again."

The next day a messenger wearing the royal livery brought back the shabby umprella with a handsome present in money.

The peasant woman was appalled. "Oh, sir, who was it borrowed my umbrella?"

"Madam, it was your queen."

"O! My queen, my queen! Would I had known! I would gladly have given her my best."

Her wailings were all in vain. She never had the opportunity again to do a personal favor for the queen.

PUBLISHING COMMITTEE:

Louisiana Conference—Rev. J. F. Foster, Rev. S. J. Davies, Rev. C. C. Miller.

Mississippi Conference—Rev. J. T. Leggett, Rev. W. H. Saunders, Rev. E. K. Means.

North Mississippi Conference—Rev. J. H. Felts, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, Rev. J. W. Dorman.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

REPORT OF SPECIAL SESSION OF PUBLISHING COMMITTEE.

The following protest on the part of Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, member of the Publishing Committee, and reply on the part of the Editor appeared in the May 1 issue of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

"A Respectful Protest.

"As a member of the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, representing the North Mississippi Conference, I desire the privilege of stating in our official organ, as one in part responsible for the administration of its publication, that I do not concur in the modernistic tendencies apparent in editorial utterances and contributed articles, becoming more obvious of late, contrary to the official action of the publishing Committee, accepted by the Editor; quotations in proof of which from the columns of the Advocate can be cited if desired.

"I desire to register also my respectful protest against the repeated refusal of the Editor to publish articles by representative Methodist ministers (including a Bishop—McMurry—our Secretary of Ministerial Supply and Training, and the writer, articles all soundly orthodox in doctrine and purpose), as subversive of our fundamental Protestant and American doctrine of freedom of speech and press, and as keeping our members in ignorance of matters of vital concern to the church, the correct view and spirit of which the people themselves should be allowed to judge after hearing both sides: the policy objected to being continued by the Editor in disregard of the Resolutions adopted at the last annual meeting of the Publishing Committee, 'That the columns of the New Orleans Christian Advocate be kept open for a free discussion of all matters of vital interest to the church, that our people may be fully informed of all facts and issues before us.'

"Regretting the necessity which impels me in fidelity to my personal convictions and I believe the welfare of the church to present this statement, in malice toward none and in loyalty to the Methodist Church and its great Head and the ends for which the Christian Advocate exists, I remain, Fraternally and faithfully,

"T. H. LIPSCOMB,
"Member Publishing Committee,
"North Mississippi Conference."

"With reference to the above, the Editor of the Adpocate desires only to say that he stands squarely upon the record of his official administration. Mindful of the responsibilities of his position, he has exercised the right—and he will continue to exercise it as long as he holds the position—to pass upon the acceptability of any matter offered for publication from any source whatsoever. His judgment is not infallible—but his conscience is clear.

"The Publishing Committee itself is competent to pass upon the whole matter, and to the Committee it is referred."

At a called session of the Publishing Committee, May 29, 1924, to consider the above protest, the following resolutions were adopted by a vote of six to one, all members present voting;

"We, the Publishing Committee of the New Orleans Christian Advocate, assembled in New Orleans, May 29, having had a protest against the editorial management of that paper brought to our attention through the columns of the Advocate, and having given the same most careful consideration, hereby declare that there is no ground for such an opinion of the paper as is therein expressed.

"As such a publication is hurtful to the Christian Advocate, therefore, be it

"Resolved by this body, That we dissent from the sentiment expressed in the 'Protest,' and record our regret at its being printed for general reading.

"Be it further resolved, That we do hereby express our full confidence in Dr. Carley, both as to his ability and fairness in the editorial management of the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

"Resolved, further, That he, and he alone, is charged with the responsibility of making up the reading matter of each issue of the paper, accepting what he thinks will be helpful to the readers of the Advocate and rejecting unhesitatingly what he thinks will be hurtful or useless to them.

"Resolved, further, That the doctrinal standard upheld by the New Orleans Christian Advocate is now, and always has been, entirely satisfactory, and especially is this so since Dr. Carley has been its editor.

"Be it further resolved, That the above resolutions be published in the Christian Advocate."

The following members were present: Louisiana Conference—J. F. Foster, S. J. Davies, C. C. Miller; Mississippi Conference—W. H. Saunders; North Mississippi Conference—J. H. Felts, T. H. Lipscomb, J. W. Dorman.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. W. A. Langley, a member of the North Mississippi Conference, assigned to work in Poland, requests us to state that his address has been changed from Pustomyty to Warsaw Mokotowsko 12.

Mrs. Minnie E. Bower announces the marriage of her daughter, Helen, to Rev. R. E. Simpson, at Blytheville, Ark., on Wednesday, May 28. The happy young couple are at home at Southern Methodist University, Dallas, Tex. The Advocate extends all good wishes.

Grenada College had the largest graduating class in its history this year. The institution will continue its notable record as an A-grade college, and all indications point to a great session next year. President Countiss is one of the great educators of the church.

Mr. K. W. Dodson, Jr., a member of the graduating class at Hendrix College, has our thanks for an invitation to attend the graduating exercises on June 10. Mr. Dodson is the son of Rev. K. W. Dodson, presiding elder of the Ruston District, Louisiana Conference.

The following telegram came from Rev. B. F. Lewis, Superintendent of the Mississippi Methodist Orphanage, on Monday morning, June 2: "Began demolishing old orphanage building this morning. New building will be started as soon as this is finished. Eleven months will be required to complete this work."

A special Pullman will leave New Orleans over the Texas and Pacific Railroad for the Epworth League Assembly at Mansfield, La., at 8:30 o'clock Monday evening, June 9. This Pullman will be occupied solely by those going to the Assembly. Requests for reservations should be addressed to Edgar Cayard, 241 Olivier Street, New Orleans.

The editor of the Advocate had the pleasure of attending part of the commencement exercises of Millsaps College, being present at the alumni banquet on Monday evening and at the graduating exercises on Tuesday morning. The baccalaureate address delivered by Hon. R. V. Fletcher was a great utterance. The graduating class was the largest in the history of the college. We heard the commencement sermon by Gipsy Smith, Jr., and the sermon before the Y. M. C. A., by Rev. J. Tillery Lewis, highly spoken of. The only honorary degree conferred this year was that of Doctor of Divinity, conferred upon Gipsy Smith, Jr.

Mr. W. F. Bishop, of Marion, Miss., and Miss Ethel Snelgrove, of Meridian, Miss., were married at the district parsonage, Meridian, Miss., on May 31, Rev. Paul D. Hardin officiating. The bride is the daughter of Rev. E. D. Snelgrove, junior pastor of the Seventh Avenue charge, Meridian. The Advocate extends all good wishes to the happy young couple.

A note from Rev. C. D. Atkinson brings the sad news of the death of Brother W. H. Ledbetter, father of Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, our pastor at Arcadia, La., on May 27. He would have been 90 years old if he had lived a few months longer. Interment took place at Simmsboro, La., on May 28. The Advocate expresses sincere sympathy for the sorrowing loved ones and friends.

The commencement sermon for Centenary College, Shreveport, La., was preached last Sunday by Rev. C. C. Gregory, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Dallas, Tex. The Y. M. C. A., Undergraduate, and Academy sermon was preached in the evening by Rev. F. M. Freeman, of Monroe, La. The baccalaureate address was delivered by Hon. H. H. White, of Alexandria, La., on Thursday morning.

Rev. John W. Ramsey has recently closed a great meeting at the West Laurel Methodist Church, Laurel, Miss., in which he was assisted by Rev. W. M. McIntosh and wife. As a result of the meeting, 26 members were received on May 25, with more to follow, all but three of the 26 being received on profession of faith. Brother Ramsey says of Brother and Sister McIntosh: "They are a wonderful evangelistic team."

The Advocate is authorized to announce that Rev. M. L. McCormick, of the Roxie charge, Mississippi Conference, has been relieved of his work on account of his health, and that Rev. George H. Jones has been appointed to take his place. Brother Jones has already entered upon his work, his address being Hamburg, Miss. We earnestly hope that Brother McCormick will soon be completely restored to health.

Miss Florence Woodcock, for more than thirty years an active member of the Felicity Methodist Church, this city, passed to her reward on Saturday, May 31. The funeral services were conducted on last Sunday afternoon by her pastor, assisted by Dr. W. Winans Drake, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, and Dr. W. L. Duren, pastor of Rayne Memorial Methodist Church. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the family and friends of the deceased.

The following sad news comes from Rev. Paul D. Hardin, presiding elder of the Meridian District: "On last Monday night, May 28, Rev. J. N. Broadway, a local deacon in the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, was killed in a cyclone which demolished his home at Brewer, in Clark County, Miss. In addition, his wife, two sons, his son's wife, and two grandchildren all lost their lives. Brother Broadway has been a useful local preacher for a number of years, and during the years 1920-22 served as a supply on the Porterville charge, Meridian District. The community is grief-stricken over the tragic ending of this useful and beloved family." Our deepest sympathy is extended to all those in sorrow by reason of this tragic event.

Mrs. W. W. Carre, one of the outstanding figures in the Methodist church in New Orleans, passed to her reward on Wednesday, May 28, at an advanced age. She had been prominently identified with the work of the church in this city for many years, being especially interested in the development of the Board of City Missions, of which she was president for a long time. She is survived by several sons, all of whom are active in church work, one of whom, Dr. Henry Beach Carre, now of Vanderbilt University, was formerly a member of the Louisiana Conference. The funeral services were held at the First Methodist Church on Thursday afternoon, conducted by her pastor, Dr. R. H. Harper, assisted by Dr. Winans Drake, presiding elder of the New Orleans District, and other local pastors. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family and friends.

METHODIST UNION—WHICH WAY?

South. It was freely said by Northern men four years ago that the election of Negro bishops in their church would close the door against unification, but apparently we have some men in our own church who will not balk at any offered plan to get together.

5. The Northern Church grants license to preach to women and ordains them, as deacons and elders, in the local ranks. Effort was made at the recent General Conference to admit them to membership in the Annual Conferences as itinerant preachers, and this seems to have been denied on the ground of its possible effect on unification. There is nothing now to prevent their appointment in that church as supply pastors, and the natural evolution will be to admit them as traveling preachers. It is quite certain that no right or privilege of this sort, when once bestowed, will ever be taken away. It is equally certain that such ministerial functions cannot long obtain in one jurisdiction of the united church without pervading the other. I do not believe Southern Methodists want this or can admit it without hurt to our work.

There are many other reasons why the work of Methodism in the South will not be promoted by this plan, but one article cannot recite them all. It ought to be rejected by our people, and I believe will be when they fully understand its import. But somebody says, "after rejection, then what?" We will then be just even on rejections; they have rejected one plan and we will have rejected one. And then we can keep on with our fraternal exchanges and our negotiations. Every plan yet devised bears two things on its face: (1) that we want to be one; (2) that we are not one and that we do not really trust each other. This is not the last train leading toward unification. There will be others, and some of them will reach the destination before this one will. Some day we will get a plan that WILL unite and will neither dishonor our history nor jeopardize our future. This plan does both.

KEEPING THE RECORD RIGHT.

Statements from others in the College of Bishops make it necessary for me to say that I did not agree with the majority in calling a special session of the General Conference for July 2. For many reasons of expediency I thought we should not call the special session to convene until after a round of Annual Conferences. Not believing, however, with the minority that an early session would be illegal, I could not join in any protest against it on legal grounds. For many prudential reasons I voted for the later session.

WILLIAM N. AINSWORTH.

METHODIST UNIFICATION.

tain, and duly and carefully consider, any proposition or plan having for its object the union of the two great bodies, in the North and South, whether such proposed union be jurisdictional or connectional" (p. 187). Our efforts in recent years in this direction are too well known to require comment. We are committed to unification all the way.

I am for unification because I think it is sound ecclesiastical statesmanship. I think it is sound as respects the economics of administration, and I think it is sound as respects the most effective use of a great spiritual ideal.

I am for unification because I think it offers the very best means for curing suspicion and distrust which North and South alike may well afford to forget in the interest of sectional and social understanding as well as common spiritual aspirations.

As I see it now I am for the proposed plan because I think it will safeguard the integrity of the constituencies until such a day as may make full and complete unification possible.

I am for the proposed plan because I fail to find either in the origin of the idea, or in its simple and direct statements, any reason to suspect the honor or the intelligence of those who framed it. If I am correctly informed, the idea was brought forward by a Southern layman, an eminent lawyer, and a loyal Methodist. And I do not see how it would have been possible to express a great purpose and a burning passion with more sublime simplicity. Such is my reaction to the whole matter.

METHODIST UNIFICATION.

By H. Walter Featherstun, D. D.

I was asked: "Do you favor the unification of the two great Methodisms?" I answered by reading: "Neither for these only do I pray, but for them also that believe on me through their word; that they may all be one; even as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be in us: that the world may believe that thou didst send me. And the glory which thou hast given me I have given unto them; that they may be one, even as we are one; I in them, and thou in me, that they may be perfected into one; that the world may know that thou didst send me." John 17:20-23. Thus on that "doleful night before his death," on the way to Gethsemane, or as he stood with them on the brink of Kidron that ran hard by the garden of his agony, our Lord prayed for unity among his followers. Can any follower of Christ wish or labor to defeat that for which he so fervently prayed?

I have heard it suggested that "there may be union without unity." If so, was He, who prayed this prayer for universal union among his followers, ignorant of the fact? Union fosters unity. If not, Christ could not and would not have uttered this prayer.

It has been contended that union with the Methodist Episcopal Church would mean that our church would become subordinate to the larger body, having forced upon us measures of which we disapproved. Whoever says this has not read the plan of unification set forth, or cannot understand plain English. Article V, Section 1, reads: "Every vote in the General Conference shall be by Jurisdictions and shall require the accepted majority vote of each Jurisdiction to be effective." Nothing could be imposed upon the Southern Jurisdiction without its consent. Was ever a minority more safely guarded in its rights?

Again it is contended that our Northern brethren are more obsessed than we with that passing fad misnamed "modernism:" hence union would be dangerous to us. The charge against our Northern brethren has not been proved. If it were true, would we as genuine Christians be justified in posing pharisaically and standing aloof? Would it not be far more Christly to go to the help of our unfortunate brethren beyond the Ohio, and aid in exterminating the infidelity that menaces them?

Read I Cor. 3:1-9, where Paul strongly disapproves of the tendency toward divisions in the church, and calls such tendency "carnality." Not one excuse for our eighty-years-old schism in American Methodism can be deduced from the Word of God.

SOME REASONS WHY I BELIEVE IN UNIFICATION.

By Rev. Stonewall Anderson, D.D.

1. The Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, are one in origin, doctrine, polity, spirit and purpose. I see no sufficient reasons why they should not be one in organization. When our fathers divided the church in 1844, we are sure that there were the very best of reasons for doing so. These reasons have all passed away. Why should the division continue when the grounds for division no longer exist?

2. The two Methodisms united will be able to render a larger, more effectual service to the national life than they can possibly do, divided as they now are. Episcopal Methodism has been, from the beginning, a mighty agency under God for good in shaping the lives of the people of this country. It has exerted a powerful influence toward making the people of the United States Christian in life and conduct. This was true before 1844, and it has been true ever since. It is true for both branches of Methodism. Never was the national life in greater need of moral and spiritual healing and help than at this hour. The church stands face to face with moral and religious needs in America which, if she meets them, will tax to the limit her resources in men, money, and moral and spiritual power.

There will be available to united Methodism vast material and spiritual resources, and these may be used much more effectively and to a very much better advantage than they can be if the church remains divided.

3. A united Methodism will be a vastly more powerful agency in carrying the Gospel to the nations beyond than a divided Methodism can possibly be. Why should there be two American Methodisms (although one in origin, doctrine, polity, and purpose), operating in Europe, and in Africa, and in Asia, and in South America, and in the islands of the sea?

A united Methodism, 7,000,000 strong, with a "Home Base" co-extensive with the American Continent, as occupied by this nation, with its vast material, cultural and spiritual resources, and with the whole world for its field of operation, will, under the guidance of God's Spirit, be an invincible army for the establishment of righteousness among all nations. The contemplation of such a prospect is enough to bring a shout of triumph from the heart of every Methodist, North and South.

4. Because it is the brotherly, Christian, thing to do. Who are these people with whom we propose to unite? They are not only Christians; they are Methodists. They believe the same things that we believe; they operate under the same form of government that we operate under; they are animated by the same spirit that animates us; they have the same history and traditions that we have; they are trying to achieve the same ends that we are. They are our brothers. Why should their altars and ours be set up against each other? Why should there be strife anywhere between their forces and ours? Why should there be any waste of resources, or any friction, or any duplication of effort, as between them and us?

St. Paul protested earnestly against divisions and schisms in the Body of Christ, in his day. If the large-minded, generous-hearted apostle could speak to us to-day on this subject, can we doubt what his message would be? What is the mind of our Lord in this matter? He prayed when in the world that His disciples might be one. He has revealed to us His mind concerning the value His Kingdom of the spirit of brotherhood among His disciples. We know the value which He places upon the unity of purpose, and effort in His disciples. I believe that the unification of the two great branches of American Methodism accords with His mind, and is in harmony with His purposes for Methodism for America, and for the world.

OPPOSED TO UNIFICATION.

By Rev. G. R. Ellis.

Dear Brother Carley: In compliance with your invitation to a discussion of the subject, I want to record my name as being opposed to unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with the Methodist Episcopal Church, North. I have several good and sufficient reasons for so doing, which, for lack of space, I will not mention here. In a word, my candid opinion is, to avoid endless wrangling and dissatisfaction in both churches, that the approaching General Conference which is to meet July 2, 1924, to settle the question, should agree to reject all former plans of unification, and adopt a plan to down the thing forever, and bury it so deep that it will not bob up again in a thousand years. Such a plan, I think, would meet the approval of nine-tenths of the members of the Southern Methodist Church.

A LOCAL PREACHER OPPOSES UNIFICATION.

I am wondering if an article from a local preacher would be published and in any way recognized with reference to the great question of Unification, as it is called, which is now confronting our great church.

Yes, it will be recognized and read, because I believe, as ever, a member of our church should have a right and a voice in this tremendous problem. To me it seems to be the most hazardous problem that has ever confronted the Southern Methodist Church. I am opposed to unification; and more especially am I opposed to the present plan of unification. The very face of the plan to me shows total annihilation to our church; and just why some of our bishops and leaders can be so intensely bent in giving away what we have struggled for for eighty years is a profound mystery to me. It may be because of my lack of vision to see the good which ultimately comes from this unification, but I am frank to tell you that I cannot see where or how we could accomplish more by giving our church away than we can by going forth as we have been going for these years.

No church in Christendom has made greater progress or done more for the salvation of the world than we have done, and we should let the matter alone and each end of Methodism work its own patch. I am no prophet or son of a prophet; but listen, brethren, we are hurt, and hurt badly, no matter which way the "cat jumps," for there will be hundreds of thousands of our members who will never go into this union. This means, then, a shoving off of a great body of our loyal members, and to do this without first giving every member of the church an opportunity to say what he or she wants is totally unfair.

All the Southern States in the United States, so far as Methodism is concerned, need a church in which her people can worship and serve God after their own manner. We have it. Why not keep it? All the Northern States in the United States, so far as Methodism is concerned, need a church in which her members can go, black and white, to serve and worship God after their own manner. They have it. Why not keep it? You cannot mix Northernism and Southernism any more than you can mix oil and water.

We are told by some that if the two branches of Methodism were brought into one great body, we could do much greater work than we are doing without any wrangling. To this idea, I wish to say that our leaders are already wrangling, and if we mix them up under this present plan, there will be wrangling sure enough.

I sincerely trust and pray that our blessed Lord, the Son of God, will put his hand on this momentous question and see to it that this wrangling and political scheming and high-pointed politics will be kept out of the church and that the grand old Southern Methodist Church and the great old Northern Methodist Church will each go on in their work until we meet at the great bar of God and be united in Heaven, where there will be no politics and no wrangling.

Yours against unification, in the name of our Father.

THE SARDIS DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Sardis District Conference, North Mississippi Annual Conference, convened for the fifty-fourth session, Tuesday morning, May 20, 1924, in the Methodist church in the beautiful and hospitable little town of Como, Miss.

Appropriate devotionals were conducted by the presiding elder, J. Tillery Lewis, after which the conference was organized for business.

The roll was called and R. G. Moore was elected secretary.

The following visiting brethren were introduced: Dr. J. R. Countiss, President Grenada College; Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Bursar Millsaps College; Rev. B. P. Jaco, Centenary Secretary North Mississippi Conference; J. H. Holder, Secretary of Education, North Mississippi Conference, all of whom ably represented these great interests of our church.

A review of the reports of the pastors indicates progress in the work of the Kingdom throughout the entire district. Every pastor has been on the job, faithfully and earnestly building the church. Some pastors began their work under adverse and unfavorable circumstances, but time has proved that untiring zeal and the spirit of Christ can surmount all difficulties and turn seeming failure into apparent success. A fine spirit prevailed throughout the conference, as was evidenced at the preachers' meeting which was held in the ladies' parlor immediately following the preaching service Tuesday night. This, as well as other occasions during the conference, proved to be the high tide of Christian fellowship and spiritual refreshment.

Spiritually, the district is making progress, but with Paul we would say, ". . . not that we have attained, . . . but we press on!" About one hundred have been received on profession of faith up to date. The financial condition of the district is better than last year at this time, and "level columns at West Point" is our hopeful slogan.

The preaching was done by Rev. H. H. McKibben, Rev. S. E. Ashmore, Rev. T. B. Thrower, and Rev. H. H. Wallace, and was greatly enjoyed by all of the brethren as well as the good people of Como, so many of whom, we were pleased to note, attended the services as well as the business sessions of the conference.

Rev. J. W. Dorman, a former presiding elder of the Sardis District, now an honored, active superannuate of the North Mississippi Conference, greatly delighted the conference with his presence and the inspiring message which he brought.

Thursday, the last day, was the high point of the conference. The outstanding feature of the day was the great and stirring message which was brought by Mr. G. L. Morelock, General Secretary of the Laymen's Movement. During the round table discussion which followed many of the laymen caught a new vision of the work of the Kingdom and voluntarily declared their purpose to be more alert and decisive in doing the Lord's work.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: Herbert Holmes, L. L. Minor, N. E. Wilcoxon, J. W. Kyle, J. R. Fewell, J. D. Turley, J. E. Birmingham, and F. C. Holmes.

The conference unanimously voted for the next session of the district conference to be held at Olive Branch.

The hospitality of the homes in which we were entertained was generous and unexcelled. The good people of Como spared nothing which might have added to our comfort and convenience. Rev. A. C. McCorkle and Mrs. McCorkle, the conference host and hostess, were thoughtful and gracious in looking after the needs of every guest. Surely we may say, "It was good to be there."

MY DAUGHTER WOULD CRY AT EVERYTHING

Nervous and Irritable. By Taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Became Entirely Normal

Clinton, Wisconsin.—"My daughter was in a very run-down condition, and was irritable, and would cry at every little thing she was so weak and nervous. As Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound had helped me when I was a girl I gave it to her to build her up, and the results were all that we could wish for. I wish that every mother with growing girls would try it for these troubles girls often have. I had taken it myself before my girl was born, and she was one of the nicest babies any one could wish to have. I recommend the Vegetable Compound to women and girls and cannot praise it too highly." — Mrs. I. A. HOLFORD, Box 48, Clinton, Wisconsin.

Mothers can depend upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to relieve their daughters of those troubles they so often have. They know from experience the value of the Vegetable Compound in the treatment of these complaints and many, like Mrs. Holford, give it to their daughters.

Appalling Problem Confronts Americans, Life Tables Show

Average health span extends only from age 18 to age 31—Earning power dwindles rapidly after 40

Health—physical freedom and full vigor—ends at age 31 for the average person. Maximum usefulness ends at 40. These facts, shown by the United States Life Tables, 1920, form the most appalling problem every human being has to face!

What are the years after 40 going to mean to you? Will they be worth living? Can you earn your way during those years?

Not if you are "the average individual." What sort of person is "the average individual" in America? He works hard. He eats unwisely. He loads his body with drug stimulants, which appear to give energy, but actually borrow this energy from his own reserve.

'Age 31—and he begins to slip. The reserve strength which his body sought to store up against these later years, has bit by bit been robbed. Age 40—he suffers loss of income. Age 50—what?

Remember the simple laws of health which everyone learned in school. Avoid stimulants. Avoid the sleepless hours, upset digestion, warning headaches, taut nerves and muddy complexions which so often accompany the use of the drug caffein.

Caffein is classified as a poison. Like strychnin, it is sometimes given by doctors in cases of heart failure. The average cup of coffee contains the usual dose of caffein administered in such cases. The alarming foolishness of taking this poison regularly into the system is borne out by the frightful limitation of health and usefulness as compared with the length of life.

You need the digestive aid and comfort of a hot drink. You can get such a drink without drugs. You can get it with a flavor which millions of people consider more delicious than any other. You can get it in a form which contributes, rather than robs, reserve strength.

Change to Postum! Whole wheat and bran, skillfully roasted, with a little sweetening. Nothing more. A wholesome drink—an enjoyable drink. Try Postum for thirty days—you can't rid yourself of the effects of a habit of years in a few days.

We will start you on your thirty-day test, with a week's supply of Postum—free. Either Postum Cereal (the kind you boil) or Instant Postum, the easiest drink in the world to prepare. Either kind costs less than most other hot drinks. MISSION STUDY ON THE BOOM.

The largest number of classes with the highest membership recorded in a single year, was the report of Mrs. Hume R. Steele, the Secretary of Missionary Education. The Bible classes, though not so many as the mission study, showed an even larger increase. For the Conferences leading in mission study the blue ribbon goes to North Georgia, North Alabama, and Memphis; for Bible study, to Louisville, Holston, and Mississippi.

Mrs. Steele feels that the time has come for a full-time secretary, the growth of the work and the pressure of the times demanding an educational expert in this department.

This is a very encouraging sign. We need to study to show ourselves approved unto God, workmen that need not to be ashamed.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Conference Minutes.

The Minutes of the Fourteenth Annual Meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society, recently held in Bogalusa, are being received by the different Auxiliaries. It is like attending the meeting a second time to read the Minutes. Where the writer attended that meeting, she gained so much help and inspiration that she wished every member in the entire Society was there; now she wishes every one would read the Minutes, and get that "enlarged vision" that we need in Louisiana. Have you seen "Council Echoes" on page 91? That is a new departure. Mrs. C. F. Niebergall, our Conference President, put that in to give us a little glimpse of the happenings at the Council meeting held in Tampa, Fla. Only one fault I find—it is too short.

Vacation Days.

With the beginning of our long hot summer, every one is planning how and where the vacation days will be spent. While we are thinking of the pleasure and benefit we may derive from our vacation, let us think of our workers at St. Mark's Hall, New Orleans, and the MacDonell Wesley House, Houma, La., who are planning to spend theirs in helping the children to have a good vacation. In each place a Daily Vacation Bible School will be held. This means lots of work, but it means better boys and girls for the future; it also means money. Material and equipment must be provided with which to carry on this work. No salaries are paid, but lots of things must be bought in order that the children can learn. Gifts of money will be received gladly for this needy work. Use a little less for yourself and send part or your vacation money to help those children learn a little more about how to live. You will enjoy your vacation better.

Send gifts for St. Mark's Hall to Miss B. Ellison, Governor Nicholls and North Rampart Streets, New Orleans; for the MacDonell Wesley House, to Miss Ella K. Hooper, Houma, La.

Louisiana News Items.

Waterproof writes they have reorganized with eight members. The Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. A. D. George, asks our prayers that the reorganizatiou may be successful.

Miss Pauline Randall, Louisiana's missionary to Korea, is home on furlough, and is studying at present at Emory College. She brought home to Lonisiana Conference a most beautiful brass vase, to be given, this year, to the district making the largest gain in Young People's organizations. This is Young People's year in the Council, and we are hoping Louisiana Conference will lead in this much-needed work for our Young People.

CAPT. F. A. HOWELL HONORED.

One of the pleasant surprises of the season was that of a pretty birthday program at the Methodist church, Sunday morning immediaely following the Sunday school lesson. The occasion was an impromptu one and the honoree was our good friend, Capt. F. A. Howell, who is affectionately called the "youngest member of thg Sunday school," and it was in celebration of his 84th birthday.

A seat of honor had been prepared for him at the chancel rail, facing the congregation, and the pastor escorted him to the seat of honor. The secretary then called the roll of classes and each class responded to its number by coming forward and presenting Capt. Howell with a bouquet of flowers or a present as the case might be. The Eva Neblett Bible Class, composed of business men of the town, presented him with a nice cake with lighted candles upon it, typifying the light of his life, which has permeated the community where he has lived during the 84 years of existence in this world. It was a beautiful little ceremony, which was enjoyed by all present. The church and Sunday school are always ready to pay homage to Captain Howell, whose life as a Christian is truly a benediction to the town and community. At the conclusion of the short program, every person in the house gave him the "glad hand" and wished him many happy returns of the day.

"CHIVO."

By Garfield Evans.

"Bolete, bolete, bolete!" I turn to a friend who speakes Spanish and inquire what the old fellow is selling, as he waves some bright-looking and flimsy tickets. "Oh," he says, "they are lottery tickets." He goes on to explain that the government conducts a public lottery on the 10th, 20th, and 30th of each month. The government feels perfectly justified, as it clears several million dollars annually.

I see two men walking along in a hurry carrying two full-blooded "cocks." To my inquiry it is explained that they are going to a rooster fight around the "plaza del gallina." This seems to be one of the commonest amusements. The interest lies not in the particular sport or the fight, but its opportunity to gamble.

In one of the rich provinces I remarked about the rather dilapidated provincial building. It was explained that a quarter of a million dollars had been appropriated for a new building, but the governor was running for reelection and was defeated. When his successor took office it was found the entire appropriation had been used as campaign expenses. Then it was further explained the offender was not brought to trial, inasmuch as he did no worse than what some other officer might have done. It was his chance at a "chivo."

It was observed that many of the public highways were sadly in need of repairs. There was evident money in the federal treasury. It was explained that all the blame for such lack of improvements was on the particular party in control, and each party expected the other one to take full advantage of the "chivo" provided by his political advantage.

At the close of the administration of one of the outstanding presidents, it was observed that the retiring president made it convenient to be on a steamer and actually sailing out to sea toward Europe within sixty minutes after his successor had been inaugurated. It was not surprising when the treasury was checked up and it was found short by several million dollars.

Five years ago when the price of sugar returned to a normal price, the whole economic life of Cuba was almost paralyzed in a day. The depositors in the Spanish and Cuba National Banks lost two hundred million dollars. Every one that was able had invested his limit. Money had been borrowed and reinvested. When the price of sugar went down, nobody could pay. This time perhaps some one in the United States had the advantage of the "chivo."

A very high preminm is placed on the graduates of our church schools. It is universally recognized that when we issue a certificate our students are well trained and know. "But they have beautiful school buildings, and their system of schools seems well organized?" I inquired. Then I am informed that the reason is "chivo."

A boy has failed in his grammar school course, but a doting father is anxious for the son to enter high school. An arrangement is made with a high school instructor and the boy enters without any difficulty. One of the teachers explains that all of his pupils get through school and secure their diploma in half of the time usually required. The boy gets through in half time. "Chivo" explains it all.

Let it not be thought that there are no people who hate "Chivo" (graft). There are honest men in the government and educators anxious to maintain high standards. But a new generation, trained under the leadership of Christianity, is the only hope by which "Chivo" may be supplanted by Christian integrity.

TRADE MARK REG

Beware of imitations. Demand the genuine in 10c and 35c packages bearing above trade mark.

To Make Rich Red Blood

Revitalize your worn-out exhausted nerves and increase your strength and endurance

take Organic Iron; not metallic iron which people usually take, but pure organic iron—Nuxated Iron—which is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples. One dose of Nuxated Iron is estimated to be approximately equivalent (in organic iron content) to eating one half quart of spinach, one quart of green vegetables or half a dozen apples. It is like taking extract of beef instead of eating pounds of meat. Nuxated Iron is partially predigested and ready for almost immediate absorption and assimilation by the blood, while metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on small pieces of iron filings.

Over 4,000,000 people annually are using Nuxated Iron. It will not injure the teeth nor disturb the stomach. A few doses will often commence to enrich your blood. Your money will be refunded by the manufacturers if you do not obtain satisfactory results.

Beware of substitutes. Always insist on having genuine organic iron—Nuxated Iron. Look for the letters N. I. on every tablet. Sold by all druggists.

MERIDIAN DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Meridian District Conference met at DeKalb, Miss., May 13 and 14, Rev. P. D. Hardin, presiding elder, in the chair. W. A. Hays was elected secretary, and Rev. J. M. Lewis, assistant secretary.

The attendance was excellent, 107 members answering roll call. All the pastors of the district were present, and a goodly number of local preachers, and one superannuate. Besides these, there was one or more lay delegates from each charge.

The business of the conference, under the guiding hand of our efficient presiding elder, was conducted in a very satisfactory manner, due consideration being given all interests of the church.

The conference was favored by addresses from the following visitors, concerning interests represented by them: Mrs. Alma Riley and W. T. Griffin, Orphans' Home; Rev. J. M. Morse, Conference Secretary of Education; A. S. Oliver, the Columbus Church matter; H. A. Gatlin, Washington City Church debt; O. C. Hull, Sunday Schools; Prof. George Harrell, Millsaps College; J. F. McClellan, Mississippi Conference Training School, and Rev. L. D. Patterson, Centenary.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: D. W. Heidelberg, Mrs. P. D. Hardin, S. J. Creekmore, J. J. Houston, C. W. Cochran, S. M. Graham, C. G. Stokes, and Mrs. W. L. Linfield.

Robert Selby House and Ernest Kearney Hall were, by unanimous vote, granted license to preach.

Rev. S. W. Edwards was received as a local preacher from the Methodist Episcopal Church, and recommended to the Annual Conference for recognition of elders's orders.

Rev. Earl B. Moll, district evangelist, was recommended to the Annual Conference for elders' orders.

The preaching was well done by Brothers J. H. Jolly, J. D. Ellis, and J. L. Decell, and the atmosphere of the conference throughout was spiritually helpful.

The ad interim licensing committee was named as follows: J. L. Decell, W. H. Lewis, W. L. Linfield, J. M. Lewis, and J. H. Jolly.

Resolutions of appreciation of Brother Hardin as presiding elder were unanimously adopted, and a beautiful handbag was presented to him as a slight token of the love and esteem in which he is universally held.

The conference greatly appreciated the fraternal spirit of the local Baptist and Presbyterian congregations, led by their wide-awake pastors, Brothers Bell and Nicholson.

The Boy Scouts and Epworth Leaguers were assidnous in their attentions to the wants of the brethren, and are held in grateful memory.

Brother M. L. White, our faithful pastor, and his good people dispensed characteristic hospitality, and it was generally agreed that the DeKalb meeting was one of the best ever.

Enterprise was chosen as the next meeting place.

W. A. HAYS, Secretary.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

EDUCATIONAL NOTES, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

The month of June is always a good time in which to make collections. So we trust the educational collectors will be busy at this season and send in a full report.

Commencement season is on in full blast. Many sermons are being preached to the schools. We hope all of them will have the outstanding note of the Christian Education Movement in them.

The round of the third quarterly conferences is being held. We trust every pastor will make a full report in regard to education. Of course, the sermon on Christian Education has been preached. Who would venture to neglect so great a theme?

Mansfield College will have twenty-nine graduates. This has been a great year for the college. The prospects for next year are even brighter. The special drive resulted in $56,000 being subscribed in Mansfield and the Parish of De Soto, while $41,000 was subscribed from the State at large. The Board of Trustees authorized the continuance of the effort through private subscriptions until the full amount of $300,000 be secured.

Definite plans are being formulated for the celebration of the hundredth anniversary of the founding of the college which now bears the name of Centenary. This ought to be a great occasion, which should send a thrill into the heart of every one of the old alumni.

A department of religious education, fully endowed, ought to be in every one of our colleges. From these should come those who are to be leaders in Sunday school work, the Epworth League, and in revival efforts. Those who have money could not do better than to invest it in this field.

The subject of religious education is being discussed everywhere. Its final answer must be found in "The Christ within us as the Hope of Glory."

SIX REASONS WHY I BELIEVE IN UNIFICATION OF AMERICAN METHODISM.

By J. R. Pepper.

First — Because the issues that separated the church in 1844 have died, passed in the distance—eighty years dead should be dead enough.

Second — Because the competition of two churches, both of which in many cases are living at a poor dying rate, where only one should exist, causes friction and often un-Christian misunderstandings.

Third—Because the great waste of men and money in keeping two organizations going at home and abroad, covering largely the same territory in both cases.

Fourth — Because I believe that altar against altar which now obtains in many directions, is not only wrong but positively sinful in God's sight, and his blessings cannot be consistently asked upon such a condition.

Fifth—Because of the magnificent impact that can be made by the combined forces and resources of the united church on the whole world.

Sixth—Because of Christ's great High Priestly prayer, "that they all may be one, as thou Father art in me and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou has sent me."

Memphis, Tenn.

STRAIGHT TALK.

Ours is not a Christian nation in the sense that all people are Christians, but it is Christian in the sense that the prevailing religious sentiments of our people are evangelical. It is certainly not a Roman Catholic country, although there are more Catholics in America than any one other religious denomination. Our forefathers came to America in order to escape the persecutions of the Catholic States of Europe, and they founded the new world on distinctly evangelical principles. Its very inception makes our country Christian in the broad general sense. Therefore legislation among us can and should take account of certain phases of Christian doctrine and practice. It must do that or else it would sanction irreligion and would be opposed to Christianity. The absence of legislation is either a witness to the lack of necessity for it or else it means the reign of free love and the disregard of all law. Shall we put the Bible in the public schools or shall we put it out?—Baptist and Reflector.

Your Greatest Problem—that Boy of Yours.

What kind of a man will he be ten, twenty, thirty years from now? Every parent knows it depends entirely upon the training he is getting now, his associations, ideals and aspirations.

Mr. Robert K. Morgan, principal of Morgan School, Petersburg, Tenn., has been training boys thirty years. He knows boys. He wants your boy. He recognizes in every boy possibilities which, if developed, will make him a leader. He wants to develop that trait in boys. Robt. K. SOME REFLECTIONS CONCERNING UNIFICATION.

1. The question of the desirability of union between the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Episcopal Church is not properly before the church—that question having been definitely settled in the affirmative by the unequivocal action of at least three General Conferences. The church, speaking through the General Conference, has repeatedly and emphatically declared its desire for unification and its readiness to consummate unification if a satisfactory plan could be agreed upon. The fact that all but three members of the Joint Commission agreed upon the plan now before the church, and the further fact that that plan has been all but unanimously adopted by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church furnish at least a strong presumption that an equitable plan has been worked out.

2. The proposed plan itself—its merits and demerits—is the one thing upon which the attention of the church should be centered. If it meets the conditions previously laid down as necessary before union can be consummated; if it gives to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, all that it could, in good conscience, ask or desire, and if it takes away from the Methodist Episcopal Church nothing that should properly be retained by that section of Methodism; if it furnishes an equitable basis upon which the desired union can be consummated, it should be adopted. If it has fundamental weaknesses that will defeat the end for which it was drawn, it should be rejected. It is the plan—this plan—and the plan only that is to be acted upon.

3. The events that have occurred since the separation in 1844 should not be allowed too much weight in determining our attitude toward this plan—a plan to be acted upon in the year of our Lord 1924. Those events constitute a history which contains nothing that we need be ashamed of; indeed, it is a history in which we can justly take pride. But it is not so much our mission to re-enact history as it is to make history—a history that will record significant achievements in the progress of the Kingdom of God upon earth. We should approach the plan with our eyes toward the future rather than toward the past. We should be more concerned about what the plan means to the future than we should be about what the past means to the plan.

4. Passion and prejudice should have as little weight as possible in our consideration of the plan. We say, "as little as possible," because we know well enough how hard it is for men to divest themselves utterly of passion and prejudice where their feelings are tremendously stirred. So far "as possible," then, we should approach the consideration of the plan calmly, quietly, and in a judicial frame of mind.

5. The real issue is not a difference of opinion among the bishops with regard to the plan itself or to any other questions that have arisen in connection with the plan; nor is the real issue the views of a particular individual or group of individuals with reference to the plan. It is always easy to substitute a party cry for the principles involved in any discussion. The real issue, it cannot be too strongly emphasized, is the plan itself.

6. An expression of suspicion and distrust of those who favor or do not favor the plan is no part of an argument against the plan. Apart from the question of brotherly love involved, the rights and privileges of all concerned are written in the bond, and upon the document as written, with its obligations and guaranties, opinions should be formed and conclusions reached.

7. The Negro question is settled so far as the Southern white people are concerned. The two races can dwell together in peace and harmony; the white race will cheerfully accord to the colored race all that is required in the exercise of the spirit of Christ; but there will be no social mingling of the races, no mixed congregations, no colored bishops presiding over white Conferences, no social contacts that violate the well-known, fixed, and irreversible position of the Southern white people upon this question. This position is not based upon prejudice or arbitrary discrimination, but upon an innate sense of the necessity of maintaining racial integrity. We believe the colored people themselves recognize and accept this position as fully as do the white people. The proposed plan of unification distinctly recognizes and accepts it in its provision for jurisdictional administration. But, plan or no plan, this matter is settled.

8. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, as the recognized minority in the proposed plan of unification, is amply protected in the maintenance of its rights and the preservation of its distinguishing characteristics by the provision that every vote in the General Conference shall be by jurisdictions and shall require the accepted majority vote of each jurisdiction to be effective, and by the further provision that the Judicial Council shall be composed of an equal number of members elected by each Jurisdictional Conference and that all decisions of the Judicial Council shall be by a majority of the total membership of the Council. With these provisions written into the plan, it would seem that the minority could hardly ask for stronger guaranties.

9. Likening the proposed unification of the two churches to an assumption of the marriage relation appears to us to be a false analogy. A better figure, it seems to us, would be that it is a re-union of long-separated members of the same family, a reconciliation after an estrangement, in which, past differences having been cleared away or forgot, peace and harmony are restored.

10. The legality of the called session of the General Conference is a matter that deserves the most serious consideration. Even though a vast majority of the ministry and membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, should desire the early adoption of the plan, and the Methodist Episcopal Church should be expectantly awaiting our action, constitutional requirements should be complied with, for the best interests of all concerned. A constitution cannot be amended by mere intention, or changed by incompletion of the process specified for making a change. Failure to complete the process through ignorance or inadvertence may be annoying—even blameworthy—but it does not make unnecessary the completion of the process. It is our opinion that the special session of the General Conference should, before it attempts anything else, appoint a competent committee to consider the legality of the call and report its findings at the earliest possible moment. If the finding should be that the session was illegally called, there would, of course, arise other questions concerning the validity of an act of a committee of an illegally called body, etc. Certainly if it should be found that the church is unable to act constitutionally upon the plan at this time, there might be great disappointment, but there could be no censure for failure to act.

We believe the proposed plan of unification of the two churches is fair, that its protection of the minority is adequate, and that its adoption will be for the best interests of the Kingdom of God. We are in favor, therefore, of its adoption in whatever may prove to be the proper constitutional way.

GENERAL CONFERENCE TO MEET IN CHATTANOOGA.

Chattanooga, Tenn., has been selected as the place for holding the special session of the General Conference that has been called by the bishops to meet on July 2, 1924. The Patton Hotel will be headquarters of the Committee on Location and Arrangements, and of the local Committee on Entertainment. Mr. R. P. Purse is the chairman of the local committee. There will be ample hotel accommodations at reduced rates for all delegates and visitors. Those who want information about hotel rates or wish to make reservations should write to Mr. R. P. Purse, chairman of the Local Committee on Entertainment, Chattanooga, Tenn.

A CRISIS IN METHODIST HISTORY.

By President C. C. Selecman, of Southern Methodist University.

A letter from one of the leaders in our church says: "I feel that we are at a crisis in the history of American Methodism. I am profoundly convinced that the unification of the two Methodisms is the will of God."

Having been a member of the Unification Commission for one quadrennium, before moving from California to Texas, I am fully committed to the plan as suggested by the Commission and overwhelmingly adopted by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

However, in my judgment, it will be well for us, in the discussion of this question, to be judicial in our mental attitude and charitable in spirit toward each other and toward our brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

May I add my own testimony which may bear upon the situation? For seven years I lived in Los Angeles, where our denomination is overshadowed by the Methodist Episcopal Church, with its more than sixty congregations in one city. In addition they have a great hospital and a great university of more than four thousand students. Their Monday morning preachers' meetings look more like an annual conference than a city preachers' meeting, owing to the large number of active and superannuate ministers who attend.

A PLAIN STATEMENT BY BISHOP CANDLER.

On May 20, Bishops Denny, Darlington, Dickey and myself united in a statement (not a protest in any sense), giving our reasons for dissenting from the conclusion reached by a majority of the bishops in calling for an extra session of the General Conference on July 2.

We felt the statement was "due the church as well as ourselves."

Our statement was entirely free from all personalities, as it should have been, and it contained no slightest reflection on our colleagues from whose conclusion we felt constrained to dissent. It was as nearly impersonal as it was possible to make such a statement.

I regret that it is necessary to say anything further on the subject which called it forth, but justice to my colleagues who united with me in it requires me to say what I now write, to the end that no erroneous conception of its origin or misleading impression of its purpose may go forth in the present, or be handed down to the future.

From what I am about to say I shall exclude all personalities and unworthy insinuations, having no disposition to indulge such unseemly things and believing their indulgence by any one, and especially by a bishop, to be improper and also injurious to the church.

I shall give a plain account of the statement issued by Bishops Denny, Darlington, Dickey and myself, and the proceedings in the College of Bishops which led us to make it.

The bishops met in Nashville on Friday, May 2. They were occupied mainly on Friday and Saturday with the usual matters of the spring meeting, and with the revision of the "Manual of Discipline."

Then the matter of calling an extra session of the General Conference was taken up; and, four days in advance of any action by the Northern General Conference on the subject of the proposed "Plan of Unification," a resolution was passed to call a session of the General Conference not later than Aug. 1.

Subsequently, one who voted for this resolution moved that it be reconsidered; but the motion to reconsider failed, by a vote of 7 ayes to 7 nays.

From the very outset of the discussion of the matter, I argued that it would be illegal, as well as unjust, to call an extra session of the General Conference in advance of the next sessions of the Annual Conferences.

On the second day of the discussion (Monday, May 5), I read to the College of Bishops a paper designed to sustain the position I had taken concerning the illegality of an extra session before the next meetings of the Annual Conferences.

That I might be more sure of the correctness of my view, I communicated with several eminent Methodist lawyers in easy reach of Nashville, asking them to wire me what in their opinion was the proper legal construction of Paragraphs 37 and 38 of Discipline of 1922. Both they and I assumed then that those paragraphs had been legally enacted.

In reply, Hon. W. G. M. Thomas, of Chattanooga, wired me on Monday, May 5:

"Among the fundamental rules and principles which must always govern construction and interpretation of statutes is that the intention of the makers must prevail. To reach this every part of the statute must be considered. A thing may be within the letter and yet not within the statute, unless it be within the intention of the makers. The words, the context, the effects, and consequences are to be considered, and if the words admit of two possible constructions, it must be presumed that the makers intended that which is reasonable, fair, sensible, and just. In view of the entire subject matter, sections 37 and 38 must be read together. When this is done the construction is clear that if a General Conference be called, the time fixed must be such as that the Annual Conference shall have opportunity to say whether it prefers to send the existing or a new delegation.

(Signed) "W. G. M. THOMAS."

On the same date, Hon. Guston T. Fitzhugh, of Memphis, wired me:

"Replying to your letter I think the words 'at any time' in paragraph 37 of Discipline are limited by the provision in paragraph 38; that the Annual Conference shall have the opportunity to elect new delegates to the called session of the General Conference. In my opinion, the power to call an extra session of the General Conference cannot be exercised so as to deprive the Annual Conferences of the right to have the character of representation which they are entitled to select under paragraph 38.

(Signed) "G. T. FITZHUGH."

On Tuesday, May 6, I sent to Associate Justice William H. Thomas, of the Supreme Court of Alabama, a Methodist lawyer of great ability, the paper I had read to the bishops on Monday, May 5, accompanied by the following letter:

"Nashville, Tenn., May 6, 1924.

"My Dear Judge: The last General Conference directed the bishops to call an extra session of the General Conference in case the Northern General Conference approved the proposed plan of unification.

"Anticipating that the Northern Methodists will approve the plan of unification, the bishops have under consideration the time when an extra session of our General Conference could be legally held.

"The sections of the Discipline that touch the matter are sections 37 and 38, edition of 1922, which are as follows:

"'Section 37. The bishops, or a majority of the Annual Conferences, shall have authority to call a General Conference at any time if they judge it necessary.

"'Section 38. When a General Conference is called, it shall be constituted of the delegates elected to the preceding General Conference, except when an Annual Conference shall prefer to have a new election.'

"Some of the bishops hold that the bishops are authorized to fix any time for holding a called session of the General Conference without regard to the right of preference vested in the Annual Conferences by Paragraph 38. Others hold that the authority given the bishops by Paragraph 37 is limited by the rights vested in the Annual Conferences by Paragraph 38, and that a General Conference cannot be called until each and every Annual Conference has had opportunity to exercise its right of option, conferred by Paragraph 38.

"Pending the discussion of the matter on yesterday I read to the bishops the paper which I enclose.

"The matter is not yet settled, but will probably be determined on to-morrow or Thursday.

"Please wire me on Wednesday morning your judgment concerning the correct interpretation of the law governing the matter. Wire, of course, at my expense, a longer or shorter opinion as you may prefer.

"Thanking you in advance for this valuable service, I am,

"Yours very truly,

"W. A. CANDLER."

To my letter Justice Thomas replied on Wednesday, May 7, as follows:

"Letter just received. Section 37 of Discipline gives the bishops unlimited power in the exercise of a wise discretion as to the necessity, subject, however, to the limitation fixed by section 38, and therefore this discretion to call an extra session is limited as to time to such date as to give to the Annual Conferences the opportunity of exercising their rights of selecting delegates to represent such Conferences in the concrete question to be considered at said called session. That is, sections 37 and 38 must be construed together.

"WILLIAM H. THOMAS."

With the conclusion reached by these able lawyers, Hon. Percy Maddin, and Hon. J. McFerrin Anderson, of Nashville, Tenn., agreed, as did also Hon. Perry S. Rader, of Jefferson City, Mo., all of whose carefully prepared opinions, given in writing, are too long to be quoted in this article.

Subsequently, Hon. W. G. M. Thomas and his partner and brother, Mr. L. M. Thomas, sent me a carefully considered opinion, which also is too long to quote in full. It is sufficient to quote this paragraph from that opinion:

"It is our opinion that in the call to be issued, the bishops must fix such a date for the called General Conference as that the Annual Conference shall be given opportunity to express itself, should it so prefer, as to its own delegation."

These opinions were given to the bishops, just as they were received.

On Wednesday afternoon, May 7, news was received that the General Conference of our Northern brethren had approved the "proposed plan of unification," and promptly the bishops were called by me to meet on Thursday, May 8.

In the meeting on May 8, the discussion both of the legality and expediency of calling the General Conference not later than Aug. 1 was continued, and finally it was agreed to adjourn until May 20 for further consideration of the matter.

It was necessary for me to return to my home on the night of May 8, after this adjournment.

In the discussion had on that day, a word was dropped by a bishop favoring an early session of the General Conference to the effect that Paragraphs 37 and 38 had never been handed down to the Annual Conferences—a fact which for the time I had forgotten, although the fact was stated in a report made to the General Conference of 1914 by the "Commission on the Constitution," composed of Bishops Alpheus Wilson, James Atkins, William B. Murrah, Collins Denny, and myself; and although the same fact had been brought to the notice of the church by Hon. W. F. Barclay, a member and the secretary of a previously appointed Commission, in a book published in 1902, which was highly commended by Bishop John J. Tigert, who was then "Book Editor."

When I reached Atlanta on May 9, having many tasks to discharge, I asked Mr. William D. Thomson, one of the ablest Methodist lawyers in the South, to investigate the constitutionality of Paragraphs 37 and 38 for me. This he kindly did, and after his careful investigation he handed me the following statement:

"For the first time in the history of Methodism it becomes necessary to call a special session of the General Conference. The novelty of this procedure has invited an examination of the method that should be adopted to render the called session of the Conference legal.

"Prior to 1808 such Conferences had been mass Conferences, attended by all of the ministers of the church. In the last mass Conference, which was held in 1808, a plan for a representative General Conference was adopted. The only reference to a called session of the Conference incorporated in this plan is contained in the following extracts from the Journal of the meeting held Tuesday afternoon, May 24, 1808:

"'Moved by Daniel Ostrander, and seconded by Ezekiel Cooper, that the general superintendents, with or by the advice of all the Annual Conferences, or, if there be no general superintendent, all the Annual Conferences respectively, shall have power to call a General Conference, if they judge it necessary, at any time. Carried.'

"This motion, along with other motions adopted at the same session, has been since considered as the fundamental law governing representative General Conferences, and indeed has often been spoken of as a part of the Constitution of the Methodist Church. The foregoing motion evidently did not intend to render it an easy matter to bring the General Conference into special session, as no call could be issued until all of the Annual Conferences had first approved it.

"No change was made in the above law until the Conference of 1866, at which the report of a committee was adopted, which provided that 'the bishops, or a majority of all the Annual Conferences, shall have authority to call a General Conference if they judge it necessary, at any time. When a General Conference is called it shall be constituted of the delegates elected to the preceding General Conference, except when any Annual Conference shall prefer to have a new election.'

"This action of the Conference of 1866 was not submitted to the Annual Conferences for ratification, although it involved a very radical and fundamental change in the law and gave to the bishops the authority to impose on the church a called session of the General Conference without consulting any of the Annual Conferences—whereas, previously any one Annual Conference could have prevented the call of the special General Conference by declining to advise the same.

"If the motion adopted at the Conference of 1808, and first above set forth, is to be treated as a part of the Constitution of the church, and such seems to have been the generally accepted view of it (see: Manual of the Discipline, Page 7, footnote 15; The Constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Churches, by Barclay, pages 37 to 41; Report of the Commission on the Constitution of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South (1914), pages 29, Recommendation as to Rule 37), it would seem that such a radical change as was proposed by the action of 1866 would require in some method the consent of the Annual Conferences, who were thus divested of what had theretofore been one of their fundamental rights.

"It is to be noted that under the action of 1808 no provision was made as to who should constitute a called General Conference. It was doubtless contemplated that inasmuch as the Annual Conferences had to act affirmatively before such a session could be called, they would, in the event of their decision to advise the call of the General Conference, at the same time elect delegates to such General Conference. In other words, the called General Conference was in effect the calling of a new body, and not merely calling into a second session a General Conference which had already held one regular session.

"As this change of 1866 was not submitted to the Annual Conferences, it would seem that the attempt to thus amend the fundamental law had not been completed, and that the action of the General Conference in adopting the proposed amendment was merely the first step toward bringing about a change—the second step in which was just as necessary, and should have consisted in the approval of the Annual Conferences.

"It would appear, therefore, in order to call a General Conference at this time, in a manner that would place its legality beyond doubt, necessary to follow the law as it unquestionably existed prior to 1866 and require the call to originate with the Annual Conferences.

"The change proposed in 1866 is probably capable of two constructions—one of which is extremely radical and the other of which is very much less radical, and would preserve to the Annual Conferences a larger measure of the power that they unquestionably had prior to 1866.

"Under the first construction, the bishops would have authority to call a General Conference at any time that they might see fit without waiting for sessions of the Annual Conferences to intervene between the date of the issuance of the call and the date of the session of the General Conference. If the Conference is thus called by the bishops, it would necessarily be composed of the delegates elected to the last General Conference, as none of the Annual Conferences would have an opportunity to change their delegation, even though they desired to do so. Any Conference which had been created at the last regular session of the General Conference would be without representative in the called session.

"The other construction puts special stress on the provision giving to the Annual Conferences the right to elect new delegates to the called session of the General Conference if they so desired. In order to give the Annual Conferences a chance to express such preference, it must be implied that the bishops, in fixing the date of the session, should not fix it prior to the next sessions of all the Annual Conferences. If the date is thus fixed subsequent to the session of the Annual Conferences, the Annual Conferences have an opportunity to meet and consider the called session and instruct their delegates to the last General Conference—or, if they prefer, elect new delegates—who would go to the called session of the Conference with a full knowledge of what action their Conference desired taken.

"In my opinion, the safest rule to be followed in calling the General Conference, is to follow the law as it existed prior to 1866 (and as it probably still exists because of failure to submit the action of 1866 to the Annual Conferences). If this is done, the call for the General Conference would originate with the Annual Conferences, and then be acted upon by the bishops pursuant to the advice of the Annual Conferences. New delegates to the Conference will be selected by the Annual Conferences at the same time that they advise the call, if they should so desire.

"If it is determined to act upon the law as now set out in the Discipline, even though it has not been approved by the Annual Conferences, it is clearly best to construe said law conservatively rather than radically, and to fix the date of said Conference at such time as will be subsequent to the next meeting of all of the Annual Conferences. For the bishops to give it the radical interpretation is to claim for themselves a power that will doubtless in some quarters be considered usurpation on their part; for the result would be to deprive the Annual Conferences of the right to express a preference for a new delegation, and, indeed, to deprive one or more Annual Conferences of any representation at all in the General Conference, since such Conferences were only created recently and have never yet elected delegates to a General Conference.

"The subject matter to be considered at the called session of the General Conference is of such vital importance and may be brought into question in the courts of so many different State jurisdictions as to render it absolutely necessary for the bishops in this case not to give to the law any interpretation about which there is doubt.

"The action of the General Conference of 1922 in instructing the bishops to call a special session of our General Conference, is and probably was, only intended to be merely advisory, as under no construction is the General Conference itself given any power to call, or to require the bishops to call, a special session.

"Being merely advisory, it must be read in connection with the law of the church regarding called sessions of the General Conference, as it could not be construed to advise the bishops to do an illegal thing. This advice of the General Conference of 1922 would undoubtedly be complied with should the bishops fix the date of the session of the General Conference at a time subsequent to the next meeting of all of the Annual Conferences."

I had copies of Mr. Thomson's paper made, and in fairness I sent one to Bishop McMurry in advance of the final meeting of the bishops on May 20.

When the bishops met on May 20, this constitutional question was laid before them.

It was shown that the chapter in the Discipline on the General Conference was held, and had been held always from 1808 (by both branches of Episcopal Methodism) as being of Constitutional nature, and that it was so declared by the bishops themselves in the editing of the "Manual Discipline," approved by them as late as 1920 (see page 8, Manual Discipline 1920).

It was shown also that this position was sustained by Bishops Soule, McKendree, Tigert, and Merrill, and supported by Dr. J. M. Buckley and Bishop Thomas B. Neeley in their treatises on the Constitution of Episcopal Methodism.

It was pointed out that in 1896 the Northern General Conference undertook to change the time of meeting of the General Conference from the "first day of May" to the "first Wednesday in May," and that it was found necessary to refer to the Annual Conferences even so small a change in the Constitution as that.

Particular attention was called to the very significant fact that the Northern General Conference of 1856 undertook to change the method of calling a special session of the General Conference, and did actually pass a bill to that effect; but failed to refer the proposed change to the Annual Conferences; that this illegally adopted amendment was printed in their book of Discipline from 1856 to 1900—(forty-four years)—when the error was discovered and corrected by the adoption of their revised Constitution in 1900 as it now exists.

Of this illegal attempt in 1856 to change this feature of the Constitution, Dr. Buckley says in his book on the Constitution: "There is no evidence that this change was submitted to the Annual Conferences. It was, therefore, clearly, a usurpation of power by the General Conference to enact it and an imposition upon the church to change its Discipline without authority."

Besides the statement of Mr. William D. Thomson on the subject of the constitutionality of Paragraphs 37 and 38, Hon. Perry S. Rader, of Jefferson City, Mo., gave a full discussion of this constitutional point, but his opinion was not read to the College of Bishops. I have been told that, in reply to a letter from one of the majority by whom the extra session of the General Conference was called, Hon. J. T. Ellison, of Centreville, Ala., also pointed out that Paragraphs 37 and 38 of Discipline of 1922 had never been legally adopted; but his letter for some reason was not read to the bishops, the reason for withholding it perhaps being that it was considered a private communication.

Pending the discussion on May 20, Bishop Dickey, seconded by Bishop Darlington, moved to fix the date of the called session of the General Conference for the first Wednesday in May, 1925, and against their motion the point of order was made by Bishop Monzon that it could not be entertained without reconsideration of the action taken early in the session (May 3) fixing the date not later than Aug. 1, and that the motion to reconsider had been made once and defeated already. I ruled that the point was well taken, and the motion could not be made unless the former action was rescinded. No motion was made to rescind, it being evident that it would be voted down.

Pending the discussion, I said that I would agree to the first Wednesday in May, 1925, for the date of the extra session, and would unite with all the bishops in earnestly urging all the Annual Conferences to join us in making the call for the extra session at that time. I expressed the confident belief that every one of the Annual Conferences would respond affirmatively to our urgent appeal, and that thereby all legal difficulties would be escaped and other obstacles removed.

But the called session was set for July 2, 1924, notwithstanding all arguments and appeals to the contrary.

When the final vote had been taken the bishops ordered the Chairman and Secretary to frame the formal call, which we cheerfully agreed to do, provided it might be submitted to the bishops for approval or amendment when it had been framed. Accordingly, at the night session of the College of Bishops on May 20, the formal call was submitted, slightly amended, and then unanimously approved. Thereupon I signed it as chairman and passed it to the Secretary, Bishop Denny, for his signature; and he gave it publication in the usual way. He tells me that he did not feel free to give the official paper to any other newspaper in advance of giving it to the editor of the official organ of the church, The Christian Advocate, but that he gave to a representative of the morning paper in Nashville—the Tennessean—the fact that the call had been made for July 2, which fact was published on the morning of May 21 and sent on the night of May 20 by the Associated Press to all the papers of that Association in America. This was done before the statement made by Bishops Denny, Darlington, Dickey and myself was so much as written.

We four remained in the room after the College of Bishops had adjourned, and, after consultation, we decided we ought to publish a statement, which statement I was requested to write. I then went aside and wrote it. When it was read to Bishops Denny, Darlington, and Dickey, a few minor changes were suggested by them, which having been made, they affixed their signatures to the paper. As it was in my handwriting, and I was compelled to leave Nashville early the next morning, I carried it to the city editor of the Tennessean, read it to him, and asked its publication. He published it on the morning of May 21 in connection with an extended publication of the fact that an extra session had been called.

This is a plain statement of fact, about which there is nothing mysterious and nothing reprehensible.

If we had made no statement, many people might have supposed that we approved the call, and especially so, in view of the fact that the bishops who ordered the call did not sign it (as I believe would have been better), and it was ordered published over the signatures of Bishop Denny and myself as Secretary and Chairman, although neither of us approved the call. Moreover, we felt that it was due the church as well as ourselves, that the statement of the case, as we saw it, should be published.

For one I should have felt I was remiss in a matter of plain duty, if the facts, as we stated them, had not been laid before the church.

It is a matter of little importance how, or when, the statement we made was published.

Nor is the position of any one, or all of us, with reference to the "proposed plan of unification" the main issue.

The real issue is, was the call for an extra session on July 2 made legally and justly? Were Paragraphs 37 and 38 of the Discipline of 1922, under which the majority of the bishops assumed to act, ever legally enacted? Were they ever handed down by the General Conference to the Annual Conferences for approval? If they were not—(and no man will dare affirm that they ever were submitted to the Annual Conferences)—they are not any part of the law of the church; the law of 1808 is still a part of the Constitution of the church; and as such it should be respected and obeyed. Here is a plain matter of fact; which need not arouse any personal feeling, or provoke any irritation whatsoever.

The most ardent advocate of the proposed plan of unification, if he be wise, would not wish it adopted with even a color or cloud of illegality resting on the method of its adoption. Its most earnest opponent could not wish for it anything worse than its adoption under a process of doubtful legality.

It is nothing to the purpose to say the very great men who were members of the General Conference of 1866 could not have blundered by failing to refer a constitutional amendment to the Annual Conferences. It is an indisputable fact that they did.

One of them, Dr. William A. Smith, of Virginia, one of the mightiest among them, candidly confessed that he did thus blunder with respect to another most important amendment. He offered in 1854 the measure providing for what is now called the bishops' "veto," which is found in Paragraph 43 of Discipline. The General Conference of 1854 adopted the measure, but both Dr. Smith and the General Conference overlooked the fact that it was necessary to refer it to the Annual Conferences. Nevertheless it was inserted in the Discipline of 1854. He says he intended to call up the matter at the General Conference in 1858, but forgot to do so. It continued to appear in the Discipline until 1870, although without authority. Dr. P. A. Peterson, in his "History of the Revisions of the Discipline," says of it: "This provision was inserted in 1854. But as it possessed the power and quality of a constitutional provision, and had been adopted simply by a majority vote of the General Conference, its validity was doubted. The matter was brought up in the General Conference of 1866, but was not settled." In 1870 it was referred by the General Conference to the Committee on Episcopacy, who reported that it was without authority, and recommended the adoption of the proviso, as it now appears in the Discipline. The recommendation of the committee "received the constitutional majority of two-thirds, and was sent down to the Annual Conferences for their concurrence, which was given."

Thus it appears that a paragraph which was illegal, and without authority, continued to appear in the Discipline from 1854 to 1870. But its author, Dr. W. A. Smith, with courage and candor, declared it null and void, and the other great leaders in the General Conference of 1866 agreed with him, although both he and they failed in that Conference to correct the blunder.

The great men who occupied the General Conference of 1866 did not, for one moment, seek to disguise their blunder or to defend an unconstitutional amendment by pleading that it had become valid by its appearance in the Discipline for sixteen years without objection by any one. They were not men to indulge the slightest spirit of lawlessness.

The great leaders of 1866, among whom there was none greater than Dr. William A. Smith, of Virginia, were far too candid and clear-headed to claim that a Constitution may be amended by mere lapse of time, or by ignorance of the people, or by inadvertence of the law-makers.

Were they living to-day, they would unite in the honest confession that inadvertently they erred when they failed in 1866 to refer Paragraphs 37 and 38 to the Annual Conferences, and they would declare those paragraphs to be without authority, and, therefore, null and void.

All this I steadfastly believe; I believe also that even if those paragraphs had been constitutionally adopted, a true construction of them forbids the bishops fixing a time for a called session of the General Conference in advance of the session of the Annual Conferences, and thereby depriving them of their right of option under paragraph 38.

I believe, also, that every legal difficulty in the way of a special session could have been escaped, every objection on the score of what the Florida Christian Advocate has called "unnecessary and unseemly haste" could have been overcome, and the will of the General Conference of 1922 done most fully, if the called session had been set for the first Wednesday in May, 1925.

I do not believe the rights of the Annual Conferences with reference to this matter should have been denied them. Their rights are very sacred.

I do not believe that all our preachers and people should have been denied the opportunity to examine carefully and study deliberately the proposed plan of unification, about which there has been next to no discussion in the papers of the church, editors having been advised not to discuss it in advance of action upon it by the Northern General Conference.

I do not think it just and right to "call the previous question" on the whole church, and, thereby, restrict fair discussion of a subject which should receive the fullest possible consideration, and about which the wishes of all our people should be consulted.

I believe, therefore, the setting of the time for the called session of the General Conference on July 2, was, and is, unwise, unjust and without authority of law.

It pains me keenly to differ with any of my colleagues, and ever since I was called to the office of bishop, I have endeavored to promote the harmony and maintain the unity of the College of Bishops, often yielding most promptly my own opinions to the judgment of the majority of my colleagues. That was and is my view of what is wise and best, although in 1902 several bishops dissented from the position of their colleagues on the Publishing House matter, and one announced strongly his dissent to the General Conference then assembled in Dallas, Tex.

But in a matter so serious as that which now confronts the church, there seemed to me no other course for me to take than that which I have taken, because I could not otherwise do faithfully what I conceived to be my duty.

The unity of the College of Bishops would have been preserved by fixing the time of the called session for the first Wednesday in May, 1925, and for this I made an earnest appeal to my colleagues, but without avail.

May I now, in conclusion, be allowed a brief personal word?

I entered the ministry of our beloved church three months before I was eighteen years of age. To its service I have given the undivided strength of my life for above forty and nine years. I have never taken a vacation, and during this period of nearly half a century, I have preached on an average of more than three times a week. I have served missions, circuits, stations and districts, living in plain parsonages when I did not dwell in mine own hired house. I have done editorial and educational work also. From no field of service to which I have been called by my church have I turned away. All my appointments I have accepted without complaint.

As a bishop I have served some twenty-six years, and of all the effective bishops in American Methodism I have served longest.

During all these toilsome years, I have exercised myself to have always a conscience void of offense toward God and toward men. I have approached every duty in singleness of purpose, and discharged it as well as I could. I have coveted no man's silver, nor gold, nor house, nor land, as I have gone in and out before my people; but I have endeavored to fulfill all my obligations unbiased and uninfluenced by any personal or selfish consideration. I have not corrupted the Gospel of Christ, nor shunned to declare the whole counsel of God. In the fear of God and in the love of men I have lived and labored for my church from youth to old age.

My career is now drawing to a close, and its end may be nearer than I know.

But if I knew this were my last communication to the preachers and people of the church, which is more dear to me than life, I would solemnly declare, and I do now solemnly declare, that in all good conscience I have done my duty as God has given me to see it.

In the matter now before the church, which is discussed in this paper, I have done my duty kindly, and faithfully, without resorting to any sinister method or unworthy indirection. I have not considered what might be the consequences to me of the course of duty I have felt constrained to pursue.

In the presence of my God, before whom I must appear for judgment not many years hence at the furthest, and before the preachers and people of my church, who have known my manner of life during all these years, I declare that in all I have done, or refused to do, I have acted from pure motives and a single purpose. Above all things else I desire the welfare of my church, whose adversities have given me my sorest pangs and whose prosperity is ever my chief joy.

And now my witness is in heaven and my record is on high, beyond the reach of unjust imputations and unkind insinuations. There I leave it with serene confidence and perfect contentment.

THE PUBLICATION OF THE OFFICIAL CALL OF THE SPECIAL SESSION OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

Misapprehension exists touching the prompt publication of the official Call of the special session of the General Conference. The facts are as follows:

The College of Bishops formulated the Call about 9 p. m., May 20, and the Chairman and Secretary officially signed the typewritten copy in duplicate. Before all the bishops had left the room, the Secretary gave the fact of the Call to the reporter of the Nashville Tennesseean. He did not give a copy of the formal Call to the reporter, because for fourteen years, and as he understands for years earlier, it has been customary to heed the request of the editors of the Christian Advocate that the church should have first use of official papers. In the issue of the Tennesseean on the morning of May 21, on the front page, at the top of column 3, appeared in bold type, "Bishops Summon Special General Methodist Episcopal Conference. Unification Issue to Be Considered on July 2." Then followed the statement of the fact of the Call, and a number of other points of interest. The news went out to all the country through the Associated Press.

Early on the morning of May 21, the Secretary of the College personally took a copy of the official Call to the office in the Publishing House of the editor of the Christian Advocate, the "General Organ of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South." The Secretary was so early that the editor had not arrived. The copy of the Call was handed to the associate editor. Within a few minutes the editor came in, and the Secretary requested the immediate publication of the Call. The editor replied that the paper had just come off of the press, and the publication would appear in the next issue of the Christian Advocate.

A reporter of the Nashville Banner, an evening paper, was given a copy of the Call by the editor, and that afternoon, May 21, under large display headlines, framed at the head of the column, and within the frame under "Formal Call," appeared the Call bearing the names of the officials, with the place and date. The Secretary personally called on the owner of the Banner and requested the publication of all the information.

The Secretary then went to one of the Publishing Agents, who graciously promised to send a copy of the official Call to each Conference paper in time to appear in the next issue of those papers.

On the first available train the Secretary left Nashville to go to the home of a critically and as he feared fatally ill member of his family.

Before the week ended the Secretary communicated with the Publishing Agents, and asked that telegrams he sent to each Conference organ, if for any reason there had been failure or delay to send the Call to those papers. The Publishing Agent kindly replied: "The proof sheets of the Call of the General Conference were forwarded to the various Conference organs on May 22."

In addition, so solicitous was the Secretary that the church might be quickly informed of this Call, that he went personally to the office of the North Carolina Christian Advocate to inquire whether the official Call had reached that paper. When he was told the Call had been received he inferred that all the other Conference organs had also received official notice of the Call.

The Secretary assures the church that he attended to this duty carefully, promptly and efficiently.

COLLINS DENNY,
Secretary of the College of Bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.
Richmond, Va., May 31, 1924.

RUSTON DISTRICT NOTES.

The pastor and congregation at Arcadia have adjusted themselves to their new church, and there is a growing interest in every department of church work. Rev. H. W. Ledbetter, the pastor, has the sympathy of his many friends in the death of his father, Brother W. H. Ledbetter, on May 28.

* * *

The second quarterly conference at Cotton Valley embraced Easter Sunday. At the 11 o'clock service ten adults presented themselves for church membership. At an afternoon service they were received into the church. Three babies were also baptized at this time. Brother Anders is doing a good work.

* * *

Farmerville—The saddest part of these notes is that Brother J. L. Greenway, who was appointed to Farmerville and was doing a most excellent work, has had to be relieved because of sickness. Rev. A. F. Stem, of Augusta, Ga., has been appointed to finish up the year's work. We have had favorable reports from his beginning.

* * *

Gibsland church is to have a revival about the middle of June. Rev. C. E. McLean, the pastor, is to do his own preaching. The outstanding feature in this work is their financial system. They are up-to-date with their ministerial support, and I understand the conference claims are collected monthly.

* * *

Jonesboro and Hodge have made great progress in Sunday schools, Leagues and Missionary Societies. They are keeping well up with their financial budget. The first year's payment of the Superannuate Endowment fund has been collected and sent.

* * *

Rev. J. F. Dring, our pastor at Sibley, has about completed his Conference course of study. He has arranged for his revival meetings. The official boards are doing well their part in looking after the finances.

* * *

Simsboro—Rev. H. J. Boltz is leading his forces well. The Sunday schools have made great progress. Special mention should be made of the Antioch school, where Brother B. F. Cargill is superintendent.

* * *

Rev. E. J. Buck gave us an interesting story of how he raised his first year's payment of the Superannuate Endowment fund, which was not only successful in getting the fund, but an inspiration to his people.

* * *

Haynesville, led by their pastor, Rev. A. J. Gearheard, have gone over the top in their first year's payment of the Superannuate Endowment fund.

* * *

Homer Chapel is wide awake and getting themselves a name of being a very social church—making visitors feel at home in their services.

* * *

There is to be a meeting of all the men's classes in the district on the 29th of June at Ruston. Dean Smith, of Centenary College, is to be the teacher on that occasion. After the Sunday school they will attend the preaching service, the pastor preaching. In the afternoon they perfect plans to enlist every man in the district in the work of the Sunday school.

Our district conference, which will be reported by the secretary, was well attended.

The district missionary conference met at Minden on May 22, for an all-day meeting, with an unusually large attendance, and practically every Missionary Society in the district was represented. Mrs. J. F. Giles, our district missionary secretary, carried out a well planned program.

CENTENARY COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

Another Centenary commencement has registered definite progress in the development of the college. The enrollment in the college classes was 298, in the Academy 137, and in the summer school 106 for the past session, a notable increase. Nine young men and two young women were granted degrees. The enrollment in the Junior class and lower classes indicates that the increased attendance has just begun to register itself in graduates.

The student activities of the college have reflected credit on the institution. Not only in athletics, but also in oratorical contests, literary societies, Y. M. C. A. and musical organizations, the college has won distinction. On a recent good-will tour conducted by the Chamber of Commerce of Shreveport, the Centenary Band, including nineteen of the students, accompanied the trainload of business men, not only making a fine impression for the college in all the towns visited, but winning the enthusiastic commendation of the business men of Shreveport who made the trip. Remarkable testimonials to the high character and gentlemanly conduct of the Centenary boys throughout the trip have been received by the president of the college.

The new building, erected at a cost of $50,000, is complete and is being used, relieving to some extent the crowded condition. The Academy has been organized under a separate corporation and with a separate board of trustees, in preparation for its removal from the college campus.

Almost the entire faculty for the past year has been retained.

One of the most significant facts in connection with this commencement is the plan for a great celebration of the one hundredth anniversary of the founding of the college. A continuous history of a hundred years is the possession of very few educational institutions in the South; and the fact that Centenary has such a continuous history, with an alumni list reaching back to the founding of the College of Louisiana in 1825, is worth celebrating as one of the great events of the life of the State. According to the plans, this celebration, which has been endorsed by the Louisiana Conference and all the district conferences that have met, will be projected upon a scale worthy of such a history as that of Centenary, and in a way to greatly multiply its value to the entire State in the future.

Bishop Sam R. Hay was elected to membership on the Board of Trustees, and will doubtless add much to its working force.

The progress and significance of the college were fittingly celebrated in the program of commencement exercises. Dr. Carl C. Gregory, pastor of the First Methodist Church in Dallas, preached the commencement sermon on Sunday morning, June 1, at the First Church, Shreveport; Rev. F. M. Freeman, of Monroe, preached the Y. M. C. A. and academy commencement sermon at Noel Memorial on the evening of the same day. On Tuesday evening, June 3, Rev. S. S. McKenny, presiding elder of the Beaumont District, delivered the baccalaureate address at the graduation of twenty-three young people from the academy; and on Thursday, the 6th, Judge H. H. White, of Alexandria, delivered the address at the graduation of the college department.

Honorary degrees were conferred as follows: Doctor of Divinity on Rev. R. E. Goodrich, pastor of First Church, Shreveport, and on Rev. S. S. McKenny, of Beaumont; Doctor of Laws on Judge H. H. White, of Alexandria.

It is fitting at this point in the history of the college to say that as much as Centenary has meant to the Methodist church and to the State of Louisiana in its long and honorable history, it has the opportunity to do an even larger work in molding the future of Louisiana and of the entire South if our people have the vision to grasp that opportunity and co-operate in the development of a Greater Centenary.

W. WINANS DRAKE.

SYMPOSIUM ON UNIFICATION.

Rev. J. Tillery Lewis, Presiding Elder, Sardis District, North Mississippi Conference.

A more vital question to the membership of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has never been before us for decision than is the plan of unification now before us.

It matters not what I may want, personally, in the matter; it is my duty to think the proposition through from every angle and cast my vote with judgment as to the possible effect upon those thousands of Southern Methodists who have helped to build our church into the efficient organization that is now functioning throughout the world. Personally, if the Negro is eliminated so that there is no possible opportunity for him ever to rise to a position of authority and leadership over Southerners, I desire unification. If our brethren of the North will not vote for unification with the Negro thus eliminated, then the matter of unification is forever closed so far as I am concerned. No amount of argument can ever dislodge me from that position. I am as convinced that the Holy Spirit is guiding me as much in said position as was He guiding me when I yielded to the call to preach. Others may call me prejudiced, narrow and unchristian in said position, but there is where I stand just the same. There are thousands of Southern Methodists who are just as fundamentally opposed to a possible union with the M. E. Church, where men of the North shall be in authority and leadership over them, as am I opposed to being led by a Negro. These same Southern Methodists for generations back have helped to build our church into her present mighty organization. The fact that I personally desire unification does not give me the right to ignore the desires and feelings of those of my brethren of the South who have their money invested in the property of the M. E. Church, South. I know human nature well enough to know that you can not thrust unification down the throat of Southerners who are opposed to Northern domination over them. I can not believe that God is leading in a movement that gives promise of stirring up strife and taking from thousands property that by every law of right belongs to them. Those, our representatives, who vote on this question in Chattanooga will do well to ponder the possible effect upon thousands of Southern Methodists before they cast their vote for unification according to the plan now before us.

I shall not go into a definition of the many objectionable features of the plan. Such men as Bishops Candler and Ainsworth have done that thing far better than can I. The plan is too indefinite, vague and uncertain for me to vote for unification according to it. If a plan shall be submitted that is just, righteous and equitable to Southerners, as well as to our brethren of the North, then I shall gladly vote for unification. I want unification, but I do not believe it is the part of wisdom to vote for unification according to the present plan. I am overwhelmingly convinced that greater harm than good will come out of attempted unification upon the basis of growth, as the present plan contemplates. I trust, therefore, that our General Conference will vote against the plan now before us.

Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, Presiding Elder, Monroe District, Louisiana Conference.

The position taken by Bishops Candler, Denny, Darlington and Dickey relative to calling a special session of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to discuss the proposed plan of unification is well taken. Unless we are very careful on such momentous issues, we may find ourselves in intricate situations from which it will not be easy to escape.

The plan proposed, to my mind, is anything else but unification; furthermore, it is unfair and discriminating.

Read Article III, Section 1.

In that Article the colored members and Conferences of the Northern Church do not lose their identity or standing. That very act is likely to bring on trouble and irritation among the colored brethren. The 350,000 colored members of the Northern Church can boast that they have the right and privilege of sending delegates to the white man's General Conference, whereas the 556,315 colored members of the Colored Methodist Church in America have had no provision made for them in the plan other than the place they now hold. If we are going to have union, why not go all the way and make a complete job of it?

Again, when our people are apprised of the fact that there are two Negro bishops, with all rights and privileges and powers of all the other bishops, and that there are 350,000 colored members that enter into this unification plan, the situation is not pleasing to a vast majority of our Southern people. Our people do not know, and I think it is the duty of every bishop, presiding elder and pastor to lay the facts before them so that they can have a reasonable understanding of the whole matter. I shall write further, bringing out some more objectionable features of this proposed plan of unification.

IN FAVOR OF THE PLAN.

Dear Mr. Editor: I am asked how I stand on Unification and the plan that is now before the church.

I favor unification, because my church has repeatedly declared for it during the past fifty years, and the last three General Conferences have declared the church for it, and created and maintained machinery to accomplish that desire.

I favor the plan before us because more than it contains would not be accepted, and less than it contains would not be worth accepting. It is the creature of a council of Christly men devoting the best of their heads and hearts to the performing of a task assigned them with all the facts before them. It may be doubted if the plan would be improved with ten more years of deliberation. When the special session of the General Conference adjourns, the church will have spent in its efforts for unification near a quarter-million of dollars in money, and a sum much greater than that in time and effort. Why perpetuate a fruitless waste of time and money?

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Mississippi feels no imperative need of unification, and the same condition prevails in Alabama, Georgia, South Carolina, and in some other sections. Not much less than three-fourths of the territory covered by our church feels a great need of it, and are asking for it. I like to be generous toward my neighbors, especially when it does not cost me anything. I do not see how it can cost Methodism in Mississippi much to unify.

The tentative plan is not perfect, nor need we expect one. One morning I went into my daughter's room, and by her side lay a tiny piece of humanity without teeth or hair which she introduced to me as George Thompson Rittenhouse. She was not so informed, but I did not like his looks at all, and I do not believe she did. That was less than four years ago, but now you would have a hard time finding a more splendid physical specimen and handsome lad in the State of New York, and perhaps in Mississippi, than that tiny piece of humanity has grown to be. Suppose we put the plan to work and give it a chance to grow. Nourish it from the breast of Christian brotherhood, let it breathe the fresh air of the divine presence, exercise it daily in lifting a fallen world back into the orbit of divine government, and I think God will be well pleased with it.

GEORGE H. THOMPSON.

A CORRECTION.

Mr. Editor: Since writing the article on "The Plan of Unification" which appeared in your last issue, I find that I was in error in saying that one of the committees sent to Washington was to urge the passage of an anti-lynching bill. This particular matter was referred to a committee to act after the General Conference adjourned. I have no disposition to be unfair, and I hasten to make this correction.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

AND NOW COMES JUNE WITH GIFTS FOR THE FORGOTTEN MAN.

April and May have tripped lightly across the stage and left over $325,000 in the hands of the Board of Finance for the benefit of the church's battle-scarred veterans of the ministry. And now comes June, telling with the breath of roses of offerings on the way which will greatly increase this total. O June, you are charming. We cannot help but love you for yourself alone, but when you add the beautiful spirit of beneficence to your graces you are irresistible.

As indicated above, the charges have already paid over $325,000 on quotas. During the month of June this total should easily increase to $500,000. Let us make this our goal and everybody work with enthusiasm to reach it. It would be glorious if on June 30 it could be announced on this page that one-half million dollars has been paid to the Board of Finance on the charges' quotas.

Without doubt there is right now enough cash in the hands of Special Effort Treasurers to boost us to the half million mark. It is our task to get these treasurers to remit the cash they hold. Let every pastor inquire of his Special Effort treasurer about this matter, and, if money is found on hand, have the treasurer send it to the Board of Finance, St. Louis, Mo., without delay. And do not fail to tell the treasurer to use the Book of Remittance Forms which was sent long since to every charge in care of the pastor.

PLEASING MESSAGES FROM PULLING PEOPLE.

I love everybody, but I love those best who are willing to pull when pulling is needed. You will not be surprised, therefore, at my enthusiasm over heartening messages that reach me daily from those who are honestly striving to get the cause of the Special Effort ahead. Note the following:

About three months ago St. Paul's Church, Springfield, Mo., with much enthusiasm, assumed a quota of $10,000, the same being $5,000 in excess of the minimum. Shortly after taking this action one of the principal banks of the city suddenly closed its doors. Many of St. Paul's people suffered serious losses on account of the failure. The atmosphere became charged with distrust, until later on a heavy run was made on the principal bank of the city, but it weathered the storm. In the face of these reserves Rev. J. W. Pearson, the heroic pastor of St. Paul's Church, stood his ground like a Trojan soldier. He did not cancel the $10,000 pledge of his church for Superannuate Endowment, but merely asked for a little time in which to secure the amount. On Sunday, May 18, the pastor wired the Board of Finance as follows: "Eight thousand subscribed for Superannuate Endowment in the morning service of to-day, and more than ten thousand dollars is assured for said purpose by the time we are through, and we will send a thousand dollars cash in a few days." Thus Pearson has proved again that "a way can be found to do anything which ought to be done."

A letter has been received from Rev. J. W. Frank, of the Japan Mission, in which he sends $75 for Superannuate Endowment. He states that he wishes to pay this amount now, and if possible will contribute more later on. He is a member of the North Carolina Conference and a missionary of the Japan Mission. What he has done for this great cause is worthy of notice on the Forgotten Man's page.

Dr. Carl C. Gregory, pastor of First Church, Dallas, has suddenly turned "Pink." Notwithstanding his church is engaged in a mighty effort to build a church at a cost of $500,000, his quarterly conference added $3,165 to the minimum expected from them for Superannuate Endowment and assumed a total quota of $10,000. This is in addition to $2,000 First Church has paid recently for this purpose as a result of an appeal outside of the Special Effort. Dr. Gregory expects to present the matter of his quota on June 8, and I am sure he will have something very heartening to report after that Sunday.

I have a letter from Rev. R. M. Templeton, enclosing a Pink Leaf Report from Kiowa charge, Creek District, Indian Mission Conference. He writes: "As pastor of our Kiowa Indian work I am pushing the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment, and have met with a hearty response. The old men and women who were here when the first Gospel message was preached expressed with much feeling their love and appreciation of the early missionaries, recalling the days of the circuit rider with his horse and saddlebags. One old man expressed it thus: 'We are glad to learn of this great news that the church is going to take better care of the old preachers, and we want to have a part in this work.'" Nothing has come to my desk that has given more genuine pleasure than this.

My good friends, Rev. J. A. Bays and Mr. J. R. Laird, of Bland Street Church, Bluefield, West Virginia, made me very happy by the following wire: "The minimum quota of Bland Street Church is $5,555, but to-day at the morning service we raised in cash and good subscriptions $11,110, and $3,500 will be paid the first year." Bays and Laird! My, what a battery!

COME ON IN, BOYS, THE SWMMIN'S FINE!

Nothing I can write will make more jolly good reading than to give the names of additional charges that have paid one-fifth or more of their total assumed quotas, as follows:

Tuskegee, Alabama, Montgomery, Rev. D. W. Haskew, pastor; total assumed quota, $2,280; amount remitted, $469.61.

Murfreesboro, Tennessee, Murfreesboro, Rev. D. E. Hinkle, pastor; total assumed quota, $3,132; amount remitted, $1,600.

Holly Hill, South Carolina, Orangeburg, Rev. J. P. Attaway, pastor; total assumed quota, $2,000; amount remitted, $726.95.

First Church (Batesville), North Arkansas, Batesville, Rev. R. E. L. Bearden, pastor; total assumed quota, $3,500; amount remitted, $700.

Mount Sterling, Kentucky, Lexington, Rev. J. W. Crates, pastor; total assumed quota, $2,500; amount remitted, $500.

Manor, West Texas, Austin, Rev. M. F. Daniel, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,440; amount remitted, $280.

Montgomery, Tennessee, Clarksville, Rev. Omar Charles, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,350; amount remitted, $300.

Fourth Avenue (Louisville), Louisville, Louisville, Rev. J. W. Johnson, pastor; total assumed quota, $6,650; amount remitted, $2,625.

Hartford, Louisville, Owensboro, Rev. T. T. Frazier, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,785; amount remitted, $380.75.

East Thomaston, North Georgia, Griffin, Rev. M. M. Walraven, pastor; total assumed quota, $222; amount remitted, $45.

Gladys, Virginia, Lynchburg, Rev. George S. Reamey, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,293; amount remitted, $346.28.

Moss Point, Mississippi, Seashore, Rev. J. E. Gray, pastor; total assumed quota, $2,040; amount remitted, $1,297.

Bear Creek, Louisville, Columbia, Rev. E. C. Smith, pastor; total assumed quota, $530; amount remitted, $106.

Springfield, Tennessee, Clarksville, Rev. A. J. Morgan, pastor; total assumed quota, $5,000; amount remitted, $1,716.60.

Lahadie and Gray Summit, St. Louis, West Plains, Rev. R. D. Kennedy, pastor; total assumed quota, $934; amount remitted, $234.70.

Desloge, St. Louis, Farmington, Rev. J. C. McDaniels, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,356; amount remitted, $344.40.

First Church (Little Rock), Little Rock, Little Rock, Rev. P. C. Fletcher, pastor; total assumed quota, $7,500; amount remitted, $2,000.

Oxford, North Mississippi, Grenada, Rev. T. H. Dorsey, pastor; total assumed quota, $2,515; amount remitted, $503.

Queen Street (Kinston), North Carolina, New Bern, Rev. C. K. Proctor, pastor; total assumed quota, $3,275; amount remitted, $655.

Bethany, Virginia, Rappahannock, Rev. W. R. Evans, pastor; total assumed quota, $2,385; amount remitted, $500.

Graham, Holston, Tazewell, Rev. A. S. Thorn, pastor; total assumed quota, $2,712; amount remitted, $454.

A NEW STATEMENT CONCERNING MY CREED.

I have stated many times my belief that the church would ultimately be 100% on the Pink Leaf Report, concerning which so much has been published on this page. I have also stated it as my opinion that some day every presiding elder in the church would turn wholly "Pink."

To date (May 24, 1924), not counting the Baltimore Conference, which was but recently held, there remain less than 150 charges in the entire church that have not sent the Pink Leaf Report to the Board of Finance. You see, my prediction on this subject is nearly fulfilled. I am confident that the reports which are still missing will reach the Board within the next few weeks.

The whole church has 280 presiding elders. The Honor Roll of the elders who are 100% "Pink" on their districts has been published from time to time. The following names are now added to this Honor Roll in order of distinction as numbered:

201. West Texas, Cuero, Rev. J. Fisher Simpson, P. E.

202. North Georgia, Griffin, Rev. J. H. Eakes, P. E.

203. Kentucky, Maysville, Rev. M. S. Clark, P. E.

204. North Georgia, North Atlanta, Rev. W. H. LaPrade, Jr., P. E.

The Home Circle

RESIGNATION.

A thing I cannot understand
Is why my uncle dear
Seems to forget Jean-Helen's name—
I think it's very queer.

For when he comes to visit us
He's very apt to say,
"Oh, where's that package that I brought
For you and Lindy-May?"

One time he asked if "Emma-Lu"
Would like an iv'ry fan;
Another day he brought some beads
To give to "Betty-Ann."

And in the winter, from the South
He sent a box to me
Of golden fruit in silver moss:
"Please share with Rose-Marie."

I think I've told him twenty times
Just what my doll's name is.
And yet, this very afternoon,
He called her "Florence-Liz"!

I really can't be cross with him
(His eyes are smiley blue),
I hope his mem'ry will improve -
There's nothing else to do!

SAMMIE.

Mother and daddy and Billy Boy had gone to California for the winter, so Betty Lou had come to grandfather's farm for a long visit. One morning she was standing on the back porch looking off over the fields when down in the south meadow she saw some little objects frisking about in the sun.

"Grandfather," she cried, "do come and see what these tinsy little white things are down in the meadow."

Grandfather came out on the porch, put on what Betty Lou called his long-distance glasses, and looked down in the meadow. "Why, those are my lambs," he laughed. "Thirty-nine of the finest merinos in the country. Want to go down to-night and help me salt them?"

"I'd love to," cried Betty Lou.

"All right. Be ready about five o'clock."

Such a bleating as there was as they came to the meadow, and the little creatures came crowding up to the fence!

"Aren't they dear?" exclaimed Betty Lou. "So soft and woolly. O grandfather, look at that little fellow over there! Isn't he cunning?"

"He does seem friendly," said grandfather. "Here, see if he'll eat the salt out of your hand."

"Oh, he does, he does!" cried Betty Lou. "May I have him for my very own?"

"Remember, he won't be a lamb always," grandfather warned her.

"When he gets to be a big sheep, I'll give him back," promised Betty Lou. "What shall I call him, grandfather?"

"Let me see," said grandfather, looking very wise.

"I know!" cried Betty Lou. "I'll call him Sammie. Then every one will know he's an American."

"All right, Sammie it is," agreed grandfather. "I suppose you'll have to mark him to tell him from the others."

"Yes, with red, white, and blue ribbon around his neck."

Sammie was petted and coaxed and made a regular little play-fellow, but at night he always went back to his companions, where, huddled close together in the sheepfold, they all kept nice and warm.

At Christmas time Sammie had a beautiful new ribbon and a little bell with a clear, musical tinkle.

And then came a big blizzard. It began New Year's Eve and was so terrible that no one could venture outdoors. When Betty Lou looked out in the morning, it seemed like a different world. A great white blanket was over everything, and no sign of lambs.

"I wonder where Sammie is!" thought Betty Lou.

Just then she saw grandfather with Jim and Ben, the hired man, coming from the barn through what looked like a deep trench, with the snow piled on each side.

Betty Lou ran out on the porch. "Grandfather," she called, "where are the lambs?"

"That's just what we're going to find out," answered grandfather as they went into the toolhouse.

They came out with shovels and pitchforks and started off down the trench again. Betty Lou watched them as they climbed out of the trench and waded across the fields in the deep snow. Pretty soon she saw them coming back, each holding a funny-looking bundle which they carried into the summer kitchen.

"Grandmother," she called, "do you s'pose they've found the lambs?"

"Yes, dear. The blizzard came on so suddenly that the little things couldn't find their way back to the sheepfold and were all buried in the snow, which really kept them warm. So grandfather has built a big fire in the summer kitchen and hopes that he can save them."

The men, with some of the neighbors, kept bringing in the little white bundles until grandfather counted thirty-eight, but Sammie was not among them.

"Do let me go and look for him," begged Betty Lou. "I know all the nice sunny places where he loved to lie. I'm sure I can find him."

But grandfather said no. It was hard enough for the men to wade through the deep snow. It was getting late, and the men were all tired.

Betty Lou could hardly keep from crying, but she knew crying would do no good. Then kind-hearted Ben said: "You bundle her up good and warm, Mrs. Mason, and I'll carry her. It won't hurt her a bit, and maybe she can find Sammie."

So grandmother put on Betty Lou's sweater and coat and leggings and cap. Ben swung her up on his broad shoulders, and they started off. Grandmother could see the red cap bobbing up and down as they went along the trench, then out in the fields. They went around the sheepfold, and Ben poked and peeked into every nook and corner where he thought Sammie might be.

Just as he said, "I'm afraid we'll have to give it up, Betty Lou," Betty Lou gave a little scream, for peeping through a little crack in the snow was the end of a red, white, and blue ribbon. As Ben carefully lifted the snowy bundle Sammie's bell gave out its musical tinkle.

So Betty Lou, with a loving pat now and then for the precious bundle under Ben's arm, rode proudly home, where Sammie was finally thawed out and soon was bleating loudly for something to eat.—Mayflower.

WHY JOIN THE CHURCH?

1. I ought to belong to the church because I ought to be better than I am. Henry Ward Beecher once said: "The church is not a gallery for the exhibition of eminent Christians, but a school for the education of imperfect ones."

2. I ought to belong to the church because of what I can give to it and do through it as well as because of what I may get out of it. The church is not a dormitory for sleepers, it is an institution of workers; it is not a rest camp, it is a front-line trench.

3. I ought to belong to the church because every man ought to pay his debts and do his share toward discharging the obligations of society. The church has not only been the bearer of the good news of personal salvation; it has been and it is the supreme uplifting and conserving agency without which "civilization would lapse into babarism and press its way to perdition."

4. I ought to belong to the church because of memories—memories of things I can never forget; memories of faces that will never fade; memories of vows that are the glory of youth.

5. I ought to belong to the church because of hope—hope that lives when promises are dead; hope that paves the way for progress; hope that visions peace and social justice; hope for time and hope for eternity—the great hope that casts its anchor behind Jesus Christ.

6. I ought to belong to the church because of the strong men in it who need re-enforcing; the weak men in it who need encouraging; the rascals in it who need rebuking. If I may say I am not good enough, my humanity recommends me. If I sit in the seat of the scornful, my inactivity condemns me.

7. I ought to belong to the church, but not until I am ready to joint a going concern; not until I am willing to become an active partner with Jesus Christ.—Missionary News.

THE SEASHORE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

The Seashore Divinity School will begin its annual session at the Seashore Camp Ground, Biloxi, Miss., on Tuesday morning, June 17. It is important for all those who expect to take their Conference courses of study to remember that class work will begin on Tuesday morning. Arrangements for board and lodging may be made at Keller Lodge (on the Camp Ground), at the White House, where reduced rates have kindly been given, or at other boarding houses in the vicinity.

The platform speaker for the first week will be Dr. Geo. R. Stuart, the famous pastor of the First Methodist Church, Birmingham, Ala.; for the second week, our own Bishop W. N. Ainsworth, one of the most vigorous and inspiring of our chief pastors. In addition, outstanding representatives of the three patronizing Annual Conferences will deliver addresses.

The Seashore Divinity School is a great place for "Study—Recreation—Fellowship—Inspiration."

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. C. D. Atkinson, Rev. N. E. Alford, and Dr. A. S. Lutz were appreciated callers at the Advocate office last week.

"Everything is moving along nicely with us on the Black Hawk charge," writes Rev. H. E. Carter, of Black Hawk, Miss.

A lot has been selected for the new church of the Texas Avenue congregation, Shreveport, La., and building will begin in due time. Rev. J. M. Alford is the diligent pastor.

The Shreveport Times of June 1 contained an extended discussion of the plan of unification, written by Rev. W. W. Holmes, pastor of the Noel Methodist Church, of Shreveport.

Prof. C. A. Bowen, of the Department of Religious Education, Millsaps College, is one of the teachers in the summer school at Emory University.

Miss Clara Chalmers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. O. Chalmers, a missionary to Cuba engaged in teaching in Buenavista College, Havana, is at home for a month's vacation with her parents.

Mr. R. O. Randle, of Monroe, La., an honored layman of the Louisiana Conference, is at the Mayo Sanitarium, Rochester, Minn., for treatment. We pray for his early restoration to health.

Says Rev. J. A. Randolph, of Sardis, Miss., in his weekly bulletin: "Your pastor is doing his very best to fill the pulpit every Sunday. Is it asking too much for you to make an effort to fill the pews?" A fair question.

Brother P. W. Shell, of Houston, Miss., has been a reader of the Advocate for many years. As a lad of fourteen, he began reading the old Southern Christian Advocate, then published at Charleston, S. C.

Rev. W. C. Swope, one of our general evangelists, will hold a meeting for Rev. E. L. Cargill, pastor, at Boyce, La., beginning on June 15 and continuing two weeks. Rev. A. L. Harper will have charge of the singing and personal work.

Brother W. L. Atkins, of Algoma, Miss., writes: "We have just closed our third quarterly conference. We had a wonderful meeting. Brother Campbell, our district evangelist, was with us and brought two good messages. Brother Wasson is making us a splendid elder."

Rev. M. K. Miller, pastor of the Union charge, Mississippi Conference, preached the commencement sermon for the high school at Union recently. The Union Appeal speaks of the sermon as "profoundly eloquent, divinely spiritual, and deeply interesting."

Progress along all lines is reported from the Homewood charge, Mississippi Conference. The congregations are increasing at all the churches, and the spiritual interest is deepening. Extensive repairs are being made on the parsonage. Rev. T. C. Cooper is the faithful pastor.

We acknowledge the honor of an invitation from Mr. Guy K. Hebert to attend the graduating exercises of the class of 1924 at Centenary College, of which class he is a member. Mr. Hebert is a son of Rev. and Mrs. Martin Hebert, of the Louisiana Conference.

Rev. and Mrs. J. T. Abney, of Gallman, Miss., announce the engagement and approaching marriage of their daughter, Florence Katharine, to Mr. Warren Clyde Boyd, of Bogalusa, La., the marriage to take place on June 22. The Advocate extends all good wishes in advance of the happy event.

Readers of "Methodist Matters," the weekly bulletin of the Central Methodist Church, Columbus, Miss., of which Rev. Del Longgrear is the wide-awake pastor, are glad to learn that the mudhole in front of the parsonage has been filled with gravel. Congratulations, Brother Longgrear!

The directory of the J. S. Noel, Jr., Memorial Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., just from the press, is a complete booklet of its kind. It gives the complete organization of the church, with membership lists of all organizations. The pastor, Rev. W. W. Holmes, and all those associated with him in getting out the directory are to be congratulated upon the success of their labors.

From the "Big Brother," Greenville, Miss.: "We rejoice with Big Brother Tatum over his daughter's having successfully stood a competitive examination for a scholarship at Brenau College, Georgia, she being one of eight in the United States. We are proud of the young lady ourselves, and expect to hear from her later on in life." The Advocate joins in congratulations.

During the absence of the pastor, Rev. W. J. Ferguson, who was visiting relatives in Ohio, the morning service at the First Methodist Church, Gulfport, Miss., was addressed by Mrs. Ferguson, the occasion being the observance of Odd Fellows' Memorial Day. At the evening service, short addresses were made by eight members of the board of stewards.

Rev. and Mrs. W. M. McIntosh, well known throughout the church for their evangelistic labors, will make their home at Columbus, Miss., in the future, we learn from the bulletin of the First Methodist Church of that place. We learn also from the bulletin that there have been 92 additions to the membership of the First Methodist Church since Conference. Rev. E. S. Lewis is having a great pastorate.

Rev. W. P. George, our pastor at Saucier, Miss., writes as follows: "We have just completed a new parsonage here—a beautiful seven-room bungalow. The painter is now painting it. We have roofed and are painting the church inside at Saucier, have recently painted the Howison church, and have done extensive repairing at McHenry. The work is moving forward nicely." Brother George expresses himself as opposed to the proposed plan of unification.

Rev. A. T. McIlwain, presiding elder of the Columbus District, North Mississippi Conference, has issued a bulletin covering the work of the first six months of the Conference year. All the reports show that fine progress has been made. During the first two quarters, 428 members have been received, 186 of them on profession of faith. The financial report is also good, 12 per cent more on pastors' salaries having been paid this year than to the same date last year.

At the recent commencement of Centenary College, the degree of Doctor of Divinity was conferred upon Rev. R. E. Goodrich, pastor of the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., and Rev. S. S. McKenney, presiding elder of the Beaumont District, Texas Conference. The degree of Doctor of Laws was conferred upon Hon. H. H. White, of Alexandria, La., distinguished jurist and citizen, a leader in affairs of church and State. These honors were worthily bestowed.

We record with sorrow the death of Mrs. J. W. Ellison, widow of the late Rev. J. W. Ellison of the Mississippi Conference, at her home in Jackson, Miss., on May 20. The end was peaceful, as was to be expected of one who had served faithfully her day and generation. She was a devout woman, full of faith and good works. The editor of the Advocate well remembers the gracious hospitality of her home when he was a student at Millsaps College. Her death occurred on the date of her wedding anniversary. The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing family and friends.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more subscriptions recently: Rev. W. P. George, Saucier, Miss., 2; Rev. T. C. Cooper, Homewood, Miss., 5; Mrs. C. M. Martin, Meridian, Miss., 3; Rev. Otto Porter, Prentiss, Miss., 3; Rev. H. B. Thomason, Colfax, La., 5; Rev. B. M. Hunt, Lorman, Miss., 2; Rev. P. O. Lowrey, Calhoun, La., 2; Rev. M. A. CHATTANOOGA AND THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

The General Conference will convene in Chattanooga on July 2. The sessions will be held in the main auditorium of the City's Memorial Hall, seating six thousand people. This great building is equipped throughout. It was but recently completed and opened to the public. Under its roof are other assembly rooms, committee rooms, rest rooms, quarters for information, post office, and other conveniences. And immediately across the street from this hall is the new Centenary Church plant. In this church are a dozen committee rooms, each large enough comfortably to accommodate from fifty to two hundred persons; and, in addition to these, are two auditoriums, one with the seating capacity of eight hundred, and the other fifteen hundred.

For the accommodation of the delegates and visitors there will be writiug rooms and stenographers' and telegraph offiees.

The meeting place of the Conference is in the heart of the city, convenient to all the hotels, and within five blocks of one railroad station, and nine blocks of the other.

Delegates and visitors, while at the Conference, will want to visit the city and its Interesting environments. To the top of Lookout Mountain by boulevard is seven miles from Centenary Church, and, by trolley car and the Incline Railway, four miles. Signal Mountain, by either boulevard or the Chattanooga Traetion Company, is across the Tennessee River from the city, and nine miles distant. Cameron Hill is inside the city; and from its summit the visitor will have a view of the city itself, Lookout Mountain, the winding Tennessee River, Walden's Ridge, Raccoon Mountain, and Missionary Ridge.

Delightful highways lead out in all directions from the city. A beautiful scenic drivo is along the summit of Missionary Ridge on the Government boulevard. The Cherokee Trail along the Tennessee River and up Walden's Ridgo is a romantic link of the Dixie Highway. Chickamauga battlefield—now a Government park—is twelve miles out from the city. The historic Orchard Knob, on which General Grant stood during the hattle of Missionary Ridge, and the National Cemetery, where eight thousand soldiers are buried, are inside the city limits. Marking General Bragg's headquarters and General Sherman's headquarters at the battle of Missionary Ridge, are two towers; and these stand alongside the Government boulevard on that ridge.

Any visitor may take an automobile, and, inside of a half-hour, may stand under the New York Peace Monument in the Government Park on Lookout Mountain, or, inside the same time, may stand on Signal Point on Signal Mountain, overlooking the Tennessee River and the distant mountains, or, inside the same time, may take the Cherokee Trail and climb Walden's Ridge. From Centenary Church he can reach the top of Cameron Hill in five minutes; the top of Missionary Ridge in ten minutes; Orehad Knob in five minutes; Chickamauga battlefield in twenty minutes; or he may cross into the State of Georgia in ten minutes, and into tho State of Alabama in twenty-five minutes. At the foot of Lookout Mountain he can step into the car of the cable ineline railway and reaeh the summit in nine minutes.

Ten trunk-line railroads run into Chattanooga.

Delegates and visitors may address any inquiry to local committee General Conferenee, care Centenary Church, Chattauooga, Tenn.

WISDOM FROM A WATERMELON.

I was passing through Columbus, Ohio, some years ago, and stopped to eat in the restaurant in the depot. My attention was called to a slice of watermelon, and I ordered it and ate it. I was so pleased with the melon that I asked the water to dry some of the seeds, that I might take them home with me and plant in my garden. That night a thought came into my mind.—I would use that watermelon as an illustration. So the next morning when I reached Chicago, I had enough seeds weighed to find out that it would take about five thousand watermelon seeds to weigh a pound, and I estimated that the watermelon weighed about forty pounds. Then I applied mathematics to the watermelon. A few weeks before, some one, I knew not who, had planted a little seed in the ground. Under the influenee of sunshine and shower that little watermelon seed had gathered from somewhere two thousand times its own weight through a tiny stem, and had built a watermelon. On the outside it had put a eovering of green, within that a rind of white, and within that a eore of red, and then it had seattered through the red hundreds of little seeds, each one capable of doing the same work over again. What architect drew the plan? Where did that little watermelon seed get its tremendous strength? Where did it find its flavoring extraet and its eoloring matter? How did it build a watermelon? Until you can explain a watermelon, do not be too sure that you can set limits to the power of the Almighty, or tell just what he would do or how he would do it. The most learned man in the world cannot explain a watermelon, but the most ignorant man can eat a watermelon and enjoy it. God has given us the things that we need, and he has given us the knowledge neeessary for us to use those things, and the truth that he has revealed to us is infinitely more important for our welfare than it would be to understand the mysteries that he has seen fit to conceal from us.

So with religion. If you ask me if I ean understand everything in the Bible, I answer: No. I understand some things to-day that I did not understand ten years ago; and if I live ten years longer, I hope some things will be clear that are now obscure. But there is something more important than understanding everything in the Bible. It is this: If we will try to live up to the things that we do understand, we will have no time to worry over the things that we do not understand.—William J. Bryan.

TO BE REMEMBERED.

For every sensational divoree there are hundreds of happy marriages; for every bank cashier who goes wrong, there are thousands who are honest and true; for every minister or priest who goes wrong, there are thousands living a godly life; for every criminal, there are a hundred men who are as honest as the day is long, and who remain upright. No, we read only of the exceptions; and while reading, if we do read these things, we should always make a mental note of the fact that the only news of value of these things lies in the fact that they are exceptions to the general rule. Many people have heard of the hypoerisy of Judas who never have contemplated the saintliness of the other apostles. Many have heard of Benedict Arnold who could not perhaps name three Revolutionary generals, and it is possible that Bergdol, the traitor and draft evader, is better known than many patriots who fell in France, just as Jesse James is better known in history than are the governors of Missouri of contemporaneous history. But this does not imply that Judas, Benedict Arnold, Bergdol, and Jesse James are great men or were great in any partcular except that they mark the exeeption to the almost invariable rule. There were never so many great men as to-day; there were never so many good men as to-day; there were never so many honest men as there are to-day; there were never so many sober, patriotic men in America as there are to-day. Let us take off our saffron speetaeles. "God is still in his heaven and all's right with the world" if we only keep the right perspeetive. —Hickman County (Ky.) Gazette.

NOTICE!

Rev. Sidney W. Edwards, formerly a local elder in the Methodist Episcopal Church, has united with our church, and would like to correspond with pastors desiring help in revival meetings during the summer and fall. Brother Edwards is a strong preacher, with considerahle experience both in the missionary and evangellstic work, and I gladly reeommend him to the brethren of our Conference. Address him at College Heights, Meridlan, Miss.

A CRISIS IN METHODIST HISTORY.

At no time in my life have I been treated with greater courtesy and consideration than by the brethren of the Methodist Episcopal Church in Los Angeles. I learned to work with them, to love them and to trust them. In my judgment they have just as much religion, just as much loyalty to Jesus Christ, and, in certain respects, a little more enterprise in attacking the problems of Ameriea and the world than we of the South.

The plan suggested is not worked out in that minute detail desired by some, but this, in my judgment, is its strength. If two young people are in love with eaeh other and desire to get married, it is not necessary for them to agree upon a detailed program for their marital career. Some things may be left to be worked out as days go by and the family grows. The size of the house in whieh they are to live, the character of the furniture, the management of the budget, the question of conjugal or parental authority, are matters which can be settled better after the wedding than before.

It has seemed to me that this admirable plan does two or three things.

First—It unites Methodism at the top where we have heretofore been most effectually divided. Our people in heart have heen approaching unity, but officially we havo been separated and growing apart.

Seeond—The knowledge and consciousness that we are one in head and heart will remove the incentive to narrow, expensive and unseemly friction in local church matters, thereby saving men and money sorely needed for world eonquest and serviee.

Third—This plan permits time, human leadership, and Divine Providence to accomplish some things. This, so far as I am personally concerned, I am abundantly willing to do, for I believe that God is progressively revealing his will from generation to generation, and I believe that a united Methodism will he better able to deliver itself upon the great moral issues of to-day, and can, therefore present a mighty solid front to the liquor interests, Sabbath desecration, the hrutality and inhnmanlty of war and every form of social injustice.

Personally it seems that I can catch a glimpse occasionally of a swing back from the demoralizing and disorganizing results of the recent war, toward a hlessed unity of spirit and a joyous proelamation of the great fundamental doctrines of the Christian religion.

Desiring a league, of offensive and defensive, with every soldier of Jesus Christ, I hellove that the time has come for American Methodism to unite upon the basis proposed by our joint Commission on Unifieation.

Would it be too much to hope and pray that the same overwhelming majority approaching unanimity may eharacterize our General Conference that characterized that of the Methodist Episeopal Church?

"The promises of God rest on four pillars—his justiee, whieh will not suffer him to deceive; his goodness, whieh will not suffer him to forget; his truth, which will not suffer him to change; his power, whieh enables him to perform." Do not all these pillars stand on the bedroek of his love? —Salter.

On Feb. 24, 1924, the spirit of JOHN M. JONES was borne to the General Assembly of the redeemed. Thus passed the life of one among the most beautiful characters whom it has ever been our privilege to know. He was born near Bolton, Miss., Hinds County, Feb. 15, 1879. He united with the Methodist church when quite a small boy, and through all the years of his life he remained true to his Christian obligations. So thoroughly was his life consecrated to his Master, his church, and his blessed hope, that he was for a long time one of the stewards of his church, and superintendent of the Sunday school. No truer husband or father ever lived. His arms were ever open with tender sympathy for every member of his family. He was loved by all who knew him. He is greatly mourned by a wife and two little sons, several sisters, two brothers, a mother "in Israel," and a large community of friends. His life was one journey upward, without a halt or backward step. Truly "the path of the just is as the shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day." Let us believe that he who presides over the destinies of men has given immortality to the mortal, and gathered unto himself the generous spirit of our friend.

"Thy day has come, not gone;
Thy sun has risen, not set;
Thy life is now beyond
The reach of death or change,
Not ended—but begun.
O, noble soul! O, gentle heart! Hail, and farewell."

Edwards, Miss.

The HON. JOHN CALDWELL CALHOUN, of near Verona, Lee County, Miss., passed from labor to rest on Saturday, May 24, 1924. He was born on Feb. 26, 1849, within a few miles of the palatial home from which he was transferred to his final home on high. Brother Calhoun was of noble ancestry, a great-grandson of the fiery John C. Calhoun, of South Carolina. His mother, Ann (Orr) Calhoun, was a sister of James L. Orr, once governor of South Carolina. His father, Dr. William Henry Calhoun, was a prosperous citizen and home-builder. The present home stands a landmark of the pride of ante-bellum glory, only five miles from the battle-ground of Harrisburg, near Tupelo, Miss. After the battle about 300 wounded soldiers were cared for in and around this spacious home. Brother Calhoun was never married. A nephew, Albert Tankersly, and his sister, Miss Lucia, have for many years constituted two real members of the home. No truer soul ever graced any home than dear Sister Lucia. Brother Calhoun was a staunch member of the Methodist church at Palmetto, five miles west of Verona. No sweeter, richer or more thrilling experience of grace was ever given than that by him during a revival at Palmetto, 1923. He was a royal entertainer. No one ever partook of the hospitalities of that home that did not hunger to return. He was buried from the home, Sunday, May 25, at 2 p. m., by his pastor, assisted by Dr. Christian, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Tupelo.

His pastor,

R. M. EVANS.

MR. JAMES RUSSELL ROBERTSON, of Batesville, Miss., went home to his final reward, after suffering and fighting bravely yet submissively for life. Our deepest sympathies and our prayers are for the good and noble father and the gentle and loving mother, Brother and Sister Bates Robinson, and to the other brothers at home. He was born Oct. 18, 1882, and joined the Methodist church at the early age of 12; he had many strong, faithful friends over the county who honored him with the office of chancery clerk in 1920. He showed his brave, patriotic spirit by the service he gave to his country during the late world war. His vision of life was expressed in terms of service. May God bless and keep those whom he loved, and may his life of self-sacrifice inspire many others to higher living.

Life gives you just 13 years of real health—and happiness

Average Health Span extends only from age 18 to age 31, according to United States Life Tables, 1920

Assuming that you are the average person, you will enjoy health—physical freedom and full vigor—only from age 18 to 31. This astounding fact is shown by the United States Life Tables, 1920.

Your earning power will decrease rapidly after 40. That period commonly called "the prime of life" will actually be an age of decay.

This sounds sensational. It is sensational. But it is true—and it is something to which the wise man or woman will give serious thought.

Of course, it is not natural, or right. It is the direct result of an artificial mode of life—of careless eating, sleeplessness, and stimulated nerves. Nature provides a danger signal—fatigue—to warn when the body needs rest. The person who regularly deadens the fatigue signal by the use of a drug is overriding the warning of nature.

That is what coffee does. The average cup of coffee contains 1½ to 3 grains of the drug caffein—classified as a poison. This is a dose of caffein of the size often administered by physicians in cases of heart failure. It is a powerful stimulant. It appears to give new strength by deadening the fatigue signal. Actually, this new strength is robbed from the body's own reserve.

Coffee contains no nourishment. Its only virtues, as a beverage, are its warmth and flavor. A good, hot, drugless drink is a benefit with every meal.

Millions enjoy such a drink in Postum. A drink made of whole wheat and bran, skillfully roasted, with a little sweetening—nothing more. A drink with the rich, mellow, full-bodied flavor of this wholesome grain. Every member of the family can drink it every meal of the day, enjoy its delicious taste, crave it, knowing there isn't a sleepless hour, a headache, or a taut nerve in it.

For the sake of your years following age 31, we want you to try Postum for thirty days. You can't expect to overcome the effects of a habit of years in two or three days, or even a week. To make this a sporting proposition, we will give you a week's supply of Postum free. Enough for a cup with every meal for a week. But we want you to carry on for the full thirty days.

Carrie Blanchard, who has personally served Postum to over 500,000 people, will send you her own directions for preparing it. Indicate whether you want Instant Postum, the easiest drink in the world to prepare, or Postum Cereal, the kind you boil. Either form costs less than most other hot drinks. FROM CARRIERE, MISS.

Our pastor, Rev. A. C. Johnson, has organized an Epworth League orchestra, with the following members: Leonard Johnson, Robert Johnson, Bessie Harbeson, Nora Johnson, Monroe Smith, Whitney Pitts, and Vanciel Cox. All are members of the Epworth League. Carriere has the best League in the county.

Since our pastor came to Carriere more than $200 has been expended on the parsonage. The church at Carriere has bought a new piano and new lights; the church at Byrd's Chapel has bought new lights and a new wire fence; at McNeil, new windows, doors, steps, and a new wire fence have been provided. In addition to all this, the pastor has been given a Ford car. It is useless to say that there has been growth along all lines.

Our pastor has passed through some great hardships, but he has stood like a stone wall. He will begin a meeting at McNeil on June 9, with Prof. Felix Phillips leading the singing. We look for great things to come to pass.

SOME LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

The Sunday school session at the recent Baton Rouge District Conference was full of interest. The District Secretary, Mr. D. B. Talley, with two of his district superintendents, Mr. O. H. Cline and Mr. John D. Saint, were present and took part in the program. Mr. K. I. Bean had charge of the music at this interesting Sunday school session. Mrs. R. H. Harper, Conference chairman of Elementary Council, was present and took active part in the program. The District Conference Sunday School Committee, composed of Mr. W. S. Holmes, Mr. J. K. Abel, and Mr. D. B. Talley, brought in a very able report, which was adopted by the conference.

The Lake Charles District Standard Training School opened its first session Monday night, June 2, with a great deal of interest. The attendance of ministers in the district was large in proportion to other Sunday school officers. The much-beloved presiding elder of this district, Rev. J. B. Williams, set the example for his preachers to follow in attending and taking credit in this school.

The writer had the pleasure of visiting De Ridder charge recently, and was much pleased with the interest in Sunday school work there. This school sent two of its workers to the Lake Charles Standard Training School, Miss McNut, and the pastor's son, Mr. Harold Henry.

The Sunday school workers in the sub-district of the West Baton Rouge District are called to meet in a great rally at Baker, La., June 22, at 4 p. m. These workers will organize for active co-operation with the district and Conference Sunday School Board.

There seems to be a Conference-wide interest in our two Leadership Schools under the General Board, Mount Sequoyah, June 25 to July 9, and Lake Junaluska, July 15 to Aug. 29. The two delegations from our State will be led by Mrs. J. M. Henry, of Ruston, for Mount Sequoyah, and Mrs. R. H. Harper, 5830 Prytania Street, New Orleans, for Lake Junaluska. The Sunday school workers, especially young people who are interested in a "vacation with a profit," please write to these leaders of delegations to our summer schools.

A letter from the central office, dated May 29, states that Miss Nannie Baker, of Mobile, Ala., has accepted an invitation to teach in the Ruston and Baton Rouge Standard Training Schools. Miss Baker is no stranger to our Sunday school workers in Louisiana, and will be given a hearty welcome again in our midst.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL NOTES.

Since my last notes, we have been in two district institutes—Vicksburg and Hattiesburg. These institutes were about on a par. The program at Purvis was a little more elaborate, but the spirit of the programs was about the same. I was thankful to have such an interest manifest, both by words and actions.

I had the pleasure of being at the Millsaps commencement this year. It was about the best gathering out there I have had the pleasure of being in. There is a very fine spirit indeed among the students and alumni. Millsaps has delivered something like 750 Leadership Training Certificates this year and 4 Diplomas of Leadership Training have been given.

The Sunday School Board is asking the preachers who will co-operate to allow us to send them one of these fine young people to teach a book. They have already received credit upon any course we will send them out to teach. If you will use these young folk this summer, they will be a great help to you and the great cause.

The Sunday schools are lagging with their missionary offerings. Please catch a vision and carry out the Discipline in regard to missions, at least through your Sunday schools.

I am giving below the list of Sunday School Day money received up to June 6. Those marked with * are on the Honor Roll:

Brookhaven District.—Barlow $7.50; *Georgetown, $6.16; *Providence, $5.18; McComb, *Centenary, $51.43; McComb, LaBranch Street, $6; *Galatia, $11.64; Bethesda, $8. Total for Brookhaven District, $95.91.

Hattiesburg District.—Ellisville, $6; Philadelphia, $7.01; Bassfield, $6; Purvis, $5.07; Hebron, $1.97; Williamsburg, $2.80; Oakvale, $2.34; *Magee, $9.20. Total for the District, $40.39.

Jackson District.—*Poplar Springs, $10; *Satartia, $13.35; *Benton, $15; Midway, $5.70; *Brandon, $10; *Pelahatchie, $15.20; Holly Bush, $4.30; Andrew's Chapel, $1.90; Galloway Memorial, $86.60. Total for the District, $168.05.

Meridian District.—*Lauderdale, $7; East End, $9.43; De Soto, $6; Stonewall, $3; Poplar Springs, $8. Total for the District, $33.43.

Newton District.—Meehan, $2.83; West End, Laurel, $5; Rose Hill, $1.70; *Finkbine, $16; New Prospect, $4.70. Total for the District, $40.23.

Seashore District.—Mount Pleasant, $13.50; Wiggins, $11.32; *Bay St. Louis, $13.87; Lumberton, $28; Alexandria Memorial, $3.58. Total for the District, $70.27.

Vicksburg District.—Lorman, $5.64; McNair, $5.20; *Silver City, $12; Woodville, $5. Total for the District, $27.84.

We have come to the time when the Sunday School Day fund will have to carry the largest burden of the finances of the Board. Will you use all diligence to have a creditable day and send the offering into the Board? Pray for the work and the workers.

Yours in Him,
JOHN C. CHAMBERS.

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The Corinth District Standard Training School is in session at Booneville this week. We have enrolled 160 or more. The presiding elder, Rev. J. B. Randolph, and the majority of the pastors are doing credit work. Every charge is represented where the pastor is interested sufficiently to lead the way. We have an unusually large number of high school pupils and men taking the work. There is a better day ahead of us. The people at Booneville, led by their pastor, Rev. E. G. Mohler, have made this splendid school such a success because of their untiring work and unstinted hospitality. Great is Booneville Methodism!

NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

By Miss Virginia Thomas.

Plans are being made for several Elementary Council meetings to be held within the next month. One will be held at Booneville in connection with the Standard Training School for the Corinth District, another at Tupelo for the Aberdeen District, and one at Columbus for the Columbus District. We are also planning a council meeting for the Conference to be held during the Conference Training School, with Mrs. L. G. Fant, Holly Springs, Miss., as president. You ask why these Council meetings? They give the teachers of the departments an opportunity to discuss their problems with each other and a trained leader. These departments are probably the most important departments of the whole school; these teachers must have a vision of the great task that is theirs; they must realize that their task is not only a responsibility, but a great privilege. Urge your teachers to attend their district council meeting. As yet a district meeting for the Greenwood, Sardis, and Grenada Districts has not been arranged, but we hope to announce the date and place for these soon.

Teachers, yours is a great task. Let us not be asleep on the job, but be up and doing! Let us realize that in leading little children into the Kingdom we are doing the most worth while work possible. Give of your time and energy to this work. Give the very best that is yours.

GREAT REVIVAL AT FIRST CHURCH, BATON ROUGE.

First Methodist Church, Baton Rouge, La., is rejoicing over one of the most successful revivals it has had in its history. Public preaching services closed Sunday night, May 25, with hundreds of people turned away, unable to get in the building. Ninety joined our church and several united with other churches, with many prospects yet to be worked. Sunday, June 1, is going to be a great day with us, as we will receive the candidates into church membership at that time. This makes a total of 164 received since Conference.

Rev. W. B. Hogg, pastor of Trinity Methodist Church, El Paso, Tex., was with us two weeks and did the preaching, with two services daily. Mr. B. G. Grenfell, of Dawson Springs, Ky., one of our general evangelistic choir leaders, directed the singing. From the first service we had large crowds, filling and frequently overflowing the available space in our church building. As the meeting moved along, the overflow grew larger and larger until we could not accommodate the great crowds desiring to hear the gifted preacher.

In many respects Brother Hogg is the most unusual preacher I ever heard. He draws people to him and leads them to decision with little apparent effort. His messages are strong, clear, always evangelistic, yet simple. He captivates every one who hears him, from the most ignorant to the learned college professor. His sermons were always gospel appeals direct to the heart, and they brought results. During his stay with us, by special invitation of Colonel T. D. Boyd, President of the Louisiana State University, he addressed the 1,500 students at chapel hour on "The Negro and the Old South." The students would hardly let him close at the dinner hour, clamoring vigorously for him to go on.

Mr. Grenfell came to us upon the recommendation of Dr. Russell, head of our General Evangelistic Committee, and proved himself a valuable addition to the meeting. He is a good soloist and choir leader and organizer. He is a thoroughly loyal, normal man, and greatly endeared himself to our people. We have never had a choir leader who seemed to fit in more satisfactorily to the general plans of the campaign. In his "Booster League" work he did a most helpful work for and among our young people. Every evening, a few minutes before the public service, he gathered the Leaguers together in an inspirational contest which greatly revived interest in the League. Many of our best personal workers came out of this "Booster League."

On next Sunday, June 1, we will receive the candidates into church membership. We are looking forward to a great day and more additions to the church. Our officials and entire membership are enthusiastic over the gracious results of our great revival.

FROM DE SOTO, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: A few words from De Soto charge. We have just closed a very successful meeting at Crandall. Rev. J. V. Bennett came to us and began on May 18 and ran through the 29th. He won his way to the hearts of the people, and they learned to love him, and accepted him as a man who had come to lead them into a deeper experience. He spoke as many as five times in one day. There were no outward manifestations at church—only three times did he open a way for outward manifestations. There were four accessions to the church. But, the best of all, men's hearts were stirred. The men would talk to me and say: "There has been no emotion here, no opportunity for it, but our hearts are stirred, and we believe a better day is ahead for Crandall." Without any "pull" whatever, they gave him a free-will offering of $249.50.

Our work on the charge moves fairly well. We have two Leagues and five Sunday schools. We are going to observe Sunday School Day at every church. We have organized Sunday schools into a circuit-wide institute. We are sure at least two shares of Charles Assaf's salary will be cared for.

Our meetings are all planned. We have spent at least $250 on and in the parsonage this year. The stewards raised salary to $1,506 for pastor, and presiding elder to come above that. We hope to have a good report at Conference.

SUNDAY SCHOOL TEACHER TRAINING AT MILLSAPS COLLEGE.

The year just closed at Millsaps College has marked a distinct advance along the line of getting the Sunday school work of the church before the students of the institution. Not only has this program been taught in the college classes, but extension work has been carried on through two of the larger local Sunday schools.

Mr. J. S. Warren and Mr. L. M. Sharp are two young ministers who received blue seal diplomas. Mr. Warren is from Sun, Miss., and Mr. Sharp is from Jackson, Miss. Other blue seal diplomas went to Miss Maggie May Jones, of Jackson, and Miss Martha Belle Marshall, of Jackson.

Three of our young ministers also received incomplete diplomas. These were Mr. I. H. Hollingsworth, of Yazoo City; Mr. W. M. Nelson, of Holly Springs, and Mr. D. W. Poole, of Franklinton, La. Miss May Hitch, of Jackson, received an incomplete diploma also.

The following units in teacher training were awarded in addition to the diplomas already mentioned:

	Units.
The Christian Religion	50
Principles of Religious Teaching.	71
Organization and Administration of the Sunday School	28
The Pupil	21
Bible	594
Total	761

This work in teacher training does not classify as college work. This work is done outside the college classes in religious education. The college department of religious education offers twenty year-hours in this subject of strictly college grade.

It is because Millsaps College wishes to introduce as many of its students as possible to the regular teacher training course of the church in order that they be ready for the call of the church in this field that these classes in teacher training are promoted during the freshman and sophomore years.

CORRESPONDENT.

FROM DeKALB, MISS.

Dear Brother Carley: May 12-14 were great days in DeKalb for Methodism, when the Meridian District Conference convened here. One hundred and seven delegates answered to roll call; every preacher was present, and several connectional men. It is conceded to have been the best district conference ever held in the Meridian District.

The people of DeKalb did themselves honor in entertaining. Everything was in readiness, and every one took part and helped make it a success. Brother Hardin presided better than I ever saw him do before. The best spirit prevailed—not a harsh word was heard. Every one was optimistic, and fine reports were made by all the preachers. We had the best sermons I ever heard at a district conference. J. H. Jolly gave us a fine sermon on Monday night; J. D. Ellis excelled himself on Tuesday at 11 o'clock; Loyd Deveil delivered one of the best sermons on Tuesday night I ever heard; Dr. Patterson delivered the best sermon on the Centenary I ever heard from a connectional man on any subject.

W. A. Hays was elected secretary, and J. M. Lewis, assistant. Brother Hays always makes good anywhere you put him. The Epworth League and the Boy Scouts helped to make everybody happy.

We were greatly delighted to have with us our honored superannuate, Brother C. M. Martin, and his wife—it was a delight to honor them.

Brother E. B. Moll and Brother Maughon remained over with us nine days in a revival. The revival was equal to the conference—some of the most spiritual preaching I ever heard. Twelve persons united with the church, and the membership was mightily revived. We are happy and determined—I really feel twenty years younger.

This is my fifth year here, and it is the best.

M. L. WHITE.

FROM AN OLD-TIME METHODIST.

Dear Mr. Editor: I heartily endorse Mrs. J. E. Wimberly's views on unification. I am an old-timer—have served more than seventy years in the ranks of the Southern Methodist church. I believe in old-time religion—believe that nothing but old-time religion will take us to heaven. Would that there was more of it, and more of the spirit of soul-winning in the church today, and less wrangling over matters that tend to confuse and hinder in the work!

I am now on the borderland, and expect soon to cross over. As I approach the end, the way grows brighter, and I have every assurance that I will be with Jesus and departed loved ones.

Lake Providence is moving along well under the leadership of Brother Foster.

2. Deal (Noel Memorial), paid April 21, 1924, $16.23.

Is your League on the Honor Roll? If not, why not?

Presentation of Pageant at Epworth Church.

The morality play, "To Vison Height," was presented Sunday evening at Epworth Church by the Leaguers of this chapter.

Sunday was Anniversary Day for Leaguers, and an opportune time for the presentation of this pageant. The rendition of the play was good, deserving of favorable comment, and the sentiment embodied in it and impressed upon the hearts of the young people will, no doubt, create a desire to become as clay in the hands of the Master Potter.

The stage setting was artistic, branches of trees giving an outdoor appearance and between the branches the illuminated cross lighting the way to the "Height." "Pilgrim," seated upon a rock beneath it, is praying for some one to show him the way. He did not realize that "The light that shineth in darkness" was beckoning him to press on. He is finally convinced when Inspiration helps him on his way, and Consecration clears the haze, so that he might see clearly when "Vision Height" is reached.

The closing scene in the play is the most beautiful, the crowning point in the story—a life filled with love, prayer, knowledge, inspiration and consecration. The story has a most touching close, expressed in the song,

"I'll live for him who died for me,
How happy then my soul will be!
I'll live for him who died for me,
—My Saviour and my God."

After the play, the newly-elected officers were installed, reconsecrating themselves to the work of the Master for the ensuing year.

The Epworth League of this church won the annual award given by the City Union Epworth League for being the most active chapter in the union during the past year. The award was cash, to the amount of $40, this to be used in defraying the expense of one delegate to the Annual Assembly at Mansfield, June 10-17. Epworth will be represented with four Senior delegates, two Intermediates, one teacher, and the pastor of the church.

This is young people's week and they are making a great effort to reach the goal, Mansfield.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Ruston District Conference.

The annual meeting of the Woman's Missionary Societies of the Ruston District was held at the First Methodist Church in Minden, La., Thursday, May 22, 1924.

The forenoon session was opened with a worship service led by the district secretary, Mrs. J. F. Giles, of Springhill. After the opening song, "Lead On, O King Eternal," a soul-stirring prayer was offered by the Rev. W. C. Childress, pastor at Minden. After this, the Bible lesson was impressively presented by Mrs. J. R. Miller, of Minden.

Next on the program was a "Message" of the district secretary, by Mrs. Giles. This inspiring message was both enthusiastic and instructive. For the future activity she suggested plans for enlarged work, admonishing that each society perfect its organization, enlist the unenrolled women of the church, and lend an ardent support to the young people's and children's work.

New societies were reported organized at Farmerville, Marion, Sibley, and Young People's societies at Minden and Springhill, and Junior Divisions at Farmerville and Haynesville.

In response to the announcement of the third topic, "How We Made the Honor Roll," it was brought out that Ruston District had five societies on the Honor Roll in 1923. Mrs. Greene, of Haynesville, gave an interesting outline of how the goal was reached and passed in her society.

Topic number four, "Points that Make a Well-Rounded Society," was discussed at length and with zest by delegates from various Auxiliaries. Mrs. Spinx, of Ruston, presented the plan for the Church-wide State Inter-Conference Membership Contest, and further suggestions for the membership extension were given. Louisiana will contest with Florida for the largest net gain by the end of the year.

Mrs. Key, of Shreveport, explained the use of the pledge, and reported the interesting fact that Southern societies sent in to the Nashville offices last year pledges amounting to $900,000.

Then followed interesting talks on other points of the Standard of Excellence Poster.

Publicity was discussed by Mrs. O. D. Lowe, of Minden; Young People's Societies, by Mrs. Key of Shreveport, Mrs. Joyner of Ruston, and Mrs. Holcomb of Springhill. Mrs. Mullen, of Springhill, outlined a unique plan for Harvest Day program that had been very successfully presented at Springhill. Social Service was most enthusiastically discussed by Mrs. Shields, of the Minden Society. Community work and other divisions of Social Service were discussed by Mrs. Miller, of Minden, Mrs. Hammett, of Minden, and Mrs. Holcomb, of Springhill.

Discussion of the last topic on the program for the forenoon was postponed until afternoon, and, after benediction by Rev. Mr. Dodson, of Ruston, the meeting adjourned for luncheon, served in the social rooms of the Minden church. Members were requested to reassemble at 1:30 for the afternoon session.

The afternoon session was opened by two stirring songs: "The Kingdom Coming," and "Jesus Calls Us." Prayer was offered by Mrs. Drury, of Minden. Next, a pageant, "A Life Transcendent," was very impressively presented by the Young People's Society of Minden. This pageant had for its theme, "The Power of Love as Exemplified in the Life of Miss Belle Bennett."

Mrs. Giles then delighted the audience with a vocal solo, "My Task." "Our Love Gift for Belle Bennett Memorial" (for Scarritt College for Christian Workers at Nashville, Tenn.) was the next topic, presented by Mrs. J. F. Key, of Shreveport, president. Her appeal was deep, heartfelt interest in this great work of training leaders for mission work. She urged that each Auxiliary make an ardnous effort to come up to the quota of funds for this cause. She congratulated the Ruston District in having three members who had pledged one hundred dollars each, Mrs. Holmes, of Minden; Mrs. Giles, of Springhill, and Mrs. T. L. James, of Ruston.

The next topic, "Financing Our Enlarged Work," was elegantly presented by Mrs. Hart Mullin, of Springhill. She appealed for sustained and renewed support in the Annie Hedges. Calling this pledge the women's great opportunity for giving in accordance with her individual means.

Mrs. Holcomb presented the plans for the organization of circuit Missionary Societies, also plans for the "Gibson Auxiliary," these plans recommending the establishing of circuit missionary auxiliaries in the various charges where regular societies are not possible in individual churches, and the enlisting of isolated women who live a long distance from any organization into the Gibson Auxiliary. Plans in leaflet form for this organization are being prepared. It was also urged that the societies already organized act as "Big Sister" to the churches near by, fostering and assisting in organization of new societies wherever possible.

The Rev. Mr. Childress was then asked to tell of the work of St. Mark's Hall. He gave some enlightening facts of the work being done to better the physical welfare as well as the spiritual welfare of these unfortunates who so much need Christian help. The St. Mark's Hall is pronounced by eminent authority as the best equipped institution of its kind in the United States.

Mrs. Key then talked about the work in the French Mission field in South Louisiana, telling so many interesting features of the work being done there and the daily vacation Bible school held at MacDonell Wesley House last summer.

The attendance was splendid and the visitors gave the Minden ladies a rising vote of thanks for their hospitality, and the meeting was closed with an earnest consecration service led by Rev. Mr. Childress, with prayer by Rev. K. W. Dodson, of Ruston, and benediction by Rev. Mr. St. John, of Springhill.

One thought from this consecration service was significant of the spirit of the meeting. "Happiness and joy are by products of a consecrated life."

MRS. J. F. GILES, President.

MRS. L. H. DENMAN, Secretary.

METHODISTS SHOW MEMBERSHIP GAIN.

Report of Mission Board Shows an Increase of 276,775 in One Year.

There has been a net gain of 276,775 in the membership of Southern Methodism during the year, Dr. R. L. Russell, Home Secretary and member of the Committee on Evangelism, reported to the members of the Board of Missions of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. However, Dr. Russell said that despite the large gain made in the membership, more than 200 pastors in the Southern Methodist connection had not reported a single addition to the membership on profession of faith.

FRECKLES

Now is the Time to Get Rid of These Ugly Spots

There's no longer the slightest need of feeling ashamed of your freckles, as Othine—double strength—is guaranteed to remove these homely spots.

Simply get an ounce of Othine from any druggist, and apply a little of it night and morning and you should soon see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the lighter ones have vanished entirely. It is seldom that more than an ounce is needed to completely clear the skin and gain a beautiful, clear complexion.

Be sure to ask for the double-strength Othine, as this is sold under guarantee of money back if it fails to remove freckles.

WEAK WOMEN

cannot hope ever to become strong and well again unless they have plenty of good, rich, red blood of the kind that organic iron—Nuxated Iron—helps make. Nuxated Iron is like the iron in your blood and like the iron in spinach, lentils and apples, while metallic iron is iron just as it comes from the action of strong acids on iron filings. Nuxated Iron does not injure the teeth nor upset the stomach; it is an entirely different thing from ordinary metallic iron. It quickly helps make rich, red blood, revitalize wornout, exhausted nerves and give you new strength and energy. Over 4,000,000 people annually are using it. At all druggists. Beware of substitutes. The genuine has N. I. stamped on every tablet. Always insist on having the genuine.

MRS. NANNIE EARNESTINE COX.

Rarely does the death of an individual leave in home and community the tragic vacancy caused by the passing of MRS. NANNIE EARNESTINE DICKSON COX, on April 15, 1924. Varied and strong were the bonds of friendship. As mother and grandmother, the fragrance of her devotion will ever abide in he[r] now so sorely torn. Nannie Earnestine Dickson, daughter of Robert and Lucy Simmons Dickson, was born near Learned, Miss., Sept. 23, 1867. She was married to Dr. Thomas Burwell Cox on Jan. 19, 1893. At an early age she united with the Presbyterian church which her father built, but after her marriage she united with the Methodist church at Learned, in which her husband was a steward. Four children blessed this happy union, two of whom survive, Mrs. H. A. Cannada, and Mrs. T. N. Townstone, also one brother, Mr. R. M. Dickson. About eighteen months ago Mrs. Cox became seriously ill, and never entirely recovered from this illness. To those who knew her best and loved her most, she was an inspiration and a help always as we saw her splendid courage and unfaltering faith that carried her through months of uncomplaining suffering. On the night of April 15, Mrs. Cox remarked to her daughter, Mrs. Cannada, at whose home she lived: "I am going to have a good night." She turned, and in a few minutes she "fell asleep," only to awake in her heavenly home. She was a constant Christian worker, always foremost in the work of the church, Sunday school, and Missionary Society. As a friend, she was all that the word implies, generous, kind and true. She was always present in times of trouble and need to comfort and to cheer. How sorely missed by all will she be in this work of love!

She was a devoted wife and loving mother. The daughters are left a heritage of the brightest and most comforting—sublime faith in a Heavenly Father. Beneath a bed of flowers her body was laid to rest in Bethesda cemetery, by the side of her husband, who preceded her to the heavenly home twenty four years. The services were conducted by Rev. B. F. Jones, assisted by the Methodist church, and Rev. C. P. Ohary, pastor of the Presbyterian church. "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." We sorrow not with at hope, for we know that he will keep her treasure in the home not built with hands, eternal in the heavens, whose maker and builder is God.

Gentle Lord, to Thee I fly,
Take me to Thy loving breast,
Like a lily let me lie
Sheltered in Thy arms of rest.

Like a lily let me grow
Fragrant, beautiful and pure,
Let Thy love around me flow
Make me steadfast, meek and sure.

Like a lily let me be
Ever open to Thy light,
Let Thy dew big drops on me
Let me rest in Thy delight.

Like a lily let me bow
Meekly at Thy throne, eternal and divine.

"Some were but buds, e'en sprung up in the night:
Their home was in God's vast garden of heaven.
And some were full-blown, unblemished white.
And some which long had stood 'neath burning sun
Or swept by blasting storm—no longer fair—
Were bent and withered; so to fall away
Were need of scarce a touch, and some were there
Imperfect, which deep in the shadows lay.

"He scanned them all. O'er some he lingered long
As loath to leave. And ah! we know not why
He plucked them not. But many a thorn
Of buds and drooping flowers were passed by.
Till where remained in beauteous bloom did stand
One fair white lily, fairer than the rest.
The Father paused, stretched forth His loving hand—
And her sweet soul was gathered to his breast."

NO TROUBLE WHEN BABY CAME

Mrs. Crossan Gives Credit to Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound

Mrs. Dakan Also Tells What This Medicine Does

St. Joseph, Missouri.—"I heard so much about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound that I decided to try it as I had had such a hard time with my first child. I took nine bottles of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I never felt better in my life than the day my baby girl was born. I will be glad to tell what it will do, to any woman who will let me know her address."—Mrs. ROSA DAKAN, 2227 S. 11th St., St. Joseph, Missouri.

Back To Normal Health

New Orleans, Louisiana.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound while I was carrying my child and I must praise it highly because I never suffered one day during that time and could do all my housework and had a very easy confinement. I am still taking the Vegetable Compound because I have a weakness due to working around the house too soon after my baby was born. But thanks again to the Vegetable Compound I am getting back to normal health once more. I advise any woman to take it."—Mrs. A. MEYN, JR., 2019 Touro St., New Orleans, Louisiana.

Not A Bit of Trouble

Wilmington, Delaware.—"I was nervous and weak and not at all regular. I worked in a factory at the time and could not work very much. I was sick over a year, then a friend told me about Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I started to pick up as soon as I began taking it. Then I took it again before my first baby was born and I never had a bit of trouble. I recommend it highly."—Mrs. JANE CROSSAN, 612 Pine St., Wilmington, Delaware.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has helped many other women just as it has helped Mrs. Dakan, Mrs. Meyn and Mrs. Crossan.

Consider the statements of these women. They give you the benefit of their actual experience with the Vegetable Compound.

A nation-wide canvass of women purchasers of the Vegetable Compound reports that 98 out of every 100 have been benefited by its use.

This is a remarkable record and proves the dependability of the medicine for the relief of the troubles women often have.

For weak and run-down conditions so common after child-birth it is well adapted. It strengthens and tones up the system and restores normal health.

The Vegetable Compound contains no harmful drugs or narcotics and can be taken in safety by the nursing mother. For sale by druggists everywhere.

A BIBLE AND EVANGELISTIC CONFERENCE.

There will be held, under the direction of the Bureau of Evangelism of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, a Bible and Evangelistic Conference at Mount Sequoyah, Arkansas, beginning July 27 and closing Aug. 3.

The speakers on the program are Bishop Warren A. Candler, Bishop W. F. McMurry, Bishop Sam R. Hay, Rev. C. G. Chappell, D.D., and Rev. H. W. Bromley, D.D. These names should be enough to bring large numbers of both preachers and laity from various sections of the church to this conference.

Bishop McMurry and Bishop Hay will speak the first Sunday, and Bishop Candler the last Sunday.

Certainly there has never been a time when we needed more to call the attention of the people back to the old truths, reminding them of the power of Jesus Christ to save as always.

Let the people gather on Mount Sequoyah at this time and pray that the power of God may come upon the church, and receive inspiration from these men of God for this task.

R. A. RUSSELL.

HATTIESBURG DISTRICT CONFERENCE.

The Hattiesburg District Conference convened at Purvis, May 28, with the presiding elder, Rev. W. W. Graves, in the chair. The opening sermon was preached by Otto Porter. The writer was elected secretary, and Rev. J. B. Cain, assistant secretary. The roll was called and committees were announced to look after every interest of the church. Although several towns within the district were struck by a tornado and a general rain storm visited the district twenty-four hours before the conference met, the attendance was good.

The following visitors addressed the conference concerning interests represented by them: J. C. Chambers and O. C. Hull, Sunday schools; W. T. Griffin, Orphans' Home; W. D. Hawkins, Missionary Centenary; Dr. J. M. Sullivan, Millsaps College; H. A. Gatlin, Washington City Church debt; A. S. Oliver, Columbus Church; J. M. Morse, Christian Education Movement, the Anti-Saloon League, and Group Insurance; and J. F. McClelland, Mississippi Conference Training School.

Resolutions of appreciation of Brother Graves as presiding elder were unanimously adopted by the conference, and a purse of $100 was presented to him, to be used for a vacation, or just as he wishes. This material expression, bearing the sweet aroma of friendship, is but a slight token of the love and esteem in which he is held all over the district.

The following, by unanimous vote, were granted license to preach: T. J. Halfacre, C. L. Stewart, M. E. Edmondson, H. L. Daniels, and T. R. Holt.

Rev. G. S. Harmon, Rev. J. B. Cain, and Rev. A. S. Oliver brought helpful messages to the conference at the regular preaching hours, and throughout the conference the spirit was brotherly and the atmosphere spiritually helpful.

Magee was chosen as the meeting place next year.

The following were elected delegates to the Annual Conference: Mrs. W. H. Lane, K. T. Moore, Mrs. W. M. Williams, J. M. Sartin, H. V. Waites, John A. McLeod, Dr. T. J. Burnham, and W. S. F. Tatum.

K. T. Moore was elected District Lay Leader, and D. R. Campbell and J. R. Banes were elected Associate District Lay Leaders.

The following ad interim committee was elected: J. T. Leggett, C. M. Crossley, A. J. Davis, and B. H. Williams.

Rev. W. H. Lane, the pastor, and his good people left nothing undone for the comfort and entertainment of their guests, and we all left Purvis feeling that it is one of the best places in the district to hold a district conference.

OTTO PORTER, Sec'y.

ON UNIFICATION.

We are deeply interested in the subject and very much opposed to the union.

We do hope the bishops will determine the illegality of this special session of the General Conference on July 2, and give still more time for consideration. We agree with Brother Felts that every member should have a chance.

In the political world candidates seeking office make a desperate effort to reach all who are ellgible, if not in person, then by letter, and the leaders of our church, when a "drive" is on, endeavor to do likewise. Are they less anxious for the salvation of individuals than their money? Isn't it only fair for each to have a chance? Could there be any growth in the church from unwilling service? Are those who have authority to rule able to bear this tremendous responsibilty? What about the less fortunate, disappointed ones who would have no voice in the matter? We plead for justice.

Had the time and energy that has been spent in wrangling over unification been employed in seeking the lost and pointing them to "the Lamb of God that taketh away the sin of the world," we believe to-day, instead of confusion and strife, we would have conversions by the score, and a spiritual uplift throughout the entire church.

Some have been heard to say already, "We are not willing to unite on any terms." Let those who want to, go to the North, but let us hold on to our "Southern" church.

The membership is in great commotion. May the Great Physician pour the oil of consolation upon the troubled waters, and alleviate the anxiety of all who are heart-sick and distressed, and may the all-powerful, all-wise Providence guide our affairs aright.

SOUTHERN METHODIST.
Baton Rouge, La.

AGAINST UNIFICATION.

The plan of unification which we are soon to consider officially does not offer a satisfactory solution of nearly all those questions which have held us apart since 1844.

In the plan submitted, no satisfactory definition is made of the relation of the Negro constituency. It is an obvious fact that the Negro dreams of a relationship which assures him of social equality.

I do not believe the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is ready to license women to preach.

I do not believe we are ready, and I pray we may never be willing, to remove the ban on worldly amusements, as our Northern brothers are reported to have done by an act of their General Conference only a few days ago. We of the South are surely lax enough to make one of serious and devout reflection blush with shame, to say the very least. As between the church and the world, the lines of demarcation are well-nigh obliterated; but we still retain our General Rules and are not yet ready to suffer their mutilation.

The plea is made that a Southern jurist contributed very liberally to the formation of the plan. I do not question his honesty of purpose or his piety; but there seem to be many like Judge White, whose zeal has made them willing to hoist the white flag without a thorough understanding of what the consequences of surrender will be.

We, the Southern Church, are a "little fish" as compared with the church, North, and I for one am not willing, simply because they invite us, to enter his massive mouth and say on entering, "let us be pals"—No, sir, not yet!

REV. H. T. YOUNG AT CENTRAL METHODIST CHURCH, FORT WORTH, TEX.

Rev. Henry T. Young, of the Louisiana Conference, has just closed a two week's revival in Central Church, Fort Worth, Tex.

Central is situated in the heart of the best residence section of this city of one hundred and fifty thousand people, and has a membership of sixteen hundred.

Through our splendid Sunday school organization and by a continuous appeal in our regular church services, we have received over nine hundred members during the past three and a half years. Therefore, nearly all who attended the revival services were already church members, and only a few were added to the church.

However, Brother Young's straightforward gospel preaching won all his hearers and led many into deeper consecration and richer experiences, and left them with new determination to live for the glory of our Lord and the salvation of the lost.

Young's knowledge of the Scriptures, orthodoxy, strength of personality, consecratiou and preaching ability qualify him for acceptability and usefulness as a general evangelist, presiding elder or pastor of a great city church.

The pastor and people at Central thank God for his life and ministry among us.

WM. H. COLEMAN, Pastor.

The most important factor connected with an investment is the value of the security behind it.

G. L. Miller & Co. makes it an invariable practice to obtain independent appraisals and to print them in the offering circulars.

The best guarantee of the safety of Miller bonds is the sales prices of buildings securing Miller issues. The following list shows the buildings recently sold along with the Appraised Value and the amount of bonds outstanding:

Name of Structure	Original Appraised Value	Sales Price	Outstanding Bonds
Gallat Court Apts., Miami, Fla.	$ 222,000	$ 400,000	$162,000
Mauretania Apts., St. Louis	$ 230,000	$ 300,000	$147,000
Granada Apts., Miami, Fla.	$ 607,750	$ 800,000	$285,000

CALLED SESSION OF GENERAL CONFERENCE LEGAL, AND PLAN OF UNIFICATION WISE.

By Bishop James Cannon, Jr.

In the Atlanta Journal of May 25, Bishop Candler attacks the action of the majority of the bishops of the church in calling a special session of the General Conference to be held July 2, and flatly denies its legality. Bishop Candler declared at the Nashville meeting of the College of Bishops, and reiterates in the Journal, that the call is illegal, because, he asserts, Paragraph 37 of the Book of Discipline has never been legally adopted. That paragraph reads as follows: "The bishops, or a majority of the Annual Conferences, shall have authority to call a General Conference at any time if they judge necessary." Bishop Candler declares that this paragraph, adopted in 1866, nearly sixty years ago, is "null and void because never approved by the Annual Conferences." Bishop Candler holds that no special session of the General Conference can be called until and unless each and every Annual Conference agrees by a majority vote of its members to unite in a call for a special session.

Bishop Candler is no doubt sincere in this opinion, but the majority of the College of Bishops are equally sincere and are fully convinced of the correctness of their interpretation of the law of the church.

Legality of the Call.

Paragraph 42 of the Discipline states: "The General Conference shall have full powers to make rules and regulations for our church, under the following limitations and restrictions." Then follow the six restrictions or limitations upon the otherwise "full powers" of the General Conference: It cannot change the doctrine of the church; it cannot change the representation of the Annual Conference in the General Conference; it cannot abolish the episcopacy or the plan of itinerant general superintendency; it cannot change the General Rules; it cannot abolish the right of trial of preachers or members; it cannot divert the produce of the Publishing House from superannuated preachers, their widows or orphans.

The General Conference cannot adopt any rules or regulations which affect any of these six items, either directly or indirectly. But it has "full powers" (could more sweeping language be used?) "to make rules and regulations for our church" on any other subject. The fathers in 1866, including H. N. McTyeire, J. C. Keener, W. M. Wightman, John Early, William A. Smith, and other great leaders, knew what they were doing when the General Conference adopted Paragraph 37, and did not order it sent down for confirmation by the Annual Conferences. They knew that the Discipline gave them full powers on every question not covered by the six restrictive rules. And it is frankly admitted by Bishop Candler: that practically the whole church has continued in ignorance of the nullity of Paragraph 37 until May 20, 1924, or thereabouts. The General Conference in Atlanta in 1918 gave explicit directions for the calling of a special session of the General Conference under certain conditions; the General Conference of 1922, by practically unanimous vote, "empowered and instructed the bishops to call a special session of the General Conference" whenever a Plan of Unification should be approved by a two-thirds vote of each Commission, and by a two-thirds vote of the Northern Methodist General Conference. Here the General Conference explicitly assumes the authority to exercise the "full powers to make rules and regulations for our church," and not only empowered, but instructed the bishops what to do under certain conditions. Did the General Conference transcend the powers in "empowering and instructing the bishops" to call a special session of the General Conference? Let us see.

No Veto Proposed by Bishops.

The Disciplins provides (Paragraph 43) that when any rule or regulation is adopted by the General Conference which, in the opinion of the bishops, is unconstitutional, the bishops may present to the Conference which passed the regulations their objection thereto in writing, and such action will be null and void unless approved by a two-thirds vote of the General Conference and by a three-fourths vote of all the members of all the Annual Conferences. The bishops, including Bishops Candler and Denny, sat on the platform when the General Conferences of 1918 and 1922 authorized a special session of the General Conference under certain conditions. No bishop, not even Bishop Candler or Bishop Denny, raised his voice to intimate that the proposed action would be unconstitutonal, and the General Conference and the church at large had the right to think that these bishops saw no constitutional objections to the action deliberately taken twice by the General Conference providing for a call for a special session of the General Conference, and the members of the General Conference and the church at large are amazed at this objection raised, six years and two years, respectively, after the two actions taken in 1918 and 1922, by these bishops who sat quietly and never raised any constitutional question till the present hour. The church at large will feel that they have doubly lost their hour in court in which to protest against the unconstitutionality of the General Conference action.

I have discussed this question quite fully, because Bishop Candler has flatly declared that Paragraph 37 is null and void, and that therefore the call issued by the majority of the College of Bishops is illegal, and if so the session of the General Conference called to meet on July 2 will meet without authority, will act without authority, and, therefore, no action taken by it will be legal. If Bishop Candler's reasoning is correct, it is difficult to see how he can participate in any way in the proceedings of a General Conference which will meet without authority, and any action taken by which will be null and void. I hope that he will participate, but I do not see how he con consistently do so, unless he finally agrees that the Conference is legally called, and can legally transact business.

Year Delay Illegal.

It has also been objected by Bishop Candler, and by Bishops Denny, Darlington, and Dickey, in a publicly signed statement, that the General Conference could not be called until next April, because Paragraph 38 says: "When a General Conference is called, it shall be constituted of the delegates elected to the preceding General Conference except when an Annual Conference shall prefer to have a new election." But the bishops are given power to call a General Conference "at any time if they judge it necessary." This power of the bishops to call "at any time" is not limited by Paragraph 38. The bishops can call at any time, and if any Annual Conference can arrange to meet and have a new election, the Discipline permits it to do so, but unless an Annual Conference is in session it cannot be known that it prefers a new election. Certainly Paragraph 38 cannot negative power granted in Paragraph 37. Furthermore, it must not be forgotten that the General Conference distinctly "empowered and instructed the bishops" to call a special session of the General Conference when certain conditions were met. As indicated above, the General Conference (see Paragraph 42) has "full power to make rules and regulations" for our church. It adopted Paragraph 37, which authorized the bishops to "call a General Conference at any time;" It also adopted Paragraph 38, which says, "When a General Conference is called, it shall be constituted of the delegates elected to the preceding General Conference, except when an Annual Conference shall prefer to have a new election." It also, in the exercise of those same "full powers to make rules and regulations," "empowered and instructed" the bishops to call a special session of the General Conference when certain conditions were met. The bishops interposed no constitutional objection, and they must call that special session as instructed when a majority think the conditions have been met.

A majority of the bishops think that those conditions have been met, and they think that they are bound to follow the declared wishes of practically a unanimous vote of the General Conference, and so they have called the special session to meet on July 2.

Early Session Wise.

Furthermore, the majority of the bishops think that it is wiser to have the special session of the General Conference to consider this question of unification before the Annual Conferences meet. It is very desirable that the question of unification be discussed by a perfectly normal General Conference, composed of delegates elected as normal representatives with no special reference to unification. Had the special session been delayed till April, 1925, unification would be the all-absorbing topic at every Annual Conference session, delegates would be elected on that one subject after a debate held within local bodies without any illumination from General Conference debates, participated in by members from all over the church. The plan will be fully discussed by the Annual Conferences before a final vote, but the members of the Annual Conferences should have the benefit of the General Conference debate and action and some idea of the mind of the church as a whole before voting directly on the plan.

Furthermore, it is a mistake to say that the call is hasty. The plan has been before the church for many months, and has been printed, read and discussed all over the church.

A Moderate, Brotherly Plan.

So much for the legality of the special session of our General Conference. Now what of the Plan of Unification itself? It is a moderate, generous, brotherly plan. It was framed and approved by men who recognized the real differences of training, thinking, habits of life and general surroundings of the people they represented; and yet by men, who not only worship the same crucified and risen Redeemer, but who honor and revere the same earthly leaders, Wesley, Whitfield, Clarke, Benson, Fletcher and Asbury; who hold the same articles of faith, who believe in the same church polity, who emphasize the same doctrines of Repentance, Faith, Justification, Regeneration, Sanctification, the Witness of the Spirit, and the duty to carry the evangelistic message to the uttermost parts of the earth. And these men determined that, if they could not adopt a plan which would require the immediate administrative union of the churches and conferences in a common territory, they would certainly adopt one which would join forces wherever possible, in the United States or in foreign countries, in evangelistic work here or missionary work abroad; in educational, orphanage and hospital work; in all social and reform work, in this and in other lands; in short, in every endeavor to combat and to overthrow error, whether of worldliness, materialism, narrow nationalism or Romanism, and to bring in the Kingdom of God, which is righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost. It was clear to these men that mechanical union could not be secured in many places without much friction, bitterness and open strife. And so it was agreed that a progressive plan should be formulated—a plan which would provide for doing all the work together which could be done together without any more friction than arises in each branch of the church to-day. And when in any neighborhood or State, individual churches or Conferences are ready to unite, the Plan will make it easy to do so, but where they are not yet ready, they can stay apart and carry on their work as heretofore. While the Plan does not force union at any local point, yet it does hold up to each congregation the ideal, which has been adopted by the two churches as the goal to be attained. It is not doubted that there will still be friction and misunderstandings and some secessions of members who cannot adjust themselves to any change of attitude to their former rivalry till death brings them together, it is to be hoped, on the same (the right) side of the throne.

It is urged against the Plan that it perpetuates waste of men, money, and duplication of effort. That remains to be seen. The Plan certainly does not peremptorily abolish these things, but

THE CALLED SESSION OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE.

By Rev. A. F. Watkins, D.D.

The writer does not purpose in this paper to discuss the merits of the pending plan of unification. He simply wishes to give expression to some thoughts that are suggested and some questions that are raised by the statement, recently issued by four of the honored bishops of the church, giving their reasons for not concurring in the action of the majority of the College of Bishops, in calling a special session of the General Conference July 9, 1924.

In doing so it may not be amiss to express the regret that he feels that these honored brethren did not see their way clear to observe the "unit rule," uniformly observed in the public utterances of the College of Bishops and emphasized as desirable by the General Conference of 1902.

The first of these reasons assigned is based upon the doubt concerning the constitutionality of Paragraphs 37 and 38 of the Discipline of 1922.

The so-called "veto" power of the bishops was enacted in 1854 and was in force in 1866 when these paragraphs were adopted and inserted in the Discipline. This enactment, found in Paragraph 43 of the Discipline of 1922, prescribes the course that may be taken by the bishops in the event of the passing by the General Conference of a rule or regulation which, in their opinion, is unconstitutional. In the same paragraph is found the provision for the altering of the Restrictive Rules.

No one, it is presumed, will contend that Paragraphs 37 and 38, as enacted in 1866, involved a change in any one of the Restrictive Rules; presumably, all will admit that they came under the provisions of the enactment of 1854, in which the General Conference seems to have voluntarily surrendered a part of its "full powers to make rules and regulations for our church." If this view is correct, it will be seen that the General Conference, in adopting the proviso of 1854, did not ask of the Annual Conferences the grant of enlarged power, nor even the modification of the procedure of the exercise of the powers originally delegated to it; but, in the interest of safeguarding what may be called "other constitutional rules and regulations," voluntarily surrendered to the Annual Conferences some of the powers originally granted. It will follow that if the proviso of 1854 was null and void because of not having been concurred in by the members of the Annual Conferences, the original grant of "full powers to make rules and regulations for our church," except as to the Restrictive Rules, remained unimpaired, and the General Conference of 1866 had full power to adopt the paragraphs in question.

If upon the other hand, the proviso of 1854 was valid, it was in force in 1866, and the episcopal veto should have been interposed, if in the opinion of the bishops the act was unconstitutional. The bishops seem not to have interposed their veto, and the paragraphs were adopted as if they were a part of the "rules and regulations for our church," in reference to which the General Conference possessed "full powers."

In regard to the nature of the so-called "Episcopal Veto," the writer would respectfully suggest that it is not a veto in the usual sense of that term. It is not intended to defeat legislation, nor even to express disapproval of the measure as such. For all that appears on the surface, the bishops may be of the opinion that the rule adopted is, per se, but a warning finger is raised and the opinion is expressed that the act involves a violation of the Constitution. It simply operates as a stay to immediate action and invokes a change of procedure.

The paragraphs were adopted and inserted in the Discipline, where they remained unchallenged fifty-eight years, except that incidentally in a report of a Committee on Constitution the matter was brought to the attention of the General Conference of 1914, forty-eight years after their adoption, where "no action was taken upon this portion nor any other part of the report." We are told that this report was approved unanimously by the College of Bishops before it was submitted to the General Conference. But this was no official challenge, since the law required that such a challenge be presented to the Conference that passed the rule. (See paragraphs 42 and 632 of the Discipline of 1922.)

Now, after fifty-eight years, four of our General Superintendents call in question the constitutionality of the paragraphs, as a reason against calling a special session of the General Conference on the first Wednesday in July, 1924, but not against calling one on the first Wednesday in May, 1925! For in the paper under discussion they say: "We believe this date (May, 1925—A. F. W.), if it had been adopted, would have escaped all legal difficulties," etc., and they say, also: "We are sure it (May, 1925—A. F. W.) would have been in keeping with the law of the church," etc.

It might be of interest to ask: "What bearing upon the constitutionality of the paragraphs did the failure of the bishops to interpose objection have?"

The writer would modestly suggest that upon the practical constitutionality of the paragraphs it had none; but that it was fatal to the plea of unconstitutionality. Such an action was a necessary part of the procedure, and the failure to invoke it effectually blocked the only process by which the question of constitutionality could be raised or settled. Meanwhile it is the unchallenged and unchallengeable law of the church, and will remain so until the General Conference, by constitutional action, shall have revoked or amended it. The analogy thought to apply in the process by which amendments to the Federal Constitution can be adopted breaks down in view of the failure of the bishops to act in the case.

The second objection to calling the General Conference on the first Wednesday in July, 1924, is stated as follows: "These paragraphs do not authorize the bishops to call a special session of the General Conference at any time that would deprive the Annual Conferences of their right to be represented by the delegates elected to the preceding General Conference, or 'to have a new election,' if they should so prefer."

This is an interesting statement. Paragraph 37 is thought to be in conflict with Paragraph 38. The former authorizes the bishops or a majority of the Annual Conferences to call a General Conference at any time, if they judge it necessary. The latter is construed as authorizing the call at any time, after all the Annual Conferences have had an opportunity to elect new delegates, if they desire.

Alas, these unfortunate paragraphs! Like the Kilkenny cats, they have destroyed each other; but let us be comforted concerning our cats; they did not amount to anything as cats anyhow!

Paragraph 37 contains two thoughts, in the form of two questions and their answers: "Who shall call a special session of the General Conference, and when?" The bishops or a majority of the Annual Conferences, at any time judged to be necessary. Paragraph 38 contains (as far as the purposes of this discussion are concerned) a thought and an afterthought). The thought: "Who shall constitute a called General Conference?" The delegates elected to the preceding General Conference. The afterthought: To be sure an Annual Conference may hold a new election if it wishes. But when? As soon as possible. But it had better be in a hurry about it; for the special session has been called by competent authority at a time deemed necessary. The through train of Paragraph 37 is about to run into a local freight of Paragraph 38!

But, seriously, the provision for calling a special session of the General Conference is a provision for handling a condition that calls for prompt action. The paragraph reads: "The bishops, or a majority of the Annual Conferences, shall have authority to call a General Conference at any time, if they judge it necessary." It would have been convenient, perhaps, if a proviso had been added to the following effect, viz: "provided, however, that the session, after being called, shall not convene until all of the Annual Conferences shall have had opportunity to hold new elections, if they so prefer." It would have been convenient, in view of present conditions, but would it have expressed what the General Conference evidently intended? That convenient proviso would have made necessary the omission from the preceding paragraph of the words "at any time," and now, the membership of the called General Conference, having been determined, certainly there would have been no need for a paragraph declaring that "it shall be constituted of the delegates elected to the preceding General Conference," which is the main purpose of Paragraph 38.

It was necessary that the organization of a delegated General Conference should set forth its powers and provide for its membership, presiding officers, and the times and places of its meetings. It was necessary, also, that provision should be made for called sessions and, because of the probable demand for a prompt assembling of the body, that the method of its calling should be simple and its membership easily and readily available.

Such is the plan presented in the Discipline. The bishops are authorized to call the special session at any time. Its members shall be those of the preceding General Conference. But if any Annual Conference should hold its regular session in the interval between the calling of the special sessions and the date of its convening, and should prefer to hold a new election, it should not be deprived of the privilege of doing so. It is inconceivable to some of us that the fathers could have used the language of Paragraphs 37 and 38 and have meant that between the calling and the convening of the special session all of the Annual Conferences should be allowed to hold their regular sessions and, if they preferred, hold new elections.

The remaining objection is that the assembling of the General Conference on July 2 will prevent our preachers and people from giving sufficient consideration to the plan proposed.

Personally, this writer would have been glad if the Conference had been called for August instead of July, but he takes it for granted that the reasons for the selection of the earlier date were sufficient.

He does not think there is any cause for alarm in the fact that the date fixed by the College of Bishops is but little more than forty days from the date of the official call for the special session. The call did not release the plan and place it for the first time before our preachers and people. The plan was adopted by the Joint Commission and given to the public practically twelve months ago, and our preachers and people have been considering it ever since. They are studying it now, and will continue to study it until the Conference adjourns, and if action favorable to the plan is taken by the Conference, the greater part of them will have from two to six months more for prayerful examination of the plan before they are called upon to express their judgment by their votes.

The writer does not know what the end will be. But he does know that his earnest prayer is that the action taken shall be that which will most advance the cause of Christ in the world.

THE PLAN OF UNIFICATION SLIGHTLY ANALYZED.

By Rev. John W. Boswell, D.D.

Unification concerns every Methodist, and every Methodist is concerned except the brother who lives so far away that the church papers never reach him. Some Methodists are very happy over the prospect of marching as one body, many millions strong, against the powers of darkness. Other Methodists are unhappy, fearing lest the merging of the two churches will result in revolt, or the scattering of Southern Methodists among the various denominations of the country, of which there is danger.

Our last General Conference, assuming that unification is "desirable and feasible," appointed a Commission, to meet a like Commission from the Methodist Episcopal Church, to point a way, if possible, to bring the two churches into closer fellowship not to merge the two bodies into one as the plan now before us contemplates.

That unification is "desirable and feasible," so far as Methodism in the North is concerned, is doubtless true. Their recent General Conference so declared. There are no obstacles north of Mason and Dixon's line, and fortunately there is nothing in the North to which the South lays claim. The North has much in the South in members and property far too much to make it either desirable or feasible to surrender for the sake of closer fellowship. It is true that no demand is made for the surrender of these interests. Under the plan proposed, they are to remain undisturbed, and full liberty granted to enlarge them. The same is true of the Church, South, under the following Article:

"Jurisdiction number one shall comprise all the Churches, Annual Conferences, Mission Conferences, and Missions now constituting the Methodist Episcopal Church and any other such Conferences and Missions as may hereafter be organized by its Jurisdictional Conference with the approval of the General Conference.

"Jurisdiction number two shall comprise all the Churches, Annual Conferences, Mission Conferences, and Missions now constituting the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and any other such Conferences and Missions as may hereafter be organized by its Jurisdictional Conference with the approval of the General Conference."

This Article makes it clear that there will not be a particle of difference in the status of things now and after the consummation of the so-called plan of unification. If so, will somebody tell us what either church will gain by a union that means nothing? The conditions now prevailing in the South will continue. The practice of building "altar against altar" will not cease. Indeed, it will be stimulated unless the churches composed of white persons in Jurisdiction Number One are transferred to Jurisdiction Number Two. Jurisdiction Number One has perhaps 400,000 members in the South maybe more, 350,000 of whom are colored. These colored members were born and reared in the South, and are here to stay. They are generally on friendly terms, and we have no fear of any trouble with them, but they are located inside the territory of Jurisdiction Number Two.

I intimated above that the union will mean nothing. This is clear from the fact that we will be one only in name. Article Six says: "The Bishops of the two Churches as at present constituted shall be the Bishops of the United Church without further action." That looks like an approach to union, but as a matter of fact the Bishops of one Jurisdiction cannot perform Episcopal duties in another Jurisdiction except "with the consent of the majority of the bishops of the Jurisdiction involved." There is no obstruction in that, but it is better than it looks. It is a preventive measure, designed to keep the colored bishops of Jurisdiction Number One from "administering" in Jurisdiction Number Two.

The General Conference under the plan proposed, made up of delegates from the two Jurisdictions, is authorized to legislate for the whole church. Seemingly they come together as one body, but really they are two each maintains its identity, for, "Every vote in the General Conference shall be Jurisdictional, and shall require the accepted majority vote of each Jurisdiction to be effective." That regulation is supposed to be for the protection of the minority. But what about the irritation of the majority that is sure to excite in the course of time? The vote of Jurisdiction Number One is double that of Number Two, yet the vote of Number Two can nullify that of Number One. How many times will such a majority suffer its voice to be silenced? There is no indication nor promise of peace in this provision.

Again: Each Jurisdiction will have authority over and manage its own affairs. We will still have our own Publishing Houses, our own schools and colleges, our own Boards of Missions, Church Extension, Finance, and all other benevolent institutions. No union in all this. It really looks as if, under the plan, every man will be compelled to look on his own things, and not on the things of others. Since we are to have unification, I am glad it is after this order.

If all the above is true (of which readers can satisfy themselves by studying the plan), what is the use of the two churches pretending to be unified? I know it is said that the plan is only tentative or experimental; the first step towards union. And it has been suggested that defects and oversights can be remedied when once we are united. That looks like going into trouble after being fairly warned. None of us know what we are going into, no more than the fly knew when he walked into the silk-lined parlor at the invitation of the spider.

I do not charge our Northern brethren as lacking in love or sincerity, but I know human nature, and I cannot free myself from the idea that when questions arise involving rights, or great moral issues, if the two Jurisdictions happen to be on opposite sides, each Jurisdiction will vote its convictions. But the overwhelming majority of Jurisdiction Number One will be nullified by the minority vote of Jurisdiction Number Two. How long will the majority rest under such overruling as that? True, under the plan of unification if it succeeds the majority will be obliged to stand it; but this is a free country, and a way will be found to do away with such a restriction. We had better stay apart than run the risk of re-enacting the scenes of 1844. "I speak as unto wise men, judge ye what I say."

God has blessed the labors of the Methodists from the beginning, quite as much in the latter days as in the former. In fact, Southern Methodism was never more prosperous than at this time. Wisdom suggests that we let well enough alone. Amen!

THE PROPOSED PLAN OF METHODIST UNION.

By Rev. J. R. Jones, Laurel, Miss., Delegate to General Conference.

I am opposed to the pending plan of unification. There is no unity offered by it, and it does not promise that there ever will be a union of the two great Methodist forces to grow out of it. There is one thing very clear, and that is, we are not united on it ourselves, and in my judgment will never be. To undertake to force this thing, by General and Annual Conference action on a large portion of our people, as will be the case if it should be adopted, will rebound against the radical leaders among us, who would accept any plan of union Negro and all. But, thank God, there is a remnant of the old South, and a mighty army of the new South, who will never walk up and stick their necks into a noose to be tightened by those who have played unfair with us, and who have broken every agreement and disregarded every honorable rule of Christian ethics.

The adoption of this thing, now pending, will legalize and tighten the grip of those who have invaded the South, in direct violation of the terms of agreement entered into at the time of separation.

By the plan pending, the Northern Jurisdiction will have no prescribed bounds it covers, and will cover, the whole United States. The Southern Jurisdiction will be confined to just that territory where it is now working, in reasonable peace and harmony; working, growing, and prospering in the face of an invasion by the Church North which has not been honorable or Christian. There is no indication that the Northern Jurisdiction will not continue to build altar against altar. We are told that "all minor details will be worked out when we adopt the pending plan." But who will work them out? Adopt this thing and we put ourselves at the mercy of a two-to-one majority, and that majority in the hands of those who in the past have had no regard for their agreements.

I may have it to do, but I am not willing to put a noose around my neck, or be a party to thrusting upon the church I love that which I do not believe a majority of the body of our members want. I believe thousands of our self-respecting members will resent the adoption of this thing, and will quietly walk away and unite with other churches.

I have been on the field, down where the folks are, and I hear them talk. They talk, too, about the spirit and unfaithfulness of those who have been honored by their church, and yet who are leading in the adoption of this thing, which can only mean domination and absorbtion, humiliation and dissatisfaction.

The Northern General Conference voted overwhelmingly for it. Yes, they have nothing to lose, but all to gain. They very likely are looking on to see if we will be silly enough to walk into this thing, and wake up with about room enough to stand and bewail our weakness, or call on some sympathizing friend to lead us off to the lunatic asylum.

They, the Church North, are trespassers, and are trespassing still. With this thing pending, they have continued to organize churches, and push on in territory where they have had no legal or moral right to be; indicating their plan and spirit for the future.

I may have it to do, but I am not willing to trust the Northern Methodist and modernistic church, with their overwhelming numbers to work out details for the future. Let's work out the details before we are tied, and when the Church North shows her willingness to regard the rights of her sister Methodism; when they and we have the spirit of union, then on a perfectly fair and brotherly basis we could afford to consider unification, and not until then.

I am happy to believe that my position is the attitude of my Conference, with a few exceptions, and I think they are very few. I stand with what I believe is a great majority of the Mississippi Conference.

I am happy to see the strong stand Bishops Candler, Denny, Hickey, Darlington, and Ainsworth are taking against the pretended unification, as set forth by the "Pending Plan." Nothing less than this was expected of them.

A PLEA FOR HELP AT COLLINS, MISS.

The recent cyclone that struck Collins practically destroyed all of our churches. The damage to other property was heavy, and many homes were entirely destroyed. Our people are not able to replace our church building. It will cost at least $5,000 to rebuild to meet our needs. We appeal to the readers of the Advocate who feel inclined to help us in this time of distress, and assure them that any donation will be appreciated.

J. W. THOMPSON, Pastor.

A CALL FOR HELP FOR OUR CHURCH AT STRICKEN COLLINS.

I have just returned from an inspection of the devastation wrought by the storm at Collins, Miss. At least twenty homes were wrecked, besides several business houses. The three churches were wrecked. They will all have to be rebuilt. It will take at least $7,000 to rebuild an adequate building for the Methodist congregation there. The church carried fire insurance, but no tornado insurance. A small amount of lumber from the wrecked church can be used in the new building. These people are not able to rebuild without liberal donations from those who escaped this destruction. The Church Extension Boards, both Conference and General, will aid some. But they will need more than we have to give them. So I call upon all friends of humanity and Methodism to respond liberally to the call. Send your contributions for the Methodist church to Rev. J. W. Thompson, Collins, Miss.

CONCERNING UNIFICATION.

By Bishop H. M. DuBose.

A mistaken notion of the proposed unification of American Methodism has gone abroad. Whatever differences of opinion may exist among us concerning this movement, we should all zealously seek to have the essential facts made known. The plan, if ratified, will not unite directly the two churches, as so many seem to have concluded. Properly speaking, ratification of the plan does not necessarily mean union. It only maintains a process by which union may be achieved, and that in stages, as the two connections may desire. Should our General Conference, to sit July 2 next, ratify the plan, as was done by the General Conference which met in the North in the month of May, the first stage only will have been reached. Union will still be in the future. The Annual Conferences in the North and the South must then pass upon the referendum. The vote of the Annual Conferences cannot be completed before the spring or summer of 1925. Nor will the churches be united after this stage, even should the action of the Annual Conferences be favorable. Following favorable action, the bishops of the two Jurisdictions would meet in one body to carry out such instructions as the two General Conferences may have put to record. At this time, it is to be supposed, matters relating to the mutual transfer, or exchange, of dually occupied territory, a union of foreign missionary efforts, and else of a connectional, or super-connectional, nature, would be discussed. But whatever might be agreed upon at such time and under such conditions, would not constitute union. The final stage will only be reached when the General Conferences of the churches North and South shall be called to meet in joint session, to take up the questions of a common name, a constitution and the details of unified administration. Real union would begin here to emerge, and not before. This stage, at the nearest, must be several years off.

It is a clear inference that if either church, at the beginning of this final stage, should have cause to judge that the compact would not be to its best interest, or promotive of the higher welfare of the kingdom of God, it might end the negotiation in a legal and brotherly way. This, however, is not to be anticipated; but it is a possibility which is expositive of the plan. Frankness, patience and mutual concessions on the part of the representatives of the two churches will bring the hope of unification to a successful issue. Each church is pledged to protect the rights of the other; and our own rights, as the minority church, are completely protected in the proposed constitution of the new, or superior, General Conference, through which no measure can be passed without the vote of both Jurisdictions. The church in the South would continue to have its General, or Jurisdictional, Conference, as would the church in the North; and matters in each Jurisdiction would go on much as before. It would only be that the united testimony and efforts of American Methodism would deliver a force on the life of the nation, and give a type to Protestantism that its divided efforts could not achieve. It would also prove the re-birth of Christian missions; and would open the way, as no other event could, for the evangelization of the world.

Another and tremendous consideration proposed to Southern Methodists is this, namely, that, should the church in the North fully ratify the plan, and we should reject it, we will have created for our cause the most disastrous situation that could be imagined. It is in this light that we should shape our action.

LET US DO IT RIGHT.

Japan is entitled to fair treatment along with the other nations of the world. We have assumed for ourselves a position in the cause of international justice that would bar us from a course otherwise than a just one to any nation, regardless of the fact that we might be entirely within our rights in such a course. Neither threats on the one hand nor cajolery on the other should cause us to deviate from a line of international conduct that would guarantee fair and equal treatment to all nations. Without thought of fear or hope of favor we should be as just and fair to Japan as to any other nation.—Memphis Commercial Appeal.

THE PENDING PLAN OF UNIFICATION—A SHORT CUT TO CONFUSION.

By Rev. J. T. Leggett, Member of Commission on Unification, and Delegate to General Conference.

The plan of unification adopted by the Joint Commission at Cleveland, Ohio, in 1923, and transmitted to the General Conferences of the two churches with a recommendation for its adoption is now before our church on its merits. The question involved is not the abstract question of the unification of the two great branches of Episcopal Methodism; nor is it the question as to whether unification is desirable. The one and only question to be decided is this: Will this plan, if adopted, really unify the two churches, and will it reach a satisfactory adjustment of the differences which have existed and do now exist?

The unification of the two churches is the goal, and the only goal, sought in the negotiations which have been going on for twenty years. Each church has authorized and empowered its Commissions, from time to time, to find some feasible and desirable plan by which this goal might be reached. No Commission has at any time been authorized to do less than this. Does this plan really lead us to the goal which we have sought?

It is a significant fact that some of the men who helped to draft it do not claim that it will unify the two churches. Some of its most ardent supporters contess that it is not unification, and, if adopted, will not make a unification of the two churches. A careful analysis of the plan itself serves to convince us of its weakness.

Article 1 of the plan proposes a declaration of union on the alleged basis of an "essential unity in origin, in doctrine, in spirit, in purpose and in polity," and, in the same breath, proposes a continuation of the old Jurisdictional lines which have existed since the division in 1844. The only change proposed, is a change of names—instead of the Methodist Episcopal Church, it proposes Jurisdiction No. 1, and instead of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, it proposes Jurisdiction No. 2. The individual churches of the two denominations remain as they were. Each Jurisdiction will occupy the same field which it formerly occupied under the old name, with authority to organize new churches, new Annual Conferences, and to acquire new property. With two Jurisdictions occupying the same field and working side by side, with authority to organize new churches, etc., there must of necessity be unfavorable competition, if not conflict—one side or the other must suffer the hurtful effects of such competition. Which side shall it be? Look at the position of the two denominations and you will find the answer.

It is a matter of common knowledge that, following the Civil War, the Methodist Episcopal Church invaded Southern territory in spite of the solemn agreement which she entered into at the time of the division "not to attempt to organize churches or societies within the limits of the church, South, nor to attempt to exercise any pastoral oversight therein." Under the embarrassment of this solemn agreement, the Methodist Episcopal Church has organized churches and Annual Conferences in the South and it has "exercised pastoral oversight therein."

We of the South have felt all along that her policy has been to disintegrate and absorb us. Now, if this plan is adopted, the basis of that embarrassment will be removed, and unless she elects to do otherwise, she may plan a larger and more progressive work under the disguise of a new name—Jurisdiction No. 1—and the anomalous plea that we are one church. Is this the kind of unification we desire? For years we have worked, and prayed, and hoped for a unification that would prevent competition and overlapping, and an extravagant waste of men and money. To say that this plan will give us such a unification, is to venture a prediction, the fulfillment of which, however desirable, is uncertain.

The proposed plan asks for an official declaration of union without offering any adjustment of the differences which have existed and do exist between the two churches. Everybody knows that these differences exist, and that for twenty years the two churches have been trying to reach an agreeable adjustment of them. For twenty years the two churches have had their Commissions, composed for the most part of their strongest and best men; they have labored together thoughtfully and prayerfully in an effort to perfect a plan that would adjust our differences and make unification actual in organization and administration. Their failure to agree upon such a plan has not been due to lack of interest in, or to prejudice against the unification of the two churches; but to difficult problems growing out of our differences. Now, we are asked to adopt a plan which neither provides a unification, nor offers a solution of the serious problems which must confront a reorganized church. Is that the kind of unification we desire?

Let us go a little further into the plan and see if we can find the unification we desire. The pending plan proposes one Super-General Conference, to be composed of all the delegates elected to and composing the two (not one) Jurisdictional Conferences. The two Jurisdictional Conferences and the General Conference meet at the same time and place. The voting in the General Conference on any measure is done by Jurisdictions and not as one body. No legislation, however important, can pass the General Conference without a majority vote of each of the Jurisdictional Conferences voting as separate units, and not as one body. A condition like this cannot coutinue, and I think no one expects it to continue. To attempt to change this condition is to invite confusion, fraught with peril to either one side or the other.

Again, the plan proposes that each Jurisdiction shall elect its own bishops, and the bishops thus elected shall be General Superintendents of the whole church; but look at the limitations prescribed—"a bishop may be assigned to minister in any part of the church, provided, that when he is assigned to minister within the Jurisdiction other than that by which he was elected, it shall be with the consent of the majority of the bishops of the Jurisdiction involved." Think of it! A bishop of the whole church, and yet he must have a passport to enter a Jurisdiction which is forever foreign to him without that passport! Is that the kind of unification we desire?

There are other features of this plan which, to my way of thinking, are weak and confusing, and I should like to discusse them, but I cannot afford to take the space that rightfully belongs to others who may desire to discuss this question.

In conclusion, I desire to say that I personally should like to see these two great branches of Episcopal Methodists get together. I believe in unification, but I cannot afford to close my eyes to the weakness of this plan. I cannot vote for a plan that neither unifies nor proposes a guaranty of unification for the future. I cannot afford to vote for a plan that proposes no basis for the adjustment of our differences and offers no solution of our problems. I cannot afford to vote for a plan that does not propose to stop competition, prevent overlapping, and avoid an extravagant waste of men and money. I cannot afford to vote for a plan that leaves the settlement of our grave and important problems to the uncertain action of a loosely jointed and unwieldy General Conference.

REASONS FOR ADOPTING THE PLAN.

By O. F. Lawrence, Editor, The Grenada Sentinel.

We often wonder if there would be any vigorous protests against unification if our minds could be divested of all memories of the Civil War and some of the incidents connected with the separation of 1844. But surely Southern Methodists are not going to allow our Northern brethren to show more of the spirit of the Master in this regard than they do. Among the things that we should keep uppermost in our minds in considering the question of unification, is the Savior's utterance in the Sermon on the Mount, "Blessed are the peacemakers, for they shall be called the children of God."

To reject unification now is equivalent to saying that we are willing to join with the North in everything else except in furthering the Gospel of Jesus Christ.

To read some of the objections to unification causes me to think sometimes that some of our brethren are afraid that our Northern brethren will outwit us. So far as I am concerned, I am willing to take my chances with them on that score.

No one holds that the plan of unification is a perfect one. I dare say that there is not a single member of the Commission on Unification who, if left to himself, would not alter the plan in many ways. Had the Commission given a superhuman document, it would have produced something that the world never saw before. All great documents involving the matter of government are the result, more or less, of compromise, and time has shown that it is well that no single man or group of men have their way about these matters.

Those who take the shivers over the possibility of "Negro bishops presiding," should take a look in on a meeting of the bishops of the great Episcopal Church. That church has Negro bishops and there is no friction because of it. Surely Methodists have as much intelligence as our Episcopal brethren.

I am a bit amused that some who are opposing unification should insist that the rank and file vote on the proposition. We have never heard of these brethren urging that the "rank and file" vote on any other matter connected with the church. We wonder if some of these brethren would want the "rank and file" to vote on the matter of their appointments.

Is there any one who will venture the opinion that the hosts of heaven would not be pleased at seeing the two churches united? God frowns upon but few things more than [illegible] friction, causes irritation and bickers. The devil sets in here every effort possible to keep men from getting together for holy aims and purposes, and by keeping the two churches apart will profit most.

The plan of unification [illegible] not a new one. It has been before the church for a number of years, and there are but few Methodists who have not a definite idea in the distance a getting together again of the two churches.

Of course there are being technical objections urged. This is always the case. There were those who went up and down the land proclaiming against the adoption of the Constitution of the United States; nevertheless it was adopted, and Gladstone said that it is the greatest document ever conceived by the mind of men.

But let us be temperate in the discussion of the matter. Let us not say or write things that will embarrass us and hearts ache in the days to come. We should not take ourselves too seriously. The propagation of the truths of the Gospel of Christ will go on whether there is union or not. Indeed, we rather suspect that God would find some way to run the affairs of his kingdom here upon earth even if there was no Methodist church, either North or South.

Good business books unification. Pure and undefiled religion looks unification. If the plan is not all it should be, why, we can trust to the wisdom and the spirit of brotherly love of those in authority and to come after us to amend it if the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, rejects the plan after our Northern brethren have let us practically dictate the terms on doubtful points, then we place ourselves in a very unenviable light. Let us go forward.

If there ever was a time when Southern Methodists should subscribe for and read their church organs, that time is now, when the great question is up for acceptance or rejection.

Grenada, Miss.

ESSENTIAL FEATURES OF THE PLAN OF UNIFICATION OF AMERICAN METHODISM.

By Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon.

In a recent interview given the public press, my distinguished colleague, Bishop Warren A. Candler, writes as follows concerning the action of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church in approving the Plan of Unification of American Methodism:

"The Plan gives the Methodist Episcopal Church (North) so much advantage over our church that most naturally they leaped to seize the prize which they thought they saw in sight, apparently forgetting all other considerations."

This statement from the pen of our honored Bishop does not result from a study of the Plan. It has no relation to anything in the Plan. It cannot be supported by one single argument. The Plan itself, in its entire conception and design, is in direct contradiction and denial of the statement made by Bishop Candler.

In Bishop Candler's opinion, Northern Methodists are not fit people for Southern Methodists to consider uniting with in the work of the Kingdom of God. He plainly says that they are not of the right "spirit." Well, unfortunately for the good Bishop, he is out of harmony with his own church. The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, speaking through three successive General Conferences, has declared in favor of Unification. The General Conference of our own church, meeting in Oklahoma City in 1911, initiated the present movement for Unification, and appointed a Commission to negotiate with the Northern Church. The General Conference of our church, meeting in Atlanta, Ga., in 1918, expressed appreciation of the work of the Commission and instructed the Commission to go on with its work. The General Conference of our church, meeting in Hot Springs in 1922, went even further, and expressed "warm appreciation of the faithful efforts of our Commission on Unification to bring to pass on a proper basis the Unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South," and gave to our Commission full liberty to "work out new plans of Unification." I submit that when three successive General Conferences, composed from time to time of the most representative Preachers and laymen in the church, speak with one voice touching the Unification of Methodism we may be perfectly sure that we have heard the voice of the church. It is to be regretted, therefore, that Bishop Candler finds himself out of sympathy with the will and purpose of Southern Methodism. The will to unify our Methodist forces is fixed and settled, and the Bishop had as well prepare himself for the inevitable.

Having been for three quadrennia a member of the Commissions on Unification, and knowing perfectly well what went on in the meetings of the Commission, I may be pardoned for letting out a secret. The Plan which is now before the two churches is, as a matter of fact, a Southern Plan. The essential principles contained in it were suggested by the Southern members of the Joint Commission. If we reject this Plan, we will reject our own Plan of Unification. Three Southern men had most to do with writing this plan. First, during the last quadrennium when negotiations were halting, Judge H. H. White, of Alexandria, La., drew from his pocket a paper which contained a broad outline of a plan very much like the one now under consideration. Nothing came of it at that time. Later, when the present Commission settled down to work, Dr. Paul H. Linn presented a paper of some length setting forth the same principles, and Dr. T. D. Ellis offered a paper suggesting a plan embodying the same general scheme. Upon the basis of these papers, the Joint Commission built the Plan which has been approved by two-thirds of each Commission and by an almost unanimous vote of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

In this connection, I quote from the memorable speech made at the Hot Springs General Conference by Judge John S. Candler, of Atlanta, Ga.:

"I believe that the greatest thing that could be done for the Methodism of the world, the greatest thing for the Church of God in the world, would be a joint effort by these two great churches to get together for the purpose for which they were organized. . . . If two-thirds of your Commission, two-thirds of their Commission, and two-thirds of their General Conference adopt it (a plan of Unification), don't you think you are ready for a meeting down here? . . ."

Earlier in his speech, Judge Candler had said: "Before any action shall be called for on the part of the General Conference of each church, two-thirds of each of these Commissions voting separately, must agree on a plan of unification by reorganization. I feel very much to-night like saying to these brethren what Lincoln said to a commission once on a great occasion when the two great sections of our country were divided. He said: 'If you let me write Union at the bottom of the page, you may write anything above it.'" (See Daily Advocate, page 177.)

The fact of the business is Southern Methodists laid down certain conditions, and these conditions have now been met. Here are the facts. The Plan it offers in a peculiar sense a Southern plan. We ourselves said: "The plan must first be approved by two-thirds of each Commission voting separately." It has been so approved. Then we said: "Before we vote on it, the General Conference of the Northern Church must approve it by a two-thirds vote." It has been approved by them by an almost unanimous vote. What if Southern Methodism should now back off, and quit, and fail? Then should we be put to shame before the Christian forces of America and of the world. And this shall not be!

Very briefly now, I wish to indicate what some of the essential features of the Plan are:

1. The General Conference of the United Church is to be a bi-cameral body, composed of the two General Conferences sitting separately in the same auditorium and voting separately. And no measure can be passed by the Northern Jurisdiction without the approval of the Southern Jurisdiction.

That the Methodist Episcopal Church, with two million more members than the Southern Church, should be willing to such an arrangement is the most magnanimous thing in the history of such negotiations. And yet we are told, "They leaped to seize a prize;" and, "This Plan will enable them to carry out their scheme of disintegration and absorption!" The fact of the business is, our Northern brethren have to us in effect said: "So fully do we trust you that we leave it to you to say what our larger body shall do in all matters that touch the work of connectional Methodism." Let this be fully understood. The Northern Jurisdiction, under our Plan of Unification, can do nothing whatsoever in the South without the consent and approval of a majority of the Southern delegates in the General Conference.

Again, it is objected that there will be the very present danger of a deadlock, when a General Conference consists of two houses which must vote separately. By answer, I repeat the plea for this we do not often have a deadlock in the Congress of the United States. And I further remind the objector that in the original Southern Plan, approved by the General Conference of 1914, something not at all unlike this was proposed. It reads as follows:

"We suggest that the General Conference shall consist of two houses . . . All legislation of the General Conference shall require the concurrent action of the two houses."

The original thought of the Southern Church was that this would prevent hasty legislation. And much more will the present Plan prevent hasty legislation. Indeed, it will make it impossible for the General Conference radically to change anything. And while this General Conference moves slowly in effecting changes everything that is in the Discipline of the Southern Church stands exactly as it now is and cannot be changed in any particular unless we ourselves change it.

2. According to our Plan of Unification, the Episcopal oversight of the work in the two Jurisdictions remains precisely as it now is without any change whatsoever, so far as local administration is concerned.

The two colored bishops elected on a separate ballot and exclusively for the presidency of colored conferences in the Northern Jurisdiction, will go on with the work for which they were elected, having nothing whatsoever to do with our work in the South.

Northern bishops, elected by the Northern Jurisdiction and for the Northern Jurisdiction, will continue to serve the Northern Jurisdiction.

Southern bishops, elected by and for the Southern Jurisdiction, will continue to serve the church in the South. Bishop Denny will continue to live in Richmond and be a staunch Southerner, while Bishop Candler resides in Atlanta and continues a Godfast Georgian.

There will be just this advantage and gain. Once a year the bishops of the two Jurisdictions will meet together and discuss the work of the whole church. And if the College of Bishops of the Southern Jurisdiction should invite a Northern bishop to do so, a bishop from the Northern Jurisdiction might come South and preside over a conference; while Bishop Candler might go to New England and hold an Annual Conference meeting in Boston, if the Northern bishops should invite him to do so.

3. I now call attention to the greatest advantage to be derived from the Unification of Methodism, namely, the stopping of the present sinful waste of men and money in that part of the country where the two Methodisms overlap.

Unification means little to Methodists living in New England, so far as its immediate effect on them as individuals is concerned. The average Methodist living in Georgia does not every day face the folly and shame of wasting men and spiritual energies in duplication and competition. But Methodists in Missouri, and Oklahoma, and Kentucky, and West Virginia, and where the Holston Conference of the Southern Church and the Holston Conference of the Northern Church work side by side, not to speak of the Far West, have had enough of this sort of thing. And they are not going to put up with it any longer for the simple reason that they are people of sound business sense. I am profoundly convinced that in all the sections of the country, a divided Methodism is a sin. It can no longer be justified either before men or before God.

Note carefully how our Plan of Unification will put a stop to this kind of thing:

1. It immediately stops the organization of any new Mission or Conference by one Jurisdiction within the bounds of another Jurisdiction. For it is plainly stated in the contract that no new Annual Conference, Mission Conference, or Missionary Conference shall be organized by a Jurisdictional Conference except "with the approval of the General Conference." Which is to say that the Northern Jurisdiction shall not organize any new work in the South without the consent of the majority of the Southern delegates in the General Conference. For one, I am entirely willing to trust the majority of delegates from my own Jurisdiction.

2. And furthermore, such work as is now in competition with better organized and stronger churches will soon be absorbed. For it is certain that there will be one united Board of Missions for United Methodism. It is "written in the bond" that all the work on the foreign field is immediately to be consolidated. And it is also written that the General Conference of the United Church shall have power "to govern any enterprises which may be agreed upon as being of a connectional character." The nine bishops on the Unification Commission who favor Unification, in the statement prepared by them in the name of the Commission, had the following to say by way of explaining the above item:

"It will be immediately evident that the evangelization of needy fields here in America, both in the cities and in our rural districts, does constitute an enterprise which is connectional in character. The suggested Plan, then, will give to the Jurisdiction the opportunity of studying, in connection with the other, the entire field. Together, the two Jurisdictions will address themselves to the task of giving the gospel to the [illegible] Home Field."

Overlapping and duplication and waste and competition will soon cease when a Joint Board of Missions, governed by the General Conference, which governs only by the majority vote of each Jurisdiction, studies the whole needy field and votes appropriations only where they are most needed and will do the most good.

And be it all this, when we have one church, with one people working in one interest, the very impulse and desire for competition will be looked away. For why should United Methodism wish to compete with itself?

Another thing I wish to say. It is only official ties that hold the two Methodisms apart for so many years. Southern Methodists going North find themselves perfectly at home in the Northern Methodist Episcopal Church there; while Northern Methodists coming South, find themselves completely at home in the Southern Church. We are already one people. And in all our border States where the two churches work side by side, our distressed Methodists (North and South) are anxiously waiting for those in authority to give the word, so that a union may be properly effected. Bishops and connectional men have held back this union too long already. Our people are not going to be held back any longer. Some of them have already spoken. Presently we shall hear the others. And they will speak with a voice which will make itself heard.

SPECIAL REPORT, CHRISTIAN EDUCATION MOVEMENT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE, JULY 1, 1921-APRIL 1, 1924.

Dear Dr. Carley: I am handing you a report of the Mississippi Conference on the Christian Education Movement. This amount includes the directed and undirected money. Some of the money was paid before the campaign started, and when the campaign was put on the different churches who had paid these amounts were credited and sent in cards with the name of the person paying the amounts, and the cards were marked cash.

Line A of the report shows the amount collected by the Secretary-Treasurer, both directed and undirected money. Line B shows the amount collected by the schools and reported through me. This money is directed. The Mississippi Conference shows the total amount collected from all sources since 1918. All of the other Conferences show just the same thing as the Mississippi Conference:

A.—Amount collected by Secretary-Treasurer: July 1, 1921-April 1, 1922, $23,[illegible]4.71; April 1, 1922-April 1, 1923, $30,$31.61; April 1, 1923-April 1, 1924, $36,070.20. Total, $90,174.32.

B.—Directed gifts collected by schools: July 1, 1921-April 1, 1922, $140,064.20; April 1, 1922-April 1, 1923, $36,123.81; April 1, 1923-April 1, 1924, $42,887.50. Total, $219,075.51.

Grand totals: July 1, 1921-April 1, 1922, $163,-928.71; April 1, 1922-April 1, 1923, $67,255.42; April 1, 1923-April 1, 1924, $78,965.70.

The entire amount collected during the period is $310,119.83.

J. M. MORSE,
Secretary-Treasurer.

BROTHER WALDO W. MOORE AND THE "FORD"—THANKS.

By Payton A. Sowell.

Brother Moore serves a difficult yet as important as difficult appointment. An automobile was necessary to effective oversight

I want to thank the kind Methodists who read my appeal, and responded. One of the largest was the widow of a Mississippi preacher.

The auto is paid for and belongs to Wesley Memorial charge.

Brother Moore, to [illegible]d the matter, paid the last $20. His salary is below a living—he has no parsonage. If there are generous spirits who would show their love for Jesus by returning this to this man of God in small gifts, he will gratefully appreciate the kindness.

Brother Moore has no knowledge of what I am doing. His postoffice address is: Rev. Waldo W. Moore, P. O. Box 509, Biloxi, Miss.

A JUNALUSKA LODGE FOR SALE.—Glen Spring Lodge, Lake Junaluska, close to Lakeshore Drive and beautiful Epworth Springs, spacious porches, 13 bedrooms with stationary washstands, running water, two bathrooms. $5250 for cash, or $6000, one-third cash and balance within two years. Address A. B., box 605, Richmond, Va.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

ONLY THE PREACHERS THEMSELVES CAN STOP THE SUCCESS OF THE SPECIAL EFFORT NOW.

After long and weary years of waiting the church has at last girded herself to do a worthy thing for her superannuated preachers. The people have become aroused on the subject and are faithfully applying themselves to the task of paying an honest debt. More than $10,000,000 has been assumed by 6,200 charges, to be raised in five years, for endowing the old-age comfort of these veteran heroes. Already (within two months) more than $350,000 has actually been sent to the Board of Finance in St. Louis for credit on quotas assumed. The remittances continue to come at the rate of an average of $5,000 per day. It is glorious.

You say, "This is fine, but it will have to keep up a long time to secure the $10,000,000." Why shouldn't it keep up? We have 300 presiding elders and 6,500 pastors strategically placed throughout the whole church, and over them 16 chief pastors who serve as superintendents. It is unthinkable that such an army of leaders would now neglect a movement which gives promise of success in abundant measure. We should stand so compactly together in our determination to carry it through, that it will be impossible for any one of our number to falter.

We have made a great start, and let us keep on keeping on. We must not be quitters. We do not want it said of us that we "began like a lion and quit like a mouse." Ugh! O, brother preachers, let us crowd close together and in undying loyalty work at this thing until it is fully accomplished. If any of our number limp and hesitate, let us get to them quickly with encouraging words and a helping hand. As for me, I promise not to allow any brother to turn "mouse" on this "lion" task if I can help it. Will you likewise be on the alert to keep our entire brotherhood inspired to do the most loyal and faithful service? Remember, the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment is not a one man's job—it is a task for every man in the given field.

NEWSY NOTES AND GOOD CHEER NUGGETS.

It is remarkable how well pleased the church is with the plan of our Special Effort. I do not think a single letter or statement of criticism of the plan has come to me.

Another thing that pleases me is the manner in which the presiding elders are co-operating in the movement for Superannuate Endowment. Each of them has from fifteen to forty charges to direct in numerous financial programs, but they are applying themselves to our Special Effort with unfailing loyalty.

Occasionally I hear of a pastor who is not exerting himself to raise his charge's quota for the Forgotten Man, but such cases are very rare. Practically all of the pastors are faithfully performing their duties in this matter. Any pastor can succeed at this thing, if he really sets himself to do it.

The time for the meetings of the Annual Conferences rapidly draws near. Remittances on Special Effort quotas should be in the hands of the Board of Finance, St. Louis, Mo., by the time your Annual Conference meets, if you want your credits to show in your Annual Conference Minutes. Be guided by this caution and you will save yourself embarrassment and disappointment.

The Senior League of First Church, Corsicana, Tex., recently presented a Forgotten Man pageant written by one of its own members, Mrs. Clyde Foster. The plates were passed for a free-will offering, and those present contributed in this way $51.50 for Superannuate Endowment. The occasion was a great success, so much so that the pastor requested the Leaguers to have other such pageants for the benefit of the same cause. How easy it is for the Epworth League to assist the charge in raising its quota for the Forgotten Man!

Moss Point charge, of the Mississippi Conference, Seashore District, has paid $1,397 on their total quota. This leaves but $743 balance to be paid in order to meet their obligation for the five years. These good people are very happy on account of their success in this matter, and the spiritual reaction within the charge has been wonderful.

I know a preacher who was greatly discouraged on account of the attitude of his people toward his charge's quota for Superannuate Endowment. One week he wrote me a letter dripping tears of anxiety and heartache. His total five-year quota was $1,776; his total gloom was 100%. The next week the treasurer of this preacher's Special Effort Committee sent the Board a check for $1,613, "with more to follow." The preacher wrote, taking back everything he had written previously, stating that he was the happiest man in the world. You will note that his total five-year quota is practically paid and he has many prospective givers yet to see. Please remember "a way can be found to do that which ought to be done."

Rev. B. G. Hodge, pastor of Seattle Memorial Church, Owensboro, Ky., writes a cheering letter. He states that the five-year quota of his charge is $4,667, and that he has secured in subscriptions and cash a total of $8,000. One-fifth of this amount will be paid to the Board of Finance, St. Louis, Mo., by the first of July. Brother Hodge states that there was no trouble whatever in securing the pledges. Kentucky is making a fine record in our Special Effort.

EVERY DAY I PICK A FEW FRESH PINKS.

We are getting nearer every minute to a 100% record in the Pink business. Only 125 charges, outside of the Baltimore Conference, have yet to send in this report. I do wish they would attend to the matter right away. It must be admitted that our success with the Pinks is beyond anything that the most sanguine among us hoped for, but now that the record is so nearly perfect let us make it 100% for the whole church.

PRESIDING ELDERS GOING ALONG TO PERFECTION.

The Honor Roll of presiding elders whose districts are 100% on the Pink Leaf Report, now turns upon the last lap of the journey to perfection. This week the following names are added to this Honor List in the order as they became 100%:

205. Texas, Navasota, Rev. D. H. Hotchkiss, P. E.

206. South Carolina, Orangeburg, Rev. J. H. Graves, P. E.

207. North Carolina, Washington, Rev. S. A. Cotton, P. E.

208. St. Louis, Poplar Bluff, Rev. H. P. Crowe, P. E.

209. Western Virginia, Huntington, Rev. H. L. Clay, P. E.

210. Central Texas, Corsicana, Rev. C. A. Bickley, P. E.

211. Memphis, Dyersburg, Rev. S. Fisher, P. E.

THIS SELECT CROWD GETS BIGGER AND FINER EVERY DAY.

I have been telling my readers about the charges that pay one-fifth or more of their total five-year quota. Note the following additional charges which now have the right to be included in this list:

Hawesville, Louisville, Owensboro, Rev. E. M. Keelor, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,190; amount remitted, $238.

New Hope, North Alabama, Huntsville, Rev. J. E. Ridder, pastor; total assumed quota $1,200; amount remitted, $240.

Downey, Pacific, Los Angeles, Rev. T. L. Lablance, pastor; total assumed quota, $2,025; amount remitted, $434.50.

McMinnville, Tennessee, Cookeville, Rev. C. E. Hawkins, pastor; total assumed quota, $2,060; amount remitted, $165.

Greenwood, Louisiana, Shreveport, Rev. D. E. Dulaney, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,389; amount remitted, $280.50.

Henleyville, Pacific, Sacramento, Rev. C. E. Bower, pastor; total assumed quota, $672; amount remitted, $291.67.

Main Street (Belmont), Western North Carolina, Shelby, Rev. J. E. Thompson, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,308; amount remitted, $275.

Decatur, North Georgia, North Atlanta, Rev. G. M. Eakes, pastor; total assumed quota, $3,975; amount remitted, $1,807.15.

Danville, Kentucky, Danville, Rev. J. M. Fuqua, pastor; total assumed quota, $3,645; amount remitted, $1,550.

Celeste, North Texas, Greenville, Rev. A. S. Eggner, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,350; amount remitted, $400.

Highland (Louisville), Louisville, Louisville, Rev. E. F. Goodson, pastor; total assumed quota, $3,500; amount remitted, $702.50.

Flat Rock Station, North Alabama, Gadsden, Rev. J. R. Duncan, pastor; total assumed quota, $475; amount remitted, $101.

Marion Station, Louisville, Henderson, Rev. C. G. Prather, pastor; total assumed quota, $2,437; amount remitted, $513.75.

Oakland, Ocoee, Florida, Orlando, Rev. W. J. Churchwell, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,370; amount remitted, $670.50.

Alvarado, Central Texas, Cleburne, Rev. W. J. Hearon, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,714; amount remitted, $594.20.

Boston Avenue (Tulsa), East Oklahoma, Tulsa, Rev. John A. Rice, pastor; total assumed quota, $10,000; amount remitted, $2,000.

Central Church (Kansas City), Southwest Missouri, Kansas City, Rev. M. N. Waldrip, pastor; total assumed quota, $12,106; amount remitted, $5,537.25.

Emory, Holston, Abingdon, Rev. J. C. Orr, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,500; amount remitted, $300.

Edenton Street (Raleigh), North Carolina, Raleigh, Rev. W. A. Stanbury, pastor; total assumed quota, $5,000; amount remitted, $1,500.

The Home Circle

TAKING AND GIVING.

"Shall I take and never give?"
The robin chirped. "No, that would be wrong."
So he picked at the berries and flew away
And poured out his soul in a beautiful song.

"Shall I take and never give?"
The bee in the clover buzzed. "No, no!"
So he gathered the honey and filled his cell,
But it was not for himself that he labored so.

"Shall I take and never give?"
What answer will you make, my merry one?
Like the blossoms, the bird and the bee, do you say,
"I will not live for myself alone?"

Let the same eager hands that are ready to take
The things that our Father so freely has given,
Be ever as ready to do a kind deed.
Till love to each other makes earth seem like heaven.

ADVICE TO BOYS.

One of the first copies that my teacher wrote for me was: "Modesty is a great virtue.' It is an old-fashioned virtue, and one that I fear is too often neglected in the young of the present age. There is an old proverb that "people take a man at his own valuation," or, the more you think of yourself, the more other people think of you. The good opinion of "the people" is desirable; if it comes unsought, it is all right. But if you have to bow and bend to every whim of fashion in order to please "the people," you will soon find that you please nobody.

Too strong a desire for the approval of others may lead us to make things too pleasant all around. This may be akin to hypocrisy.

The apostle Paul gave good advice in Rom. 12:3, when he said: "Not to think of himself more highly than he ought to think; but to think soberly"—that is, modestly, rightly.

Many boys, and men, too, have made themselves ridiculous by "blowing their own horn." If you can beat all the boys running or jumping at school, don't always be talking about your fleetness. If you can learn faster than any in your class, keep it to yourself. If you can sing better than others, don't talk about it too much. Modesty forbids us making a display of our great superiority over others. Make no parade of your skill; it will be discovered sooner or later by others, and you will receive the more praise for it.

A celebrated English lord was making a speech in the House of Commons. He was extolling the courage and bravery of the English soldiers, when one of his associate said:

"My lord, you have forgotten one important incident of an officer who was stricken down three times by sunstroke. He was wounded twice. He almost starved with his men, but he went on and on until victory was achieved."

"I was not aware of that fact" said the lord.

"I have been told that this officer was the gentleman that is speaking," said his friend.

"O, yes," said the lord in great simplicity: "I thought you meant some other officer."

Every boy or man must mingle with his fellows, and to be wise enough to take our proper place is often very humiliating; yet it is always best to take a lowly seat, so that we may be invited to a higher one rather than be driven down. Modestly take your place, and be contented with it until you can do better. While I advise modesty, I also advise manliness. Nor do I mean by this that you are to be brazen or impudent. True worth will find its level.

I do not say that you must be contented in squalid poverty or ignorance. If this is your lot, be contented to work out of it, and do not make yourself and others miserable because you cannot leap out of it all at once. It takes time, patience, and hard work to overcome difficulties. It may be that you are a member of the church, and trying hard to live a Christian, but your surroundings are such that you find it difficult to do your duty. My advice is that you be contented to work and wait, modestly and humbly, yet bravely, doing that which you know to be your duty. The world, the church, God needs brave boys and men.

May God bless our boys.- From "Uncle Minor's Stories."

A KING'S JUSTICE TO A HORSE.

All the world has heard of Saint Louis the good King of France, who, in olden time, administered justice under a big oak tree near his palace, says a contributor to R. S. P. C. A. Journal Australia.

Charles, the king of the little Italian province of Calabria, also judged his people himself, but, instead of holding his judgment out of doors, he received his subjects in the hall of his castle.

Now, the king happened to hear that his men did not always show into his presence those who wished to be introduced. If poor, shabby people called they were often refused admission, and no one heard their plea.

Determined to prevent such practices, Charles ordered a bell to be hung in such a way that petitioners might pull it themselves and be sure of direct access to the king's presence. So it was done.

One day an old horse, abandoned by his master, happened to pass near the castle and to browse among the green herbs growing between the stones in the wall. By chance the horse pulled the bell rope hanging there, and the sound echoed through the castle.

"Open the door," ordered the king, "and bring in the supplicant." Soon after the guard returned laughing. "It is but a horse, your highness, Sir Tapece's horse," he said. "Let this knight come in," replied the king.

Tapece was introduced, and Charles inquired why his horse was wandering about. "Oh, my lord," answered the knight, "he was a splendid creature in his time. He followed me through twenty campaigns; but now he is no longer fit for work, and I find it as less to feed the poor beast to no purpose."

"Yet did not my father reward you for your services?" asked Charles. "So, indeed, he did," said Tapece. "And yet you will not keep this brave horse to which you may owe your success!" said the king. "Go home, and give the horse a comfortable box in your stables; I intend it to be well treated, or my displeasure awaits you."

King Charles slept heavily that night, grateful and glad to have had the opportunity to render justice even to a horse.—Our Dumb Animals.

LITTLE DRIFT.

In England there recently passed away to his heavenly reward Dr. MacGowan, for fifty years missionary to China. One of his favorite stories of his work was a certain day when he was traveling [illegible] sunshine he suddenly saw on the water a large Chinese jar, such as he [illegible] cooking. It was [illegible] upright.

When the men brought it on board they found to their amazement that it held a little Chinese baby girl! There were the days when the Chinese considered girl babies an extremely undesirable. The child doubtless had been put into the jug to die. Dr. MacGowan tenderly wrapped the mite into one of his flannel shirts and brought it safe to Amoy. There he ordered a Chinese boatman to carry the baby to the mission house, and he and Mrs. MacGowan adopted it for their own.

The news soon spread. The Chinese were amazed that the missionary had taken a cast-off baby girl into his home and cared for it as if it were one of his own daughters.

The child thrived and in a short time Mrs. MacGowan dressed it in a beautiful white frock that [illegible] and her husband took it to church. The whole city was interested; hundreds of persons strove to view the service. The missionary had given much thought to finding a suitable name for the little "piece of China," and at last hit upon the right one. They called her "Little Drift."

As a result of the missionary's kindness, a wealthy Chinese gentleman organized a group of rich merchants and raised a sum of money for a foundling home. When it was built, notices were posted all over the city inviting parents to send unwanted baby girls to the care of the home. Soon its inmates numbered two thousand!

But after a while parents began to value their baby girls and were loath to part with them. Today the foundling home is no more because it is not needed in that district. Thus did Little Drift start a great reform and reverse the great drift of an ancient and cruel custom.—Youth's Companion.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

Editorial.

AN IMPOSSIBILITY.

In spite of our desire to give everybody an opportunity to be heard on the matter of unification, it is a physical impossibility for us to find space prior to the meeting of the General Conference on July 2, for all the articles that have been submitted. The Adocate contains only sixteen pages; and while we have given the discussion of unification the right of way, material has accumulated faster than we could find place for it. All articles that comply with the usual rules of acceptability will be published in due time, except those, of course, that automatically go out of date with the meeting of the special session.

ANTI-RACING LEGISLATION NEEDED IN LOUISIANA.

It is strange, if true as reported, that a large number of the members of the State Legislature, now in session in Baton Rouge, should have signed a statement to the effect that they will not consider at this session anti-race track gambling legislation. Every member of the Legislature has sworn that he will uphold the Constitution of the State: and the Constitution of Louisiana declares that gambling is a vice and that measures shall be adopted to suppress it. We cannot understand how these members can square their reported action with their oaths of office, to say nothing of their consciences, in thus deliberately declaring that they will not even consider a measure that has as its end the suppression of the race track gamble.

Horse racing as conducted in this State is not a sport—it is a gambling proposition pure and simple; and it is productive of such moral and economic evils as should make every good citizen eager to outlaw it. It will be outlawed. The New Orleans Anti-Race Track Gambling Association is composed of a large number of representative citizens who have determined that this monstrous evil shall be suppressed, and they will win in their righteous fight. If the members of the present Legislature are determined not to act, their constituents will see to it that others are put in their places who will act. The Lottery had strong defenders—but it was outlawed; horse racing will go, too.

THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE EPWORTH LEAGUE ASSEMBLY.

It was the editor's privilege to spend a few hours last week at the Mississippi Conference Epworth League Assembly, in session at Brookhaven. It was a magnificient gathering of some of the finest young people in the State. The program was being carried out according to announcement, and a high degree of interest and enthusiasm prevailed. Ample provision for the entertainment of the Assembly was made by Whitworth College.

In connection with the election of officers for another year, it is of more than passing interest to note that Mr. W. D. Hawkins was re-elected president, this being the twentieth consecutive time he has been thus honored. So far as we know, this constitutes a record throughout the church. It is certain that a more efficient officer cannot be found.

The editor is grateful to those in charge of the Assembly for the many courtesies shown him, and to Dr. and Mrs. I. W. Cooper for the delightful hospitality of their home.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Brother T. A. Ledyard, of Shubuta, Miss., has been a regular subscriber to the Advocate for more than sixty years, and his father took it before him. Another member of the "Old Guard!"

Rev. R. T. Hollingsworth, of Kilmichael, Miss., paid the Advocate office an appreciated call on Saturday of last week. He was en route to Biloxi, Miss., to attend the Seashore Divinity School.

Rev. W. C. M. Baggett, the pastor, requests us to announce that Rev. Paul D. Hardin, presiding elder of the Meridian District, will dedicate our church at State Line, Miss., on June 22. All former pastors are invited to be present.

Mr. K. D. Turner, gospel singer and personal worker, requests us to say that he has open dates after August 17, during which he can assist any pastor who may desire his serviees. He is at present assisting in a meeting at Sumrall, Miss. Brother Turner's address is Philadelphia, Miss.

We learn from private correspondence with Bishop Sam R. Hay, in charge of the Louisiana Conference, that he is heartily in favor of the unification of American Methodism, and that he hopes that the plan now before the church will be adopted by the General Conference and by the Annual Conferences.

Bishop Sam. R. Hay, in charge of the Twelfth Episcopal District, will make his home at Shreveport, La. He is as yet unable to give his street address, but letters addressed to him at Shreveport will reach him. Louisiana is delighted to have this chief pastor become one of its citizens.

We acknowledge the honor of an invitation from Mr. and Mrs. Lee Stokes to attend the marriage of their daughter, Dorise Kelley, to Rev. E. V. Duplantis, of the Louisiana Conference, in the Methodist Church at Bunkie, La., on Wednesday morning, June 25, at nine o'clock. The Advocate extends all good wishes to the young couple in advance of the happy event.

The sad news has come of the death in Nashville, Tenn., on Saturday, June 8, of Mrs. J. L. Ferguson, wife of Rev. J. L. Ferguson, Assistant Secretary of Missions and Sunday School Extension. Brother Ferguson is a member of the Mississippi Conference, and his wife was the daughter of Dr. and Mrs. A. F. Watkins, of Yazoo City. Our deepest sympathy is extended to the bereaved husband and the grief-stricken parents.

This sad news came from Rev. J. H. Felts, presiding elder of the Greenville District, North Mississippi Conference, too late for our issue last week: "Mrs. J. D. Simpson, wife of our pastor at Shaw, died Sunday night about 11 o'clock. She was ill only a few minutes. Funeral services were conducted at Shaw Monday afternoon by the presiding elder and Revs. W. W. Mitchell, W. W. Hartsfield, and E. Nash Broyles. Local pastors of the Baptist and the Presbyterian churches were brethren indeed to Brother Simpson and family. A more extended notice will follow." The Advocate extends sincere sympathy to the sorrowing loved ones and friends.

CALLED SESSION OF THE GENERAL CONFERENCE LEGAL AND THE PLAN OF UNIFICATION WISE.

the Plan stands not only as a protest against them, but as a clear, strong call from the great united church as a whole to every neighborhood and to every State to get together, study the conditions, and do what is best for the salvation of men and the coming of His Kingdom.

Two Jurisdictions.

It is in this spirit and with this thought that the Plan provides for two Jurisdictions, one composing the present churches and territory of the Methodist Episcopal Church, and the other the present churches and territory of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, with the clearly-stated provision in the constitution that the General Conference can make no transfer of any member, churches, or Conferences, unless requested so to do, in which event it is given full power. No man, no church, no Conference can complain that the Plan is drastic or unbrotherly or an arbitrary invasion of the rights of the humblest member of either church.

Exceedingly Generous Plan.

Furthermore, the Plan is exceedingly generous and is in itself the best answer to Bishop Candler's pessimistic statements. The Methodist Episcopal Church (North) has about 4,750,000 members; the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has about 2,150,000 members. It has been rather puzzling to formulate a plan which would protect the minority in the Southern Church from the domination of the majority, to say nothing of disintegration and absorption. But the Northern Commission generously yielded any right to greater voting power in the General Conference on the score of numbers, and agreed that the General Conference should be composed of the members of the two Jurisdictional Conferences, and (mark it well!) that "every vote in the General Conference shall be by Jurisdictions and shall require the majority vote of each Jurisdiction to be effective;" that is to say that in every matter which comes before the General Conference of the united church, although it is a little more than one-half as large as the Northern Jurisdiction, the Southern Jurisdiction will have equal voting power. Will Bishop Candler tell us how the Northern Church could be more generous or show a more brotherly spirit or demonstrate more clearly its genuine confidence in us, than by giving us equal voting power with themselves in the General Conference? Surely, no man can d mand that the Southern Church, with one-half the membership be given more than equal voting strength!

Independent Jurisdictional Administration.

It is furthermore provided that each Jurisdiction shall administer its own affairs through its own Jurisdictional General Conference, except such matters as may be delegated to the General Conference, and in these matters, each Jurisdiction, as indicated above, has equal voice. The Plan leaves each Jurisdictional Conference the right to elect bishops, and while the General Conference is given the right to determine the number of bishops, the recommendations of each Jurisdictional Conference will doubtless be adopted. The plan for this provides that a bishop cannot administer in any Jurisdiction other than the one by which he was elected except with the consent of the majority of the bishops of the Jurisdiction involved.

No Negro Domination.

This very effectually disposes of the bugaboo of possible presidency of Negro bishops over white Conferences in a Southern Jurisdiction, unless and until a majority of the Southern bishops so elect. Nor is it possible for a Negro bishop to preside in the General Conference unless he shall be selected to preside by a majority vote of bishops of each Jurisdiction voting separately.

No Oppression of South Possible.

Bishop Candler expresses great apprehension that the super General Conference and the Judicial Council will exercise oppressive powers of domination over the Southern Jurisdiction, and declares that the Northern Jurisdiction can combine with a few radicals of the Southern Jurisdiction to override the wishes of the Southern Jurisdiction. But this is plainly impossible. There must be a clear majority of such radicals in the Southern Jurisdictional Conference before it can affect legislation, and if there is a majority, then there would be Southern domination over the South.

Judicial Council Not Supreme.

The Judicial Council is given no more veto power over the General Conference than is at present given the College of Bishops of our church. And the generous spirit of the Plan is shown in the fact that the Judicial Council will be composed of an equal number of members from each Jurisdiction, so that the Southern Jurisdiction is as fully protected in this body as in the General Conference. Nor is it true that this Judicial Council can in any way override the General Conference, or ignore the rights of the Annual Conferences. For the Plan expressly provides that the Judicial Council shal have the right, "subject to such rules and regulations as shall be determined by the General Conference, to review and to pass upon the constitutionallty of the acts of the General and Jurisdictional Conferences;" that is to say, the General Conference of which the Southern Jurisdictional Conference is a part will determine the rules governing the Judicial Council, and no rules can be adopted without the consent of the Southern Jurisdiction. And—note—it is specifically provided in the Plan that "until the General Conference (which is composed of both Jurisdictions) by legal process (that is, by majority vote of both Jurisdictions) shall otherwise ordain, the rules of government in the Discipline of the respective churches shall be of full force and effect and binding upon the Jurisdictions respectlvely."

It is, therefore, absolutely impossible for the Judicial Council to override the Southern Jurisdiction on any constitutional questions, until the Southern Jurisdiction has itself, by constitutional processes, abrogated or annulled its rules, and, furthermore, it is to be noted that as the Southern Jurisdiction will have equal representation on the Judicial Council it can thus prevent the adoption of any actions by the Judicial Council if it so desires.

Protection of What Minority?

No plan can be devised which will not only protect the minority—the Southern Jurisdiction—which the proposed Plan does, but which will protect a minority of the minority from a majority of that minority. In short, if a majority of the Southern Jurisdictional Conference decides to join with a majority of the Northern Jurisdiction, this plan will permit the two majorities in the two Jurisdictions to function and to carry on business. Surely any sensible plan should provide for progress and not for stagnation.

Bishop Candler declares that the Northern Church is in "politics," and states that their recent General Conference sent delegations or appeals to Congress on those subjects. Well, our church has done the same within the past month. The chairman of the Commission on Temperance and Social Service of our church appeared before the Committee on Judiciary to protest against legalization of 2.75 beer, just as did the delegations of the Northern Church. The Commission on Social Service of our church joined with the leaders of other churches and with the Northern General Conference in strong appeal for the World Court. The Board of Missions of our church adopted a resolution appealing to the President and Congress to ameliorate as far as possible the strained condition which had arisen in reference to Japanese exclusion. The Northern General Conference did likewise. It may true that the Northern General Conference has discussed and adopted some resolutions on social questions which our General Conference would not adopt. If so, it will not be necessary for the Southern Jurisdiction to adopt them should they come before the United General Conference. But on most of the great social and reform movements the two churches are already agreed, and the union of the two churches will give far greater influence to the action they may take as one body.

Orthodoxy.

There has been some objection to the union on the ground of supposed "Modernism" in the Northern Church. The writer is neither a Modernist nor a Fundamentalist, but he is an aggressively Conservative Methodist, if such a descriptive phraseology is permissible. He has been thrown with the Northern brethren at home and in foreign lands. He has discovered no greater difference of view on doctrine among them than among ourselves. The Episcopal Address at the recent Northern General Conference rang as true and clear on great fundamental doctrines as the addresses of our own bishops, and the vote in the General Conference on an issue presented showed a determination to protect the doctrinaal life of the church at its source—the Sunday schools.

Provincial or World Church.

I give full weight to the argument of Bishops Candler and Denny, and respect them as men who truly love our great church. But on this question, I cannot agree with them. I believe that the hour has arrived when our church must join forces with our sister Methodism in this country and throughout the world, and become one of the greatest forces in the world for carrying on His work; or she must agree to a distinctly circumscribed sphere of activity and influence, become in the United States a distinctly sectional church, and do a comparatively small work in the evangelization of the world. It is oftentimes more pleasant to live in the country, or village, or town, or city, or State where one was born and be satisfied to go no farther and to bring no great influence to bear to shape the activities of the great world in which one lives. But the Master calls to us to go out into the world to be the "light of the world," the "salt of the earth," and to "go into all the world." That is the call to Southern Methodism to-day. Will our church answer the call and join forces with those of like faith to do the Master's work?

A LETTER FROM DR. S. A. STEEL.

Dear Dr. Carley: Both Mrs. Steel and I commend your fairness in that you give both sides an equal opportunity to express their opinion about unification. Put us down as opposed to it:

1. Because it does not unite, but divides us more than ever. At the first sitting it split the College of Bishops wide open for the first time in their history.

2. Because the overwhelming vote for the Plan by the Northern General Conference was given on the express ground stated by Bishop McDowell that if this Plan can be adopted it means a merger in the end; and a merger means our absorption.

3. Because the very fact that we are said to be "protected" by the Plan shows that the union will not be the unity of the spirit in the bond of peace; but a union in which one side has to be protected from harm by the other. Such unity is utterly foreign to the Christian ideal.

4. Because the Plan is almost unworkable in its present form, and certain to be modified; and when modified, we will be at the mercy of the majority.

5. Because on account of fundamental differences between the Northern and Southern way of dealing with the race problem we can do more good working separately than together.

6. Because our people as a whole have not been consulted, and in the brief time allowed cannot be consulted about it. Ours is not a representative form of government. The quarterly conference in no sense represents the local church. It is a self-constituted body. It elects the delegates to the district conference; that elects the delegates to the Annual Conference; that elects delegates to the General Conference. So the General Conference does not represent the membership as a whole, but the small fraction of it that composes the quarterly conference. That means this: If we have 2,500,000 members, 100,000 is a liberal allowance for the quarterly conference membership which the General Conference represents, and 2,400,000 of our members are not consulted about a matter that involves their very existence. The General Conference should turn down this Plan, and, before any plan is adopted, appoint a day when the preachers shall bring the question to the attention of every congregation in Southern Methodism, and let the voice of the whole people be heard.

7. Because the existing status of the two churches is not altered by the Plan, and gives no relief from overlapping.

8. Because it is based on the fundamental fallacy that the unity for which Christ prayed means uniformity of organization. That unity is the "unity of the Spirit in the bond of peace," not that there shall be only one visible organization.

9. Because the enforced union by a majority vote of people who hold such discordant views on a number of subjects as the Northern and Southern Methodists do, will only produce endless internal friction and possible disruption.

10. Because the example of the absorption of the Cumberland Presbyterian Church warns us that once we let the snout of the camel in, he will take the tent, and put us out in the cold.

These are enough, but by no means all the valid objections to unification. I know we who oppose it, even our bishops, are set down by the advocates of it as illiberal reactionaries, and half a dozen other ugly things; but as Bishop Candler aptly says, better be in a bad light for a time than in a bad plight for good. Put the Knight of the Pelican Pines down as teetotally and everlastingly opposed to an enforced unification. I want to love the Northern folks, and was making good headway in that direction; but I can't do it when they crack the lash of a majority vote over me, and tell me I shall. Then the jig is up, and up go a pair of steel-shod heels that are not too superannuated to kick.

A NEW ENTERPRISE IN GALLOWAY MEMORIAL.

On the afternoon of June 1, a group of laymen at Jackson, Miss., met together to discuss a new project. During this meeting the Religious Education Loan Fund of Galloway Memorial Church was started. Ten men agreed to give $100 apiece to form a loan fund. Students in Religious Education at Millsaps College at work on the college certificate in Religious Education may make application for a loan from this fund. It is the intention to add contributions annually in the same amount to this fund. If prospective students of Millsaps College are planning to take courses leading to the certificate in Religious Education, they may make application for loans from this fund.

The laymen are confident that fifteen or twenty men from Galloway Memorial Church will come to have a part in this enterprise.

It is a fine thing for laymen in our churches throughout the two supporting Conferences to inquire into this. No more worthy undertaking has been enterprized by our Methodist laymen.

ADVANCE WORD.

The new administration of the Anti-Saloon League will continue the fight against the liquor traffic, using the well tried methods that have proved effective in the past. The program of the League will continue to be education, agitation, legislation, and law enforcement to the end that the beverage liquor traffic may be suppressed. While continuing its activities with unliminished energy in other fields, the biggest fight during the next few years will be for the enforcement of the law. The League will not act as a detective agency, but will use its influence to insure effective enforcement through the regular officials and agencies of the government. Public sentiment will be aroused in support of candidates and officials who can be relied upon to enforce prohibition. Especial attention will be given by the League to the formation of local organizations for enforcement. The future fight against the gigantic evil of alcoholism calls for a realignment of the dry forces and a reenlistment of the enemies of the liquor traffic. The Anti-Saloon League field of service has broadened to the width of the whole world. The national organization will give fullest possible co-operation to the World League Against Alcoholism, which is a union of anti-alcohol organizations now active in about fifty nations.—F. Scott McBride, New National Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League.

GOOD SAMARITAN.

America is a modern Samaritan, and the modern Jericho road runs, not for seventeen miles to the Dead Sea, but for a thousand miles across the Near East. The victims of hate and cruelty are everywhere by the side of the road. America has brought a new spirit and hope to the Near East. Its philanthropies carried on during the war, and since in Turkey, Greece, and other Countries, have given hope and courage to millions of people. Not only has America kept multitudes from actual starvation and undertaken the training of scores of thousands of homeless and helpless orphans, but the spirit of her workers has kept from despair countless multitudes. Amid the conflicting and sordid rivalries and selfish interests of other nations represented in the Near East, America alone has no commercial or political prizes to grasp. She gave her strength and genius to the relief of distress and the work of building for the future.—Dr. William E. Doughty, New York.

WILLIAM H. HOLLOMAN was born Feb. 18, 1846, at Urania, Catahoula Parish, La., and departed this life, Dec. 7, 1923, at his home, Harrisonburg, La. This period of time tells the story of a life little of which is possible to relate in one brief tribute. It was the writer's privilege to know him and be his pastor for only one year. Yet we shall not forget him. He possessed that uniqueness of character that impresses one. A saying of his was that he was born in the hills of Catahoula Parish, barefooted; and that as a boy it was his ideal to have a store in town and live in a painted house. This he realized, and for fifty years merchandised in Harrisonburg. He was for a long time a member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South; punctual in attendance and liberal in its support. His home was his preacher's home. It also abounded in hospitality to others. He said he could not be taught the most successful business principles—he could not say "no" to any one in need. In business as in social and religious life his motto was, "Let me live in a house by the side of the road, and be a friend to man." Though not demonstrative as to Christian experience, it may be truly said of him that since he so loved his fellow-men, his name stands at the head of the list of those who love the Lord. He was active in all movements for the betterment of community and State. He was a Mason, and, if we remember correctly, an honored Confederate Veteran. For a number of years and at his death he was parish treasurer. We know not the kind of monument that may be erected to mark his last resting place; but we know something of the one that lives in the hearts of his loved ones and friends. He was first married to Miss Elanor Kees, of whom three daughters survive, Mrs. G. W. Pearce, Mrs. H. H. Mobley, and Mrs. Kate Powell. His second marriage was to Miss Helen Howell, who, with one son, H. J. Holloman, and three daughters, Mrs. J. Q. Graves, Mrs. C. A. Barnett, and Mrs. Frank Reeves, survives him; also a sister, Mrs. F. M. Mills, and a brother, M. F. Holloman. The Catahoula News says this of him: "His departure from our midst leaves a vacancy that cannot be filled, for men are rare that can adhere to God's rule as he did."

"So long thy pow'r hath blessed me, sure it still will lead me on
O'er moor and fen, o'er crag and torrent, till the night is gone,
And with the morn those angel faces smile,
Which I have loved long since, and lost awhile."

RICHARD A. ROBERTSON was born, Jan. 28, 1850, and died May 13, 1921, aged 74 years, 3 months, and 15 days. He was married to Miss Sallie Perritt on the 12th of December, 1878. To this union were born six children, five of whom survive him, Sadie Robertson Bostain having died in 1920. Those who are left to mourn his departure are; Mrs. Sallie Robertson, John B. Robertson, Mrs. T. S. Scriber, H. W. Robertson, C. W. Robertson, and D. E. Robertson. Brother Robertson was a devoted husband and father. In the loss of this good man the Methodist church has suffered much, for in him there was all that goes to make up a good steward, and in this capacity he labored for forty years. During this time he was faithful, diligent, and fervent in spirit, serving the Lord with gladness. He loved the church, and his highest ambition was to see its work prosper. He truly was a preacher's friend. His last day's work in the town was for its better interest—he served as commissioner at the polls all day, the polls closing at 7 o'clock, and he passed to his reward at 8:10 o'clock. Yes, he fought a great fight, he kept the faith, he finished the course; there is a crown laid up for him. He was a public-spirited man—he was always found on the right side. In this he has given to the world a record that he is not ashamed of, and his children will do well to imitate him in their life. Yes, the senior member of the board of stewards of the Sibley charge is gone. All will miss him; the preacher in after years will feel the loss of this good man, the people of Sibley will miss his presence among them, but we can look beyond this cloud of sorrow, and, with an eye of faith, look for a happy meeting over on the other side. The blessings of our Heavenly Father be upon the mother and children who are left behind.

His toils are past, his work is done.
He fought the fight, the victory is won.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY THE MONROE DISTRICT CONFERENCE, LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Whereas, it is an accepted fact that from the age of six to eighteen—public school age—is the most plastic and impressible and unjudicious period of human life, and that the making of the man or woman is in this period, and that what they will be in their mature years will be very largely decided and determined by the instructions they receive, and the personal influence of their teachers in the public schools; and,

Whereas, a child of public school age is guileless and gullible and incompetent to judge between the false and the true; and does without questioning accept any and all statements in Literature, History, Science and Philosophy, etc., as truth and facts; and,

Whereas, there are embodied in our public school curriculum doctrines and theories that are antagonistic to the Christian's version of the truth, and that said theories do to a very great degree prejudice the child against the Holy Bible, and destroy his faith in God, and drop seeds of moral looseness which are a menace to the moral standards of a Christian nation, and turning upon the world a godless generation; and,

Whereas, the vast difference between the Christian theory of the creation and rise of man and the materialistic theory of the same is that the Christian begins with God, while the materialistic begins with dull, inanimate matter; and,

Whereas, comparisons are sometimes odious, but at most times instructive, we cite you a short crucial statement. The Christian: In the beginning God created the heavens and the earth; and that man was made in his own image and after his likeness; that man, male and female, were created full grown in mind and body and soul, and were possessed and did exercise the full powers of their faculties and senses.

The Materialistic, Darwinian, etc.: We quote Canon Barnes: "It is highly probable that from some fundamental Stuff in the Universe, the electrons arose. From them came matter; from matter, life emerged; from life came mind; from mind, spiritual consciousness was developing," etc. Now the only definite thing about this whole statement is its pure and unadulterated nonsense and tomfoolery; it is as vague as a blank and as unreasonable as a Centaur; therefore,

Be it resolved, by the Monroe District Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, now assembled in West Monroe, La., this 15th day of May, 1924, That we believe it to be highly unjust and all but criminal for any one man or set of men, directly or indirectly, to divert the original intent and purpose of moneys gathered by taxation from the citizens of this State and patrons of the public school, for the education in the mental, moral and physical equipment of its youth; that when they ask bread, give them bread, and not a stone; if they ask a fish, give them a fish, and not a serpent, as is done when they are taught variants, hypotheses, probabilities and guesses for facts and true knowledge.

Be it further resolved, That we indignantly resent the thrusting of this godless, degrading and deadly error upon our children, and that we do here and now register our solemn and emphatic protest against the teaching of this anti-Christian, atheistic and pagan science that dethrones God, denies Jesus Christ, and degrades man to the level of the beasts of the forests and reptiles of the sea.

Be it further resolved, That we do unalterably oppose and condemn this monstrous perversion of the truth that undermines the pupil's faith in God, his realization of truth and hope of immortality, and denies him his high and noble heritage of being made in the image of God and after his likeness; and hath changed his glory into corruptible matter to bird and fourfooted beasts of the forest and the creeping things of the earth.

Be it further resolved, That a copy of these resolutions be spread to record, a copy be sent Mr. T. H. Harris, Superintendent of Education, and a copy sent the New Orleans Christian Advocate for publication.

METHODIST UNIFICATION.

By Rev. W. F. Baggett.

As a pastor, I want to enter my protest against the adoption of the plan to be considered by our General Conference in July.

Not because I am against unification; I would be in favor of a plan that would unite our two great churches, giving each justice. The plan for our church to consider, which was adopted by the M. E. Church, does not promise us union, but claims only to be a step toward union. As for me, I cannot see that it means that much to us. As I see it, if our General Conference and our Annual Conferences adopt this plan, it will mean for us to give up our name and all that it has accomplished since 1844, and to admit that our fathers and ourselves have been wrong ever since that time.

Again, if the two churches adopt the plan, it will mean that we will have a big unorganized church without a constitution, and without a name, and without power to name itself, or to write a constitution and adopt it. When the plan is adopted by the two churches, then we will have to organize a General Conference, and it will be helpless it cannot do anything without the approval of the Jurisdictional Conferences, and that will mean that the Northern Jurisdiction will write the new constitution, and give us our new name, and almost all other things that will be new, and it will mean that great numbers of our Methodists in the South will leave the Methodist church and go to other churches. We may have preachers and people who are willing to give up our Southern Methodist Church in order to get into a big church, but I am not.

Besides, this is not our last chance to unite with the M. E. Church, nor is it our best chance. We will have a better chance in the future, and if we don't and this is our last chance, it is to be hoped that our church will reject it and go on with the good work it has done for many years in the past. My prayer is that we will not be caught by this plan.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

On the 3rd of June a party of Leaguers from the Felicity Street Methodist Church entertained the men at the Warrington House. This is our first visit as a Union and it was very gratifying to see how interested every one seemed and how the men enjoyed the program.

The prineipal part of the program consisted of the devotional very ably led by the Second Department Superintendent of the Felicity League, Miss Clara Kirtland. Miss Eleanor Wright favored us with a delightful solo. As Miss Wright is not a member of the League, I would like to express my thanks for her splendid co-operation. After the devotional service, songs and games were in order.

Mr. Warrington is doing a splendid work among the men and boys of this city and deserves every bit of co-operation he can possibly get. Leaguers, remember we entertain at the Home the first Tuesday of each month, and Felicity has made a splendid start, and set a standard for the rest of us to equal.

LAURA EDWARDS.
Second Dept. Supt. New Orleans City Union.

A MERGER—NOT UNIFICATION.

Dear Brother Carley: I have refrained from writing my convictions on the subject of unification till now, for several reasons the two chief of which are: First, I wished to determine the sentiment of my people; second, I have had my ideas abont the proposed plan of unification, but feared my interpretations were poor, and I did not wish to publish them till I had time to study the plan very deliberately, in the light of the interpretations of others who, I believe, are in position to analyze and define the plan better than I.

Since the majority of our bishops have called a special session of our General Conference to meet in Chattanooga, Tennessee, July 2, 1924, I have discussed the subject of unification with a goodly number of my leading members, and I find at least nine-tenths of those with whom I have discussed the subject are definitely opposed to it, and the other tenth are indifferent. I have not found one who really advocates unification. Some are so very much opposed to it that they say, if our church adopts the plan, they will join another church. I am persuaded that if our church declares in favor of unification at this time, thousands of members will be lost to the Methodist Church. When we consider the subject from that viewpoint, I think the paramount question that confronts us is: Will Episcopal Methodism fulfill her mission better by operating as two distinct bodies as she has for eighty years, retaining all her forces, and adding to them rapidly as we may expect she will, judging from her splendid past history, or by forming a union that will cause her to suffer heavy loss numerically, and possibly in prestige because of the ponderous opposition that exists against the plan, among our laity especially?

After studying the plan of unification which is presented for our consideration and which has been adopted by the Northern Church, I have decided it means a merger, instead of unification. The plan, as I understand it, empowers the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, each to maintain its forces, and lengthen its borders, ad libitum. There is nothing by which we can judge the future more safely than the past. After beholding facts as they now exist, we can but conclude that our Northern brethren are not in sympathy or harmony with our branch of Methodism, because when they move into Southern Methodist territory very few of them join the Southern Methodist Church, but they build their own churches and assume a spirit of aloofness from us.

Doubtless few of us fail to recall that one of the results of the labors of the Cape May Commission was: The supplanting of the Hymn and Tune Book, which had been held sacred by our fathers and mothers, second only to the Bible, with a common hymnal which is not a practical book for the masses, and in that book we yielded first place to the "key note" hymn of our Northern brethern, and we took second place. In that same book, the music and words which had been inseparably joined for years, and held dear by us Southern people, were divorced.

Basing our opinion on these facts of history, what may we reasonably expect to result from our adoption of the plan of unification as it is presented to us? Only a merger, I think which will in a few years result in the complete absorption of the so-called Jurisdiction No. 2, the dominance of the ideas and practices of the Northern Church, and the loss of many members to Methodism.

I wish to thank you personally for the prominence you gave Bishop Ainsworth's very excellent article in the issue of May 5 of the New Orleans Christian Advocate. I hope that article will be published in our General organ, and in all the Conference organs throughout our great church, and read by all delegates to the special session of the General Conference, and that it will make such a powerful impression on them that the adoption of the proposed plan of unification will be impossible.

T. J. O'NEIL.

VIEWS ON UNIFICATION.

By James H. Walker.

I have been a member of Southern Methodism for forty-one years, and have noticed the actions of our Northern brethren who endeavored to make inroads into our fields of labor by unfounded propositions of years gone by, which proved itself by the non-developments of same. Now we are gaining ground, advancing towards the high mark of prosperity and peace; so let it be. Let us love our neighbor, wish him Godspeed, but let us remain on our own premises and press forward to higher heights and deeper depths of spiritual operations which will culminate in the glory world.

GIVING HER BEST.

In the days of the disruption of the Scottish Church those who came out into the New Church had the greatest difficulty in erecting a house of worship, the lairds being all Auld Kirk folk. After a struggle they got a little bit of land, but could not get quarry stones with which to build. So they just made it up with any rubble at hand until they came to the lintel stone for the door, at which point they stuck fast and could go no farther. One day the minister upon calling at a poor woman's cottage was agreeably surprised on being offered her hearthstone, which was just the size and shape wanted. She said she would be proud to give her hearthstone to the Lord Jesus Christ. It was joyfully accepted and long after, when a fine new church was erected, this same hearthstone was given the premier place, and still her story is told: "She hath done what she could."—The Standard.

THIS WOMAN RELIEVED FROM SUFFERING

By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. A Remarkable Story

Dover, Del.—"I wish every woman would take your wonderful medicine as it has done so much good to me. I had cramps and faint spells and very bad pains. One day I was over to my neighbor's house and she told me I ought to take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. So I went to the store on my way home and got a bottle, and took the first dose before supper. I have been taking it ever since, and you can hardly believe how different I feel. I had just wanted to lie in bed all the time, and when I started to brush up I would give out in about ten minutes. So you know how badly I felt. I used to go to bed at eight and get up at seven, still tired. Now I can work all day and stay up until eleven, and feel all right all the time. My housework is all I do in summer, but in winter I work in a factory I have told a good many of my friends, and I have had three come to me and tell me they wouldn't do without the Vegetable Compound."
—Mrs. SAMUEL MURPHY, 219 Cecil St., Dover, Delaware.

Will blind confidence lead you to physical disaster at age 31?

This is the experience of the average American, United States Life Tables, 1920, indicate

For the average person, health—physical freedom and full vigor—extends only from age 18 to 31. Then the slump. After 40, earnings fall off rapidly. What do these startling facts (taken from the United States Life Tables, 1920) mean for you?

It is time to check up. It is time to take stock of the present, and face the future with open eyes. Blind faith in the power of the human body to absorb punishment has failed miserably. Unwise eating, stimulated nerves, sleeplessness; disregard of the simplest laws of health; the lashing of the overwrought body to new exertions by the use of drugs—physical decay beginning at age 31! This is the tragic chronicle.

Nature provides a danger signal—fatigue—to warn when the body needs rest. Certain drugs have the power to deaden the fatigue signal. One of the most common of these drugs is caffein—a drug classified as a poison. The average cup of coffee contains from 1½ to 3 grains of caffein—a dose equal to that often administered by physicians in cases of heart failure.

Caffein, by deadening the danger signal of fatigue, appears to give new strength. Actually, this strength is robbed from the body's own reserve, stored up for life's emergencies.

Coffee contains no nourishment. Its only virtues as a beverage, are its warmth and flavor. A good, hot, drugless drink is a benefit with every meal.

Millions enjoy such a drink in Postum. A drink made of whole wheat and bran, skillfully roasted, with a little sweetening—nothing more. A drink with the rich, mellow, full-bodied flavor of this wholesome grain. Every member of the family can drink it every meal of the day, enjoy its deliciousness, crave it, knowing there isn't a sleepless hour, a headache or a taut nerve in it.

For the sake of your years following age 31, we want you to try Postum for thirty days. You can't expect to overcome the effects of a habit of years in two or three days, or even a week. To make this a sporting proposition, we will give you a week's supply of Postum free. Enough for a cup with every meal for a week. But we want you to carry on for the full thirty days.

Carrie Blanchard, who has personally served Postum to over 500,000 people, will send you her own directions for preparing it. Indicate whether you want Instant Postum, the easiest drink in the world to prepare, or Postum Cereal, the kind you boil, for your week's free supply. NOTES FROM NORTH MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Rev. R. H. H. Gladney, Sardis, Miss.

The following courses will be offered in the Standard Training School to be held at Columbus, June 22-27:

Organization and Administration of the Sunday School, Rev. Mellville Johnson, instructor.

Principles of Teaching, Dr. A. W. Milden, instructor.

Life and Letters of Paul, Rev. W. W. Woollard, instructor.

Training Beginners in Worship, Mrs. W. W. Adams, instructor.

Junior Lesson Materials, Miss Bruce McDonald, instructor.

Write Rev. E. S. Lewis, Columbus, Miss., that you expect to attend this school.

SOME LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

Twenty-one Sunday schools have sent in their Sunday School Day offering for 1924, the Ruston District leading the other districts in the amount sent in. The superintendent at Winnfield writes concerning Sunday School Day: "This makes my twelfth year as superintendent; have never failed to celebrate this requirement with pleasure."

I had the pleasure of spending Sunday, June 8, in Ferriday, La. The walls of the new church there are up, and it will not be many weeks before this people will be in their new brick church. Provision has been made for the modern Sunday school. One outstanding feature concerning this new church is that they have money in the bank to pay the contractor when the work is finished. This is "something new under the sun" for Methodists. The wide-awake and much beloved pastor, Rev. Porter Caraway, deserves great credit for this new church building.

Sunday afternoon, June 8, we had the opportunity of visiting Clayton, La., and preaching to that loyal and faithful group of Methodist people. The superintendent of the Sunday school there is Mr. C. M. Ritchie.

Among the Sunday schools which have recently ordered Wall Charts of the Program of Work are Jackson, Ethel, West Monroe, Natchitoches, and Ida.

We are glad to report that so many of the pastors and superintendents are enrolling their Bible classes as Wesley classes with the central office. The Program of Work requires "all classes above twelve years old organize and enroll as Wesley classes."

All of our seven District Sunday School Conferences have been held, and officers have been elected for the incoming year. There were very few changes made in the official district roll of officers. Some of the districts will have sub-district officers.

Mr. W. S. Holmes, chairman of our Conference Board, presided at the Sunday school session of the Baton Rouge District Conference at Ponchatoula, La. Much interest was shown in this conference by the delegates present, especially in teacher-training work.

Miss Ella Hooper, member of our Conference Board, is taking a six-weeks' course at Emory University this summer.

The official date for Children's Week is Oct. 12-19. Materials, leaflets, psters, etc., are in preparation, and will be sent in due time to all schools which will promise to observe this week. As many as ten schools in some of the districts observed this week last year. Your Elementary District Superintendent will promote this campaign this fall.

Prof. Ward Anderson, of Lake Charles, La., the principal of the Lake Charles High School, acted as the Educational Director of the recent Standard Training School held there. The following ministers took credit in this training school: Rev. J. B. Williams, presiding elder; Rev. A. W. Waddill, pastor at Lake Charles; Rev. T. D. Lipscomb, pastor at Sulphur; Rev. L. E. Crooks, pastor at Indian Bayou; Rev. R. S. Walton, pastor at Rayne, and Rev. Harold Henry, local preacher of De Ridder. This large list of pastors taking this course speaks well of the interest of our leaders in our great Methodist program of Sunday school work.

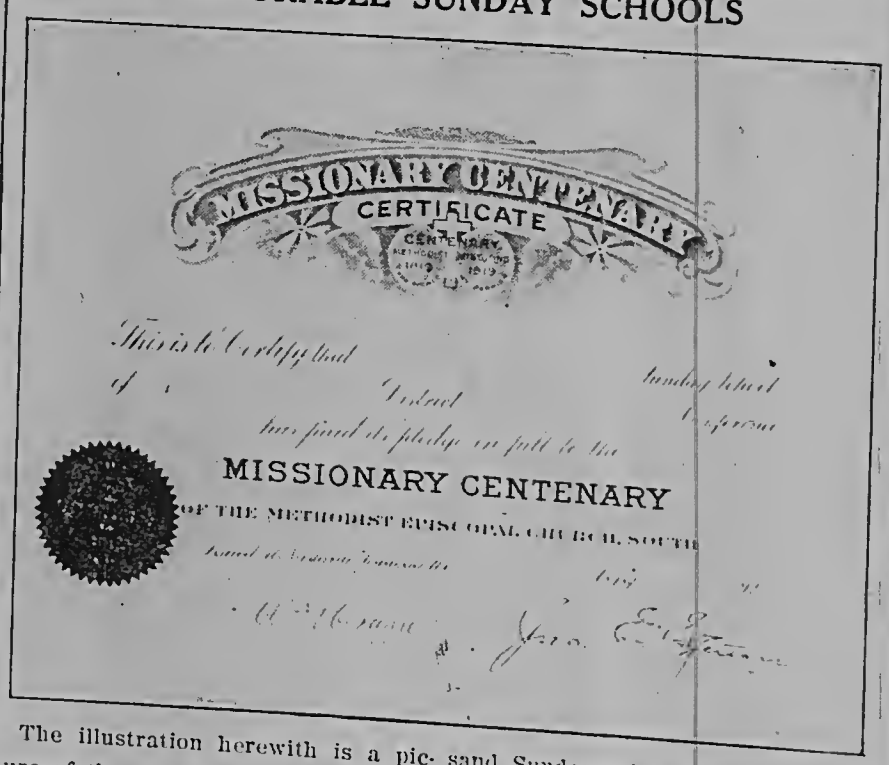
HONORABLE SUNDAY SCHOOLS



The illustration herewith is a picture of the certificate of honor issued by the Centenary Commission to all the Sunday schools who complete their payments on the Centenary pledge. One thousand Sunday schools have already received this certificate of merit. The total paid by these Sunday schools to the Centenary cause is about $425,000.

The Centenary Financial Campaign occurred in May, 1919, and since the Sunday school pledges were made by the month and not by the year it will be seen that these thousand Sunday schools have completed their payments "right on the dot."

Other Sunday schools are completing their payments regularly, so that the number on the honor roll is constantly increasing. The certificates are issued by the Centenary Commission as soon as the payments are completed. One of these beautifully lithographed certificates should be in every Southern Methodist Sunday school. If your payments have not been completed, plans should be projected at once to complete the Centenary task and thus be among the honorable Sunday schools of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

FROM AVERA, MISS.

Mr. Editor: I beg leave to report our meeting at Avera, in which I was ably assisted by Rev. Earl B. Moll and his singer, Prof. Mangham. These brethren did fine work. The preaching was strong and fearless, accompanied by the Holy Ghost. The singing was fine and impressive. There were 16 accessions and quite a number of reclamations. The people gave them a nice purse. And the preacher was remembered by a nice pounding, for which we are very grateful.

We are going forward in our work; hope to have level columns at Conference.

We have an appreciative people. They are in sympathy with the work of the church.

P. H. HOWSE, P. C.

FROM REV. W. D. BASS.

Dear Brother Carley: I am in a fine union meeting among the good people of Mobile, Ala. I stop long enough to say a word on the unification question. I love all men everywhere, and am deeply concerned for the salvation of the world. But it will not be best for the Southern and Northern Methodist Churches to attempt to unite on the present plan. The same things that will keep them apart at this time will be in the way a hundred years from now.

No part of the world has done as much, and done it more willingly and properly, for the education, uplift, and salvation of the colored race, as the white people of the South. We have been their true friends, are yet, and shall continue so. But we shall never depart from our dignified, intelligent and God-honored method of showing our genuine friendship. If such a thing should occur as the two churches uniting by a small majority vote in our called General Conference, leaving out the actions of Annual Conferences, there will be a new Methodist church organized before the delegates reach their homes. Negro bishops presiding over white people in the North is not the only objection. There are many other serious difficulties. Who wants membership in a Methodist church which is not opposed to the modern day immoral dance? The bulk of our membership in Southern States will never accept the present plan, notwithstanding they paid for our property. I have always loved our bishops, and do yet. I don't think our church ever had a greater leader than Bishop Candler. I regard it a sad day in our history as a church to antagonize the godly judgment and safe leadership of Bishop Candler and all the other good bishops of like mind. The unification agitation has already hurt the Southern Methodist church.

I believe in the unification only that can be accomplished through Jesus Christ, when we shall so become one in him that the hindering difficulties shall be removed in a true Christian spirit, and all come together with one accord as on the day of Pentecost. This is the only course God will endorse.

JUNALUSKA IS CALLING YOU.

The dates of the Epworth League Assembly this year are Aug. 14-26. The program promises to be the best we have ever had. Read over these features and say, "I'm going!"

1. Peter W. Dykema's course in "Church and Social Music." This promises to be one of the best courses ever given at Junaluska. Prof. Dykema is the rare combination of the one who knows and appreciates good music, and who, at the same time, knows how to make it popular. He'll give Junaluka some thrills with his "stunts" with his class.

2. It is very probable that Edna Geister will be with us. She writes that she is going to make every effort to do so. Her leadership course will be very much worth while.

3. Miss Emily Walker, of the Chicago Recreation Training School, will teach a course in dramatics. This will be a very practical course, covering detailed information about suitable plays, costuming, stage setting, lighting, coaching etc. In connection with this course there will be an expensive exhibit. This will include two miniature stages, showing what can be done in the ordinary church and what can be done with the regular stage equipment. There will be costumes in full for six plays, lighting suggestions, etc., and an attendant in charge who can explain everything. Miss Willye Evans will have charge of this exhibit.

4. There will be advanced courses in Epworth League methods, including a course in Conference Union and District Activities that all Conference officers should attend.

5. There will be fun features galore camp fires, stunt nights, dramatic evenings, swimming, boating, etc. Wait till you see Professor Dykema in action with his Toy Orchestra. Who knows, maybe you'll play in it!

6. Arthur J. Moore, of San Antonio, W. D. Weatherford, of Nashville, and C. G. Chappell, of Memphis, will deliver the platform addresses. W. B. Garrett will conduct the Vesper Services.

7. The teachers of various courses include Dr. D. D. Wallace, Dr. W. F. Quillian, Dr. A. K. McLarty, R. B. Eleazer, Ina C. Brown, Lillian Earnest, Mary Sue Tynes, William Graham Echols, W. I. Munday and E. O. Harbin.

Really, if you're a League leader, you can't afford to miss Junaluska this summer.

UNIFICATION.

Dear Brother Carley: Your editorial in this week's issue of the Advocate is the most sensible as well as most logical article I have read yet on the subject. As the matter stands with the present proposed plan of unification, I am in hearty accord with it. I am thoroughly convinced that it is the will of our Lord that we should unite; I believe that the Holy Spirit is back of the whole movement. I know the devil hasn't a thing in the world to do with it, but, on the contrary, he is doing everything in his Satanic power to keep us apart and at strife with each other. With all due respect for those who oppose it and have written against it, I must say that after a careful perusal of their arguments and sayings, I find in each and every one a little element, to say the least of it, of selfishness and prejudice.

The Negro question, so far as the South is concerned, is forever settled. I am not afraid of Negro social equality or anything else from the Negro; he knows, and we of the Anglo-Saxon race ought to know, that we are a thousand years ahead of them in civilization and Christian culture, and they can never catch up with us, provided we keep pressing forward.

I am not afraid of being swallowed up by the North—they tried that in the '60s and failed, and I am convinced they are not going to try it any more.

World conditions demand that we reunite at once, and get organized to take this world for Christ. I am praying that God's Spirit may rule and reign in the coming General Conference.

SHOULD BE MUTUALLY INFLUENTIAL.

Separation of church and State does not at all mean that these shall not be mutually influential one on the other. The church should be a morally commanding force in a freely influenced government. The civil power should execute laws based on moral sanctions. Only as organizations are the two great institutions of society to be disunited.—Western Christian Advocate.

THE HINDERED CHRIST.

The Lord Christ wanted a tongue one day
To speak a message of cheer
To a heart that was weary and worn and sad,
And weighed down with a mighty fear.
He asked me for mine, but 'twas busy quite
With my own affairs from morn till night.

The Lord Christ wanted a hand one day
To do a loving deed;
He wanted two feet, on an errand for Him
To run with gladsome speed.
But I had need of my own that day;
To his gentle beseeching, I answered, "Nay."

So all that day I used my tongue,
My hands, and my feet as I chose;
I said hasty, bitter words
That hurt one heart, God knows.
I busied my hands with wortbless play,
And my willful feet went a crooked way.

And the dear Lord Christ—was his work undone
For lack of a willing heart?
Only through men does he speak to men—
Dumb must he be apart.
I do not know, but I wish to-day
I had let the Lord Christ have his way.

MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Mission Study Circle Conducts Service at Magnolia, Miss.

There being no services in any of the churches Sunday evening, May 25, Mrs. George Hubbard, leader of the Mission Study Circle, arranged a program from the book, "Save America." A member of the board of stewards, Mrs. J. E. Norwood, told of conditions before the Federal amendment went into effect, and introduced the speaker of the evening, District Attorney F. D. Hewitt. Mr. Hewitt made a splendid address on law enforcement. The young people were represented on the program by William Sanders and Miss Lena Goza. Appropriate songs were rendered by the combined choirs of the several churches.

Society Enjoys Program Concerning Council.

Items of interest concerning the recent meeting of the Missionary Council of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, were heard at the regular meeting of the Woman's Society of the Central Methodist Church Monday afternoon, given by Mmes. L. B. Duane, J. W. Alexander, and Miss Ella Ormond. One of the features of the Council was a consecration service of deaconesses, and home and foreign missionaries. It was to these women who have given their lives in service for the Master that Mrs. H. L. McClesky, of Hattiesburg, president of the Mississippi W. M. S., wrote words to the tune of "A Perfect Day." Mrs. N. I. Washburn sang this song at the meeting Monday and was accompanied by Mrs. W. C. Journey.

During the business session which followed a letter was read from the orphanage at Jackson, after which plans were made to send a box to one of the little girls there. Plans were completed for the all-day meeting to be held at Wesley House Thursday, Tuesday, June 3, was named as the day for the all-day meeting of the Society to be held at the church, at which time "Save America" will be studied.

The president, Mrs. Stanley Wilson, made an appeal for volunteer leaders for the Central Lights Missionary Society. Miss Bob Tillman and Mrs. Wamble offered to take up this work. The Central Circle with the members present led in attendance. The meeting closed with prayer led by Mrs. D. E. Phillips.

Society Enjoys Program on "Stewardship."

A program on "Stewardship" was given by the Bethany and Bethel Circles at the meeting of the Woman's Society of Central Metbodist Church Monday afternoon, with Miss Madge Stuart as general chairman. Mrs. J. R. Whitaker led the devotionals, stressing the stewardship of motherhood. This was followed by a prayer offered by Mrs. S. A. Crawford. Mrs. Robert Brown talked on "The Analysis of Christian Stewardship."

At the conclusion of the program a season of prayer was held in the interest of the revival that is being conducted at the church. This was opened by Mrs. S. E. Wilson, and closed by Mrs. H. Thornton.

Mrs. Stanley Wilson presided over the business session which was featured by reports of Circles and officers. The meeting was attended by fifty-eight women, with the Bethany Circle leading with ten in attendance. Mrs. Mary B. Burroughs offered the closing prayer.

A Correction.

By an unforunate error the figures of the Auxiliary at Mooringsport are given as those of the Auxiliary at Noel Memorial, Shreveport. The correct figures for Noel Memorial are: Dues, $390; pledge, $300; Scarritt loan fund, $25; specials, $300; Week of Prayer, $17. Total, $1,032. Local work, $1,925.39. Grand total, $2,957.39.

This correction is made at the request of Mrs. C. C. Carver, treasurer of the Louisiana Conference Woman's Missionary Society.

MacDonell Wesley Community House, Houma, La.

The MacDonell Wesley House is, first of all, a home. The members consist of twelve children, three workers and the guests. The guests have ranged all the way from Council representatives to a tiny French girl who often spends the night, or an old colored woman needing encouragement and help. It is a training center. This embraces much of the work given the young people in the home througbout the year, the special periods of training covering a period of three weeks, and having a total attendance or 75; special classes are held in various communities and less direct methods under the classification of recreation. * * * It is a social service center, receiving gifts from all over the State and from distant States and getting them out to persons and places of need. * * * Evangelistic and religious work is carried on by co-operation with the pastors and evangelists. A gospel tent is used to great advantage in the summer. Through Sunday schools and Missionary Societies work is carried on in six different communities.

OUR THREE FORWARD MOVEMENTS.

The General Conference of 1922 created a special Committee on Reference, Counsel and Decision for the purpose of barmonizing the three great forward movements in our church so as to prevent complications, overlapping and embarrassment.

This committee, in a recent meeting at Nashville, discussed the plans of the various movements for collecting pledges, and allotted to each enterprise a certain period of time during which it should have the right of way in the church for a collection campaign.

In accordance with this decision, the Christian Education Movement will have the right of way from Oct. 15, 1924, to Jan. 15, 1925. The Centenary Commission will carry on its campaign for the collection of pledges from Jan. 15 to March 15, 1925. The Board of Finance will carry on its campaign for the Superannuate Endowment fund from March 15 to May 1, 1925.

During these dates it is expected that the full power of the church will be delivered to collecting the pledges made on the respective movements, and all movements will refrain from using the public agencies of the church during the period allotted to another. It was the decision of the committee, however, that each enterprise might continue its work of publicity through the church papers at all times.

THERE, NOW!

REPORT OF REV. CHAS. ASSAF, EVANGELIST, FOR MAY.

May 4-5.—I preached three times in Edwards, Miss. Several asked for prayer, and 19 reconsecrated themselves to the Lord.

May 10-12.—I spent this time on the Sharon charge. Sunday morning 5 people joined the church, and 19 came to the altar and reconsecrated themselves to the Lord. Sunday afternoon we went to the colored Methodist church and 4 joined the church. They asked us to come back Wednesday night. We went back and had a good service. Three more joined the church and several consecrated themselves to God.

May 16-19.—This time was given to Clarksdale, Miss., in the North Mississippi Conference. In the afternoon we had a children's service. Many of the parents came with the children. 25 or 30 children came to the altar for prayer. At the night service 2 Syrians joined the church. We had a good time.

May 26-30.—This time was spent in Jackson, Miss. While visiting in a hospital, I met a man, and after we talked he accepted the Lord and joined the church. I visited in a home and after talking with the mother and her five children, they all joined the church.

I held eight services this month. 21 joined the church—7 Negroes, 2 Syrians, the rest Americans.

I will thank you for your prayers and faith for me and my work.

Yours in Him.

CHAS. ASSAF, Evangelist.

OPPOSED TO UNIFICATNON.

I have for some time looked for an opportunity to register my protest against the adoption of the proposed plan of unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, now pending, for several reasons:

1. If I rightfully understand this plan, it brings the Negro and the white man on an equality in all ways, in society, and legal affairs of the church, and authority. If this be true, how could I be for the plan? How could you?

2. This will (if not soon) eventually cause a race mixup and no end of trouble, at the cost, perhaps, of blood.

I have seen no one writing or saying that we have not made progress since being two forces of Methodists; don't if we have come and are doing the Kane's best, and all is going well, why bring such a thing before us at this hour?

3. If this plan is adopted, there will be at least 30% of the membership of the Southern Methodist Church that will not join us and be ever ready to take the reins of the body, and it will become mixed with a few organizations in the South. Then, if we had this, could we feel that we are doing God's Kingdom right in promoting this plan?

I have been a member of the Southern Methodist Church since God, for Christ's sake, pardoned my sins and "filled me," but I could never feel right under the supervision of the present plan, and I take this opportunity to say so.

I love the Southern Methodist Church, but will to endorse a plan that would do away with even its name. It has some principles.

Lastly, I am opposed to "any plan" that would join these two bodies of Methodism together without giving the whole church a voice in this matter.

It is a serious matter for us to send out one dollar-a-year member of the entire church to get some money to promote the Kingdom; that is good, and I stand for it, but let us also give every member a chance to say he wants or does not want a plan like this or any plan that involves so great an interest.

I feel that the Southern Methodists (if this plan is adopted) will be as "sheep having no shepherd."

REV. R. E. WOOLFIN.

Sardis, Miss.

IN FAVOR OF UNIFICATION.

Dear Dr. Cartledge: I have been very much interested in the articles on Unification which are appearing in our papers. To my way of thinking, the best article that has yet appeared is the one written by Brother J. R. Pepper and published in your edition of the 12th inst. He is clear, concise, and convincing.

While I differ with the opinion of some of my dear brethren who are opposed to unification, I must say that I am glad to see that much of their objection rests on removable questions which may or may not, of course, if the plan of the M. E. Church, South, be trusted, that we have nothing to do with [illegible] will be [illegible] their preachers, [illegible] to conference [illegible] we ever [illegible] them just as [illegible] and ready to do [illegible] that is their right. [illegible] as I have [illegible] and I know each of their brethren would treat each other more [illegible]

I think unfortunate [illegible] have [illegible] and [illegible] some will [illegible] to further [illegible] to defeat unification. One [illegible] to the Negro has not been to our credit. In the Providence of God he was laid at our door, Lazarus at our gate, and one of the most difficult things that we shall have to [illegible] at the judgment will be our neglect, not to say treatment, of him.

I have tested the feeling of our people in regard to the matter of the election of members of the quarterly conference, and I am convinced that our people are satisfied with our law as it now stands. An election was called and widely advertised. Less than one in ten of the membership turned out, and those who did express desire to change our present method of selection.

What is the real question for us to settle? Is it not, What is the Christian thing for me to do in the premises? The very genius of Christianity is to draw God's people nearer together. Every Sunday we say, "I believe in the holy catholic church." Christ's last prayer was that "They may be one, as we are one." "The works of the flesh are * * factions, divisions." (Gal. v. 20?) In the nature of things divisions will come just as do other "works of the flesh," but they are of evil. I think that we shall all agree that were we united in one great church, it would be our duty to do all in our power to prevent a division; is it not just as true that we should do all in our power to secure unification where division exists? Instead of applying to prejudices magnifying our differences, should we not magnify the things on which we agree, and try to keep down all prejudice?

Fraternally yours,

JOHN A. RANDOLPH.

Sardis, Miss.

AGAINST UNIFICATION.

By R. W. Carruthers.

The plan now under consideration for uniting the two main branches of Methodism leaves the name, among other things, to be decided later. It might be "The Up-To-Date Methodist Church," or "The No-Matter-Much-What-You-Believe Church." There are cases in which a name means much, and some at least who are interested would like to know in advance what they are being carried into.

In the event of unification, the votes of all conferences, except judicial, would, of course, be in the ratio of about two in the Northern Jurisdiction to one in the Southern, which would be right and proper.

Some are greatly impressed with the fact that provides that the judicial body shall be composed of an equal number from each jurisdiction. Now, in adjudicating a sectional or jurisdictional matter, an equal number of votes on either side would never decide anything. There must be a deciding vote. To those who think that this vote would ever be cast by the minority in the South, I have nothing to say.

Bishop Monzon, who seems to be the most enthusiastic for unification, is quoted as saying that this has been the one dominating question before the church for many years. There are some who think, on the contrary, that the conservation of the faith and the spiritual upbuilding of the church are of more importance.

Lord, give us leaders who can see something bigger and more vital to the interests of our church than rushing into the arms of the Northern church. We love them and want to continue to love them. Therefore, let us abide by their decision of eighty years ago and remain separate. St. Paul believed in and lived the spirit of brotherly love and unity, but at the same time thought that he and Barnabas could work better apart.

The Church, South, is now considering the question of uniting with a body which not only has not kept and is not keeping faith with us, but which is far in advance of us in adopting modern rationalistic ideas.

May the church through its entire membership pray earnestly for divine guidance before taking the final step!

Hazelhurst, Miss.

This round of quarterly conferences is to be more than the regular conference and preaching service. It will be a series of iustitutes, especially on the circuits, an all-day program of great interest. There will be a team of workers and speakers, and it is hoped that great crowds of people will come to all these meetings. Rev. W. M. Campbell, the district evangelist, will be in the party from May 28 to June 6, and perhaps at other times also. Rev. R. H. B. Gladney will be in the party from July 10 to 20.

Let the pastors take advantage of this opportunity by getting all the officials and as many of the membership as possible to these meetings that the work may receive the stimulus and inspiration that they are sure to bring to the people.

It will be noticed that I am to hold three group conferences on my third round, viz., Byhalia and Olive Branch, at Miller, June 6, at 10 a.m.; Cockrum and Pleasant Hill, at Lewisburg, June 20, at 10 a.m.; Courtland and Shuford, at Chappel Hill, June 27, at 10 a.m. The preachers and officials of these charges will please note and act accordingly.

I also call attention to the fact that I am calling the quarterly conferences on the circuit to meet at 10 a.m. I am doing this because of a special program I shall have for the conferences on my third round. I shall have with me a layman (or other visitor) who will make an address on the value of the church to the community and to the world. I will secure the speaker for this occasion. I desire that the preacher, either before or after the time of the meeting of his quarterly conference, have all-day services in each of his other churches, at which service he shall have some one speak on the value of the church to the community and to the world. I want the preacher to preach a sermon on that same day on "Life Stewardship." Brethren, let's put the same enthusiasm into our work that we would if we knew each day were the last we would have for service upon earth.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

A visit to the commercial department, 421 Baronne street, New Orleans, will always pay.

A JOINT STATEMENT BY FIVE BISHOPS.

There are many obvious reasons why the undersigned should issue a joint statement pointing out some few of the defective and dangerous provisions of the proposed Plan of Unification.

We observe in the outset what should not be overlooked, or obscured, namely, that the matter before the church at this time is not unification in general, but a particular plan which should not be considered upon a mere impulse of sentiment alone, or chiefly, but which must be judged by its essential contents and probable consequences. However attractive may be some possible conception of unification, it does not follow that the pending Plan would fulfill the proposed purposes of unification. On the contrary, there is nothing in the proposed plan which achieves the objects of unification as those objects have been set before the church repeatedly by the express actions of the General Conferences which have considered the subject.

It has been constantly declared that the chief ends of unification are to remove "irritating competitions," prevent overlapping and duplication of work by the two churches, save the needless expenditure of men and means, eliminate unseemly friction, and arrest the erection of "altar against altar."

But none of these desirable objects does this plan propose to accomplish; on the contrary, these objectionable conditions are expressly continued by it, as is clearly shown by Article III of the Plan, which is as follows:

"Section 1. Jurisdiction No. 1 shall comprise all the churches, Annual Conferences, Mission Conferences, and Missions now constituting the Methodist Episcopal Church and any other such Conferences and Missions as may hereafter be organized by its Jurisdictional Conference with the approval of the General Conference.

"Section 2. Jurisdiction No. 2 shall comprise all the churches, Annual Conferences, Mission Conferences, and Missions now constituting the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and any other such Conferences and Missions as may hereafter be organized by the Jurisdictional Conference with the approval of the General Conference."

It must be borne in mind that the Northern Jurisdiction, as thus defined, will be territorially coextensive with the United States, while the Southern Jurisdiction will be territorially coextensive with the area where the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, now is. The Southern Jurisdiction will be thus limited and will have the status of a denomination like a [illegible]

METHODIST UNIFICATION.

By Rev. A. F. Watkins, D.D.

Some adjustment of the relation existing between the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, is necessary to the future welfare of both churches. I make this statement with a sincere conviction of its truth and importance and venture the expression of the belief that it will not be questioned by any thoughtful and unprejudiced man. Which of the two churches needs it more is difficult to say; in some respects we need it more, in others they.

The ideal adjustment, from the Southern point of view, would be some scheme of practical federation; from the Northern point of view (probably) organic union after the fashion of the years before 1844. Both are unattainable, and the attempt to realize either is a waste of time and energy. What is the best and wisest practicable adjustment for the present and for the next fifty years, I do not know. That there will come an adjustment, I sincerely and gladly believe. How far in the future it may be, I cannot tell.

At a time like the present, when the responsibility of a wise and righteous decision rests like a burden upon the heart of every man capable of considering the issue in a "dry light," the practical question is, "Granting the impossibility of bringing about an ideal adjustment, shall we take what we can get?" I would answer, "Yes, provided the cost is not too great." The cost means compromise; compromise, not of principle, but of preference. More will not be asked by a just man; less will not be yielded by a good one. The bubble of sectional vanity will have to be pricked, the cancer of sectional prejudice will have to be cut out, the running sore of sectional suspicion will have to be healed; but this is necessary for personal righteousness, to say nothing of Methodist unification. There can be no peace except to men of good will; but good will may be able to find a way.

What are some of the principles by which we must stand?

1. There must be unquestioned and unquestionable constitutional guarantee of the rights of the minority.

The South and the West are the minority today; but the North and the East may be the minority tomorrow. Who can tell? But whether South and West, or North and East, the minority must have for its protection the guarantee of its rights.

2. There must be unchallenged and unchallengeable local autonomy, with the possession and control of property and the preservation of the integrity of social life.

3. There must be the guarantee of unchanged doctrinal standards. The Articles of Religion, the General Rules, and the constitution; limitations for the protection of the Restrictive Rules must be kept inviolate.

Given these three guarantees, the man of good will should not find it difficult to commit to further negotiations many questions of taste and preference. To be sure, the man who prefers "to go it alone" and "continue to be a peculiar people," will "continue" to object.

The plan adopted by the Joint Commission in Louisville four years ago was opposed "because it tried to settle too many things." The plan of 1923 is opposed "because it tries to settle too few." Verily some of our brethren remind us of the children in the market place, who would neither dance to the piping nor mourn to the lamentation.

I believe the proposed plan is a safe and sane first step towards the healing of the breach that sin made necessary in 1844, but that, in the merciful providence of God, is no longer necessary, and that Christian charity can and must heal. The separation of the church in 1844 was a tragic necessity. No one desired it. Every one deplored it. The fathers wept at the thought, feeling that their hearts were being torn asunder. But conditions made it necessary—conditions that seemed to threaten the well-being of the church in one section or the other of our common country. But these conditions no longer exist. To repair this breach and restore the walls of this temple of God, will, I think, promote his glory and advance the well-being of Methodism in the world. To defeat it is, I fear, to cultivate the weeds of sectional and religious hatred, variance, and strife, the harvest of which our children and our grandchildren will have to reap, and, while they are doing so, will censure us for our prejudice and folly.

The proposed plan may really be described as a plan of federation rather than of unification, and as such should commend itself to Southern Methodists. It certainly tends toward the Southern rather than the Northern ideal, and yet our Northern brethren have enthusiastically adopted it. If this judgment of the nature of the plan is in any measure correct, it would seem to raise the question not only of the generosity, but of the justice of the statement that the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church "leaped to seize the prize which they thought they saw in sight."

I have tried to weigh fairly the objections to the proposed plan; but confess that I have not been greatly impressed. In considering the statements of several of these honored brethren I have found it difficult to divest myself of the influence of the knowledge that for many years they have consistently opposed every plan that in any definite way gave promise of offering a practical basis of unification. This is no reflection upon these brethren. It is simply a reminder to myself that I should not yield to the unconscious tendency to discount the arguments of those whose opposition was to be expected. Upon the other hand, it might in part explain the limping logic of even a great man in expressing objection to a scheme for bringing about a result to which he was opposed. It is hard to approve even an unobjectionable plan for doing what one does not wish done.

The letter of "Transmittal" justly says: "These two churches are essentially one church, one in origin, in belief, in spirit, in purpose, and in polity." They are not organically one; else why the offering of a plan of unification? But are they not one in origin? Are they not, in large measure, one in history? Are they not one in doctrinal standards? Are they not one in the essential elements of church polity? Are they not one in evangelistic spirit? Are they not one in aggressive missionary zeal?

But we are told that this statement "does not accord with the history of the past nor with the facts of the present." Then follows a recital of certain differences that exist in the two churches, as now constituted. It is difficult to believe that the distinguished author of this argument attached much importance to it.

Here is one of the differences: "In the letter of 'Transmittal' it is shown that the two churches have different 'processes' for amending their constitutions and enacting other legislation."

The paragraph to which reference is here made reads as follows: "We ——— do hereby propose and transmit to our respective General Conferences the following plan of unification and recommend its adoption by the two churches by the processes which they respectively require." There may be here an implication that the two churches have different processes for amending their constitutions, but it can hardly be said that it is shown; but I would respectfully suggest that it is neither shown nor implied that they have different processes for enacting other legislation.

It would have been interesting if the writer had shown us what this unimportant difference is, but it would have been unprofitable; for the difference has no bearing upon the question of unification. Article X—Amendments—reads: "The General Conference shall at its first session provide, in harmony with the existing procedure of the two churches, a method of amending the Constitution, and until such method shall have been adopted, amendments shall be effected through the process now prevailing in the churches, respectively." I am not unmindful of the fact that the foregoing is a statement of the differences now existing between the two churches; but it must not be forgotten that it is an outstanding part of an argument against the proposed plan.

The limits of this paper forbid my discussing at length each of the several statements of the differences in the processes and methods to be found in the two churches. It is enough to say that they have no bearing upon the question of Methodist unification and no proper place in a paper on "Some Objections to the Proposed Plan of Unification." They are simply differences, mostly unimportant, in the two churches as now constituted, and the proposed plan makes ample and suitable provision for harmonizing them.

Some of our friends seem disturbed because the proposed plan does not suggest a name for the church, and one recent writer sadly prophesies that whatever name is selected, it will not be the name of our church, and probably it will be the name of the Northern church. This question of the name provokes the following comments:

1. Why be troubled about the name? It will be named in good time by the General Conference. Our folks will be there, and we will determine the name. At least, if we do not name it, nobody else can.

2. If it does not receive our name, it cannot receive the name of the "Northern Church;" for the names are practically the same. The only thing in which we have a proprietary right is our "appendix." We might lose that; but it is not such a serious thing to lose an appendix. The doctors tell us that only two per cent of such operations result fatally, and we have all known cases in which great relief resulted from the operation.

3. How can any man tell us what the probabilities are? By his judgment. Very good. It might have been just as well then to have added, "In my judgment." The probabilities are not determined by any man's judgment.

4. I think it well that the name was not suggested. What a great time we would have had squabbling over the name, and in the meanwhile neglecting the weightier things of a great plan for the burial of sectional animosities, and for the speeding of the reign of Christ in a distracted world!

I would like to see the proposed plan adopted by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

1. It gives constitutional protection of the rights of the minority. "Every vote in the General Conference shall be by Jurisdictions, and shall require the accepted majority vote of each Jurisdiction to be effective."

2. It guarantees local autonomy with the possession and control of property and the preservation of the integrity of social life. "The plan which our Commission recommends safeguards all local interests, and the traditions which are held dear in the two Jurisdictions." We shall enjoy the undisturbed possession of our churches, parsonages, colleges, and other property. As far as concerns the practical working of our church in the South, we shall know no difference. The white people will have their churches, their Sunday schools, their bishops, their pastors, their officials, their members. The Negroes will have their own. The races will be as separate as now, and there will be no change except that we may be more generously moved to do them good.

3. It guarantees the preservation of the old-time Wesleyan doctrinal standards. These standards, embedded in the Constitutions of both churches, and unchanged from the days of our illustrious founder, are our common heritage and the heritage of our children.

I do not claim that the plan is perfect; nothing human is so. But it marks progress in Christian unity. It abates wasteful and irritating competition. It lessens sectional distrust and animosity. It tends to confirm national unity in our great Republic. It presents an unbroken front in the war against unrighteousness in the home land and a "compaction" of our forces for the conquest of a Christless world. May the Spirit of God go before us in this crisis.

Yazoo City, Miss.

SHALL THE TWO METHODISMS UNITE?

By Rev. Carroll Varner.

The Southern Methodist Church is confronted with the gravest problem just at this time that has ever been before her for solution. The question taking precedence over all others is, "shall we unite with the Northern Methodist Church at this time?" Let's consider the question in the light of a few observations and facts which come immediately to mind:

Is there really any great good to be obtained by a union between the two churches just now? Since they calmly and deliberately agreed to divide years ago and each work in its own respective field, they have both been wonderfully blessed by the great Head of the church. The most hopeful could not have asked for any larger success in the way of numbers or financial gains.

Since 1844 the two branches of Methodism have gone on "conquering and to conquer," and their influence in their respective sections has not been exceeded by any other church. There has been some overlapping and waste in some sections of the South, but it is very doubtful that the proposed plan will remedy this annoying situation. As for the overlapping and incidental waste in the mission fields, that can be adjusted, and is being ajusted, until it will be practically nil.

The history, traditions, sentiment, tastes, and ideals of the two sections and of the two churches are to a very considerable degree different, and in all probability will continue so for a long, long time to come. This fact constitutes a fundamental reason why they cannot be united yet into one great church. The above mentioned differences cannot be adjusted by a General Conference, nor any amount of oratory, or a lot of sentimental well-wishing. If we merely wink at these differences and go on, we shall act very foolishly, to say the least of it, and there is sure to come a period of long and bitter repentance.

Our experiences with the Northern Methodist Church since the division of 1844 have been expensive and unpleasant, except, of course, in the matter of sending and receiving fraternal messengers—and even in that we had a humiliating experience or two before they finally consented to recognize us! It isn't necessary to bother the readers with the details of this; it is too well known. In violation of two or three understandings, that church is continuing to pour money into the South for the purpose of building and manning churches all over our territory, and their attitude in most instances where they have built altar over against ours is a hostile one. Most of my ministry has been spent in the Holston Conference—not border territory, either—and I know personally that the Church North has built a church in almost every single place where we had one, and these buildings were put up and preachers provided by assistance from the North. I am reliably informed that John A. Patten, the wealthy manufacturer, during his lifetime, told the presiding elders in that Conference to build churches and send preachers in that territory wherever they thought best, and he would defray part of the expense personally. Ten years ago they went into Bristol, a strictly Southern city, where we had the whole field well in hand, and built a church near the heart of the city, and then went into some of our own churches there and got some of our members to start with. The pastor himself told me that his salary was partly paid by this same Mr. Patten. I know personally that some of their pastors—I can't say what percentage of them—went into the homes of some of our members and urged them to leave us and join them on the ground that ours was a Democratic and theirs the Republican church! It is safe to conclude that the policy they have observed in Holston territory is the one they are practicing all over the South. There are those who argue that we ought to unite because of this very situation; this looks more like surrender on our part than union!

Once again, the Negro question will not down. I do not think we ought to hold this up as a red flag before our people and make of it a great bugaboo, but at the same time we must not be so foolish as to think it does not constitute a grave question. At their General Conference in Des Moines four years ago, the Northern Church swept aside the proposed plan of unification presented then with scant courtesy, and gave the Negro an ovation, and immediately elected for the first time two Negro bishops on the same footing as the whites. No church in the United States has been so insistent on forcing certain objectionable features of the Negro question on the South as has the Northern Methodist Church. I suppose this is a main reason why it has meddled in politics more than any other church outside of Roman Catholicism. How can we possibly delude ourselves into believing that once we are united they will cease their hurtful activities along this line?

Finally, it seems to me that we need no other argument against this proposed union than this—that it will surely drive a wedge into our beloved church and cause a split which time will not heal. Why should any of us want to drive any of the rest of us out of the church in which we were born and reared? Those who oppose this union have as deep an affection for the Methodist Church as those who favor it; they have made perhaps as much sacrifice and given as much money for her support and on-going as they have, and it will be heartless to force them out of its membership after so many years. And this will surely happen if we bring to pass this union at this time!

UNIFICATION OR MERGER OF COMMON INTERESTS.

By Rev. S. J. Davies.

I have given some study to the paper or plan which originated in our General Conference, formulated by a company of men who were as true as steel and loyal to every worthy thought and sentiment of our church. The main features of this plan, it is generally understood, are the results of some sound thinking on the part of Judge Horace H. White, of Alexandria, La. In the halcyon days of our youth I was wont to tell him that he had a "three-decker brain." Surely if there is anything in kinship and heredity—and there surely is—none can claim closer and more faithful, efficient relationship to our loved church than he. His father, Rev. B. F. White; his two uncles, T. B. and H. O., his two aunts, Mrs. Davis and Mrs. Hayes, spent and were spent in lifetime service for the cause of Methodism in Louisiana. Incalculable indeed would be our loss if the fruitage of their faithful, devoted labors could or would be taken from us. When it comes to sterling qualities of manliness, uprightness and honesty of purpose, not to mention his thorough knowledge of law by reason of years of study and practice, Judge White is ranked as one of, if not the leading jurists of our commonwealth to-day. If others may claim a hearing by virtue of prestige or service in and for our church, he can say, "I more;" but he would be the last man to say it—so I say it for him. I have adduced these facts to show that the plan of our Commission is not the work of empirical tyros in civil or ecclesiastical affairs. No doubt his coadjutors were as truly Southern and loyal to the best interests of Methodism in the South.

Now this question of unification has been tossed to and fro for a series of years, like a ball on a tennis court, with the result that the final adjustment of the question was put in the hands of our General Conference at its latest session in Hot Springs.

This paper, which was so overwhelmingly accepted by the Northern Conference at its latest session, was practically our proposals or our conditions for unification of the two Methodisms. If we fail to ratify or confirm our own plan, we simply stultify ourselves in the eyes of an intelligent, thinking public. Like the king of France, in mythical story, we march up the hill and march down again.

Generous-hearted men North and South have praised General Grant for the liberal terms given to the Confederates at Appomattox. He refused to humiliate the immortal Lee by taking his sword, and gave the cavalrymen their horses to plow their devastated farms. Now I do not count the ministry and laity of the Methodist Church in the Northern States our enemy; on the contrary, those with whom I have dealt were fine types of Christian men and women.

But some seem to think this is a second Appomattox—a second surrender on our part. If this be so, then it is the South and not the North in the saddle. We have made the terms, and I cannot see how we can avoid concurring with them when we meet at Chattanooga next month, and this we must do to save our honor.

I sometimes wonder how long a time it will take for some among us to keep abreast of the present age and learn how rapidly territorial boundaries and territorial distinctions are being obliterated. Florida is filled with Northern people; Southern men are among the princes in the financial world of New York City; men from the North and West are among our leaders in the churches and in business affairs in cities of Louisiana and Texas. There is an exodus and "inodus" North, East, South, and West. The great railway lines and their ever-rushing trains are like so many flashing shuttles, weaving this land of ours into a common brotherhood, with common interests. Some Methodists in this Southland, with open hands and closed hearts, bid eagerly for Northern capital to forward and develop our magnificent resources. And yet—and yet— Oh, my people, get a broader vision, learn that the Kingdom of God is boundless in scope and its charities have no limit! If "the world is your parish," is not the Northern part of these United States of America a real extensive corner of your vast claim? Let us quit this everlasting foolishness of a divided church, with a divided territory and a consequent divided fellowship, so that American Methodism shall present an unbroken front to the world, the flesh, and the devil, and press the far-flung battle line farther into the ranks of God's enemies.

METHODIST UNIFICATION, A SOUTHERN QUESTION.

By Hon. C. L. Bates.

Inasmuch as Methodist unification, according to the pending plan, is not merely an abstract ecclesiastical rearrangement, as to manner and form, of an existing polity, but is a nation-wide revolution, presenting a concrete Southern question, vitally affecting the religious life and the social, civil, political, educational and economic interests of the entire population of the Southern States, indeed challenging the integrity of the Southern social system, the public welfare imperiously demands a full, free and fair discussion of the movement both in the religious and secular press.

An Adroit Instrument.

The plan of unification, which was recently adopted by the General Conference by a vote of 842 to 13, is skillfully, cleverly, deftly, adroitly, elusively drawn and constructed, and is well calculated to mislead even the well trained legal mind; but upon strict legal analysis, there will be found lurking beneath its glittering generalities and brilliant platitudes a scheme for the utter disruption and disintegration of Southern Methodism, and an alienation of its territory, assets, property and institutions to a foreign and unsympathetic control. Some powers over local matters are apparently reserved to the Southern church, but upon a close analyis of the entire instrument those reserved powers are apparent only, to be effective during the transitional period, at the conclusion of which the supreme legislative, executive and judicial powers of all Methodism will automatically vest in the one General Conference of the United Church.

The plan of unification bears the impress of great intellectual power, legal learning, skill and ingenuity, and possesses absolute legal and structural unity. Unmistakable unity of intent, plan and purpose characterizes the instrument throughout; and that plan, intent and purpose are a consolidated church with a consolidated government.

It has been stated in the public prints by one of the Commissioners, over his signature, that the "plan is a loose federation." In a legal point of view, that is a most remarkable declaration. There is in the plan no division of the powers of sovereignty, which de Tocqueville, in his "Democracy in America," declares is the fundamental principle of "all Federated Republics," and which is sustained by the world's history of federations. The plan does not declare that the Southern Church "retains its sovereignty, freedom and independence," nor are any permanent governmental powers reserved to it either expressly or by necessary implication. Upon the full consummation of the union under the plan, the Southern Church will ipso facto be dissolved and all its powers, rights, franchises and property be vested in the consolidated church. Should the plan become effective, it will create an ecclesiastical imperialism. There will be no Methodist local self-government, no self-determination.

The Preamble.

The preamble of the plan declares that the two churches "are essentially one church, one in origin, in belief, in spirit, in purpose and in polity," and a desire is expressed that "this essential unity may be made actual in organization and administration throughout the world."

Except as to written creed, which seems to have become "a rope of sand" in some quarters, the preamble is flatly contradicted by notorious current conditions, by a "solid South" confronted by a solid New England, by the twenty-five years' negotiations of the parties upon the subject of union, by the history of sociological condition from Colonial days, and by the history of Methodism almost from the Christmas Conference down to the present time.

The preamble does violence to the truth of history, and opens wide the door to a discussion of all relevant facts which discredit the claim of "essential unity," and which the Commission must have deemed a condition precedent to "actual" unity "in organization and administration throughout the world," which assumption is eminently true.

"One In Origin."

True it is that both churches derived their theology, general rules and the principle of the itinerancy from Mr. Wesley; but it is not correct to say that they are "one in origin." The character of a church, like that of an individual, is greatly influenced by the time and circumstances of its birth, and that character and purposes of the people who bring the organized body into existence.

The Southern Church was brought into existence out of a conflict of constitutional church government and a refusal of the Southern preachers to disregard the binding force of the constitutions and valid laws of the States where they respectively lived and labored; it had its origin in a profound respect for and obedience to constitutional government, both ecclesiastical and civil, which stamped upon it its distinguishing characteristic and which became ingrained in its fiber. The old church was organized under the quiet and tranquil auspices of the Christmas Conference without a struggle for any great principle. In its very origin and birth, the Southern Church became the consecrated and fearless champion of obedience to civil law, social order, and just and honorable ecclesiastical administration.

Not One in "Polity."

Very early in the history of American Methodism there arose in the General Conference two parties advocating conflicting theories of government, persisted in until it resulted in division; and as late as the Southern General Conference at Oklahoma City, the Northern Church submitted as a condition of union the proposition that supreme legislative, executive and judicial power should be vested in the General Conference of the United Church, which the Southern Church declined to accept, and there is no evidence that either party has changed its opinion or receded from its position; but, on the contrary, the pending plan is proof infallible that the Northern Church still adheres to its theory of a consolidated government. In the Northern Church the sovereignty is vested exclusively in the General Conference, as was held seventy-five years ago by the United States Supreme Court; but in the Southern Church the sovereignty is vested in the Annual Conferences—not merely the preachers, but the whole people, to whom was relinquished the sovereignty by the plan of separation, and by whose votes the Southern Church was created and erected. The two theories of government are in irreconciliable conflict.

Spirit and Purpose.

The spirit and purpose of the Northern Church are very far from being wholly for evangelization; they are largely social and political; that church is dissatisfied with racial relations in the South and with the laws of the Southern States respecting the elective franchise, public schools, passenger transportation and kindred matters. Should unification be consummated under the pending plan, those questions respecting racial relations which the Southern people have long deemed settled will be reopened, which will eventually lead to race conflicts.

The Northern Church is likewise dissatisfied with local legislation in the South regulating foreign corporations and imposing taxation on foreign capital invested here, and doubtless efforts will be made to bring the colored man back into politics, as the status quo could be changed in no other way.

To Break the "Solid South."

From Reconstruction days and carpetbag rule down to the present time, the Northern and New England people have striven by all available political means to break the "Solid South," and have failed, and now the indications are that further effort is to be made in that direction by ecclesiastical reorganization and in the name of religion, good will and brotherly love. By intellectual impact, the Northern Church seems to have demolished the faith, fortitude and courage of Southern ecclesiastics, and to have converted the Southern Church into an instrument of social, political and financial exploitation. Whatever else may be said of the Northern Church, it cannot be denied that it is an organization of almost imperial power, directed in its operations by a wealth of talents, genius and equipment which are quite equal if not superior to the national government itself, and Southern ecclesiasticism is gradually yielding to its superior strength and blandishments; and unless appeal be made to the people as in 1844, and pursuant to the constitution of the Southern Church, Southern Methodism will soon become a memory.

"United In One Church."

The first article of the plan of unification declares that "the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, shall be united in one church."

This declaration is clear, positive, and unequivocal; it definitely fixes the character of the proposed union; there is to be but one ecclesiastical entity, in which, by operation of law, the whole governmental power, property, rights and franchises of the two churches are to be exclusively vested; the Southern Church to die by its own hand without succession—"civilly dead"—without heir, executor or administrator, its assets to become "derelict," and to be "gobbled up" by the child of unification.

Distribution of Powers.

Section 2 of Article 5 of the plan grants to the General Conference, subject to the five Restrictive Rules, "full legislative power over all matters distinctly connectional, and in the exercise of said power * * * (1) authority to define and fix the conditions and privileges of church membership," and (2) "to define and fix the qualifications and duties of elders, deacons, local preachers, exhorters and deaconesses," and (3) "to define and fix the powers, duties and privileges of the episcopacy," and "to fix the number of bishops to be elected by the respective Jurisdictional conferences," and (4) "to provide for a judicial system and for a method of judicial procedure for the church;" with many other specified powers, and a general clause (Section 11), covering "all matters not specifically set forth" in the instrument. If unification be consummated under the pending plan, the destruction and extinction of the Southern Church will be complete.

UNIFICATION—WHY NOT?

By Rev. W. Winans Drake, D.D.

For years we have been negotiating with the Methodist Episcopal Church with a view to unification. Repeatedly we have committed ourselves to the principle and purpose of these negotiations. Indeed, as Dr. Duren pointed out in the Advocate a few weeks ago, in the very organization of our church in 1845 the declaration was definitely included that our church held itself ready to consider any plan for reunion, whether it be jurisdictional or connectional. It is in keeping with the attitude of the fathers that we should accept the principle of reunion. We have now come face to face with a plan drawn largely by our own representatives, which paves the way for unification on a basis which may be said to be the minimum. In other words, if we cannot agree on this, there is little hope of our ever agreeing on any plan. The rejection of this plan would, in the public mind, suggest serious doubt as to the sincerity of our negotiations. Why not adopt it?

A great deal has been written against it. All the arguments may be summarized into one or two items. The attempt has been made to raise a bugaboo about the Negro. Everyone who has intelligently read the plan, or who knows the attitude of the South, knows that the plan will not bring any suggestion of social equality. The magnanimous attitude of the Methodist Episcopal Church which amazingly protects minority interests, giving the smaller Jurisdiction equal voice in the General Conference, the Judicial Council and the united College of Bishops, assures us that nothing can happen in the nature of intermingling of races, except that Negro delegates and bishops would sit in the same assembly in the General Conference—such a thing as has happened again and again in our own General Conferences and in the assemblies of other Southern churches, when colored bishops and other representatives have occupied the platform with our own bishops. It would seem that the Negro had been used as a scarecrow long enough in politics without bringing him in for such a purpose into the church.

Another favorite argument is that the Methodist Episcopal Church has not been true to the agreements of the Plan of Separation and therefore cannot be trusted, with the implication that that church is trying to entice us into a trap in which they can force us into subordination to their ambitious purposes. It is true that, as we see it, their policy has not been in keeping with the Plan of Separation; but we must remember that the General Conference of 1848 deliberately decided that inasmuch as the Annual Conferences had not sustained the separation as a constitutional act, it was null and void. And it is safe to say that if the unification should be adopted now, those who use such arguments would not hesitate to use a similar constitutional process, if possible, to nullify the agreement. We must at least concede them some degree of sincerity in their position. And it is beyond reason to convict a whole great denomination of duplicity because their fathers or grandfathers took a position which to us seems unfair.

When we come to assess the arguments against the plan, they are arugments against any sort of unification, and that on grounds which do not deal primarily with questions of doctrine, law or organization, but are based upon suspicion and distrust. It is argued that Jesus' prayer for unity does not mean uniformity of organization but unity of spirit; but in the face of his prayer how can we justify such wholesale distrust and suspicion, which are very elements of disunity of spirit?

In view of this situation it seems to me that the thing which is most needed—more than discussion or argument, is a great volume of prayer for the spirit of unity—a spirit which will set us in the right attitude toward the party of the second part, and that will enable us to discuss and decide the question that a manifest Providence has thrust upon us without any utterance or act that would divide our own ranks—a prayer that we all may be one as Jesus Christ and the Father are one.

THE UNIFICATION OF AMERICAN METHODISM.

By Rev. T. D. Ellis, D.D., Secretary of the Board of Church Extension, Member of the Commission on Unification.

The question of supreme moment before American Methodism and of large interest to world-wide Christianity at this time is the unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The Plan submitted by the Commissions appointed by the General Conference of the two churches was adopted by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church on May 7 by the vote of 842 to 13. The eyes of the Christian world are turned now to the special session of the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, which will meet in Chattanooga, Tenn., July 2. As a member of the Commission from the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and as one who loves his church and the future of Methodism in America and throughout the world, I wish to submit some reasons why the Plan should be adopted by our church.

1. This is a religious question, and should be discussed and finally settled in the spirit of Jesus Christ. I am afraid some who are discussing the question are forgetting that all of us should be concerned about the progress of the Kingdom of God and the salvation of the world, and that this question of the unification of the churches should be considered only upon high and religious grounds. The first questions for us to answer are, What is best for the work of Methodism throughout the world? What is the will of God?

It is hard for me to believe that antagonism is better than co-operation; fratricidal strife better than fraternity; hatred better than love; distrust better than confidence, and two Methodisms better than one Methodism everywhere. You cannot cultivate brotherly kindness and co-operation by magnifying differences, faults and indiscretions, and constantly charging each other with unfairness. This Plan is not the marshalling of two armies for battle, but the coming together of two Christian churches to promote the work of Christ in the world. Some time and in some way, we must begin to cultivate the spirit of friendship and brotherly kindness in Christ Jesus. This Plan was written from the standpoint of confidence between brethren, and not in the distrust and suspicion of enemies.

When the question was before the Northern General Conference not one word of bitterness, strife or distrust was uttered by any speaker during the discussion, but every speech breathed the spirit of love and fraternity. Bishop W. F. McDowell, who was asked by the Conference to speak on the Plan, stated in beginning his address, "for the hours since the Commission has asked me, I have been in constant prayer that in such word as I might say, I might be moved by the Holy Ghost on behalf of the whole church of Christ." The world is needing the full power of Methodism praying together and working together in America and to the uttermost parts of the earth.

2. The Plan is a simple one. As Judge White, of Louisiana, expressed it, it is to begin to do everything that we can together and trust the spirit of Jesus Christ to enable us to do more things together until at last we can do all things together.

The Constitution of the United States, when adopted, did not settle all the questions of the union of the States, or of the problems arising from international relationship; but it did state the principles of our Government very clearly, and formed the basis of a permanent union which has grown with the years, and made possible the greatest nation on earth today.

There are two ways of treating a baby when it is born. One is to say, "I want a man, able to plow, practice law, run stores and preach, and this is only a baby, I will kill it." The other is to recognize the divine method of starting with a baby, nurturing it, educating it, cultivating its best qualities until at last it has become a man capable of plowing, practicing law, running stores and preaching the gospel.

The Plan submitted is more than a beginning. It provides for actual unification. When the Plan is adopted by both churches, both churches in adopting it will say to every member, minister, church, district and Annual Conference, that the "two churches are essentially one church," and that it is the desire of both churches "that this essential unity may be made actual in organization and administration throughout the world." No unification can be more complete than a unification which provides for unity in "organization and administration." This means that the Methodist Episcopal Church in adopting the Plan will say to every member, minister, church and conference within the territory occupied by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South that they desire that both Methodisms should be one in "organization and administration," and any church which does not follow the expressed desire of the General Conference will be, in spirit at least, in rebellion against their own church authorities. After both churches have expressed this desire for actual unification in "organization and administration," it will be a perfectly natural thing for the bishops of the reunited church to ask one bishop to hold all the Conferences within a State so that the desired unification may be made actual. It will very likely take several years to eliminate all overlapping, but such overlapping will finally disappear, and the breach of eighty years' duration will be healed. Suppose it does take a few years. Is not a few years of healing better than to continue an unhealed and running sore in the side of American Methodism perpetually?

3. The Plan makes "provision for such organization of the work of the united church outside the United States as may promptly consummate the unity of Episcopal Methodism in foreign lands." If it did nothing more than to eliminate the hurtful division in the work of Episcopal Methodism in foreign lands, it would justify its adoption. The two churches have been striving to adjust their work so that there might be no overlapping in foreign lands, but there are two Methodisms in Mexico, in Europe and in China, and the missionaries say that the people in these lands are acutely conscious of this division, and there is earnest prayer in all mission fields for the adoption of the Plan.

4. The Jurisdictional Conference will possess "the full powers of the General Conference of the church now constituting said Jurisdiction except such powers as are herein vested in the General Conference, or which may hereafter from time to time be legally delegated to the General Conference by the Jurisdictional Conferences." The rights of members, ministers, churches and Conferences are fully protected by the laws now existing in the Disciplines of the two churches, and which cannot be changed except by a majority vote of the Jurisdiction concerned. The powers vested in the General Conference are of a connectional character.

5. At the present there is no law in either church whereby overlapping may be eliminated. The two churches have overlapping and competitive work in at least twenty-five States. Let us concede that the agreement made in 1844 was violated. We must also concede that both churches are guilty. The Methodist Episcopal Church is in territory where we are strong and they are weak, and we are in territory where they are strong and we are weak. Bishop Dubose is not authorized by any law or act of our General Conference or by any other body or organization, to withdraw from Montana, Washington, Wyoming, Idaho, Oregon, or any State at present occupied by our church. The bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church are not authorized to withdraw from Florida, Georgia, or any State where they have members, property and large vested interests. Should a bishop of either church withdraw from territory now occupied by his church, he would be promptly reprimanded by the authorities of his church.

The Plan under consideration states that the General Conference shall have authority to provide "for the transfer of members, preachers, churches, pastoral charges, districts, Annual Conferences, Mission Conferences, and Missions in the United States from one Jurisdiction to the other," and that this transfer shall be made with the consent of the party to be transferred. Any plan to be legal must be voluntary. Should the present Plan be rejected, overlapping and competition will continue, and the two churches will expend millions of money and use thousands of church workers fighting each other, when both money and workers are needed in the battle against sin. What is the mind of Christ? What does God will that Methodism should do in the face of these facts?

6. The minority church is fully protected by the plan. We are given equal voting power with the Methodist Episcopal Church. Every vote shall be by Jurisdictions and shall require the accepted majority vote of each Jurisdiction to be effective. This prevents a minority of one Jurisdiction from uniting with the majority of the other to override the will of either Jurisdiction. If, under this provision, we permit ourselves to be disintegrated or swallowed, I think all will agree that there will be no ground for complaint. There is no more danger of a deadlock under such method of voting than there is in a deadlock in the United States Congress. Such a double voting process is a protection permitting the passage of such measures as commend themselves to both Jurisdictions and forever forbidding one Jurisdiction forcing its will upon the other.

7. The bishops of the two churches, as at present constituted, "shall be the bishops of the united church without further action." This does not say, as it has been quoted as saying, that every bishop will be the bishop of the "whole church," but the article in question specifically states that he cannot exercise the functions of his office outside of his own Jurisdiction, except "with the consent of the majority of the bishops of the Jurisdiction involved." Does any one think for one moment that a majority of the bishops of our church would ever, under any circumstances, invite a Negro bishop to perform any of the functions of his office within our Jurisdiction?

8. It has been suggested that as the Methodist Episcopal Church has two Negro bishops which were elected to preside over Negro Conferences, and who have never presided over white Conferences, and under the regulations and understanding when they were elected, cannot preside over the white Conferences even within the Methodist Episcopal Church, we are in danger of having at some time somewhere, a Negro bishop to preside over a white Conference within our Jurisdiction. There is no such danger, unless the bishops of our church should invite him to preside over such Conference within our church. The Constitution provides that the bishops of our church would not invite, or consent to, such actions, and could be entirely trusted at this point. Does any one who reads this article believe that the bishops of our church would ever invite a Negro bishop to preside over a white Conference? If not, why then has this question been brought into the discussion? Religious and racial prejudices are deep and lasting. To stir them unnecessarily does not please God. Let others do as they may—I shall not be guilty at this point.

9. (a) Reverting to the race question which really has no place in this discussion, as the Plan fully protects the ideals and traditions of Southern Methodism, a few things more ought to be said. First, the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, has a Mission to the Negroes in Africa. Our missionaries to these Negroes are white missionaries. If this Mission in Africa grows, and we must desire its growth or subject ourselves to the charge of unpardonable hypocrisy, then we will have in the next General Conference, or at least within a few General Conferences, Negro delegates from the African Mission. Is it any worse for the bishops of the united church to have two Negro bishops who are limited to the work in Negro Conferences meet with them in counsel, than for the men and women who will be delegates to our General Conference have these Negro delegates from Africa sit with them?

(b) The work of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, among the Negroes is through the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church. I am a member of the Board of Trustees of Paine College at Augusta, Ga., a school supported by our church for Negroes. Bishop U. V. W. Darlington, of our church, is President of the Board, and Bishop Williams, of the Colored Methodist Episcopal Church, is the Vice President. The Board is composed of an equal number of white men and Negro men, and an equal number of white women and Negro women. At the meetings of the Board of Trustees, the white men and the white women meet with the Negroes. Whenever Bishop Darlington desires to make a speech, Bishop Williams will preside. Now in all good conscience, is it any worse for the bishops to meet in counsel with two Negro bishops who are limited to their work to Negro Conferences, than for Mrs. James H. McCoy and Mrs. Luke Johnson, white women of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, to meet as members of the Board of Trustees of Paine College? I think Mrs. McCoy and Mrs. Johnson will tell you that in such meetings Southern ideals or traditions were not violated, and that the Negroes showed them the utmost respect and listened profoundly to what they had to say. Does not consistency demand that we should see things as they are, and not conjure up racial prejudice?

I have written at length because this question is of tremendous importance not only to Methodism, but to world-wide Christianity. My plea is that we may have a reunited Methodism, giving itself in utmost consecration to the work of the Kingdom of God throughout the whole world.

A JOINT STATEMENT BY FIVE BISHOPS.

States from one Jurisdiction to another, provided that no transfer shall be made without the consent of the members, preachers, churches, pastoral charge, district, Annual Conference, Mission Conference, and Mission that it is proposed to transfer." It will be noted that this provision covers the consent of those who go from one Jurisdiction to the other, but says nothing of those who are to receive them. To protect us at this point would not depend upon our consent, on the vote of the Southern Jurisdiction, but on the consent of the Northern Jurisdiction; for this plan does not provide for any option on the part of the church to which the transfer comes. It is the South alone that is in jeopardy.

It may be replied that some protection of the receivers will surely be included in the provision to be enacted later. But where is the assurance of this protection? By existing law members can be transferred from any one of our congregations to any other. Some of the advocates of this plan seem to suppose they meet all objections at this point when they tell us that some of our Negro members from Brazil, Cuba, or the Congo, may come to America and claim their church membership or Conference membership among us in this home land. The answer to this ought to have occurred at once to those who set it up that they convey an implication that in the South the separation of the races is impossible and wrong. It is not the Negro from the Congo, Brazil, or Cuba, who will embarrass us and hurt himself, it is the millions now in our land.

It is a significant fact, though not mentioned often, if at all, by the advocates of this plan, that again and again the plan speaks of a "Constitution." Where and what is that "Constitution?" Truly in so many respects our Church is asked to enter a so-called unification whose terms are definitely nowhere set out. We are told that this plan is but the first step that after we unite we can settle all matters. "Unity only a movement is another Children's Crusade.

It must be noted that the exact point on which the church divided in 1844 is brought up in this plan, that the position of our fathers is reiterated. Article V, Section 2, 1, of the plan reads: "The General Conference shall have full legislative powers" "to define and fix the powers, duties and privileges of the Episcopacy."

When Bishop Andrew was virtually deposed by the majority of the General Conference of 1844 this exact power was claimed as legal by the North, and by the South. It is easy to point to the word "Plan" in Article V, Section 1, "The General Conference shall not change or alter any part or rule of our government so as to do away with Episcopacy or to destroy the plan of our itinerant general superintendency," but if in 1844 a majority could override all that the word "plan" protects without Article V, Section 2-4, how much more can it override that protection with Article V, Section 2-1? Truly this plan will Hamlinize our church should it be adopted.

We object to this plan because it denudes the Annual Conferences of their powers. It is unquestionable that brethren quote Article V, Section 1 "every vote in the General Conference shall be by Jurisdiction and shall require the accepted majority vote of each Jurisdiction to be effective"—as the protection of our Annual Conferences. It is to be noted that Article V, Section 1, has no references to Annual Conferences. To give it such a reference is the plain, old, commonplace, yet puzzling fallacy of ignoratio elenchi—that is, absorbing the wrong point. The section referred to affects and affects alone the Jurisdictional Conference. Our brethren have never been willing, and they ought not to be willing, to turn over their rights and duties to the General Conference, yet under the mistaken assumption that this plan, because of Article V, Section 1, protects the Annual Conferences (to which let it be emphasized it has not the slightest application), they are asked to vote for it. Let not our brethren sacrifice their rights because advocates of the plan lack logic.

In 1844, when the constitution of the delegated General Conference was adopted, every fifth preacher who had traveled four years and was in full connection was elected to the General Conference, and that Conference was constitutionally restricted from reducing the representation below one delegate for every seven preachers. This Plan of Unification gives the General Conference, without asking the concurrence of the Annual Conference, the right to reduce the clerical delegates to one for every 120 members of each Annual Conference, and an equal number of lay delegates. Our largest Annual Conferences now have no more than eight or nine clerical delegates in the General Conference. This plan empowers the General Conference to reduce these largest delegations to three clerical delegates. The plan not only makes a "supreme and all-controlling" General Conference, it leaves very little room for the Annual Conference in the government of our church. Under our present law even an "episcopal vote" is not final. In that case two-thirds of the General Conference can sustain the measure believed by the bishops to be unconstitutional to the Annual Conferences, and in those bodies our law requires a three-fourths vote of all the members of the several Annual Conferences who are present and vote. An amendment to this plan of unification was offered at the Commission to reserve to the Annual Conferences the determination of such matters, and the amendment was voted down.

There are many other dangers and even obnoxious features in this plan, but for lack of space—and especially because of the precipitancy with which the General Conference was called, these features mentioned above and others must be left to the consideration of the called session of the General Conference and the Annual Conferences.

The Call of the Conference Claimants

EDITED BY LUTHER E. TODD, SECRETARY

Board of Finance, M. E. Church, South.

510-513 Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

FIRST PAYMENTS ON SPECIAL EFFORT PLEDGES DUE JULY FIRST.

Thousands of people have made pledges to Superannuate Endowment, and July 1 is the date for the first payments. Of course Special Effort Committees have this fact in mind and they will do whatever is necessary to collect the money. It is in the plan for the Commlttee to use its own method of collecting the pledges. The important thing is to get the money and send it promptly to the Board of Finance, Security Building, St. Louis, Mo.

Every pastor should see that the Special Effort Committee of his Charge has a meeting right away for the purpose of laying plans for the collection of amounts due on the 1st of July. If the pastor fails to give his personal attention to this matter, he will be going to his Annual Conference this fall with little or nothing paid on his Charge's quota. If I were serving as pastor now, it would be a terrible humillation to face my brethren at Conference with nothing much to report as paid for Superannuate Endowment.

Every subscriber who has promised to pay some amount on July 1 should be reminded of the fact. It is quite unusual for subscribers to anything to pay voluntarily without having the matter brought to their attention. Send a letter at once announcing that July 1 is pay day. A personal solicitation for the amount promised would get quicker results than a letter. So far we have done splendidly. Let us keep up the good work.

HEAR THE MUSIC OF THE SPECIAL EFFORT.

Nearly $400,000 has now been paid by all the Charges on quotas for Superannuate Endowment. The Florida Conference has paid the largest amount, the North Carolina Conference the second largest amount, and the Virginia Conference the third largest amount. To May 31, the Annual Conferences have paid on quotas as follows: Alabama, $7,587.55; Arizona, $387.45; Baltimore, $562; Central Texas, $5,930.02; Denver, $869.95; East Oklahoma, $3,558.02; Florida, $21,179.36; Holston, $11,488.27; Illinois, $1102.50; Kentucky, $15,584.12; Little Rock, $8,008.26; Louislana, $13,910.83; Louisville, $15,654.90; Memphis, $6,738.80; Mississippi, $9,720.01; Missouri, $11,700.21; New Mexico, $776.02; North Alabama, $8,649.54; North Arkansas, $8,297.64; North Carolina, $20,528.19; North Georgia, $14,515.93; North Mississippi, $10,074.87; North Texas, $5,611.63; Northwest, $443.54; Northwest Texas, $3,230.61; Pacific, $4,414.76; St. Louis, $10,199.91; South Carolina, $9,159.16; South Georgia, $4,313.99; Southwest Missouri, $15,484.77; Tennessee, $17,642.68; Texas, $4,232.90; Upper South Carolina, $10,332.05; Virginia, $20,091.69; West Oklahoma, $2,359.88; West Texas, $15,746.34; Western North Carolina, $8,150.58; Western Virginia, $10,019.29; Brazil Mission, $10; Congo Mission, $100; Japan Mission, $125.

PAY ONE-FIFTH OR MORE AND I'LL TELL IT ON YOU.

Have you been reading on this page about the Charges that have paid one-fifth or more of their total assumed quotas? Interesting, don't you think? Well, here are some more Charges that have a right to this honorable mention:

Gilliam, Southwest Missouri, Marshall, Rev. L. Orr, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,165; amount remitted, $376.

Trinity (Spmter), South Carolina, Sumter, Rev. W. V. Dibble, pastor; total assumed quota, $5000; amount remitted, $1,108.77.

Franklin Station, Louisville, Bowling Green, Rev. A. D. Litchfield, pastor; total assumed quota, $2,025; amount remitted, $801.50.

Hartford, Louisville, Owensboro, Rev. T. T. Frazier, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,785; amount remitted, $402.15.

Fourth Avenue (Louisville), Louisville, Louisville, Rev. J. W. Johnson, pastor; total assumed quota, $6,650; amount remitted, $2,955.

Burgin and Mt. Olivet, Kentucky, Danville, Rev. E. L. Ockerman, pastor; total assumed quota, $695.50; amount remitted, $239.31.

Cabanne (St. Louis), St. Louis, St. Louis, Rev. R. S. Kimbrell, pastor; total assumed quota, $3,625; amount remitted, $724.10.

Forest City, Missouri, St. Joseph, Rev. John C. Taylor, pastor; total assumed quota, $1,332; amount remitted, $269.

Albany, Louisville, Columbia, Rev. H. F. Roberts, pastor; total assumed quota, $500: amount remitted, $149.25.

Boyce, Central Texas, Waxahatchie, Rev. Henry Price, pastor; total assumed quota, $950; amount remitted, $150.25.

FORNEY SAYS HE CAN GO NOW.

My good friend, Dr. Forney Hutchinson, of St. Luke's Church, Oklahoma City, writes that he is going abroad soon. The dear boy had everything ready to start weeks ago, except this: He had not put on the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment. But he would not set sail until his charge provided for its quota and more besides. The minimum amount was $8,400, but the Quarterly Conference assumed $10,000. On Sunday, June 1, the good people of St. Luke's easily pledged the amount, and now the pastor can go sailing on his way. Bon voyage, Old Man. But say, Forney; before you start be sure to have the Treasurer of your Special Effort Committee send the cash in hand to the Board, Security Building, St. Louis, Mo. We have already received from your Charge $550, but you always have some more.

"It is my conviction that hard work on the part of our pastors will double the amount requested from the Charges. Waverly Hall has a population of less than 1,000 and we have but 250 active members on my entire circuit."

Truly Rev. J. O. J. Taylor is a real friend of the Forgotten Man. He is sincerely interested in the cause. He does not have to be urged or persuaded to do his duty. He has not only secured the amount requested from his Charge, but has more than doubled it in all his churches and it appears that on a minimum quota of $1,450 he will raise practically $5,000. This kind of co-operation on the part of the pastors will secure the $10,000,000 for Superannuate Endowment and much more. Bravo, Brother Taylor; we heartily commend you for your splendid service.

THE HONOR ROLL OF THE PRESIDING ELDERS KEEPS A GROWIN'.

I love the presiding elders. Maybe it is because I served in this capacity at one time and therefore can see things from their viewpoint. I do not believe it is possible for any program of the Church to succeed without their co-operation. It is very interesting to have these men working so faithfully for the success of the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment. You have doubtless been reading the names of the presiding elders whose Districts have reported 100 per cent on the Pink. I have a few more names this week to add to that roll, as follows:

212. Northwest Texas, Abilene, Rev. W. M. Lane, P. E.

213. Holston, Morristown, Rev. N. M. Watson, P. E.

214. Denver, Denver, Durango, Rev. C. W. Hall P. E.

215. St. Louis, St. Louis, Rev. Frank L. Wells, P. E.

216. Pacific, Fresno, Rev. E. H. Mowre, P. E.

THE ROAD THAT LEADS TO SUCCESS.

In order to win in the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment, the following steps should be taken with enthusiasm: (1) Have the Quarterly Conference approve the quota and send the Pink Leaf Report to the Board of Finance; (2) Present the Special Effort in every church of the Charge and secure pledges on the quota; (3) Hav the Treasurer of the Special Effort Committee send the cash as rapidly as it comes into hand to the Board of Finance, St. Louis, using the book of Treasurer's Remittance Forms which were sent to every Charge in care of the pastor; (4) Have the Special Effort Committee to collect the pledges for Superannuate Endowment as they fall due. Under the plan, July 1 is pay day, and an earnest effort should be made by the Committee to collect; (5) Don't quit—keep on keeping on!

Reform those things in yourself which you blame in others.—Proverb.

The Home Circle

SPRING MORNING.

By A. A. Milne.

Where am I going? I don't quite know:
Down to the stream where the king-cups grow—
Up on the hill where the pine-trees blow—
Anywhere, anywhere. I don't know.

Where am I going? The clouds sail by,
Little ones, baby ones, over the sky.
Where am I going? The shadows pass,
Little ones, baby ones, over the grass.

If you were a cloud, and sailed up there,
You'd sail on water as pure as air;
And you'd see me here in the fields and say:
"Doesn't the sky look green to-day?"

Where am I going? The high rocks call:
"It's awful fun to be born at all."
Where am I going? The ring doves coo:
"We do have beautiful things to do."

If you were a bird and lived on high,
You'd lean on the wind when the wind went by;
You'd say to the wind when it took you away:
"That's where I wanted to go to-day!"

Where am I going? I don't quite know:
What does it matter where people go?
Down to the wood where the bluebells grow—
Anywhere, anywhere. I don't know.

—St. Nicholas.

A WISE OLD HORSE.

Long, long ago, before there were any automobiles, all farmers owned horses; they had carriage horses and work horses and all sorts of horses. Sometimes when the faithful animals grew too old for hard work and could no longer plow or draw hay wagons, they were sold to cab drivers in the cities, which is a sad way for a farm horse to end his life.

But there was a farmer who loved one of his old horses so much that he wouldn't sell him when he grew too old for the hardest work. "Instead of doing that," he said, "I shall give good old Toby to Lucy for a pet." Then he laughed, because Lucy, his little girl, was only four years old. She was fond of pets and had a great number of them, but Toby was the biggest pet that she had ever owned.

He already loved the little girl, for she went to the pasture fence and called, "Come, Toby, Toby, Toby!" and when he came galloping across the field he was almost sure to find a lump of sugar in her hand. Then he would stand perfectly still while she climbed to the top of the fence and from there to his back.

After that when Lucy said, "Get up, Toby, get up!" Toby would give his head a toss and go stepping along, stepping along, slowly and carefully, so that the little girl shouldn't fall off; and she, hanging tight to Toby's rough mane, rode on, smiling and happy. Toby also liked to have Lucy walk up to him and say, "Good old Toby; good old Toby." Then he would put his head down low so that she could pat his long nose and brush the flies away.

But one day Toby and the little girl had a sad accident. Lucy was taking her usual ride, and Toby was stepping along, stepping along, slowly and carefully, when something unusual happened.

It was a warm day, and Toby made up his mind that he wanted a drink of water; so he walked splash-splash, splash-splash into the creek and stood there for a minute in the cool water and looked up the creek and down the creek. Lucy began to brush back her curls, which the wind had blown into her face.

Then Toby bent his head to drink, and in doing it made his neck into a steep hill, and he did it so suddenly that little Lucy, at the top of the steep, high hill, went slipping, sliding, slipping down the hill so fast that the next thing Toby knew his little friend had gone splash! into the deep water. It was a loud splash, too—enough to scare any horse.

The creek was deep, and Lucy could not swim and would surely have been drowned had not Toby been a wise horse. Before she could sink even once he bent his head and stretched out his long neck and picked the little girl up by fastening his teeth in her gingham dress. Then he walked fast, splash-splash-splash splash, straight across the creek, and up the bank on the other side, and there he dropped Lucy, soaked and scared, on the soft green grass.

The hired man saw what had happened, for he was away up on a high platform, oiling the windmill. Down the ladder he slid as fast as he could slide, and when he reached the ground he ran over the little bridge across the creek as fast as he could run. Then he snatched up little Lucy and ran with her to her mother. By that time, although she was still dripping wet, she wasn't frightened, but was laughing.

Toby came home at last over the bridge, stepping along, stepping along, rather slowly, as if he expected to be scolded perhaps, and maybe wishing that he could say to the family, "Accidents will happen." But when he reached home, he was astonished.

The family came to meet him. They petted him and fed him with sugar and patted his long nose and called him "Good old horse, good old Toby!" just as if he were the most wonderful horse in the world. Lucy's mother put her arms round his neck and kissed him; the big brothers brushed his coat until it was as smooth as satin and combed his mane until it was soft and silky; and ever afterwards as long as he lived nothing was too good for him.—Youth's Companion.

A RAINY DAY JOURNEY.

"Why, dearies," said Aunt Bertha, as she came into the nursery and found the three children with solemn little faces pressed against the rain-spattered window pane, "have you yet to learn that it can be sunny within when it is rainy outside?"

"If this was the last day of your vacation, and it had rained 'most every day, I guess you wouldn't say that," said Bobby, the eldest of the trio.

"When I was ten years old I presume I wouldn't have said so," replied Aunt Bertha; "but I have learned since that we can make the sun shine for us almost always if we are willing to try. How would you like to go on a pleasure trip?" she was smiling brightly.

"In the rain," asked the three, in surprise. "Why, Aunt Bertha! How could we go out?"

"Oh, the rain won't affect us in the least. We shall not even need rubbers or umbrellas," she answered, laughing. "You may put on your rubber boots, Bobby, and run over and ask your playmates to come and travel with you, if you wish."

Bobby looked rather doubtful, but he went, and soon five children were watching aunty stitch up four long strips of brown paper on the machine. This she divided into five booklets. Next she brought a pile of old magazines, several pairs of scissors, and some paste and brushes.

"Now," she said, "you may travel just where you wish. These magazines are full of pictures taken in interesting countries all over the world. Wherever you decide to visit, just find all the pictures you can that have any connection with the place, and paste them in your little books, and you will have much of the pleasure and excitement of a real journey, with none of its expense and discomforts. I will leave you for a little while now, and when I come back I shall expect to find you all home again, safe and happy."

How quickly the next two hours passed, and how busy the little brains and fingers were!

Bobby went to California. His first picture was of the "Sunset Limited," the train in which he choose to cross the continent. There were views of Western cities that he passed through; and when he reached the sunny land he filled his booklet with scenes in the great harbors on the Pacific Coast, pictures of wonderful flowers and fruits that grow only under Southern skies, photographs taken at an ostrich farm, and many other things of interest, until the last leaf of the journey book was covered.

Elsa went to Japan, and she collected pictures of bamboo houses and Japanese children with cherry blossoms and butterflies.

Everybody journey somewhere. When Aunt Bertha came in she brought a big plate of sugar jumbles, and the way the cookies disappeared proved that each little traveler had returned in good health with a good appetite. —Selected.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Brother L. M. Horton, of Conehatta, Miss., now 74 years old, has been a reader of the Advocate since his early boyhood.

Rev. G. A. Morgan, our pastor at Bastrop, La., has issued an interesting and well printed directory and year book of the church at that place.

Rev. Leon I. McCain, of Lafayette, La., recently assisted the pastor at Rayville, La., in what is said to have been one of the greatest revival meetings ever held in that place.

Rev. H. B. Gilmore, local deacon, requests us to say that he is available duriug the summer for help in revival meetings in the Hattiesburg and the Seashore Districts. His address is 302 Miller St., Hattiesburg, Miss.

The total number of students at Southern Methodist University this year was 2425, an increase of 415 over last year. The material assets of the university have been increased approximately $1,000,000 during the year.

Bishop Warren A. Candler honored the Advocate office with a brief call on Friday of last week. He was passing through the city en route to Dallas, Texas, to deliver a series of addresses before the Pastors' Summer School at Southern Methodist University.

The third quarterly conference of the Greenville charge, North Mississippi Conference, unanimously adopted resolutions opposing the proposed plan of unification and requesting the North Mississippi delegates to vote against it at the special session of the General Conference.

We are happy to report that Rev. J. Lamhuth Evans, our pastor at West Monroe, La., is greatly improved in health. In spite of the fact that he has been unable to render active service during about four months of the year thus far, the work of the church has gone steadily forward, all finarcial obligations being met in full to date.

The Seashore Divinity School has just closed a very successful session. The attendance was remarkably good, and the work done in the undergraduate classes was of a very high order. Illness at the last moment forced Dr. George R. Stuart to cancel his engagement, but inspiring addresses were delivered by Dr. W. Winans Drake and Rev. J. Loyd Decell and other members of the patronizing Conferences. Bishop W. N. Ainsworth preached on Sunday and gave a great series of addresses on the days following. The Advocate goes to press too early for a full account of the gathering, but fuller mention will be made next week.

The Methodist church at Woodville, Miss., will celebrate its one hundredth anniversary, June 26-29. The pastor, Rev. H. G. Hawkins, has arranged a most interesting program for the occasion. The following will take part: Bisnop W. N. Ainsworth; Rev. M. B. Sharbrough; Dr. W. H. Huntley; Dr. B. F. Jones; Rev. W. J. Dawson; Rev. David Holt; Rev. J. D. Ellis; Hon. W. J. Stockett; Hon. Wm. A. Dickson; Rev. B. F. Lewis; Rev. Isaac D. Borders; Dr. H. Walter Featherstun; Hon. S. W. Sharbrough; Rev. W. B. Jones, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District. The ladies of the Woman's Missionary Society will give a reception in honor of the visiting guests on Friday. Sessious of the Mississippi Annual Conference, presided over by Bishop Roberts, Soule, and Paiu, were held in the historic church building, which has been put in good repair, so as to be fit for use for many years to come.

THANKS TO OUR FRIENDS.

We desire to express our thanks to the following friends who have sent us two or more suhscriptions recently: Rev. W. L. Lintield, Meridian, Miss., 2; Rev. L. M. Lipscomb, Water Valley, Miss., 2; Rev. E. C. Driskell, Buena Vista, Miss., 2; Rev. W. N. Duncan, Drew, Miss., 2; Rev. C. C. Alexander, Tupelo, Miss., 3; Rev. Otto Porter, Prentiss, Miss., 3; Rev. S. FEARS AND FACTS ABOUT UNIFICATION.

By Bishop John M. Moore.

The epponents of the plan of unification seem now to have found their line of attack and agitatiou. They express their opposition in terms of fear: (1) Fear of the desiens of the Northern Methodists with illustrations drawn from the Civil War and the Reconstruction period. (2) Fear of perpetuating the Northern Church in the South. (3) Fear of Negro intrusion upon membership in our Southern churches and church bodies. (4) Fear of women being made regular preachers with full orders. (5) Fear that many of our people will withdraw and organize a new church or demand the right to maintain the old one. (6) Fear that the opposition bishops who are in charge of big Conferences will disrupt the churches within their territory. (7) Fear (or the hope) that if the plan carries in the General Conference it will be defeated in the Annual Conferences. Up to date the opposition is confined almost entirely to these fears, or to the positive assertion that these things will surely happen.

That the General Conference will approve the plan with a very decided majority no one doubts. Why say that it will be defeated in the Annual Conferences? Is it because those who say it think the members of the Annual Conferences are more intelligent than the members of the General Conference, or less? Better able to judge the matter, or less? Less open to appeals to provincialism and sectionalism, or more? Less influenced hy appeals to race prejudice, or more? Why say that the members of an Annual Conference will vote differently unless one wishes to affirm that they are more intelligent or less, more prejudiced or less, more open to these emphasized fears, or less? Some one will say: "They will be affected by the appointing power having them in charge." That is a fearful indictment, which is shameful if true, and most unbrotherly if not true.

What of the suggestion that the opposition bishops in charge of the large Conferences may disrupt the churches within their territory? It is utterly prepostcrous. It is a covert charge of disloyalty, which no man has a right to intimate. It should be scouted to the limit.

The suggestion that some of our people in the old South might withdraw and organize a new church or demand the right to maintain the old one if unification prevails is grossly absurd. Sensible people such as ours will not he swept off their feet in any such way even should their opinions not he accepted. Why should they sccede? Unification would scarcely touch the people in the lower South. They would hardly know in their church life that anything had taken place. The people really affected are on the border, in Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, Kentucky, Missouri, Oklahoma, and the Far West, and they are overwhelmingly for unification, with, of course, some notable exceptions, because they need unification. They are face to face with actual conditions which they believe and expect unification to modify greatly to their comfort and advantage. Who would suppose that the old South with its sentiment would desert the upper South in its heroic effort to mend its state of existenee? The plan does not allow any injury of any kind to come to the lower South, and it does provide large and effective means for great good and widespread aid to the upper South. Were the lower South not really for unification, which cannot be admitted in the least, the suggestion of a possible secession is so utterly absurd as not to be entertained for a moment.

The idea of opposing unification on the basis that women might therehy be allowed to preach! That is "feminitis" with a vengeance. Personally, I am not very favorably inclined to licensing and ordaining women for the ministry, but I know well enough that unification will have nothing to do with it one way or the other. When women get where they want to preach they are going to preach. That is their way. Before the General Conference in 1918 the anti-unificationist opposed unification because, as he declared, that might bring laity rights to women, and to that he was strongly opposed. Well, unification did not come, but laity rights did. The argument in this present case is just as spurious. Besides, nothing can come in the united church without the majority vote of the Southern Jurisdiction. Nothing can happen in the united church which could not happen in our standing alone. There have been women preachers from Priscilla to Evangeline Booth and Anna Howard Shaw, and the heavens have not fallen yet. Women will preach if they want to preach, and the church will not deny them license and orders when it becomes convinced of their "gifts, graces and usefulness," irrespective of whether unification comes or not.

Then here comes the poor Negro! He has been worth a great deal to the anti-unificationist in the past, and he must do servide again. It is true that he is to have his own coach on this great Methodist train, but the anti is fearfully afraid he might want to sit in one of the white coaches. The Negroes have their own churches, their own pastors and presiding elders and their own bishops, and do not want it otherwise. Practically all of them live here in the South and serve us day by day. They are not Northern Negroes, but Southern. The most of us have not interested ourselves enough in the religious life of our servants to find out the church to which they belong. Unification will not change in the least their status or their relation to us. A handful of them representing their Annual Conferences will sit in the Northern section of the General Conference, but everything that the General Conference does must have the majority vote of our section. The Negro vote will be cast with the vote of the Northern section, but it will not affect our section. Some one asks: "Could not a Negro demand admission into one of our white churches?" No, not unless our Southern Jurisdiction arranges if so he can do so. Provision is to be made by the General Conference for the transfer of members from one Jurisdiction to another, and that provision must he approved by the majority of our Southern representatives. We, the Southern group, can arrange in the first General Conference the provision by which the Negro may come in or stay out of our churches. The Negro knows he is not wanted in a Southern white church. He does not want to be in the white church. He prefers the church of his own people. Why should any one pretend that he wants it otherwise? Again, who is it that does not know that the white people of the South can protect themselves absolutely and utterly against any intrusion of the Negro anywhere or in anything. They have always done it, and why imagine a vain thing now? To make an argument against unification based on the Negro, in my opinion, can be little less than simply a camouflage and an appeal to race prejudice. This is hardly fair to the Negro, or fair to the people who are obsessed with such prejudice. Christianity is not helped by such appeals, because they are baseless, manifestly unfair, and wanting in genuine Christian charity.

Some anti-unificationists are severely discounting the integrity and honor, the Christian spirit and purpose of the Northern leaders. They seem to be endeavoring to create the impression that we are about to fall into the hands of wicked, designing men. Listen to this: "It is not strange that the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church (North) adopted it with such haste and unanimity. The plan gives them so much advantage over our church that most naturally they leaped to seize the prize which they thought they saw in sight, apparently forgetting any other consideration." It does seem that such a statement, so sweeping in its dictum and so harsh in its criticism and arraignment, should have been supported by some semblance of proof, but none was offered. Was there any to give? If it be true that we are not treating with gentlemen and Christians, but with crooks and men of evil design, then of course union on any basis would be utterly unthinkable. But it will be hard to prove by the records that we have been more honest in our dealings, more considerate in our relations, more upright in our methods, more zealous in our Christian labors, or more faithful to our promises than they have been to theirs. During the ten years of my membership on the Joint Commission I never heard an unkind word from any one of them regarding the South, our church, or any one of its leaders, present or past. Their spirit has always been Christian and brotherly, and their action generous, if not magnanimous. Who can give a different testimony? If one may judge from their actions of these several years, they want union without domination and unity without offense. To say that they are not just as good, just as devout, just as Christian in act, thought and purpose as we are, is to assume the tremendous responsibility of furnishing proof to the contrary. This movement is uniting two bodies of Christians of equal integrity, equal religious devotion and equally high and holy aims.

The old Plan of Separation and its infringement are very naturally brought into service. "Every Conference and church that has been set up by Northern Methodism in the South is here in violation of that plain compact," says one. They have been "illegal intruders." Rather severe language! Is it true? They say not, and make very courteous but very positive denial of these allegations. Without entering the discussion, we may say truly there are evidently two sides to the matter. Anyway, is it any wonder that the Plan of Separation, if it were broken, was not kept? It was born in strife, at the opening of the most stormy period in our national life, culminating in an awful Civil War and a most irritaing period of Reconstruction. Hatred ran high. Christians were scarcely brothers. Southern churches were not really open to Northern communicants, and had there been no Northern Methodist churches organized in the South there would have been no Methodist places of worship open to Northern Methodists. Had there been no Southern Methodist Church during this war period, Methodism in the South would have all but died out. The Northern Church kept up its work in the South because of the increasing number of Northern people coming to the South to live and wanting a congenial Methodist church life. Theirs was an act of Methodist conservation as was that of the General Conference of 1844. To speak now of them as "illegal intruders" may be accurate, according to one's viewpoint, but it is to use language that belongs to the feverish state of a past period and not to these days of fraternal relations.

Let us keep in mind that many of our strongest churches in the South to-day would be seriously crippled if all the Northern people in them were to retire. This present criticism of the Northern people is proving very painful to this great element in many of our city churches and in the border States. They do not believe that Northern Methodists are dishonest, designing men and women, "illegal intruders," and they are becoming restive under such unjust reproach of the brethren.

We are not attempting unification on the basis of 1844, nor in the spirit of 1865, nor of the parties in those conflicts. We are not called upon to trust the participants of those days nor approve their deeds. We can get nowhere by fighting old battles. That may be why some men insist upon fighting them anew. We are trying to bring together those who were born largely after the close of that period, who have gone together through two foreign wars, who have listened to and applauded fraternal addresses for fifty years, who have had federation parleys since 1876, and who have been in negotiation for unification for a decade. We know each other; we can trust each other. Unification is to bring such Christians into one working body.

Will the plan perpetuate the Northern Church in the South? Who could think so who has any just conception of what we are trying to do and who appreciates the spirit actuating this movement? There will be no Northern Church left, and no Southern Church. There will be two sections in the same church. If the churches in any locality are congenial to all the Methodist people in that territory, there will be no need for two Jurisdictions in that community. But if we are to continue our talk about "intruders" on one side, rebels on the other, and dishonest and designing men on both, then divisions will be kept up. The spirit of unification will consummate the purpose of unification, but the spirit of censure, of strife, and un-Christian conduct will postpone the desired end, which is the unity of Methodism in every part of the territory which it covers. We are expecting the spirit of unification to prevail.

The anti-unificationist claims that the plan does not unite. "Its heartiest advocates do not claim that it is any more than a step toward union." Well, that is interesting. It is a step toward union in the same way and about to the same degree that a wedding is just a step toward union. In what respects do the two differ? Starting life together, blending lives, living under the same roof, having things in common, producing a common family and yet having two Jurisdictions. (Of course, some men demand that there be but one Jurisdiction.) That is marriage; that is Methodist union under this plan. Marriage can be eventually discontinued only by legal procedure; the same is true of this union. Some one calls it a "loose" union. It is tight enough to hold, and hold for all time. The anti-prohibitionist always says that prohibitoin does not prohibit, but he knows better, and that is why he is against it. The anti-unificationist may say this plan does not unite, but he knows it does, and that explains his opposition.

The plan is a real plan. It creates one church, with one name, one ritual one hymnal, one body of doctrines, one membership, one ministry, one Council of Bishops (that should be the common name), one constitution, one General Conference, one Judicial Council. All that comes at once. There is only one place in which the plan provides a process of unification instead of an enactment, and that is, for putting together churches in the same community and the same territory. This, to be sure, is most important, and the two churches are uniting with the set purpose of bringing about union and unity where there has been competition and conflict. This can be done and will be done, but not by the instantaneous process. There is need for time exposure. Living together perfects any union where human beings with their varying temperaments are involved. Within ten years, under the provisions of this plan of unification, one may reasonably expect harmony, united churches, and oneness of purpose, action and living in all the localities and territories where now there is altar against altar and the distressing if not unseemly rivalry.

Some one will ask which side will be the gainer. When people get married they cease asking questions. What is one's is the other's. Both sides will be gainers and neither a loser. Competition gives way to co-operation. The entire church will belong to all of us and we to the entire church. Jurisdictions will mark our fields of labor and expression, but we ourselves will be in one church working together with one aim, toward one end. Being one, we shall be true to all.

The plan is built upon two major and controlling principles, namely, two Jurisdictions and every vote by Jurisdiction. Those two ideas go through everything. They make absorption, swallowing up, domination of one side by the other, the taking of advantage of one side by the other, utterly impossible. No rule of change can now or henceforth be effected without the majority vote of each side. The provisions for transferring members (white or colored), preachers, churches, districts, or what not must be approved by both sides before they can go into effect. The General Conference will make the rules and conditions and create the agencies by which all these transfers are to be made. If the South is imposed upon by reason of these transfers, it will be her own fault, because nothing can be done in the General Conference without the majority of her Jurisdiction. The Northern Church, as the larger, has been most magnanimous in approving the every vote by Jurisdictions which safeguards property and people and all interests that may now or hereafter be involved. This was her own suggestion in the making of the plan.

The plan is not a constitution of the united church, but a compact of union. However, the constitution is not unknown as it will come out of the existing constitutions, documentary in the Northern Church, but somewhat undefined in our church. These constitutions, by the compact, will continue in effect in the respective groups until the common constitution is formulated and adopted.

The benefits to be derived are very many. The following may be enumerated: (1) It unites a family, an ecclesiastical household. This is no small matter. (2) It stops waste, expenditures for overlapping and competitive activities. (3) It makes an American or national church out of two sectional churches. Sectional churches with their provincialism and prejudices resulting therefrom cannot be of the highest service to the nation. Unification is a patriotic service. The union of Methodism will unquestionably aid in bringing about other unions of sectional churches. (4) It will further the unity of Protestantism in this country, which well known conditions make exceedingly desirable. (5) Unification appeals strongly to the young life of Methodism, which has already lost interest in the old divisions. (6) It will remove the unseemly and indefensible divisions from the Methodisms in the foreign fields and provide a powerful agency for delivering the gospel and the impact of Christian civilization upon all parts of the world. (7) It will bring a good conscience to all who pray for the unity of God's people.

What will be some of the inevitable consequences of the rejection of the plan? (1) The fearful disappointment in the border States, where many unions of churches have been planned by the people, irrespective of the authorities. (2) Severe losses in members and churches in the sections where some kind of a union has become a practical necessity to Methodist activity. The people will unite. (3) The belief will be established by this rejection that Southern Methodism is doomed to permanent sectionalism. (4) The present prevailing competition and strife will be continued and made permanent. (5) Conflict and agitation will be intensified as well as prolonged. Unification cannot now die an easy death, as its advocates are too numerous to be silenced readily. (6) The work in the border States and in the Far West will make increased demands for missionary and church extension aid in order to be sustained in the face of the accentuated competition. (7) The Southern Church will lose every point of advantage and sympathy which it has gained with the intelligent religious public of this country should it reject a simple, feasible, fair, practical plan of unification. The most solemn question which every voter in the General Conference and in the Annual Conference must face is, Can we afford to take the consequences which the rejection of this plan of unification will bring to us now and for the future?

In the face of all these considerations the appeal to approve the plan now before the church is, it seems to me, simply irresistible.

DAY OF FASTING AND PRAYER SUGGESTED.

It seems to me we have reached a point in the history of our church when we should call for a day of fasting and prayer about the unification of the Northern and Southern Methodist Churches. I have seen nothing in the papers about such a call. The Master said, "If ye ask anything in my name I will do it." God still rules and reigns and has all power in heaven and earth. I believe in unification with all my heart, and have been praying for it for years. Our General Conference made the proposition for this union to the Methodist Episcopal Church, and they accepted it. I see no reason why we should postpone this matter until the Annual Conferences meet, as our General Conference acted on it, and it represents the whole church. It seems to me, as this is a forward movement and is something for which the Master prayed, we should follow the Divine leading. Every forward movement in the church has met with opposition. Martin Luther, John Wesley, the Missionary Baptist Church, the Salvation Army, and the cause of Missions have all met with opposition on the part of reactionaries, but God was leading and took care of his church.

I suggest that we call for a day of fasting and prayer the fifth Sunday in June. God is able to direct this matter if we call on him.

Please publish this letter, or make the call without the letter, as you think best.

H. G. DAVIS.

Aberdeen, Miss.

TO THE PASTORS AND MEMBERS OF THE METHODIST EPISCOPAL CHURCH, SOUTH, MERIDIAN DISTRICT, MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

American Methodism is facing perhaps its most momentous epoch since the eventful days of 1844. Millions of people are directly and millions more indirectly concerned in the outcome of this hour. The weight of the responsibility now upon us can hardly be overestimated. The future peace and prosperity of our beloved Zion seem to be in danger.

Our great and good bishops (all of whom are sincere) are divided as to the best course for us to pursue.

This is a time which calls for sober, unselfish thought and earnest prayer.

The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, meets in special session on Wednesday, July 2, to consider the plan of unification already adopted by the General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church.

I most respectfully ask that this day be observed by all of our people as a day of fasting and prayer for the guidance of the Holy Spirit in the deliberations of the General Conference, and that the final results may redound to the progress of Christ's kingdom and the speedy evangelization of the world. Especially let this be the burden of our mid-week prayer meetings on that day.

BROTHER W. J. COTTINGHAM was born in Texas, Jan. 31, 1851, and moved to Mississippi when about six years old. He was reared, married, and he reared a large family near Crystal Springs. He lived to the good old age of seventy-three years, thirty-five of which he spent as a consistent member of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. He died April 15, 1924, leaving a wife, nine children, and a host of other relatives and friends to mourn his departure. He was a good husband, father, citizen, and faithful friend. He loved his church and his pastor. "Precious in the sight of the Lord is the death of his saints." If the home-coming of loved ones is precious to those who have been absent but a few years, what must it be to the Lord and the hosts of heaven when the saints are called home? Besides the many friends and loved ones, he has two sons who have gone before to welcome him home. May God richly bless those remaining loved ones, keep them from evil that their home-coming may be precious in his sight and that the circle may be unbroken by and by.

His pastor,

J. T. ABNEY.

On Friday morning, June 13, 1924, God sent his angels into the home of Mr. and Mrs. R. F. Sorey, of Pineville, Miss., and carried their little baby boy, PATT HENRY, to heaven. Little Patt was only nineteen months and two days old. He was a very sweet little boy and the flower of his home—but the Father saw best to pluck this little flower while it was yet in the bright, glittering, morning dews of life. Our Father called little Patt and took him to that happy home in heaven before he saw the bitters of life, before that flower faded in the parching waves of the desert of sin. Let us all meet our children and loved ones in heaven; let us do our part in making our family circle complete in heaven, for we will know each other there. Little Patt is beckoning his loved ones from that beautiful shore just as our loved ones are beckoning you and me from that same shore that is not far away. Let us meet all of God's children there—will you?

MR. HENRY LYMAN POND, of Ethel, La., through the providence of the Infinite Ruler of the Universe, on May 24, 1924, was transplanted from this imperfect life to dwell in that all-perfect and eternal life of the righteousness of the Son of God. He was born Feb. 11, 1838. He graduated at Centenary College in 1855, at the early age of seventeen, with the honors of his class. For some years he led an active and progressive life as teacher of male classes in Centenary College. He was a Confederate soldier, and was married Dec. 31, 1862, to Miss Olivia A. Taylor. This union was blessed with two children—Mrs. Bertha Ellis and Mrs. B. A. Price. In after years he lived at Ethel, where he was postmaster and bookkeeper. He studied law, but did not practice this profession; he was a trained speaker and a beautful writer of both prose and poetry. He was a Mason, and was buried with Masonic honors of St. Alban's Lodge No. 28, F. and A. M., in the old Warren Taylor cemetery. He took the death of his wife several years ago very hard, and it is thought a desire to meet her in the upper and better kingdom was largely responsible for his conversion and uniting with the Methodist church a few years ago. Ever since that time, he has been a consistent member and continually enjoyed the blessings and comforts of the Christian religion, firmly relying upon the promises of his Master. It was our privilege and pleasure for several weeks to visit him before his passing. His bedside was a continual revival "fire" in exhortations, Scripture quotations, songs and prayers of the reconciliation and comforts he found in the religion of the Lord Jesus. Those who survive his loss are Mr. Charley L. Pond, of Ethel, La.; Mr. Dana B. Pond, of Austin, Tex.; his brothers and two children, Mrs. Bertha Ellis and Mrs. B. A. Price, of Ethel, La., and a number of grandchildren, with a large host of other relatives and friends. To those who survive his loss we pray the tender comforts and reconciliation of the gospel to be theirs. As an evidence of his beautiful trust in our Lord, we call attention to a poem, written Feb. 24, 1924, in his eighty-seventh year.

B. D. WATSON, P. C.

WHEN I PASS.

By Henry L. Pond, in His Eighty-Seventh Year.

Some sweet day
Not far away,
I'll come to cross the bar;
May Jesus stand,
To take my hand
And push the gate ajar.

I then will place
My weary face
Upon his loving breast;
I'll hear his greet
In voice so sweet,
"Fear not, I'll lead you to your rest."

The race is run,
The victory won,
The goal is close at hand;
There'll be no tear,
There'll be no fear,
When I reach the happy land.

And when I pass,
Like withered grass,
And o'er my body rests the sod,
I'll join the throng,
In heavenly song,
Around the throne of God.

For unto all,
Both great and small,
His promise true and sure is given,
That if they serve
And never swerve,
They'll find a home in Heaven.

And when the night
Blots out the light
Of life upon this earthly shore,
And loved ones round me weep,
I'll fall asleep
To meet my loved ones gone before.

NEWS FROM THE ROCHELLE CIRCUIT.

Considering the wave of indifference and lack of co-operation I consider the effort which has been put forth on Rochelle circuit up to date is not in vain. Rev. W. C. Swope, evangelist from Charleston, Mo., and Mr. and Mrs. P. J. Scott, singers, of Fayetteville, Tenn., pitched the battle April 27, ending May 11; results, about twenty young people and four adults added to the membership at Rochelle. It was generally conceded that it was the best revival ever held there. The church was wonderfully blessed besides the whole mill town.

Rev. R. T. Ware, of Vivian, La., conducted a ten days' meeting at Standard; results were good.

Rev. J. C. Price, P. C., is at present conducting a revival at Pollock, commencing June 5. The interest is fine, and increasing—four children have joined the church already. His sermons are principally for the young folks, who are falling into line, looking forward for a great victory of the young folks.

Rev. F. C. Cady, junior preacher, and myself went to Eden church, Lasalle Parish, one of our oldest churches in Central Louisiana, which has been neglected (no services there for quite a while), on the third Sunday in May, and reorganized. I consider prospects real good—fine body of well-to-do people and religious, and a splendid chapel. They agreed at once to provide for Brother Cady's finances and provide for his stay, requesting his presence for Saturday night, Sunday morning and night, which was agreed upon. They appreciated our labors very much.

I went to Olla Sunday, the 8th, and conducted services for an audience of about thirty-five. The object of my going was to see if possible reconciliation could be effected in the way of renewing their obligations in the way of support of the ministry, which they had neglected. As usual, the faithful few rallied to the front, renewing their obligations, paying the amount agreed up to date to our junior preacher, with an agreement to continue.

Our meeting here at Pollock was principally for the young people—it was either that or nothing. The children were very much interested. Brother Price's method with children is wonderful—volunteer prayers, quoting Scripture, keeping record of the sermon, songs sung, number present, prayers offered. The time has come when the children must have the required interest shown to keep them busy for the Lord, or they will follow the footsteps of their seniors at home.

Good roads are a great blessing to a country in some respects, and in some are very detrimental. More fishing, swimming, baseball, buying and selling, more people employed to disregard the Sabbath, than I have ever known in our country since good roads and automobiles have taken the place of bad roads and mules and horses.

MANSFIELD EPWORTH LEAGUE ASSEMBLY.

By A. F. Hanson.

The sixth Annual Assembly of the Louisiana State Epworth League was held in the Mansfield Female College, Mansfield, La., from June 10 to 17. Delegates from every district in the State attended, there being a total representation of 175. The delegates arrived Tuesday, June 10, and the afternoon was spent in registering them in their classes. Wednesday, the regular institute work was started, and continued until the last day of the conference. Three classes were held daily, one in Bible study, one in League methods, and one in missions.

The general theme of the Assembly was "The Christian Use of Money." "Money talks, what does yours say?" was the League slogan. The State goal is every League represented and every delegate an efficient representative.

Tuesday night the delegates were greeted by the Rev. Albert S. Lutz, Dean of the Assembly, and the Rev. W. W. Holmes, President of the Conference Epworth League Board. After the addresses, the Leaguers were entertained in the college lobby by the Mansfield Epworthians.

Rev. Robert E. Goodrich, pastor of the First Methodist Church of Shreveport, addressed the Leaguers on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights in the Mansfield Methodist Church. Saturday evening the annual Assembly stunt night was held. The Monroe District won the banner for presenting the most original stunt.

Professor W. B. Hubble, a missionary to the American Indians, spoke to the young people Sunday night, and gave many interesting pointers on "The Original American, the Red-skin." The life service address Monday night was given by the Rev. W. [illegible], pastor of the Noel Memorial Church of Shreveport.

Sixteen of the delegates volunteered at the close of the service for life service in home or foreign mission work. The most impressive part of the Assembly program was the daily evening vesper services held on the college campus. They were conducted by the Leaguers, and exemplified clearly the sincerity of purpose in the heart of every one present at the conference. The curfew was rung down Tuesday at noon after the formal banquet, and by Wednesday the college was deserted except by a few Leaguers waiting to catch their trains.

The New Orleans District won the banner presented for being the most efficient district in the State. The Assembly adopted a total missionary program of $2,000 for the coming year, and also voted to back the building of an Epworth League office at the Western Epworth League Assembly ground, Mount Sequoyah, near Fayetteville, Ark. Drives will be held in local chapters during August and September to raise Louisiana's quota towards the fund. Efficiency institutes will be carried on throughout the State during the summer months, and a determined effort will be made to have every district thoroughly organized.

The conference voted to express itself as in favor of the unification of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and the Methodist Episcopal Church, and recommended that the State representatives to the General Conference be urged to act in favor of unification. A resolution was also passed condemning the race track gamble, and it was resolved by acclamation that the State Government be asked to pass stricter laws against horse racing in this State.

The conference has decided to give two scholarships each year to two young people in Louisiana who need assistance in their preparation for life service, the conference to select those who are to receive the scholarships. One scholarship will be to the Scarritt Bible and Training School of Nashville, and the other to the newly opened school at Houma.

The annual selection of the most popular boy and the most popular girl of the Assembly was made, the winners being Edgar Cayard, New Orleans, and Grace Cook, Monroe. The conference appropriated $100 to send Miss Grace Cook to the Western Epworth League Assembly at Mount Sequoyah as a token of appreciation of her fine work as Epworth League State treasurer for the past six years.

The state Epworth League officers for the new year elected are: President, Edgar Cayard, New Orleans; vice president, Rev. James B. Grambling, New Orleans; secretary, Albert MacGowan, New Orleans; treasurer, Julia Reid, Lake Charles; Epworth Era agent, Irma Williams, Alexandria; dean of next year's Assembly, Rev. Alonzo Early, Crowley.

The officers appointed by the newly elected president are: Intermediate League superintendent, Grace Fuqua, New Orleans; Junior superintendent, Mrs. Philip Munch, Shreveport; first department superintendent, Charles White, Alexandria; second department superintendent, Margaret Young, New Orleans; third department superintendent, Violet Wade, New Orleans; fourth department superintendent, Helen Hunt, Monroe; life service department, Mrs. W. W. Holmes, Shreveport. Alfred Hanson, of New Orleans, was appointed State Epworth League correspondent for the New Orleans Christian Advocate. The complete list of district secretaries has not yet been made up.

The conference had two visiting instructors on the faculty. They were Miss Edna Matthews, a Central Office representative, who taught a class in Intermediate work, and Professor W. B. Hubble, of Smithville, Okla., who taught a special class in home mission work.

The home instructors were: Professor W. M. Bratton, Mansfield; Rev. W. W. Drake, D.D., New Orleans; Rev. Alonzo Early, D.D., Crowley; Rev. James B. Grambling, New Orleans; Rev. W. W. Holmes, Shreveport; Rev. H. L. Johns, Cedar Grove; Miss Sophia Kuntz, New Orleans; Rev. Albert S. Lutz, D. D., Shreveport; Mrs. Philip Munch, Shreveport; Rev. F. J. McCoy, Houma; Miss Julia Reid, Lake Charles; Rev. R. H. Wynn, D.D., Shreveport; Miss Margaret Young, New Orleans; Dr. M. F. Wilson, M.D., New Orleans; Rev. J. B. Peters, Mansfield; Rev. Robert E. Goodrich, D.D., Shreveport.

This Assembly was the largest and also the best ever held in this State. The greatest number of Leaguers ever gathered together at a Louisiana League Assembly were present, and the spirit of each and every delegate made the conference a wonderful gathering and training school for Methodist young people.

Principles of Religious Teaching, Mrs. W. W. Templeton, instructor.

Religious Education of Adults, Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, instructor.

Dr. Clovis Chappell, pastor of First Church, Memphis, is expected to do the preaching.

The Conference school came to a close June 18. We had an enrollment of 141 and issued 137 certificates. Twenty-five preachers took credit and two superintendents took credit. Five presiding elders were present a greater part of the time, and two of the number received certificates. There were fifty schools represented. Dr. Norman E. Richardson, of Northwestern University, has been with us the past three years. His work in the classroom and on the platform was that of a pastmaster in the field of Religious Education. Monday night, after a great address on "The Challenge of Religious Education to the Methodists of North Mississippi," the school, through a committee, presented the following as our goal for the next five years: 75,000 as our Sunday school enrollment; 400 Gold Seal Diplomas; 25 young women from Grenada College doing graduate work in the field of religious education and a like number from Millsaps College; and $50,000 to endow the Chair of Religious Education in Grenada College. There were 125 members of the school that agreed to be in the Four Hundred Gold Seal pupils. The next morning after the school closed Rev. John A. Randolph, pastor at Sardis, raised $100 from ten people on the endowment, and he expects to raise as much more from others. Monday, June 16, was one of the great hours in the history of Methodism in North Mississippi. When these goals are reached, we shall see the likeness of the Kingdom of God on earth as it is in heaven. No thinking Methodist will say this work is not needed; no loyal Methodist will fail to help realize the dream of those who attended this school.

SOME LOUISIANA CONFERENCE SUNDAY SCHOOL ITEMS.

The second District Standard Training School for 1924 was in session this week at Monroe. The enrollment was about 70 pupils, with 50 receiving credit. There were five courses offered, three General and two Specialization. One of the best features of this school was the general assembly periods at the 10 o'clock morning hour. Dr. Robert E. Goodrich, pastor of First Church, Shreveport, delivered a great address on Tuesday, taking for his subject "The Psychology of Conversion." Rev. N. E. Joyner, pastor of Trinity Church, Ruston, delivered an address at the Wednesday hour on the subject, "Leadership Training." The period on Thursday was given over to short addresses by members of the faculty on Primary, Junior, Intermediate-Senior, Young People, and Adult work.

The secretary of the Monroe District, Mr. C. W. Scates, and the superintendent of Teacher Training, Rev. Porter Caraway, were two of the district officers to take credit in this school. The following ministers in the Monroe District took credit in this school: Rev. W. D. Kleinschmidt, Rev. P. O. Lowrey, Rev. Porter Caraway, Rev. L. R. Sparks. The visiting ministers were Rev. J. L. Evans, Rev. F. M. Freeman, and Rev. H. W. May.

The Monroe District Executive Committee met during the school and planned some Non-Standard Training Schools in the Monroe District. There was great interest shown in our two Leadership Training Schools, the Mount Sequoyah and the Lake Junaluska Schools. Mrs. J. M. Henry, the leader of the Mount Sequoyah School, announced the North Louisiana delegation would leave Shreveport, Tuesday, at 7:30 p. m., via the Kansas City Southern, for Mount Sequoyah. She announced that there would be two or more delegates from Monroe, one from Tallulah, one from Columbia, and several from Ruston.

Rev. K. W. Dodson, presiding elder of the Ruston District, was a welcome visitor at the Monroe Standard Training School. He said he had never seen such interest in teacher training as there seemed to be in his district just now. His district is planning two Standard Training Schools and some Non-Standard Training Schools. The great outstanding event of his district will be the Business Men's Bible Class Rally, at Ruston, on the fifth Sunday, with Dean R. E. Smith, of Centenary College, Conference Adult Superintendent, delivering the message at the 10 o'clock hour. He stated he had invited Bishop Hay to preach the 11 o'clock sermon. There will be fifth Sunday rallies, not only in the Ruston District, but in several of our districts.

The writer had the pleasure of spending Sunday, June 15, in Crowley. They have a "B" Type school there, and hope to be the first school of this type to reach the goal of being a "Standard School," coming up with the ten points required by Annual Conference. Mr. H. W. Moore is superintendent of this school, and Rev. Alonzo Early, pastor, former Conference superintendent.

METHODIST UNIFICATION.

By Rev. Isaac L. Peebles.

According to Paragraphs 37 and 38 of our Discipline of 1922, no session of a Southern Methodist General Conference can be had legally without due time allowed each Annual Conference for a new election, if each or any one of them may so prefer.

It does not require a Solomon to see that point of law. The fact that the Northern Methodist Church has grossly ignored God's plan concerning women through a long history of his church, and also his written will, and made preachers of women, and too many other things mentionable, makes it quite unwise and exceedingly risky for the Southern Methodist Church to unite with it without safer conditions than now exist.

Not to unite just at this period does not savor the least disregard for Christ's prayer for unity of his people, for he was and is far from a unity that disregards his plans and will in the least.

Admitting that our own church is itself too lax at some points, is no just reason for its unity with the Northern Church, which is more lax than it is. In truth, it is a strong reason for non-unity until both churches measure up to the Scriptural standard as perfectly as they should have done.

Let us not forget that disunity of the Methodist Church and Episcopal Church, or Church of England, benefited both, spiritually and otherwise. Let us be prayerful, thoughtful and wisely slow about union just now.

I am not in favor of just any kind of union, but I am in favor of a rigidly Scriptural union, and the Holy Trinity forbid any other kind.

THE CORINTH DISTRICT CONFERENCE

And the District Standard Sunday School Training School.

The Corinth District Conference met in its fifty-fourth regular annual session, in Booneville, Miss., June 27, 1924. It was in every way a good session. The attendance was unusually good. Every pastor was present except one. We also had an unusual number of visitors. The District Sunday School Standard Training School was held at the same time and place. It was the largest school of its kind ever held in Mississippi. Representatives from nearly every charge in the district, the presiding elder, and all of the pastors except two, and a good number of the local preachers, were enrolled in the several classes. The total number enrolling in the classes was 168, and 140 were given certificates of credit. The faculty was composed of Rev. R. H. B. Gladney, Rev. W. W. Woollard, Rev. C. A. Bowen, Mrs. J. M. Wyatt, Mrs. J. B. Randolph, and Miss Linda Ramey. The spirit, teaching and work were splendid. A school like this means a new day in the Sunday school and church work in the district. The sessions of the district conference were held in the Methodist church in the forenoon, and the Training School classes met in the public school building in the afternoon. There was preaching morning and evening at the church.

The preachers of the conference were Revs. N. G. Augustus, V. C. Curtis, J. E. Stephens, W. W. Woollard, C. A. Bowen, L. H. Estes, and W. M. McIntosh. Mr. G. L. Morelock spoke at both the morning and evening hours Friday on the laymen's work in the church.

License to preach was granted to J. I. Carter and B. W. Smith. Recommendations for admission on trial were granted to S. B. Potts, W. C. McKay and E. P. Craddock. W. M. McIntosh and E. C. Sullivan were recommended for readmission.

The connectional men in attendance were: V. C. Curtis, President Board of Missions; S. A. Brown, Orphans' Home Commissioner; J. H. Holder, Educational Secretary; B. P. Jaco, Secretary of Missions; L. H. Estes, Hospital Secretary; J. E. Stephens, of Grenada College; Dr. D. M. Key, President of Millsaps College, and G. L. Morelock, Secretary General Board of Lay Activities. Each gave a good account of himself and his interest.

Rev. J. M. Wyatt, Rev. A. Y. Brown and Rev. E. Johnson were welcome visitors from other districts.

Those elected lay delegates to the Annual Conference were: J. B. Reynolds, Judge T. E. Pegram, D. H. Hall, J. G. Houston, J. A. Lowe, R. M. Weaver, J. A. Cunningham, and J. J. Taylor; alternate delegates: Mrs. J. B. Randolph, W. T. Rogers, H. E. Finger, and Mrs. J. B. Reynolds.

J. G. Houston was re-elected District Lay Leader, with J. A. Lowe and H. E. Finger, Associate Lay Leaders. E. R. Smoot, W. W. Jnoes, W. I. White and E. G. Mohler were elected as the District Licensing Committee.

A resolution opposing the pending plan of unification was adopted by the conference by a two-thirds majority vote.

Great is the Methodism of Booneville. It has a great pastor in Rev. E. G. Mohler, and it has some choice and great-spirited laymen. Booneville threw open its doors to all, preachers, delegates, visitors, faculty and students of the Training School, and still there was room.

The presidency of our presiding elder was kind, considerate and efficient. He is an untiring worker. There was general and genuine regret that he is winding out his quadrennium on the district. Resolutions of appreciation of his administration were adopted.

The next district conference goes to Belmont.

DEAR CHRISTIAN FRIENDS.

I am a poor boy in misfortune, and I write this letter to you all to see if you can help me a little by buying a box of beautiful Sea Shells. They are strange and wonderful things, fine for presents, souvenirs, or keep-sakes. Price, $1 a box. I am a crippled boy, permanently bed-ridden, caused by a fall. I can't walk or sit up. Been down in bed 25 years and I have to earn a living in my helpless condition, and if you can send me an order for a box of Sea Shells I sure will appreciate your kindness, and I believe you will be pleased with these pretty Sea Shells.

Yours in Misfortune.

IN FAVOR OF UNIFICATION.

I am for a united Methodist church, for in union there is strength. While there may be some objectionable points, there are not enough to wrangle over. Why harp on the mistakes of the past? Let us look forward to a great future for a united Methodist church of the world. As I see it, the plan is as fair as we could expect. Neither branch of the church loses anything, but all is gain. Let us have less strife and more harmony, and press towards the mark of the high calling in Jesus Christ.

W. S. COWART.

Lucedale, Miss.

AGAINST UNIFICATION.

We are glad to notice Bishop Candler is taking such an active part and hope our delegates to the General Conference will ere long see things as he does, and follow suit.

We have no ill feeling for our Northern brethren, but we love our Southern church in which our fathers and forefathers worshiped. We cannot countenance such a thing as the ban being taken off dancing, theatre-going, card-playing, etc. Too much "world in the church" already.

While considering a union, would it not be well to think about launching a movement to secure funds for the purpose of building hospitals and insane asylums, for the members who pull off will need treatment, both mental and physical. Where will they go, Christian Science and what not? We hold to the doctrine of "falling from grace" and final apostacy. We understand the mission of the church is to save souls; better "hold on to that which is good." When our Lord was on earth, on one occasion, there arose a storm at sea. The disciples were in jeopardy, their Master asleep in the ship. They came to him and said: "Carest thou not that we perish?" Then he arose, and rebuked the wind, and said unto the sea, "Peace, be still," and the wind ceased and there was a great calm.

Brethren, we are at sea. "The tempest is raging, the billows are tossing high;" but let us remember the One who stilled the tempest then is alive forevermore, and he is not asleep. "He is the same yesterday, today and forever," in love and in power, and will hear the cry of his people. To you whose business it is to make our plans, we beg you, we plead with you, be careful, go slow. Don't give us the fatal blow without a chance. Don't throw us overboard either to be swallowed by a whale, or left to drift into the great ocean of eternity. Let us hold on with tenacious grip to our Methodist Episcopal Church, South, and with united prayers of faith we believe the Master will come to our rescue, and save us from peril.

ADVERTISING THE AUXILIARY.

It was seeing a placard poster on a country roadside, advertising a missionary meeting, that led Robert Moffat to become a missionary. As he read the announcement of the meeting there came to him memories of the missionary stories that his mother used to tell him, and he asked himself the question: "Why should not I be a missionary?" The answer was a life spent in Africa.

This fact alone has made me an enthusiast on advertising our missionary meetings. I use posters, the blackboard and the secular press. The posters can be hung in the vestibule or in other conspicuous places where they will attract attention. We can make many kinds of posters—calendar posters, motto posters, topic posters, or posters inviting members to the study circle and advertising meetings or entertainments. What we learn through the sense of sight makes a more lasting impression than what we hear. I use the blackboard constantly for a few terse sentences conveying information calculated to arouse interest or excite inquiry about meetings of the Auxiliary, Week of Prayer, entertainments, the election of officers, or any other missionary news. The items should always be newsy and brief.

We should be missionary boosters. The men who lead the procession in the commercial life of American cities and towns are the men who never hide their light, who are the largest advertisers, who are before the people constantly with the bargains which they have to offer, and who know the value of publicity. Why, then, do missionary women linger where the moss grows, when it comes to advertising? Why cling to the antiquated ideas of the ox-cart period? This is the age of the publicity movement in the avenues of human endeavor. It is the age of printers' ink and progress and of wise men who read the signs of the times and keep in advance of their customers. I am sure that we as missionary workers do not properly advertise our goods.

Some of you will say: "All that takes time." I know from experience that it does take time, but it pays. It takes work, and one doing this advertising will even get knocks and discouragements. But what of that? The philosophy of life is like a bicycle. It goes well on the level and downhill and over good roads, but with the uphill and the mud one must needs get off and push. We are all at the pushing time in our publicity work in the Missionary Society. We need more women to do publicity work. Any one can use the blackboard or make a poster. These latter can be gotten up at very small expense by means of a piece of cardboard or cloth, paste, pictures and a few colored crayons.

We should advertise constantly in the daily or weekly press. It is advisable to use the same space all the time. No charge is made for such items. The news should not be given over the telephone, but should be written out plainly and sent direct to the editor.

Such a missionary advertiser is the bearer of good news. She stands at the gate to announce the victories won. She catches the shouts of triumph all along the line and sends them out to the rest of the army. She cheers with the news of the forward movement everywhere.

"The constant drip of water wears away the hardest stone;
The constant gnaw of Towser masticates the hardest bone;
The constant wooing lover carries off
the blushing maid,
And the constant advertiser always gets the trade." —Anon.

WHO DESIRES THIS REWARD?

When a child I did so love the land of Make-Believe where I'd trail my mother's long dress over the floor and carry high the grey poke bonnet to receive great callers into the blue room at the White House—and I, the First Lady in the Land! I left the land of Make-Believe long years ago and never returned until a few nights ago and I'll tell you why I wandered back again. My heart was filled with longing to give the $300 needed by Louisiana Conference to pay the scholarship at Scarritt of a splendid young girl. Longing could not furnish this money, so I entered the land of Make-Believe and paid the scholarship there.

And I thought of how when my Heavenly Father would call me home one day, I'd see a group of foreign people coming toward me with such loving gratitude upon their faces, and words of praise for me upon their lips, and I'd say: "My friends, what have I ever done for you?" And they would answer with tears of joy, "You helped us to know Jesus." And I would tell them gently, "You must be mistaken; I think I never saw you before." But they would insist, "You sent us a missionary once who told us of a Savior. Oh, if you had not provided for her training and her coming to us we would never have heard of Jesus, nor known His wonderful love"—and tears of joy and gratitude were streaming down their faces.

I had never felt so much happiness in all my life as at that moment. And as I passed down the golden streets, in my thoughts, a little child ran toward me with outstretched arms, and as we met she clasped her baby arms around my neck and told me how a dear young missionary whom I had sent had taken her away from horrible torture of heathen doctors to a Christian hospital and eased the terrible pain and told her stories of Jesus until the angels came one day and took her to the Heavenly Home. And I cried out in ecstasy, "Oh, God, to have spared a little child such pain and it only cost me a few dollars!"

And then I passed by an old couple with sweet, smiling faces, and they called me and put their hands in blessings upon my head and whispered, "You sent us some one to tell us of Jesus; we wouldn't be here if it were not for you." And that peace that passeth all understanding was in my heart. And then the crowds began to press upon me, many saying, "The missionary you sent told others and they told us."

And I cried out in agony of contemplation, "My God, my God; if I had failed!"

And then it was I heard the sweetest voice in earth or Heaven saying, "BUT YOU DID NOT FAIL ME." And turning, I looked upon His face, that face I had longed and prayed to see for so many years—my Savior's! And I thought I could not hardly bear the glory that was in my heart!

Dear friends, won't somebody make the paying of this scholarship REAL, for that is really the only part of this story that belongs to Make-Believe land. Your reward will be just so great and wonderful as is pictured here. Louisiana News.

INFORMATION WANTED FOR OFFICIAL YEAR BOOK.

In the last number of the Year Book of our Church was printed a list of our preachers who were born in or before 1841. It is our own plan to enlarge this list, taking in any other preachers who may have been born in or before 1845. We desire also to give a list of lay members (both men and women) who were born in or before 1845. I will therefore be under obligations to any reader who may come under either of the above classifications or who may have friends or acquaintances who are eligible for listing under either head, if he or she will advise me at an early day of the names, giving also date and place of birth, Conference membership and present address.

We desire also the names of preachers in any of our Conferences who are fathers and sons, or brothers.

We feel sure that the information asked for above when tabulated and classified and printed in our Year Book will be very valuable to future historians.

Please address all letters to me at 810 Broadway, Nashville, Tenn.

MR. WESLEY'S TEST.

By H. Walter Featherstun, D.D.

Mr. Wesley raised this question: "How shall we try those who think that they are moved by the Holy Ghost to preach?" He answered by seeking answers to nine other queries, the last two of which are these: "Have they fruit? Are any truly convinced of sin and converted to God by their preaching?"—Wesley's Works, Vol. v. p. 230. Mr. Wesley commissioned laymen to preach. Those whom we class as "local preachers," he designated as "lay preachers:" i. e., laymen who preached. Christ did this: "Now after these things (the sending out the twelve) the Lord appointed seventy others, and sent them." Luke, 10:1. These "seventy others" were laymen. Our present-day "lay activities movement," like Mr. Wesley's "lay preacher" system, is only a getting back to our Lord's method, away from which Mediaeval Romanism had led the churches.

Paragrah 121 of our Discipline contains these test questions used by Mr. Wesley, thus fully committing our church to the policy introduced by Christ and followed by Wesley. Our Lord, in John 15:8, says: "Herein is my Father glorified that ye bear much fruit (lead many to salvation); so shall ye be my disciples." Thus the Christ indicates clearly and strongly that bringing sinners to salvation is the one real test of discipleship; and, certainly must be the one outstanding business of every preacher of Christ's Gospel.

It has been asserted rather freely of late that some of our preachers who have been classed as Modernists, teaching the so-called "higher criticism," do not bring sinners to Christ. Is this true of any? I do not know. I am inclined to discredit the charge. I certainly would hope that it is erroneous. But if it is true, it is a matter of tremendous import. The question is not to be settled by mere rumor, much less by unproved opinions.

I have not the slightest sympathy with the contentions of the so-called Modernists; nor am I a "Fundamentalist" other than one who believes in the fundamental doctrines of our Methodism. I am concerned to know if we have prominent preachers in our church who do not and cannot lead sinners to salvation. If anybody knows of any such, "let him now speak, or else hereafter forever hold his peace."

There is no reference in this to any beginner in his ministrial swaddling clothes. If he will but move on in the old Methodist paths, he will soon find that joy of joys, the joy over one sinner that repents.'

Not Well Since Three Years Old

Catarrh of the Ear Neighbor Recommended PE-RU-NA

The experience of Mrs. J. C. Dacus, 1621 Booker St., Little Rock, Ark., was not an unusual one. It was in fact a repetition of what has happened in thousands upon thousands of instances. She had a running condition of the ear from the time she was three years old.

In spite of treatment it persisted and became very offensive. One day a neighbor recommended Pe-ru-na and La-cu-pia which had relieved his wife of the same trouble.

Mrs. Dacus used three bottle of each of these quick acting remedies and reports that the discharge and offensive odor are both gone.

Her disease was one of the very many forms taken by Catarrh and is known as chronic Otitis.

Wherever the catarrhal condition is located Pe-ru-na reaches it.

May be purchased any place in tablet or liquid form.

INTER-BOARD LIFE SERVICE CO-OPERATION.

By Garfield Evans.

For four years various members of several of the Boards have been interested in having but one program for Life Service presented in our church. The failure to be united was not because the Boards differed, nor because of unwillingness to co-operate. But during the two recent church-wide movements, every connectional man was occupied to the limit of his ability with particularly assigned work. In the second place, General Conference has previously made no provisions by which the Boards have felt inclined thus to co-operate. In the third place, where no provision is made for co-operation there is a tendency for every man to pursue his work according to his own inclination within the limits of the constitution and General Conference provisions.

The last General Conference authorized an Inter-Board Committee of Co-operation, whose duty is to suggest to the several Boards matters in which greater efficiency may be secured by co-operative work. One of these things has been the matter of Life Service Promotion. At the present time, there is an Inter-Board Life Service Committee composed of two members from each Board. Every member is interested in the direction of Life Service Promotion for the whole church inasmuch as all four Boards, namely, Epworth League Board, Sunday School Board, Board of Education, and Board of Missions, are concerned in the organizations in the local churches.

There are some who will think that another Board has been created. If so, they do not understand the meaning of co-operation. The four Boards are contributing to the united budget of $8,000 yearly, which will provide for the salary of the superintendent and necessary office expenses. This will cost considerably less than the present expenditures which are met by the Boards independently. It will not take the place of the candidate work required, as in the Board of Missions, neither does it prohibit any Board from its original jurisdiction in such promotion as is required by the peculiar work of any given Board. But it does insure a united presentation of Life Service to the local church. It further avoids overlapping in the cultivation of volunteers, and it will guarantee greater accuracy to the cultivation of all volunteers rather than to any particular group that any one Board might be inclined to cultivate.

At the present time, with the consent of all four Boards, the Epworth League Board has been undertaking the cultivation of volunteers. This work will be taken over by the Inter-Board Committee as quickly as all the details are wrought out. This is perhaps the first act of Inter-Board Co-operation on such a scale that has been accomplished during this quadrennium. For those who think that Inter-Board Co-operation is impossible, consider this very successful undertaking.

GIVING HER BEST.

In the days of the disruption of the Scottish Church those who came out into the New Church had the greatest difficulty in erecting a house of worship, the lairds being all Auld Kirk folk. After a struggle they got a little bit of land, but could not get quarry stones with which to build. So they just made it up with any rubble at hand until they came to the lintel stone for the door, at which point they stuck fast and could go no farther. One day the minister upon calling at a poor woman's cottage was agreeably surprised on being offered her hearthstone, which was just the size and shape wanted. She said she would be proud to give her hearthstone to the Lord Jesus Christ. It was joyfully accepted and long after, when a fine new church was erected, this same hearthstone was given the premier place, and still her story is told: "She hath done what she could."—The Standard.

FROM GLENMORA, LA.

Dear Dr. Carley—I have not sent in much to the Advocate lately, aud I have a few things that I am glad to say about our work at Glenmora.

Our church here is going through a big change this year in its membership. The W. M. Cady interests at McNary, which furnished a large part of our congregation and took care of one-half of the finances, is gone. This mill cut out the first of the year and is now in Arizona. We kuew this crisis was coming and did our best to tide the church over. It is true that a great many of our people got weak and became discouraged and wanted to give up, but we had a loyal board of stewards that held steady and is now coming through. We may come up a little short on finances at Conference, but we are having a great year spiritually.

Our Sunday school attendance is as good as it has ever been; the Woman's Missionary Society is good, with one of the largest and best working Junior Missionary Societies that I have ever seen. I fully believe that our Senior and Intermediate Epworth Leagues are the best. These young folks are the pastor's mainstay at all the services. These two Leagues never miss a preaching service or a prayer meeting. Nearly all of the Senior Leaguers and some of the Intermediates are officers and teachers in the Sunday school. Our Sunday school is one of the best organized and best working schools in the Conference. We have the school thoroughly graded and in five departments, with separate meeting places for each department, meeting with a competent superintendent.

Our church has produced a preacher, who is president of our Senior League. His name is Clareuce B. White. He is a high school student, with one more year in the high school. He has been appointed preacher in charge of the Hopewell circuit, which takes in a large rural section of our country. He goes out regularly to his work and is making good. He has gone into this circuit and is organizing Sunday schools and Epworth Leagues. He has two good Epworth Leagues now, where it has been thought impossible. It is our plan to see him through Centenary after he finishes the high school. I have just been with him in his revival at Hopewell, which was a real revival. We had twelve accessions to the church, all by baptism, and we baptized four babies and administered the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. The church took on new life and promises to go forward, which I am confident it will do.

Seven of the ten stewards of the church here I have received into the church since I have been here—three of them on profession of faith. In fact, we have a new church here. I suppose three-fourths of our congregations are made up of new people, who have come into the church since I came here, two and a half years ago. We have a new church plant that would do credit to towns much larger than Glenmora. We can seat in our main auditorium 1,000 people. This auditorium is seated with heavy oak pews.

LENGTHEN YOUR LIFE

Did it ever strike you, electric light customer, gas user and street railway rider, how much genius you get for every dollar you invest in the labor-saving devices of the public utilities?

Did you ever stop to think that a water heater, electric fan, that handy little motor that sweeps carpets, drives the washing machine or cream separator or makes ice for you with very little investment on your part, may be a direct means of adding years to your life? Every electrical or gas fed device is an economy not only in terms of money but in terms of life itself.

GOSLING DAY.

By Rev. H. M. Ellis.

Gosling day is here again. The downy little geese are in evidence in many fields and meadows, waddling awkwardly around, nipping grass aud catching insects; with never an apology for their aucestral liue or a blush for what they are.

And the college graduate—of course, "sweet" or "handsome," as sex decides—is out again with essay and oratory, solving all the unsolvable problems, aud a few more, of the universe. If only the sages, and those ou whom great responsibility rests would attend college commencements! And just think—they might have done this any year for the last several thousand! Alas! Alas!

But the present year has set a new gosling record, eclipsing the gosling glory of all former ages. The National Methodist Student Conference (get that title!) has shed its lustrous beams of courageous verdancy, vociferous inexperience, cavernous innocence of information and superlative readiness to meddle with anything, no matter how many and terrible its teeth, how rapid its revolutions, how explosive or redhot, or sacred. This marvelous gosling meet immediately, and some sooner, settled for all time and eternity all the problems that were and are and are to be of church and State and world, etc., and left nothing for even the high councils of heaven but to take care of the execution of these gosling decrees. Well, certainly the setting of downy goslings to deal with such subjects as were laid before that so-called conference was the sure proof that the eggs for the incubation were from full-blooded geese.

But what of the wide heralding by the press of this gosling meet? Is that just one more token of the jazz and frothiness of our day, illustrating the growing disposition to laugh at precedents and scoff at authorities? A gosliug day indeed for many it seems to be; they scout the advice of age and experience; they scorn the lessons of history and the voice of law; they plunge headlong down the untried way of their whims and inclinations, letting ignorance and immaturity handle the reins and set their own pace. Down with the bars. Away with eoutrols. Step on the gas.

This very day, just a few miles down our main southern highway, inexperienced and venturesome youth at the wheel of a big car determined to give an exhibit of "pep." She stepped on the gas and took the curve—then wreckage and broken limbs and death and frantic lamentations! History wrote a terrible parable for those who can comprehend.

But certainly there could never have occurred such a magnificent gosling hatch as the present day has produced without a very considerable ancestry of geese.

FROM MOUNT OLIVE, MISS.

We have just closed a great meeting at Mount Olive. Rev. J. M. Smith and his singers, Mr. Loes and sister, came on June 4, and left us to-day. These three are fine help in a meeting. Brother Smith came with his tent, which has a seating capacity of 2,500. We had very large crowds from the first service to the last one. We do not know how many conversions, but we had 30 additions to the various churches of the town: Methodist, 15; Presbyterian, 8; Baptist, 7. Brother Smith goes from Mount Olive to Flora, Miss. We pray God's blessings to rest upon Brother Smith and his workers.

J. H. FOREMAN, P. C.

WHY AM I OPPOSED TO UNIFICATION?

1. Because I feel sure that at least 80% of the Southern Methodists do not wish it—and I am pretty well acquainted with them. I personally know many in all the Southern and some of the Western States, and those who have expressed themselves stato positively that they do not want it.

2. It is not necessary; we are making good progress, and should let well enough alone.

3. A majority of the Northern preachers to whom I have had the pleasure of talking have strong modernist leaniugs. Their schools outdo Vanderbilt in their teachings—if correctly reported.

4. The matter has never been properly presented to the vast majority of the church members.

NEW ORLEANS CHRISTIAN ADVOCATE

Vol. 71—No. 27. Official Organ of the Louisiana, Mississippi, and North Mississippi Conferences, Methodist Episcopal Church, South. Whole No. 3569.

HENRY T. CARLEY, Editor. NEW ORLEANS, LA., THURSDAY, JULY 3, 1924. CHAS. O. CHALMERS, Manager.

OUR MINISTRY OF TO-MORROW.

By Dr. R. H. Bennett, Secretary, Department of Ministerial Supply and Training and Life Service.

In answer to numerous requests in our church, I have culled out the following items from my year's work, believing that their publication will answer many inquiries and I trust will be of benefit to the church. There should be material in these figures and statements for the annual sermon on the claims of the Christian ministry required by the Discipline in every pulpit, and other exhortations along similar lines. They are sent forth with the earnest hope and prayer that they may prove to be seed for an increased harvest.

A good deal of the year has been given to the general platform work of Christian Education, and especially of our Christian Education Movement; the rounds of the Annual Conferences, the visitation of our schools and colleges and young people's assemblies have followed. I have traveled the usual fifty-thousand miles and over and have presented the Life Service call to scores of thousands of our young people in public speech and private conversation. The administration of the several loan funds, the publication and circulation of literature among our volunteers, the office correspondence and cultivation of a large number of these young people have been prominent features of the schedule. Other items of the year's work of the department have been the Correspondence Schools and the Preachers' Summer Institutes, in both of which agencies of the church efficient work has been done. Time has been found also to hold revival meetings in three of our colleges, in which meetings we have been graciously blessed.

The Volunteers.

We reported last year a total enrollment of 6,472 volunteers. During the present year we have received a total of 538 new names for Christian Life Service, making a grand total of 7,010 volunteers now on our rolls. Of the new names received this year, 343 are offering for the Christian ministry, 107 for Foreign Missions, 59 for Home Missions, and 29 for other work or undecided on their field.

Of the 280 presiding elders in our home Conferences, 205, as required by the Discipline, have sent in the lists of ministerial licentiates and candidates. Of our 87 school and college presidents, 49 have sent us in the lists of volunteers in their student body. In the schools heard from we have 596 students for the ministry, and 572 volunteers for other forms of Christian service, a total of 1,168 volunteers for all forms of Christian service reported in our schools. Adding the schools not heard from, the figures would probably be considerably larger.

Methodist Students in Other Schools Than Our Own.

In addition to the visitation of our own schools, I have during the year visited most of the State universities in the East and have arranged my plans to visit those in the West. The cordial welcome extended by the university authorities has been gratifying. In nearly every instance they have given me the entire student body to address, and sometimes have changed the hours of recitations in order to give me more time. This is mentioned, not as any personal compliment to the writer, but in order to note the great advance in sentiment on this point in the last few years. Our fellow-Christians in the State school faculties realize their responsibility for the moral welfare of their pupils and welcome the help of the church. Thousands of our own children in the State colleges need our help. We cannot neglect them. The various Boards of our church are now devising means of meeting this responsibility of caring for the religious life of Methodist students in other schools than our own. This must be done, as we trust it will be done, without neglecting our own institutions whose building and maintenance have been achieved at the price of such great sacrificial toil and self-denial.

Student Aid Funds.

There has been loaned during the year to our students for the ministry and other forms of Christian Life Service from the different loan funds a total of $10,162. Ninety-two students have been helped. A much larger amount could be worthily applied if it were available. Brother Leisurely, please pay up your Christian Education pledge, and help our young leaders of tomorrow to get a better preparation for their life work.

The Office Work.

The summary of the office work for the year is as follows: 2,620 letters, cards, etc., have been received; 12,013 letters have been written; 6,043 of these have been individual letters; 23,950 pamphlets have been sent out; 49,000 pamphlets have been printed.

Large Increase in New Preachers.

The number of preachers admitted on trial shows a large increase over last year. In 1922 we admitted on trial 262. In 1923 the number rose to 340. Some notably large classes for admission have been received this year. I give those receiving ten or more: North Alabama heads the list with 28; North Mississippi and Virginia each received 20; then follow Kentucky, 16; Baltimore, Central Texas, and Holston, each 15; North Texas, 14; North Arkansas, 13; Florida and Upper South Carolina, each 12; West Texas and Tennessee, each 11, and Lonisiana, St. Louis, and West Virginia, each 10. We still need a larger number of preachers. Our church is now using 809 supplies to fill her pulpits. This is a large decrease of supplies withiu the last several years. We used nearly 1,200 supplies some years ago.

But Sagging Still Further on Two-Thirds Rule.

There is, however, no improvement in the proportion of those admitted under the two-thirds rule on account of insufficient preparation, but rather a further sagging. Last year we admitted 22 out of 262 under this rule, about one in twelve. This year we admitted 37 out of 340 under this easy-going regulation, or about one in every nine. It would certainly seem that only in rare cases widely recognized as unusual where the personal merit is great and where further scholastic preparation is impossible, should this rule be used. I have, however, seen this year young men admitted by Annual Conferences under the two-thirds rule, young men whose only reason for not pursuing their studies further seemed a disinclination to do so. With our aid fund in hand for students, this excuse is removed. Ought not Annual Conferences, therefore, make it a matter of principle to require practically all applicants for admission to come up to the very modest standard set by our church, viz., the equivalent of a high school course? We give the names of the Annual Conferences which have invoked the aid of the two-thirds rule this year, and the figures in each case. Surely the figures speak loudly of an abuse of this regulation: Baltimore admitted 7 under the two-third rule; North Alabama, 6; North Arkansas, 3; North Mississippi, 4; Louisiana, 3; Central Texas, 2; Louisville, 2; North Texas, 2; Tennessee, 2; Texas, 2; Little Rock, 1; Northwest Texas, 1; West Texas, 1.

More Preachers Mastering Their Studies.

Attention was called last year by the writer to a strange state of affairs that has grown up among us of late years, viz., the failure of so many of our undergraduate preachers to stand or to pass the examinations on their studies. And some earnest and kindly, but affectionate animadversions were made in the press by the writer to this reprehensible practice. We are gratified to report a decided improvement in this sorry business. Last year out of 1,316 undergraduates, 107 failed to pass their examinations. This year out of 1,701 undergraduates, 335 failed. Without claiming all the credit for this improvement, we feel that we have not lived entirely in vain. We thank God and take courage and hope for a further improvement. There is, however, much land yet to be possessed. The following statistics show the record of the Annual Conferences on this matter:

Total admitted on trial in 1923, 340. Total failing in their studies, 337. Total undergraduates on our rolls, 1,701. The statistics refer to our English-speaking Conferences.

Two of the most useful agencies in our church for the education of the ministry are the Correspondence Schools at Emory University and at Southern Methodist University, and the Preachers' Summer Institutes. Each of these is of large value and are supplementary in their usefulness. The best results are obtained by those of our young preachers who enroll in both the Correspondence Schools and the Summer Institutes. We are looking forward to even better results during the coming months in each of those agencies, and trust that every one of our ministers who can possibly do so, will be in attendance on them. Brother Helpful, will you not make it possible for your pastor to receive this large benefit? It will come back to you and to those you associate with you in making the arrangement in improved pulpit ministrations.

UNIFICATION: SOME OBJECTIONS IN THE LIGHT OF FACT AND PRINCIPLE.

By Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, Chairman of Commission on Unification.

Some of our brethren have pitched their arguments against unification on a level very much to be regretted and where it is painful to be under the necessity of following them. But since certain statements have been made, it is right and proper that they should be examined in the light of known fact and Christian principle.

1. It is objected that the plan of unification opens the way in the church to social equality with Negroes.

This is a misstatement of facts in the case. The Joint Commission on Unification is composed of men of a fair degree of intelligence, to say the least. Not one of our commissioners would for one moment agree to any such arrangement.

It is affirmed that the plan allows Negro bishops "to preside in the College of Bishops and over the General Conference." This is a grave error. The plan definitely provides exactly the contrary. Too bad that men should make such statements! As for "Negroes sitting in the various councils of the church," in the Northern Jurisdiction they are left exactly where they now are. They will have nothing whatsoever to do with our affairs in the South. And in the Southern Jurisdiction we are left precisely as we now are. We will manage our own local affairs exactly as seems wisest to us. The story has been put in circulation that some time since a Northern bishop invited a colored bishop to the platform of an Annual Confernce and also asked him to sit in the cabinet with him, the implication being that this might happen in our jurisdiction in the South. I am reliably informed that the above mentioned incident did actually happen. But it was at a colored Conference that it took place.

We are warned that our Emory University, so dear to our hearts, will have its walls darkened by Negro students. As if trustees did not control in all such matters and as if the Southern Jurisdiction would not have final decision in the conduct of jurisdictional affairs.

Furthermore, it is stated that colored people under the plan of unification will have the right to join our Southern white churches. They will have exactly the same right they have now, and no more, and no less, and no other. Any Sunday morning at the present time a colored man might conceivably walk down the aisle and join McKendree Church, Nashville, Tenn. What is there to keep him from doing so? Exactly what will keep him from doing so under the plan of unification, nothing more, nothing less, and nothing else.

One of the finest things about our present Plan of Unification is that it completely avoids the difficult question of the colored man in the church by leaving us to deal with it as we please, and leaving our Northern brethren to deal with it as they think best. The effort to lug in this question by the ears is completely out of order and out of place. The man of strongest Southern conviction touching this matter cannot possibly find any ground for just fears. The plan fully protects us at every point. It is greatly to be regretted, therefore, that certain brethren have written things which surely they could not have written if they had taken the trouble to inform themselves. For their information and for the information of the church at large, I set down the following facts:

Concerning the status of the two colored bishops elected by our Northern brethren four years ago, the facts are as follows:

1. They were elected on a separate ballot on which the name of no white man could be written. They were not voted for at the time and on the ballot when the white bishops were elected.

They were elected exclusively for the presidency of colored Conferences, and were definitely given to understand that they were not to preside over white Conferences. In presenting the report of the Committee on Episcopacy recommending that two colored bishops be elected on a separate ballot, Dr. David G. Downey, the chairman, spoke in the following plain and explicit manner:

"We all perfectly well know that there are certain social customs that make it utterly impossible for a white general superintendent to give our brothers of color the sort of superintendency that is best adapted to stir their imagination and to stimulate their zeal to the point of highest efficiency. They cannot go and sit with them in their social gatherings. They cannot sit with them as they gather about their banquet tables, as our white bishops do with us, when we are putting over some great program and want to accomplish something for the Kingdom of God. Our colored brethren and our white superintendents thoroughly understand that to do anything of that sort would be to destroy the very thing they desire to accomplish. And, therefore, we need these colored general superintendents, that they may among their own people give them the inspiration and the leadership, the social standing if you will, among themselves and among Methodist Episcopalians of the same color, but of a little different denominational name. They need a bishop of their own color, that they may stand face to face with those denominations bearing our generic name."

"My one further word at this time is with respect to the matter of administration. You wonder perhaps how it will work out practically. Let me ask, how does it work out in practice with the pastors? Every Negro pastor here, every Negro pastor through the length and breadth of Methodism, is eligible to the pastorate of any white church in the Methodist Episcopal Church so far as the law is concerned. There is no word in our Discipline that makes it impossible for a bishop to assign a colored man to a pastorate of a white church. But does any colored man ask it, or think it, or expect it? No! In all these years they have never given us the slightest particle of trouble. So I say, when it comes to this matter of administration it will take care of itself. There are colored Conferences. There is the Republic of Liberia. The assignments of our general superintendents to their respective fields is entirely in the hands of the General Conference—I mean as to their residence; and then the assignment to Conferences is attended to by the Board of Bishops. As we look back upon the history of our colored brethren in our church we need have no question about the matter of administration, when they take their place in the ranks of our general superintendents."

2. If it now be asked, "May it not come about that under this proposed Plan of Unification, a colored bishop will some day preside over the General Conference of the United Church?" I reply by quoting the article covering that matter. Article VII is as follows:

"The bishops shall select by a majority vote of the bishops of each Jurisdiction, one or more of their number from each Jurisdiction to preside at the sessions of the General Conference.

Is not this perfectly plain? Cannot a blind man see what this Article means? Can we not be perfectly satisfied with any bishop presiding over the General Conference when he is elected, and can only be elected by a majority vote of the Southern bishops? To say this same thing over in different words, no bishops from either Jurisdiction can be selected to preside over the General Conference unless a majority of our own bishops say so. If that is not perfectly satisfactory, then nothing that could possibly be said or done would be satisfactory.

3. But if some one still objects: "Will not a colored bishop at some time preside over the joint meeting of the bishops of the two Jurisdictions?" I reply that the chairmanship of the joint meeting of the bishops will not come by order of seniority, but by election. And the rest of my reply is exactly as above. For myself, I am perfectly willing to have any man preside at our meetings who meets with the approval of the majority of my Southern colleagues.

4. Just one other thing needs to be said. Men who seem to be opposed to unification on any plan have called attention to the fact that the plan now pending says: "The bishops of the two churches as at present constituted, shall be bishops of the united church without further action." They exclaim, "There now, you will have colored bishops." I suggest that such an objector get rid at once of the "overlordship" idea of the episcopacy and remember that all bishops are just servants of the church, elected to serve the church as the church bids them, and to administer the affairs of the church how and where the church tells them. This is true of all bishops at the present time in our Southern Methodist Church. In the United Church, the white bishops in the Northern Jurisdiction will be elected by the Northern Jurisdiction and for the Northern Jurisdiction, while their colored bishops will evidently be elected on a separate ballot, especially and exclusively for their Colored Conferences.

A story is told of Charles Lamb, how that one day while walking with a friend, he saw a certain man and exclaimed: "I hate that man!" Whereupon his friend asked: "Do you know that man?" "No," replied Lamb, "I do not know him, and I do not want to know him. For if I knew him I might like him." I leave the reader to make the application of this story to the question of unification.

It is not just, it is not fair, and it is not right to confuse the minds of uninformed people by raising the ghost of social equality with Negroes, a possibility which is completely and definitely avoided and guarded against in our plan of unification.

2. Again, much is being said about the Northern Church having invaded the South, and it is claimed that the present plan legalizes and perpetuates this.

Well, as a matter of fact, certain things were done following the War between the States which ought never to have been done. And even now much money is being spent in duplication and competition and conflict. But "let him that is without sin cast the first stone." Is the Southern Church entirely guiltless?

Note this: The Southern General Conference meeting in New Orleans in 1866 definitely repudiated the plan of separation. I quote from the Journal of the General Conference of 1866, page 88, as follows:

"Resolved, That as the geographical line defining the territorial limits of the Methodist Episcopal Church and the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, established by the General Conference of 1844 has been officially and practically repudiated and disregarded by the Methodist Episcopal Church, therefore we are bound neither legally nor morally by it, and that we feel ourselves at liberty to extend our ministrations and ecclesiastical jurisdiction to all beyond that line who may desire us so to do."

Following this, our church began a campaign of expansion beyond the line agreed upon in the plan of separation. It was at the 1866 General Conference that the Baltimore Conference came to us, thus carrying Southern Methodism into the North. At the same time we organized the Illinois Conference, and, following out the purpose indicated in the resolution quoted, the bishops proceeded to organize an Annual Conference in the State of Indiana. The bishops were also authorized to appoint continuously Dr. C. F. Deems, of the North Carolina Conference, to a pastorate in New York City, quite a new departure as an extension of the pastorate of the Southern Church.

In harmony with the spirit and purpose of the 1866 General Conference, Bishop Marvin wrote and published in the Southern Review an article (now reprinted and being circulated as an anti-unification document) in which he urges the same thing. I find the following language in the conclusion of Bishop Marvin's article:

"Fifty years hence there will be a Methodist Church in the land, . . . her children dwelling in peace in the South and the North, in the West and in the East, with Republican and Democrat, Radical and Conservative alike calling her blessed. . . . This is the destiny of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South."

And note this also. At the Hot Springs General Conference in 1922 our present senior bishop favored and fathered a plan looking toward the union of our church with the United Brethren, a church which has only a few scattered congregations in the South, but is quite strong in the North, particularly in the North Central States. If this scheme had succeeded, it would have put our church in the very heart of Northern Methodist territory. And some of those who were interested in it did not hesitate to say openly that they approved it because it would save us from our sectionalism and make us a nation-wide church.

The fact of the business is that it is the very growth and increase of these two Methodisms which have made conflict and overlapping inevitable.

The Methodist Episcopal Church, South, must not be sentenced and doomed to become and remain a sectional and provincial church. For no true church of Jesus Christ can rest satisfied to fly a provincial flag. Our fathers in 1866 went even a step farther than has been indicated above. They voted to change the name of our church to the Episcopal Methodist Church and planned to make our church as wide as the nation. Unfortunately the Annual Conferences did not ratify the action of the General Conference changing the name of the church. If now unification should fail—which may God forbid!—then there will be nothing left for our church to do but to proceed to drop the limiting suffix "South" and go wherever God may call us to go.

3. With amazement we read from the pen of our senior bishop the following strange and hitherto unheard-of sentiment: "We will grow by respecting national lines and racial prejudices."

Just think of such a principle. We grow by sectionalism and by prejudice! Thank God! I do not believe it. Per contra, I proclaim the New Testament doctrine that we grow by catholicity and by Christian love.

We do recognize that East differs from West and North from South. We do believe that each section of the church should be left to work out its own peculiar problems in its own peculiar way. And the consummate merit of the present plan of unification is that it provides for this very thing. Jurisdiction No. 1 can have its own peculiarities, and Jurisdiction No. 2 will attend to its own local matters in its own way without let or hindrance, while at the same time giving itself to the larger concerns of the church and of the nation.

Let it be remembered and never forgotten that this American nation is not two but one. A divided church is simply out of date and out of place in a united nation. "A united nation" did I say? And yet not united. Many diverse elements threaten the very life of America. Racial antagonisms threaten us. The strife the bloody war—between labor and capital threatens us. The massed and solid forces of unrighteousness threaten us. The hope of the world lies in America. Shall a divided Methodism keep open wounds that should have been healed long ago? Shall a divided Methodism keep America divided? As patriots as well as Christians our duty is plain. Let us put Christ in the midst of all. Let us bind together the two bleeding sections of Methodism. How can a divided church and warring Methodism stand for love and unity in the nation at large?

"We grow by racial prejudices!" Never! We grow by racial appreciation and good will. No one more than I believes in and stands for racial purity and integrity. The white race must remain white and the black race black; the blacker the better for the blacks, and God knows the better for the whites. By this we stand and shall stand forever.

4. One of our bishops objects to the powers given the Judicial Council.

In particular he criticizes Section 1 of Article IX, which reads as follows:

"The Judicial Council shall also have power to arrest an action of a connectional board or other connectional body when such action is brought before it by appeal by one-fifth of the members of said body present and voting or by a majority of the bishops."

He says: "I do not want our Mission Board handled in any such way." I wonder when the bishop changed his mind. For he was a short while ago an ardent advocate of this very thing, and is in part responsible for the presence of this article in the plan. The facts are as follows: A few years ago there arose a misunderstanding between the bishop in charge in Mexico and the Board of Missions. The bishop held that the Board of Missions was trying to do an unconstitutional thing. For this reason Bishop Hoss, who prepared the Episcopal Address, which was read by Bishop Denny at the General Conference meeting in Atlanta, Ga., in 1918, and signed by Bishop Candler and all the bishops, made the following recommendation:

"But we suggest that some easy method be devised for arresting illegal and unconstitutional action upon the part of the Boards of the church. The General Conference may be checked, the Annual Conferences also are under legal and constitutional restraints, and the bishops are liable to be summoned before the Committee on Episcopacy and tried by the General Conference for any violation of law. But the law of the church has never provided an authority to decide questions of law that may arise in the General Boards, a fact which we think deserves your careful consideration and action."

This was the origin of the provision which the bishop now objects to. It is quite interesting to observe that the bishop now objects to the very plan which a short while ago he strongly favored. Well, "the times change, and we change with them."

5. Again, one of our bishops objects to unification with the Northern brethren because, he says, Northern Methodists and Southern Methodists have always been unlike in spirit and practice and have grown more and more unlike with the passing of the years.

This same bishop also objects to Northern Methodists spending money for their white work in the South, since both churches are Methodist churches, preaching the same gospel and called to do the same work.

Well, he cannot have both ways. If we are greatly different one from the other, as he says, then the Northern Church has just as much right in the South as the Baptists and the Presbyterians. If, on the other hand, we are so much alike that we ought not to compete one with the other (and this is my position), then we ought to stop this competition and find some way of getting together. The present plan does give us the chance to make a beginning of unification by co-operation. It does not go all the way, but it does make a start in the right direction. For one to say that he is in favor of unification but does not favor this plan is as if one should say that he is greatly desirous of taking a trip to California but objects to anything that will start him in that direction.

The fact of the business is, there is only one way to put a stop to the competition and conflict now going on between the two great Episcopal Methodisms. And in all the world there is nothing like it, for these two churches are related the one to the other as no other two churches. For eighty years now we have tried every other sort of plan. First, we had no fraternal relations one with the other, but stood off and frowned at each other. Then we Southern Methodists repudiated the plan of separation and tried invading Northern territory. Then we tried the Cape May Commission. Then we tried federation. Then we tried the Federal Council with full power to decide conflicts, and it decided nothing. Meantime as each church grows stronger the conflict grows stronger. If we were two weak churches, there would be no conflict. If we were different the one from the other, as Baptists and Presbyterians are different, there would be no conflict. It is not our differences that bring about our difficulties; it is our similarities. We preach the same gospel; we have the same efficient form of episcopal administration; we have the same spirit of evangelism; we both "look upon the world as our parish." We are essentially one. Since we are essentially the same in origin, in belief, in spirit, in purpose, and in polity, this essential unity ought now to be made actual in organization and administration throughout the world.

I favor the present plan of unification for the following reasons:

1. Because it gives to each Jurisdiction the right to look after jurisdictional matters in its own way, making us one but allowing for diversity in matters that do not touch connectional interests.

2. I favor the plan because a broken-hearted world and a nation filled with discordant and warring elements cry aloud for peace and unity. America needs a united Methodism. The world calls upon Methodism to unite all her forces for the salvation of mankind.

3. I favor the present plan because these two great Methodisms have with the lapse of time become more and more one in spirit and in purpose. Eighty years ago there was sufficient reason for the bisection of American Methodism. Fifty years ago there was still reason why it was best for these two churches to work in independence each of the other. The reason for separation has now entirely passed away. There is no longer any excuse for a divided Methodism. Division is now simply artificial and forced. Separation no longer helps; it now hinders the progress of the gospel of Jesus Christ.

OPPOSED TO UNIFICATION.

I confess that I have always been opposed to every plan of unification with the Methodist Episcopal Church that has been proposed.

I think that some of our leaders, and others, have been in favor of every plan that has been suggested, and are in favor of the current one, which is the poorest of them all, since it does not unite anything on earth. One of only two things can be expected, viz., confusion, resulting in another separation, or to meekly submit to complete absorption. The latter would not be so utterly unthinkable if it were not true that there are tens of thousands of Southern Methodists who will refuse to be absorbed.

The Presbyterian Church, U. S. A., absorbed the Cumberland Church against the will of a large per cent of its members, and it wrecked both churches in the South.

We have little reason to believe that the same results would not follow in this case.

The friends of this movement are asking us to take the word of our brethren of the North that we shall be fairly treated. I have little regard for the word of a person or a group who lives in persistent disregard and repudiation of a solemn agreement.

When the Northern Church withdraws its forces from the territory allotted to the Southern Church, by agreement, and ceases its acitivities here, will be soon enough for us to begin to believe that we should be fairly treated at their hands on the ground that they promise to do so.

The defenders of this plan make much ado over the fact that the Northern General Conference adopted this plan by a practically unanimous vote, but this fact indicates to me that they knew that they could lose nothing, but had everything to gain, and it seems to me that any of us could see that.

No one suspects the Methodist Episcopal Church of being so magnanimous as to act with such unanimity in a matter that makes to the advantage of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

UNIFICATION—YES.

It was a master stroke of diplomacy in the Methodist church's following its respective section on the slave question. By so doing it held the Methodist constituency in both slave and anti-slave territory. To have remained either pro or anti-slave would have meant practically the loss of either the Northern or Southern constituency. Now that the country has long since been reunited, is it not the height of folly that after three-fourths of a century the church remains divided?

So far as the church seemed to effect a reconciliation between the people of the North and those of the South, it has actually encouraged the perpetuation of enmity by fostering a policy of aloofness, strangeness and suspicion down to the present day. It has remained for other organizations than the church to bring about a return of good will and brotherliness, and had they contributed no more than has the church in obliterating sectionalism, unification would be necessary today to make any sort of mutual reciprocity. Only the church, then, whose office it is to be a peacemaker, has withheld the hand of forgiveness and remained obstinate in its bitterness. It is time to be done with such hatred and hostility. How long will the great Head of the Church bear with such inconsistency?

There is scarcely one among us but admits that unification is desirable, but it is asked, "Why such haste?" After eighty years have passed we hear it asked, "Why hurry?" Will we be more nearly ready for unification after the lapse of another forty years? Surely we are unafraid of the plan which was devised by a Southerner and recommended by our own Committee on Unification. Surely we do not care to see a repetition of the League of Nations episode which, though we prayed and toiled for it and saw it die, and by almost all the world, was scornfully repudiated by ourselves. In the unification issue some take the position as though we were treating with an enemy instead of a brother. They write long, laborious articles on the "legal effect of unification," and present formal, tedious dissertations on technical nothings, as if we were entering a pact with a foreign people. The Methodist Church is as dear to the hearts of our brethren in the North as to our own, and they are as honorable, as loyal, as religious as we. We have a common ancestry, a common tradition, a common faith. We are brothers.

For the fiftieth time a man approached a certain Negro inquiring "Sam, are you ever going to pay me that dollar and fifty cents? You have been owing me nearly fifteen years. What are you going to do about it?" Sam replied: "Of cose, boss, I'm a-goin' pay you, but it does look lak you ought to give a feller a little time." The opponents of unification recognize the obligation and declare it ought to be paid, and though three-fourths of a century has elapsed they ask, "What's the hurry? Let's take a little time to think about it."

HOSPITAL CAUSE.

At their recent meeting the bishops urged the support of the hospital movement in the following language:

"The College of Bishops is greatly gratified at the interest in hospitals which our Methodist people are manifesting. The report made to the bishops by the trustees of Barnes Hospital shows that that great institution is rendering inestimable service in St. Louis and in that section of the country. The Wesley Memorial Hospital in Atlanta, erected at a cost of $1,500,000 and more, has been brought into vital relations to Emory University, and is now in full and successful operation. The projected institutions in Dallas, Houston, Fort Worth, Memphis, Hattiesburg and Montgomery are in process of construction or coming into condition for use. Our people are to be commended for the investments which they have already made in these hospitals and encouraged to continue their help until these and many others greatly needed in other sections have been completed and put in operation.

"The College of Bishops would respectfully urge that the support of the hospital movement should not be spasmodic, but systematic and continuous. Hospitals must not only be built, but maintained. A constant source of substantial support must be found. The bishops believe that in the Golden Cross enrollment the church has the possibility of just such a source. The bishops would hereby emphasize the importance of the Golden Cross enrollment and urge that our pastors observe diligently and faithfully the annual enrollment period from Thanksgiving to Christmas, which has been set by the General Hospital Board."

Jesus is the way. Men have quarreled about that way until men have forgotten where it leads. —Barnwell.

EVANGELISM.

By Dr. R. I. Russell, Secretary.

A somewhat careful survey of the minutes of the Annual Conferences and personal correspondence and interviews reveal the fact that the year 1923-1924 has been rather remarkable in that the spirit of evangelism, which has been abroad in the church since 1920, has continued in a splendid way during this year.

Many great revivals have been held throughout the church, both in the homeland and the foreign fields. It has been a year of glorious achievement in the name of our Christ, and yet we have not begun to touch the fringe of our possibilities as a church in winning the world for our Lord and Master.

The unusual thing about the revivals this year has been that the large per cent of the converts has been men. From every quarter, from both pastors and evangelists, we receive this report.

During the Conference year closing with the fall Conferences of 1923, there were received into the church in the homeland 132,275 on profession of faith, and 144,500 by certificate and otherwise, or a total of 276,775—a net gain of 60,181. The returns from the foreign fields would increase this, for in our mission fields the per capita gain is larger than in the home Conferences.

A study of the Conference minutes also reveals the fact that more than two hundred pastors, representing possibly eight hundred congregations, went to their Annual Conferences last year not reporting a single addition to the church on profession of faith. Some churches with large Sunday schools have made this record. The doors of the Kingdom have not been opened in some congregations to the children. It is to be lamented that any pastor has to undergo the painful ordeal of closing his year's work having no sheaves whatever for his Lord.

We need revivals everywhere—"protracted meetings," if you please. Our church is not yet ready to do without them. We believe if the whole church would get behind a great revival movement for even one year, we would outreach any results which we have achieved in any one year of our history.

Our general evangelists and Conference evangelists, for the most part, have been faithful in their work, and report large numbers of conversions and additions to the churches. Many pastors have felt in an unusual way the call to be evangelists, and have led great revival movements in their own churches, as well as assisting other pastors. This is as it should be. We believe the call to preach is a call to evangelize, and we would urge all our pastors to do in a more definite way than ever the work of the evangesilst.

Our Sunday school forces have also promoted evangelism in the local Sunday schools with most happy results, and yet the sad fact remains that a large per cent of the enrollment in the Sunday schools is never brought into the membership of the church. It is this number that our Sunday school workers are trying to reach, and we are happy to believe the per cent is decreasing each year.

The indications are that this is the day of practical evangelism. Pastors and people care little for theories. The work done is what is wanted. We are sick at heart over the barrenness of the church. We want results. The church is not being judged so much by its creed as by its fruit. The fruitless church has little influence and must be a source of grief to God. The greatest unworked asset of Christendom is the local church, and it is our most fruitful field. If we fail there, we fail everywhere. One-tenth of the membership cannot do their part of the work and that which the other nine-tenths fail to do. But that is what we are trying to do. One out of ten in the trenches fighting to save the world, while the other nine are in the camp eating the supplies! These nine must be set to work. They must be trained in spiritual warfare and take their places in the trenches. They need to work out their creed at their fingers' end, their toes' end and their tongues' end. The whole church should be able to say: "If you will not believe me for what I say (believe), then believe me for what I do."

Practical evangelism is setting the whole church to work in winning the unchurched and unsaved in the community. This is the type of evangelism for our age. It may mean less preaching and more heart-to-heart work; more walking of the streets—going from house to house, or shop or factory; if so, may God give us the grace to do our full share to bring our generation into the right relation with God, our Father.

EXCERPT FROM RECORD OF SIXTH SESSION OF ANNUAL MEETING OF THE BOARD OF MISSIONS IN REGARD TO RELOCATION OF SCARRITT.

M. T. Plyler presented the report of the special committee, to which was referred protest from the Alabama Conference and the Vernon District of the Northwest Texas Conference concerning the relocation of Scarritt Bible and Training School. The report was adopted.

To the Board of Missions, Methodist Episcopal Church, South.

Your committee, to which were referred two papers, one from the District Conference, Vernon District, Northwest Texas Conference, and another from the Alabama Conference, protesting against the action of the Board in relocating Scarritt Bible and Training School, beg to report as follows:

We respectfully recommeud the passage by the Board of the following resolutions:

Whereas, the Board at its session duly called, and held on Sept. 12, 1923, fixed the location for the Scarritt Bible and Training School at Nashville, Tenn.; and,

Whereas, following such action of the Board, the School was duly incorporated under the name, Scarritt College for Christian Workers, and a site for the buildings purchased at Nashville, all as set out in the report to this Board of the Joint Committee, through its chairman, Bishop E. D. Monzon, which report is as follows:

"To the Board of Missions, Methodist Episcopal Church, South, in Session in Nashville, Tenn., May 6, 1924:

"At the meeting of the Woman's Missionary Council a year ago, action was taken definitely declaring that 'Scarritt Bible and Training School be moved to a more central location and so reorganized as to form the basis for a great institution;' and 'that the Board of Managers of Scarritt Bible and Training School, together with the Executive Committee of the Woman's Missionary Council, be directed to determine the location and organization of the proposed institution and to secure a suitable charter for the same.' The Board of Missions, at its annual meeting a few weeks later, concurred in the action of the Woman's Missionary Council, and empowered its Executive Committee to act in conjunction with the Executive Committee of the Woman's Missionary Council and the Board of Managers of Scarritt Bible and Training School in locating and organizing the proposed institution, in keeping with the provisions adopted by the Council, 'provided that these committees report their plans for relocation, both as to place and relations to other institutions of learning, to the Board of Missions at its next session for final action.'

"Thus empowered and directed, the Executive Committee of the Woman's Missionary Council, the Executive Committee of the Board of Missions, and the Board of Managers of Scarritt Bible and Training School held a joint meeting on May 5, the day following the action of the Board of Missions. Organization of the Joint Committee was effected with Bishop E. D. Monzon, chairman; Miss Maria L. Gibson, secretary, and Mrs. Fitzgerald S. Parker, assistant secretary. Thorough study was given to the paper adopted by the Woman's Council and by the Board of Missions, in keeping with the provisions of which the committee had been directed to make its recommendations. The type of school suggested in the paper adopted was carefully defined, a communication was addressed to the communities thought to be interested in inviting them to make such propositions as they might wish to present. Opportunity was given for personal representation, and representatives from Atlanta, Nashville, Birmingham Southern College, and Southern Methodist University appeared before the committee with their propositions. The several propositions were given careful consideration in the light of the provisions of the paper adopted by the Woman's Council and the Board of Missions, and in light of the type of institution thus determined. In keeping with sentiment of the Board of Missions, as that was understood, the committee instructed the chairman, as soon as the committee should be ready to make its report, to request the proper authorities to call a meeting of the Board of Missions to consider and act upon the report of the committee.

"The special meeting of the Board was called for Sept. 12. The Joint Committee made its report, embodying the essential provisions of the program of training adopted by the Board at its regular meeting in May, the questionnaire used in securing the information as to the locations suggested, a digest of the information as to the several proposed locations, a statement defining the type of school proposed, and also the following definite recommendations:

"'In the light of all the facts assembled, the Joint Committee recommend to the Board of Missions:

"'1. That the proposition from the citizens of Nashville be accepted and that the Scarritt Bible and Training School be located in Nashville, Tenn.

"'2. That the institution may be affiliated with the George Peabody College for Teachers, with the understanding that it shall have its own separate identity, free from any organic alliance with or control by any other institution. Affiliation shall mean only the privilege of securing, at a minimum cost, such educational advantages as may be approved by the general sentiment of the church.'"

After thorough discussion, lasting throughout the day, the Board, by a vote of thirty-seven to eighteen, adopted the recommendations of the committee.

"Following the action of the Board of Missions, the Joint Committee took steps to secure a suitable site for the new institution. In order that the committee might have the benefit of the wisest counsel in the matter, a large number of prominent Methodist men of Nashville and surrounding territory were asked to co-operate in the selection of the site. Options were secured on all the available property close enough to Peabody College to make affiliation with that institution practicable. After most thorough consideration the committee unanimously selected a very desirable site on Nineteenth Avenue, about five minutes' walk from Peabody College. The property contains about eight acres of ground, with nine residences, which will be used for school purposes while the new buildings are being erected. Most of the residences will doubtless be of service for a number of years.

"Great care was taken to secure a proper charter for the proposed institution. A special committee, composed of three able attorneys, Mr. P. D. Maddin, of Nashville, Mr. G. T. Fitzhugh, of Memphis, and Mr. Lavens Thomas, of Chattanooga, was appointed, and requested to prepare a charter that would absolutely guarantee the ownership and control of the institution to the Methodist Episcopal Church, South. The charter, recommended by the attorneys under a Tennessee statute of 1923, definitely specifies that the institution is 'to be owned and controlled by the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, through its General Conference, and such agencies as said General Conference shall thereunto appoint.' The charter further provides that the first Board of Trustees shall hold office until such time as their successors, or the successors of any of them, may be chosen by the said General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church, South, by which said institution is controlled, or through such agency or agencies as the said General Conference of said church may designate. The persons constituting the first Board of Trustees are as follows:

Bishop Edwin D. Mouzon, Bishop W. B. Beauchamp, and Bishop H. M. DuBose; Mrs. F. F. Stephens, Miss Esther Case, Miss Mabel Howell, Mrs. J. W. Downs, Mrs. J. H. McCoy, Mrs. Luke G. Johnson, Miss Maria L. Gibson, Mrs. Harry S. Owen, Mrs. L. P. Smith, Mrs. H. R. Steele, Mrs Carrie G. Cox, Mrs. Lee Britt, Mrs. W. A. Newell, Mrs. R. L. Kirkwood, Mrs. J. N. McEachern, Mrs. R. H. Lacey, Mrs. H. P. Murrey, Mrs. C. F. Elza, Mrs. R. L. Hobdy, Miss Daisy Davies, Mrs. Nat G. Rollins, E. H. Rawlings, W. W. Pinson, R. L. Russell, J. W. Perry, J. L. Cunningim, P. D. Maddin, Charles W. Scarritt, John R. Pepper, T. S. Southgate, Walter Keith, and C. A. Craig.

"We are pleased to report that the Chamber of Commerce and the Methodists of the City of Nashville have in good subscriptions fulfilled their agreement to raise a bonus of $50,000, $25,000 from the Chamber of Commerce and $25,000 from the Methodists of the city; and in addition to this, the Methodists have added $15,000.

"Respectfully submitted,

(Signed) "EDWIN D. MOUZON,
"Chairman of Joint Committee."

And, whereas, the school is now under process of being moved from Kansas City, Mo., to its new location at Nashville, where its sessions will be opened in October of this year; now, therefore, be it

Resolved, That this information be transmitted, (1) to the District Conference, Vernon District, Northwest Texas Conference, and the Alabama Conference, and (2) through the church papers to our membership at large.

Respectfully submitted,

(Signed) M. T. PLYLER,

UNIFICATION IN THE MISSISSIPPI CONFERENCE.

Dear Brother Carley: I am not sure that all who have written on the subject of "Unification" have shown the sweetest spirit. All Christians are not south of the "Mason and Dixon" line, nor all people who are selfish, north of this line. Goodness is neither racial nor sectional.

I have just finished a review of the negotiations for the last fifty years. I wish it were possible to put a copy in the hands of the entire membership of both churches. We could see more clearly, I think. Men differ—great men, wise men have differed in all history. It is hazardous for any man to assume to represent the majority without having the opinion of the majority.

After the special session of the General Conference was ordered, I wrote all the preachers except the presiding elders and delegates, who had been invited to express themselves through the Advocate, asking how they stood on the pending Plan, and if they knew how their people stood. One hundred and forty-one have answered, 95 for unification; 24 of the 95 oppose this plan, and 71 approve; 39 oppose unification on any terms; 7 are not definite, leaving the vote on the present plan, 71 for, 63 against, and 5 not certain. About 40 have not answered. Following the same ratio, there is a small majority favorable to the present plan, but I can't say with certainty—I don't know their minds. I know some who are outspoken for unification, who have not answered. I know others who are just as outspoken against. Let's leave the rubbish out and look at the plan as it is written, not look for trouble, but peace.

RESOLUTIONS ON UNIFICATION, ADOPTED BY THE COLUMBUS DISTRICT CONFERENCE, COLUMBUS, MISS., JUNE 26, 1924.

Whereas, in the pending plan of unification neither a name nor a constitution for the united church has been agreed upon, all questions, both racial and sectional, upon which the churches have differed being left still unsettled; and,

Whereas, an amendment to the plan, to avoid overlapping and binding each jurisdiction to respect former agreements, was rejected by the Joint Commission, thus confessing that one of the principal ends sought in union—the avoidance of duplication of effort and expense—will not be accomplished by such union as the plan proposes; and,

Whereas, the plan "denudes the Annual Conferences of their powers" and makes the General Conference "supreme and all-controlling," to an extent unparalleled in the State, where the right of local self-government is recognized as accorded the several States; and,

Whereas, the historic position of the South and the Southern Church on the Negro question is surrendered, admitting 350,000 Northern Negroes into full membership, position in the College of Bishops, General Conference, Boards, etc., contrary to our insistence upon separation of the races in all previous plans of unification—a separation which we believe to be wise and promotive of the best interests of both races; and,

Whereas, already our Southern Church is disrupted, from the College of Bishops down, over the plan proposed, with the certainty of further discord and loss if it is forced upon us, indicating that "the fullness of times" has not yet come for such a union; therefore, be it

Resolved, by the Columbus District Conference in annual session assembled,

1. That we heartily endorse and commend the position taken by our presiding bishop, Ainsworth, and his colleagues, Bishops Candler, Denny, Darlington, and Dickey, as both wise and necessary under existing conditions.

2. That we advise our clerical and lay delegates to the special session of our General Conference soon to convene at Chattanooga that such is our judgment in the matter; and request, for the unity, welfare, and future Christian progress of all concerned, that by vote and influence they oppose the pending plan.

3. That copies of these resolutions be mailed at once to our several delegates, both clerical and lay, and that the resolutions be published as far as possible in the church and secular press.

Signed: Thomas H. Lipscomb, Del Longcrear, W. R. Goudelock, M. E. Scott, T. J. Hopper, W. A. Bowlin, J. H. McKinnon, F. L. Wier, J. T. Clardy, J. R. James, J. I. Sturdivant, W. A. Nash, N. D. Guerry, Sr.

Adopted by vote of 29 to 19.

Secretary, Columbus District Conference.

REV. R. T. HENRY (OUR TIMMONS) IN CHINA.

By Rev. Ben. P. Jaco.

It is thrilling to me to learn of the good work of missionaries on the field, but when these missionaries have come up in our church and community I am still more interested. When the missions of our church are looked at the grand old State of Mississippi makes a showing in workers on the great fields that is inspiring. I hear good things from several of them from our Conference territory, as well as those south of us. I give a paragraph from the quarterly report made by Timmons Henry, Hong Kong Institutional Church, Soochow, China, made April 15, 1924. He said:

"You, no doubt, have read many times that China has a large per cent of illiterate people. This is true, and could we put the two million soldiers to work in useful occupations, and replace the soldiers with two million school teach[illegible] would see a new day. We who are [illegible] are seeing such a condition [illegible] right under our own eyes, for the [illegible] school has come with a great [illegible] to take to ignorant groups, in that [illegible] hang a thousand characters [illegible] time so thoroughly that the student [illegible] and write them. In addition, [illegible] this course, magazines [illegible] written in these 1,000 characters [illegible] to them to read. In this way a [illegible] information can be put at the disposal [illegible] individuals. We have in our [illegible] in such study."

[illegible] small part of the work of this [illegible] Brother Henry's care. But [illegible] persons can be transformed from illiteracy to literacy in four months, [illegible] in one year that church carries over 444 [illegible] In ten years, 4,440! Who can measure [illegible] of such work? The good literature [illegible] Bible teachers furnished these [illegible] will spread God's Kingdom widely. EDUCATIONAL NOTES—LOUISIANA CONFERENCE.

Our District League Assembly at Mansfield [illegible] success. The attendance [illegible] the spiritual tide rose high. [illegible] full-time volunteers were secured. [illegible] our people promised to attend [illegible] because of their deep re-[illegible] there.

Courses in "Stewardship," "Life Service," and [illegible] were given. The platform addresses of Dr. Roger Goodrich were strong messages.

At three of the district conferences—Alexandria, Baton Rouge, and Monroe—we were invited to speak on "Christian Education."

At all of the district conferences the cause of Christian Education was stressed and given full [illegible].

The [illegible] our college halls at Centenary and [illegible] should be filled to overflowing. It will [illegible] by our schools if all the pledges will be paid. Our appeal is to pay your "educational [illegible]" out of your tithe. What do you do with your tithe? Do you give it only to one purpose? It will amount to an education to you if you will systematically pay your tithe out to the various causes of the church. How about it? Send on your educational payments. Right now.

Conference Secretary of Education.

SIBERIA MISSION WANTS BOOKS.

Dear Friends in America: I again appeal to you to send us books for our library in Harbin, Manchuria. Our English school has been a great success. We have enrolled more than one thousand Russian students during the past year. One of our great needs is a good English library, and we have not the money to buy the necessary books.

I appeal to each person who reads this to send [illegible] many books as you can. We shall be glad to have any kind of books, but our English [illegible] especially like short stories. If you do not [illegible] books, send us a subscription for a good [illegible] one year. If each Methodist who reads this will respond, you will make it possible for the Methodist Institute in Harbin to have the best library in the city. I received many books from [illegible] but not near enough.

[illegible] to send books to us. Just wrap [illegible] in good paper, address to Rev. George F. Erwin, [illegible] Tchaikaya Street, Harbin, Manchuria, China, put the required postage, and be sure to [illegible] them "Printed Matter." They will come without any trouble.

Pastor, Central Methodist, Harbin, Manchuria, China.

OVER $400,000 PAID ON SPECIAL EFFORT QUOTAS TO DATE.

Hurrah for the charges that are paying their debt to the Forgotten Man! The fact that over $400,000 has been paid on quotas to date shows that many of the charges mean business. To them the Special Effort for Superannuate Endowment is something more than a "gust of wind." They look upon their quotas as binding obligations, and are going steadily forward in paying them. They have "set the pace" for success in this wonderful movement, and it is earnestly hoped that all other charges will fall in line and keep it up.

SPECIAL EFFORT COMMITTEES TAKE NOTICE.

May I offer a word of advice to Special Effort Committees? You have been duly appointed by the Quarterly Conferences to look after the matter of the Special Effort within the respective charges. The success or failure of the movement is lodged with you. Therefore you should be alert at all times to take advantage of every opportunity to get ahead with the work. Remember, no task ever directs itself. If you do not do the work committed to your care, it will not be done.

Hundreds of charges have secured individual pledges on Special Effort quotas, and the first payments on these subscriptions fall due July 1, 1924. Has your Committee done anything toward securing these first payments on the date due? It is one thing to get people to promise to pay on a given date, and quite another to see that the payments are made. Have you notified the people that you are expecting them to pay by July 1?

I suggest that Special Effort Committees have several meetings right away, looking to take vigorous steps to collect the amount now due on pledges. It is not safe to depend wholly on mere statements of account which are mailed to subscribers, but the people should be seen personally and urged to pay. The average committee is large enough to divide among its members the names of subscribers, so that personal visits may be made without working any member of the committee unduly.

LIKE A MEXICAN JUMPING BEAN.

Just as fast as money is collected on quotas, it should be sent to the Board of Finance, Security Building, St. Louis, Mo. Keep the money "on the jump" until it lands with the Board. Get the subscribers to pay it promptly to the Special Effort Committee; have the treasurer of the committee to send it without delay to the Board in St. Louis; and then the Board will be just as diligent in placing it in safe investments. This is the program—let us work it. Let Special Effort money "hop around" like a Mexican jumping bean, until it is properly invested for those for whom it is paid.

I wish I could make you understand how important it is to send the cash to the Board as rapidly as it comes into hand. It is endowment money, and such money is worth nothing until it is invested. It cannot be invested until it is received by the Board. If you let it linger in the hands of the treasurer of the committee, it does so at a cost to the superannuates of 6 per cent per annum. Don't make these aged servants of the church lose one penny of the lift of their own endowment.

And, by the way, whenever remittances on quotas are made to the Board of Finance, the book of Treasurer's Remittance Forms should be used. As repeatedly stated, one of these books was included in the package of subscription envelopes sent weeks ago in care of the pastor of the charge, and he should deliver it to the treasurer of his charge's Special Effort Committee. If the pastor has not received this book, one can be had promptly by advising the Board of Finance, St. Louis.

ATTRACTIVE PLACES ON A MERRY ROAD.

I am trying to publish the many interesting items of news arising out of the Special Effort, but it is a very difficult matter to give notice to everything worthy of special attention. With so much before me that is worth while, and so little space in which to put it, it is not easy always to do what should be done.

Several weeks ago I reported on this page the fact that First Church, Helena, Ark., Dr. W. C. Watson, pastor, on a minimum quota of $4480, had paid in cash to the Board of Finance $1033.75. The linotyper missed the item entirely and left me embarrassed. I am sure First Church will forgive the omission, especially as this second notice is given of their splendid work.

First Church, Shreveport, La., Dr. R. E. Goodrich, pastor, on an assumed total quota of $11,616.70, has paid in cash to date $5380.21. This record is most worthy. It is an example of interest in the Special Effort which I trust will be generally followed throughout the whole church. Heartiest commendation to Dr. Goodrich and to his efficient Special Effort Committee, of which Mr. R. T. Moore is the treasurer.

One of the most outstanding things in results reported is the fact that Mount Pleasant charge, Mount Pleasant, Tennessee, assumed the total five-year quota of $12,886.35. A check for $2700 has just come from this charge on its quota. The pastor, Rev. B. F. Isom, deserves great credit, as does also Mr. Hinton G. Kittrell, treasurer of the Special Effort Committee.

And so the Forgotten Man is being remembered. From all directions come tidings of splendid accomplishments in his behalf. If the interest now shown in this great movement continues as at present manifest, there can be no question about its ultimate and complete success. With everything going so beautifully, it would be a tragedy for the church now to neglect this sacred cause.

THEY JUST KEEP ON DOING IT.

Although I publish every week the names of charges that have paid one-fifth or more on their total assumed quotas, the next week following I have an additional number of such charges to report. The following have done this thing, and it is a pleasure to include their names on this honor roll:

Centenary Church, Virginia, Lynchburg, Rev. O. B. Newton, pastor. Total assumed quota, $2556; amount remitted, $550.

Mount Pleasant, Tennessee, Mount Pleasant, Rev. B. F. Isom, pastor. Total assumed quota, $12,886.35; amount remitted, $2700.

Fourth Avenue (Louisville), Louisville, Louisville, Rev. J. W. Johnson, pastor. Total assumed quota, $6650; amount remitted, $3455.

Crossett, Little Rock, Monticella, Rev. S. F. Goddard, pastor. Total assumed quota, $2700; amount remitted, $600.

Corydon, Louisville, Henderson, Rev. W. S. Buckner, pastor. Total assumed quota, $1117; amount remitted, $255.50.

Natchez, Mississippi, Vicksburg, Rev. C. C. Evans, pastor. Total assumed quota, $3500; amount remitted, $700.

South Halifax Circuit, Virginia, Danville, Rev. S. E. Jones, pastor. Total assumed quota, $1440; amount remitted, $330.

First Church (Shreveport), Louisiana, Shreveport, Rev. R. E. Goodrich, pastor. Total assumed quota, $11,616.73; amount remitted, $5380.21.

Bronaugh, Southwest Missouri, Nevada, Rev. W. A. Williams, pastor. Total assumed quota, $890; amount remitted, $243.05.

O'Fallon & Wentzville Charge, Missouri, Mexico, Rev. E. W. Reynolds, pastor. Total assumed quota, $908; amount remitted, $226.75.

Buchanan Street (Nashville), Tennessee, Nashville, Rev. O. B. Johnson, pastor. Total assumed quota, $1,046; amount remitted, $225.

Hughes Chapel, Kentucky, Covington, Rev. J. M. Baker, pastor. Total assumed quota, $935; amount remitted, $200.

San Marcos, West Texas, San Marcos, Rev. C. M. Raby, pastor. Total assumed quota, $3,450; amount remitted, $1,219.44.

St. Paul's (Orangeburg), South Carolina, Orangeburg, Rev. T. G. Herbert, pastor. Total assumed quota, $4,329; amount remitted, $1,320.

First Church (Rocky Mount), North Carolina, Washington, Rev. H. M. North, pastor. Total assumed quota, $4,000; amount remitted, $2,700.

Leader, Denver, Denver, Durango, Rev. V. C. Tyree, pastor. Total assumed quota, $631; amount remitted, $141.70.

Lancaster, North Texas, Dallas, Rev. T. J. Beckham, pastor. Total assumed quota, $2,500; amount remitted, $500.

THE HONOR ROLL OF THE PRESIDING ELDERS.

In addition to the presiding elders already reported, whose Districts have sent in the Pink Leaf Report 100 per cent, the following are now entitled to their places on the roll as numbered:

217. Tennessee, Murfreesboro, Rev. W. B. Ricks, P. E.

218. North Georgia, Athens, Rev. W. S. Robison, P. E.

219. Florida, Bartow, Rev. E. J. Gates, P. E.

220. North Texas, Greenville, Rev. Warren T. Whiteside, P. E.

NEWS THAT THRILLS TO THE TOES.

Rev. J. O. J. Taylor has been writing me concerning his systematic work on his Charge, Waverly Hall, Georgia, for Superannuate Endowment. I have just received another letter from him on the subject and its contents are so heartening that I feel I should share the good news with all those who are interested in the cause of the Forgotten Man. The letter reads as follows: "Wesley Bible Class of Waverly Hall Charge, G. L. Sinclair, president, subscribed $1,110 yesterday for Superannuate Endowment. The total assessment on my entire Charge is $1,450. To date we have subscribed more than $3,500 and we are still going. One of my churches has yet to put on the Special Effort and another church is practically untouched so far on the subject. Both of these churches will do well for the movement."

North Mississippi Conference—Rev. J. H. Felts, Rev. T. H. Lipscomb, Rev. J. W. Perman.

DIRECTIONS.

All checks and money orders should be made payable to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

Communications pertaining to subscriptions and other business matters should be addressed to the Manager, or to the New Orleans Christian Advocate.

The Printed Label on a paper shows the date to which a subscription is paid. It is as good as a written receipt. When renewal is made, if the date is not moved forward after three or four weeks, notify us, and we will make it right.

Communications intended for the Editor should be directed to him at 512 Camp Street. Correspondents will observe the following rules: 1. Write on only one side of the paper. 2. If you have a typewriter, by all means use it; otherwise use a good quality of black ink. 3. Leave a space of at least two inches at the top of the first page; leave a margin of at least one inch on the left-hand side of the page; do not crowd the words and the lines together. 4. Take special pains to write proper names correctly and legibly. 5. Use letter paper if you can get it—not note paper. No attention will be paid to rolled manuscripts.

THE SEASHORT DIVINITY SCHOOL.

The sixteenth annual session of the Seashore Divinity School came to a successful close on Thursday of last week. The attendance was good, 122 persons having registered their names, and the class of undergraduates was as large as any in the history of the institution, 33 having taken their Conference courses of study in the classes. The various classes had the following enrollment: Admission on Trial, 3; First Year, 8; Second Year, 5; Third Year, 9; Fourth Year, 7. These undergraduates represented Annual Conferences as follows: Alabama, 8; Louisiana, 5; Mississippi, 15; North Alabama, 3; North Mississippi, 2. The undergraduate classes were made up of a remarkably fine group of young men, and it is gratifying to note that every one of them successfuly passed the examinations and received his certificate of credit. Six young men received diplomas from the school, certifying to the fact that they had completed the entire course of study.

There was great disappointment over the fact that Dr. George R. Stuart found himself unable at the last moment, on account of serious illness, to fill his platform engagement; but those in attendance accepted the situation graciously and heard with great interest and profit those who were called upon to fill the vacant hours. Those who so kindly consented to deliver addresses were: Dr. R. H. Harper, of the Louisiana Conference; Dr. H. H. McNeill, of the Alabama Conference; Dr. W. Winans Drake, of the Louisiana Conference; Rev. J. Loyd Decell, of the Mississippi Conference; Rev. H. M. Ellis, of the Mississippi Conference; Rev. C. C. Miller, of the Louisiana Conference; Rev. Joseph A. Smith, of the Mississippi Conference. The editor of the Advocate also spoke on one occasion.

Bishop William N. Ainsworth preached two great sermons on Sunday, and delivered inspiring addresses on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday following. It was a source of great regret that another engagement forced him to leave on Wednesday afternoon.

The annual election of officers resulted as follows: President, Dr. Charles W. Crisler, of the Louisiana Conference; vice president, Rev. J. T. Leggett, of the Mississippi Conference; secretary, Rev. H. W. Rice, of the Alabama Conference; treasurer, Rev. H. M. Andrews, of the Alabama Conference; dean and publicity agent, Dr. H. H. McNeill, of the Alabama Conference.

The matter of enlarging the work of the school and of extending the time to two full weeks was carefully considered, and the president and the dean were given authority to make such arrangements as they deemed advisable.

The Seashore Divinity School was never on a firmer foundation than it is at the present time, and its prospects for the future were never brighter. The church has not yet fully realized the value of the magnificent property it has in the Seashore Camp Ground, and it has not, therefore, made full use of that property; but the realization of its value is growing, and there is an increasing determination to utilize it to the fullest possible extent. Lake Junaluska, North Carolina, and Mount Sequoyah, Arksansas, furnish fine opportunities for those who desire to go to the mountains during the summer to combine their vacations with the privilege of instruction and training in the work of the church; but there are thousands of people who prefer the seashore to the mountains—and the Seashore Camp Ground furnishes the ideal place for the development of an assembly ground that cannot be surpassed on this continent.

The comfort of those in attendance upon the recent session of the Divinity School was insured by the close personal attention of Rev. H. W. Van Hook to the management of Keller Lodge and the restaurant, and by the kindness of the White House in making special rates for those in attendance upon the school. Everything conspired to make the occasion pleasant, inspiring, and profitable.

THE SEASHORE CAMP MEETING.

The annual Seashore Camp Meeting will be held this year, beginning on Friday evening, Aug. 8, and closing on Sunday evening, Aug. 17. Rev. L. L. Roberts, presiding elder of the Seashore District, will be in charge of the meeting. He has secured as the special preachers for the occasion Rev. Joseph A. Smith and Rev. W. J. Ferguson. In addition, Mrs. Joseph A. Smith will sing regularly throughout the meeting, and a competent leader of the congregational singing and of the work among the young people will be secured. It is the hope of Brother Roberts and those associated with him that the meeting this year may prove to be a repetition of those meetings in the past when the tabernacle was thronged with worshipers and hundreds of people were converted to God on that historic spot. To this end, it is earnestly desired that all who can do so arrange to attend the camp meeting, and that prayer be made constantly for a gracious outpouring of the Spirit of God. We are sure that this request for prayer will be heeded by all those who long for the coming of the Kingdom of God upon earth.

PERSONAL AND OTHER NOTES.

Rev. E. Nash Broyles, our pastor at Greenville, Miss., recently assisted the pastor in a good meeting at Eupora, Miss.

The editor of the Advocate is attending this week the special session of the General Conference in Chattanooga, Tenn.

Rev. T. W. St. John is in the midst of a two-weeks' revival at Spring Hill, La. The pastor is doing the preaching to great congregations, and the interest is at high tide.

The Methodists of Aberdeen, Miss., under the leadership of their pastor, Dr. H. G. Davis, observed last Sunday as a day of prayer for the right settlement of the unification matter.

Rev. W. C. Newman requests us to say that his address is changed from University, Miss., to Vaiden, Miss. Brother Newman has been appointed pastor at Vaiden to succeed the late Rev. R. I. Collins.

Rev. B. P. Jaco recently returned from Clarkeville and Crawfordsville, Ark., where he visited his brother, Charles, after burying his daughter, Edith Ray Anderson, at Longtown, Miss., who came to her death by an automobile accident. The sympathy of many friends will go out to the family in their sorrow.

At the "home-coming" service of the Four Square Bible Class of the First Methodist Church, Shreveport, La., on June 22, 1926 men were present. Dean R. E. Smith, of Centenary College, is the teacher of this great class.

A joint quarterly conference of all the Southern Methodist churches in Washington, D. C., recently passed a resolution approving the proposed plan of unification and requesting the special session of the General Conference to approve the plan.

Rev. B. C. Taylor, who expects to receive the degrees of Bachelor of Divinity and Master of Arts next June from the Southern Methodist University is filling the pulpit of the Rayne Memorial Methodist Church, this city, during the absence of the pastor, Dr. W. L. Duren, in Europe.

Rev. Elmer [illegible], chaplain of the 108th Cavalry, Louisiana National Guard, with the rank of captain, has been promoted to the chaplaincy of the 31st Division of the National Guard, embracing the States of Alabama, Florida, Louisiana and Mississippi, with the rank of major. Major Gunn is pastor of our church at Bogalusa, La.

The catalogue of Grenada College, a copy of which has just reached our desk, is a beautiful piece of printing and at the same time a most attractive presentation of the work of this historic school. The classification of new students for the session 1924-25 will begin on Wednesday, Sept. 17, and the opening will take place on the following day.

Rev. W. B. Jones, presiding elder of the Vicksburg District, Mississippi Conference, has issued an address to all the pastors, Sunday school superintendents and chairmen of the Superannuate Endowment committees, stressing the importance of having revivals in every charge, of observing Sunday School Day in every Sunday school, and of making full collections of the pledges made to the Superannuate Endowment fund. The letter is timely.
